Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

STREET IN CAVITE, SHOWING GENERAL AGUINALDO'S HEADQUARTERS.

THE WILY AGUINALDO AND HIS FIERCE FILIPINOS

The latest from Manila is that Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, has issued a memorial addressed to all the foreign Powers reciting the fact that the Filipinos have formed a Government under the Constitution adopted on June 23.

He adds that "the Filipino forces have since carried on a campaign of liberty, taken forty provinces, and have reduced Manila. They have 9000 prisoners."

Peace and tranquillity prevail in the conquered provinces, and there is no resistance to Aguinaldo's authority. The campaign, the memorial says, was conducted with due regard to the rules of civilized warfare.

He asks for the recognition of the independence of the Philippine Republic, or, failing in that, to grant the Filipinos belligerent rights. The United States are not mentioned in the memorial.

Senor Don Emilio Aguinaldo y Faury —there was a time not long ago when he left off both the front and rear ends of that name—is a very clever young man. He has read the story of a young man from Corsica, who made considerable history at the other end of the century. Far be it from any carping critic to suggest that he endeavors to imitate that master of artillery. But there are certain marked traits which the two men have in common, even to the desire to wear gold collars. They say he is twenty-seven years old, and he looks it. It is a noticeable fact that all the leaders of the Filipinos are young; that is the result of the conditions which make the background of the revolutions, which make, in fact, the leaders themselves.

In the days when young Aguinaldo was neither Senor nor Don, but just plain Emilio, he was servant boy for a Jesuit priest, and there lay the beginnings of his fortune, for this Jesuit, true to the traditions and teachings of his order, gave the boy the foundation of the education which by its development has given him the mastery over his people. The native wit got the tools with which to work, and boundless ambition drove it on until achievement is assuming proportions beyond the wildest dream of boyhood servant days. He left the priest and studied medicine. He went to Hong Kong and saw something of other peoples and of other intellects than degenerate Spanish or undeveloped Filipino.

In this growth to manhood and this struggle for education young Aguinaldo found personal experience of the amazing blindness of the masters of the islands. The rule of the Spanish in the Philippines is almost beyond belief. Nevertheless, the testimony is convincing. The nation which deliberately does all in its power to retard the progress of learning, to prevent the education of its people, has small claim to civilization. In these islands it was practically a crime for a Filipino to achieve any education. If he came to the notice of the authorities it was more than probable that, if he were not disposed of more effectively, he would be exiled. Aguinaldo suffered this punishment for his ambition, and now he is taking revenge. His friends, his relatives, suffered similarly, and now strive with him for vengeance on the Spaniard.

The Filipinos are stoical in endurance, one benefit of three centuries of Spanish oppression and misrule. They can endure and be still, endure physical pain and suffering, with the outward indifference of a red Indian. They have the patience of Pambe Serang, limitless courage of the fighting sort, and ambition, in the case of their leaders, that knows neither metes nor bounds. In manners they are polite and agreeable, and intercourse with European civilization has given some of their leaders a distinguishing polish. They affect the hauteur and the reserve of their old Spanish rulers, and thereby attach to themselves the dignity of position. The people are simple, open-hearted, hospitable, with an unshaken faith in the wisdom, the ability and the truth of their leaders. Especially is this true of Aguinaldo. By whatever means he acquired his hold on the Filipinos, his word now is law with them.

Personally, says the Manila correspondent of the New York Sun, I believe him to be only a great adventurer, like that man at the other end of the century whom he imitates in his small way. His ambition is as boundless as Napoleon's, but he has less with which to work. His courage is limitless, and is of the dashing type which has given him the ascendency over his people which he now holds. The humblest peasant speaks of Don Emilio as a "terrible fighter." He has surrounded himself with brave, clever men, most of whom are apparently thoroughly patriotic. They are devoted entirely to Aguinaldo because they believe that that way lies the best chance of success.

WOMEN STREET-CAR CONDUCTORS.

Their Employment in Railway Service Extending in This Country.

Women are a success as street-car conductors in Chillicothe, Ohio. Since they were engaged one month ago by the Electric Street Railway Company the receipts of the corporation have increased thirty per cent. The women were employed originally as a measure of economy. It was found that the system of having every person put his own fare in the box resulted in the missing of a great many fares. On the other hand, it would cost too much to hire two men for each car. It was then that the superintendent hit upon the idea of employing women as conductors, to whom only half as much was paid as would have been paid to men. The girls are good looking and members of eminently respectable families. They are paid $4 per week, and enjoy their work, while the superintendent says that they do it well.

Lately a sort of epidemic for employing women in the transportation service of the country has broken out. It's not a local epidemic, so it's going to be difficult to quarantine it, though many of the trades unionists have been trying their best to stamp it out. There's not likely to be more successful than usual, however.

The epidemic seems to have started last winter at Middletown, Conn., where a woman got employment as a motorman on a street car. The notoriety the line got as a result was discouraging, so the pioneer was discharged, but the notion that women would make first-class conductors if not grip manipulators in small towns struck more than one street railroad manager.

Out in Vincennes, Ind., a month or so ago the local street railway company, in a fit of economy, decided to discharge its men conductors and employ women. Fifty women applied for the job and five were put to work at $5 a week.

The superintendent of the Electric Railway, Light and Power Company, of Chillicothe, W. J. Myers, has written an optimistic letter to the Electrical Engineer on the subject:

"We could not afford to employ men, and we could not see why women would not make as good conductors as men. We keep them on duty ten hours a day and pay them $4 per week, and they are proving themselves in every way competent and efficient. We are very particular in selecting them, and had no trouble in getting good applications and a great many more than we are able to employ. It gives us a very clean service, and we think that this will be a new field for the employment of ladies."

Madison, Ind., has caught the epidemic, too, but somehow its citizens seem to have been inoculated against it. The families of the men who have been thrown out of work by the new women conductors have been making a big fuss about it, and the citizens declare they will walk before they will patronize cars conducted by women.

The steam railroads are falling into line. It is four or five years now since a vigorous howl went up because the Brooklyn Elevated decided to employ women ticket agents. A few months ago the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad put women in charge of eighteen of its offices. Time and again it has been rumored that the New York Elevated and the New York Central Railroad would substitute women in its stations all along the line. Already there are more women employed in the Central's offices than on any other road.

But after all these are not the pioneers in a new field. As a matter of fact we are away behind the rest of the world in the employment of women in the railway service. England hires a few, while in France women railroaders are common.

Betrayed by a Clock.

The forester who permitted two photographers to enter the death chamber shortly after Prince Bismarck's death was instantly discharged, without pension. His indiscretion and that of the two photographers was betrayed by the late Prince's clock, which figured in the photograph, and pointed at 2.15. The culprits had effected an entrance into the death chamber through the window opening out upon the park, and Prince Herbert Bismarck has instituted proceedings against them for the criminal offense of "disturbing family peace."—Liverpool Post.

CANADA'S NEW RULERS.

The Appointment of the Earl and Countess of Minto Hailed With Satisfaction.

The appointment of the Earl of Minto as Governor-General to succeed the Earl of Aberdeen is hailed with satisfaction throughout Canada. It is generally believed that no more fitting appointment could have been made by the Home Government. Lord Minto will not assume his official duties under the disadvantage of being a stranger, for he is widely known throughout the provinces. It might be truthfully said that he is already a popular man, and is sure to fill bein to the general good with which all Canadians feel for the Earl of Aberdeen.

The arrival of the Earl and his charming wife, the Countess of Minto, is sure to strengthen the regard now entertained for them. They will be the handsomest couple ever occupying Rideau Hall, the Dominion palace at Ottawa, and fully capable of maintaining the social prestige of their high position.

The new Governor-General's full name is Gilbert John Elliot-Murray Kynynmound-Elliot, and he is the fourth Earl of Minto. He was born in 1845, and succeeded his father as fourth Earl in 1891. He was formerly a lieutenant in the Scots Guards, was attached to the Turkish army in the Russo-Turkish war in 1877, serving in Afghanistan in 1879, was a volunteer in the Egyptian campaign in 1882, and commanded the South of Scotland Volunteers, with the rank of colonel. He took an active part in the Canadian rebellion in 1885, when he was Military Secretary to the Governor-General of Canada. This position he held from 1883 to 1886. In 1883 the Earl married Mary Caroline, daughter of General the Hon. Charles Grey. In politics he is a Liberal.

Queer Ways of the "Covites."

In an article on the "Covites" of the Cumberland Mountains, published in the Ladies's Home Journal, Sarah Barnwell Elliott says: "The people are usually squatters on small lots of uncleared mountain land, which is extremely shallow and poor. They usually live in log or slab houses—sometimes 'chinked' and sometimes not; sometimes with floors, and sometimes without—eking out an existence by peddling either the nuts and fruits of the wilderness, or their poor 'gyarden truck.' They are very keen at a bargain, even when they have no idea of the proper value of the thing in hand, and though they are very hospitable when you come to their houses, and will give you anything they have in the way of food, they will never give you anything that they have brought to sell. They may give it to your cook, or to your next-door neighbor, or they may throw it away just outside your gate, but you having declined to pay their price they will not give it to you—at least, not that special article."

TWO DIVISIONS FOR CUBA.

War Department Outlines the Plan for Occupation.

GENERALS WADE AND LEE WILL COMMAND

First Division Under General Wade Will Leave in October, and Second Under General Lee in November. 12,000 Men Included.

WASHINGTON (Special).—A comprehensive programme for moving troops to Cuba has been outlined by the war department, and its initial features have been decided upon. This result is due to the directions given by the president on September 19 to the effect that details of troops be made for Cuba. Acting on this, Major General Miles outlined a plan for sending two divisions to Cuba, the first under command of Major General Wade, to leave in October, and the second division, under Major General Fitzhugh Lee, to leave in November. Each division will embrace about 6,000 men, so that the plan is to have 12,000 troops in Cuba or on the way there within the next sixty days.

It is not contemplated, however, that any large number of this force shall be assembled at any one point in this country or in Cuba, the desire to keep them scattered, as they can thereby be handled to better advantage.

From the fact that they go to Cuba it does not mean that they will proceed directly to Havana. On the contrary, the outlook is that there will be very few troops at Havana, the bulk of them being scattered through the western end of the island, garrisoning the small towns and thus gradually putting into effect the military occupation of the island. In anticipation of the move the quartermaster's department is preparing to have transports available for the troops.

The war department Tuesday gave out the order ordering the formation of the First Division, which is to go to Cuba. It simply creates the division, making no mention of proposed execution in Cuba. These features, however, were embraced in a confidential telegram sent to the several commanding officers affected by the order. It makes known to them that the division is "for service in Cuba, not later than October 20."

Although the November division under command of General Fitzhugh Lee has been fully projected as a part of this same programme, its formal execution will be deferred or a time. The regiments forming the November division embrace both cavalry and infantry, with General Sumner in command of the first brigade.

BANK OF ANNISTON ASSIGNS.

Loans On Securities Which Had Declined In Value Cause of Failure.

The bank of Anniston, a state bank, of which Frank Nelson, Jr., was president, assigned Tuesday morning to W. W. Stringfellow, president of the First National bank. The bank had a capital of $87,000. President Nelson in an interview stated that there were about $24,000 of general deposits and $15,000 of time deposits. As assets there are $6,000 in cash, loans and discounts amounting to $75,000 and real estate owned by the bank which cost $35,000. He said the cause of the assignment was loans made before he became president four years ago on real estate and other questionable securities, which had declined in value. In the money on deposit was $500 belonging to the Epworth League.

CYCLONE KILLS SIX.

Many More Are Fatally Injured—Death List May Reach Fifteen.

The most appalling storm in the history of Niagara peninsula passed over the strip of land between Lakes Erie and Ontario, passing almost parallel with the Welland canal, cutting a swath 300 feet wide through the peninsula and cutting off a portion of it, went almost at right angles with the main path of the cyclone and took in Tonawanda. It struck at St. Catherines, Merriton and Grantham, Ont., hardest. The number of lives lost is estimated at six. However, at least six more are fatally injured. The death list may reach fifteen.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 2.

Lesson Text: "Reformation Under Asa," II Chronicles xiv., 2-12—Golden Text: II Chronicles xiv., 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

2. "And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God." Last quarter was spent chiefly with the prophets Elijah and Elisha, men of God, and now we are to have several lessons on kings who were men of God. Asa was the third king of Judah after the kingdom was divided at the death of Solomon, and the first to do right in the sight of the Lord. This statement is made concerning seven other kings of Judah, but not once concerning any of the kings of the ten tribes. The throne was called the throne of the Lord, or the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel, and the king was said to be king for the Lord his God (I Chron. xxix., 23; xxviii., 5; II Chron., ix., 8).

3. "He took away the altars of the strange gods." Although the law of God said, "Thou shalt have no other gods before Me" (Ex. xx., 3), yet Solomon introduced many strange gods to please his wives, and both Rehoboam and Abijah continued the idol worship. It is difficult to go against the customs of your father and grandfather, but Asa feared God rather than man and was determined to do right before Him.

4. "And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers." In verses 3 and 4 of the next chapter we read that Israel had been for a long season without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law, but when they turned to the Lord and sought Him He was found of them. In verses 12 and 15 we read that they sought Him with all their heart and soul, even with their whole desire, and He gave them rest round about. The Lord takes heed to our hearts rather than our words, and will fulfill the the desire of them that fear Him.

5. "The kingdom was quiet before him." Verse 1 says, "In his days the land was quiet ten years." Quietness is one of the great gifts of God which shall not be fully enjoyed not only by all Israel but by all the world, when "the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect (or service) of righteousness shall be quietness and assurance forever" (Isa. xxxii., 17). In quietness and in confidence is strength, and the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit is in the sight of God of great price (I Pet. iii., 4).

6. "The land had rest, because the Lord had given him rest." In Joshua xxiii., 1, it is written that the Lord had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies. In I Chron. xxii., 9, the Lord had told David that his son Solomon (peaceable) would be a man of rest and that Israel would enjoy peace and quietness in his days. Lamech said concerning his son, "This shall comfort us concerning our work," and so he called him Noah—i. e., rest or comfort. The earliest rest is that of Gen. ii., 3, which was broken by the devil doubting God's word and God's love, and thus he still seeks to break all rest.

7. "Because we have sought the Lord our God He hath given us rest on every side." When Solomon was about to build the temple, he said to Hiram, "The Lord my God hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent" (I Kings v., 4). The rest of the kingdom that is coming will be glorious (Isa. xl., 10), or, as in the margin, glory. Even now He says, "Come unto Me, and I will give you rest," and "When He giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?" (Math. xi., 28; Job xxxiv., 29.) When, even in our ordinary daily affairs, we allow the government to be upon His shoulder and the peace of God to rule (Isa. ix., 7; Col. iii., 15), we will have a glorious foretaste of the rest of the kingdom. Some say that they seek Him yet do not seem to find Him as their rest, but it must be that they do not seek Him with the whole heart (Jer. xxix., 13).

8-10. The adversary will not allow us to rest if he can help it, so here we have over a million of Ethiopians gathered against Asa in battle, and he has but little over half as many with which to meet them. Wars will not wholly cease from the earth until the devil is cast into the lake of fire at the end of the thousand years (Rev. xx., 7-10), for, while the millennium will be a time of peace, it will end with a great war. Israel had no reason to fear her enemies, however numerous, for the promise of God was that one should chase a thousand and two put 10,000 to flight. The deliverance from Egypt and the conquest of the Canaanites, with the many deliverances and victories in the days of the Judges and in the time of David, would strengthen the hands of any one who feared God. David could say, "I will not be afraid of tens of thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about." "Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear" (Ps. iii., 6; xxvii., 3; xlvi., 1, 2).

11. "And Asa cried unto the Lord his God and said, Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power." Jonathan said to his armor bearer, "It may be that the Lord will work for us, for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few" (I Sam. xiv., 6). The greatest hindrance to the Lord's work is generally our fancied strength or wisdom, and there is no proverb much more unscriptural than this, that God helps those who help themselves. In the matter of salvation it is only the lost and helpless and ungodly for whom it is provided, and it has been provided wholly by our Lord Jesus Christ and is given freely to every penitent sinner. In the daily life for God it is God who works all our works in us and for us (Isa. xxvi., 12). He delivers the needy, the poor also and him that hath no helper (Ps. lxxii., 12). When Gideon had only 32,000 men against an innumerable host, the Lord said to him, "The people that are with thee are too many, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me" (Judg. vii., 2). God must be glorified in all things, and no flesh dare presume to glory in His presence (I Cor. i., 29, 31; Isa. ii., 11, 17, 22). If we are living in the name of the Lord and seeking only His glory, no man or demon can prevail against us or even touch us without God's permission.

12. "So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa and before Judah." They were destroyed before the Lord and before His host (verse 13). Yet when the king of Israel came against Asa in the thirty-sixth year of his reign he forgot this great deliverance and relied on the king of Syria rather than upon God, and when rebuked for it he grew angry with the Lord's servant and put him in prison (chapter xvi.). So prone are we to forget God and to lean upon an arm of flesh instead of putting our whole trust in the Lord! Blessed are all they that thrust in Him (Ps. ii., 12).—Lesson Helper.

Fell From a Scaffold.

From the Herald, Watertown, N. Y.

John Young, of Le Roy, N. Y., is 72 years old, and is well known in that and neighboring towns. While putting some wa... boards on a barn, standing on a scaffold twenty-two feet from the ground, he felt dizzy, lost his balance and fell to the ground. The side of his face, arm and one entire side of his body, on which he struck, were badly bruised. Picked up and carried to the house, he was under a doctor's care for several weeks. The doctor finally came to the conclusion that his patient had received a stroke of paralysis and was beyond medical aid. He could not use one arm or turn over in bed.

Paralyzed by the Fall.

One day, while lying on the bed, he read of a case something like his having been cured with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He coaxed his granddaughter to get him a box of the pills. After that box had been used he secured another. In three weeks he began to feel a little life in his arms; at the end of four he could move his fingers; at the end of two months he could walk, and in three months he could shave himself with the injured hand.

As he told his story in the Herald office, he looked the perfect picture of health. He carries a box of the pills in his pocket, and whenever he does not feel just right he takes them. They cured him after doctors had given him up, and his death was daily expected.

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness, either in male or female.

ABSORBS WATER FROM BELOW.

Soil in the San Joaquin Valley Moistened by Subterranean Streams.

Investigations made by Professor Milton Whitney, who is in charge of the division of soils in the Department of Agriculture, have revealed the curious phenomenon that the soils of the San Joaquin valley and of the great alkaline district comprising the fertile wheat growing regions contain a considerable quantity of moisture in excess of the amount received from rainfall or surface irrigation. A similar phenomenon has been observed in the Yellowstone valley and in parts of the Red River valley, and this would seem to explain the mystery why these regions, which are semiarid, rarely suffer from drouth.

But this explanation solves one mystery only to present another which is even more inexplicable. In the Mojave desert, for instance, where the annual average rainfall is only five inches, the soil beneath the alkaline crust is always moist. In Southern California, where the summer rainfall is less than an inch, tobacco and sugar beets, which require much water, grow luxuriantly without irrigation.

This phenomenon has been ascribed tentatively to the peculiar quality of the soil to absorb moisture and retain it, notwithstanding the low humidity of the atmosphere. But whence does this excess of moisture come? Artesian wells in all the regions under consideration show water at depths varying between forty and 200 feet, and it is concentrated by the experiments and investigations that there may be a slow and continuous upward movement of moisture from subterranean sources. Since water, however, never percolates upward it must be assumed that the soils of a large part of the arid and semiarid regions of the country consist of a vast sheet of absorbent material which draws up moisture from below like blotting paper, by capillary attraction. The investigations of the division of soils in these arid regions will make one of the most remarkable chapters in the history of agriculture.—Philadelphia Record.

"Now, boys," I have a few questions in fractions to ask," said a teacher; "suppose I have a piece of beefsteak and cut it into sixteen pieces, what would these pieces be called?" "Sixteenths," answered one boy, after meditating a moment. "Very good. And when the sixteenths were cut in half, what would they be?" There was silence in the class; but presently a little boy at the foot put up his hand. "Do you know Johnny?" "Hash!" answered Johnny confidently.—Current Literature.

MRS. PINKHAM'S WARNING TO WOMEN.

Neglect is the Forerunner of Misery and Suffering. A Grateful Husband Writes of His Wife's Recovery.

Nearly all the ill health of women is traceable to some derangement of the feminine organs. These derangements do not cure themselves, and neglect of the sensations resulting from them is only putting off trouble.

Pathetic stories are constantly coming to Mrs. Pinkham of women whose neglect has resulted in serious heart trouble and a whole train of woes. Here is the story of a woman who was helped by Mrs. Pinkham after other treatment failed.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: It affords me very great pleasure to be able to state that I believe my wife owes her health to your medicine and good advice. For three years her health failed rapidly; she had heart trouble, often falling down in a dizzy and fainting spells, shortness of breath, choking and smothering spells, bloating of the stomach, a dry cough, dyspeptic symptoms, menses irregular, scanty, and of an unnatural color. She had been treated by physicians with but little benefit. She has taken your treatment according to your directions, and is better in every way. I am well pleased with the result of your treatment, and give you permission to use my letter for the benefit of others.—CHAS. H. and Mrs. MAY BUTCHER, Fort Meyer, Va.

The healing and strengthening power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for all female ills is so well established that it needs no argument. For over twenty years it has been used by women with results that are truly wonderful.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

These troubles can be treated just as effectively at the home. Before she had finished taking the second bottle she was in better health than she had enjoyed in years previous. I then recommended the Panacea to three of my neighbors with good results. H. J. Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR

is the greatest Labor Organization the world has ever seen.

It is the only organization which, while striving to secure for Wage-workers the best possible terms as to wages, hours and conditions, aims at reforming the causes of industrial injustice.

It secures to each trade and locality absolute control over its own trade or local affairs, yet its perfect organization enables its members to act unitedly, promptly, and, therefore, effectively when concentrated action becomes necessary to remedy injustice or to resist oppression.

It is pledged to work for the overthrow of the capitalistic system of production and exchange, yet, realizing that reforms can only be beneficial and permanent when they rest upon the convictions of a wise educated people, it seeks to accomplish its objects only by appeals to reason and conscience—never by force.

It is a secret organization only so far as secrecy is necessary to protect its members from wrong and persecution, and can never be used to shield wrong-doing.

Its doors are open to all who labor honestly and usefully either by hand or brain, without question or discrimination on account of creed, race or nationality.

There are several in favor of a bull and boar law, while others are against it. I think if we had such a law that every man should be allowed to keep one of any kind he wishes but not allow it to run out.

As far as I can learn the people are solid against a Constitutional convention.

I hope that there may be a dog law also. And as to new school laws, anything to insure better schools. J. N. DENNIS.

Now, as it is thought Mr. Aldrich holds to Populist doctrine, and he has been tested in the matter of ferretting out fraud, and is the only one who has the ability, coupled with information, you have no time to lose in working against the powers that be.

Mr. W. H. Harvey, authors of the Financial School, and who is one of the greatest reformers, and who is exceedingly intellectual, believes in gathering the best elements from all the political atmospheres, and concentrate them in general force in battle to save the republic in 1900. That means to rush Mr. Bryan on to Washington. The masses seem to be willing to trust Mr. Bryan.

Then why not come nearer home and elect Hon. W. F. Aldrich to defend our interests here. A man who has the ability and the courage to detect fraud in the ballot box; than which there is no such sacred rights be netted to Americans as the ballot. Until we have the ballot secured from corruption we need not have the trouble of any more elections. Gentleman, ponder this stupendous matter of interest, and decide to never fail having the only one who will dispel fraud from the sacred ballot box T. W. R.

Lily.

Mr. Joe Mims, son of Mr. Richard Mims, died suddenly on Tuesday evening at his home with Mr. Jesse Culp near Lily. He had been to Clanton in the afternoon, and after returning home was suddenly seized with what proved to be a fatal attack. He was affected with heart disease. The deceased was a young man well thought of in this community, and what adds a particularly sad feature to his untimely death was he was married only about four weeks ago, and leave a sad young widow to lament his loss. He was buried on Wednesday at New Prospect church. Our sympathies are with the bereaved family.

Miss Ollie Garner was happily married to Mr. W. E. Perry last Sunday at Mulberry church.

Rev. I. G. Lowery preached two excellent sermons at Mulberry at his last appointment. Bro. Lowery has been called to the care of our church for next year.

Miss Anna Palmer, of Valley Creek, was here last Sunday.

Miss Bonnie Flemming, Celestia Jones and Minnie Rasberry, accompanied by Messrs. E. J. Hayes, E. B. Deason and W. H. Veazey, besides other messengers attended the Unity Association.

Editor BANNER—I notice considerable cavilling over the contemplated road law. Now, my idea is this: Let there be a special tax added to each poll tax for the purpose of keeping up the roads, and as the poll taxes are retained in the townships for public school purposes, also retain the special road tax to some townships for road purposes. Then let there be a special road tax levied on rich corporations and other property holders (at the same time) consider the use of public roads to said property holders and tax them accordingly, all the while retaining said road tax in the township from whence it comes.

Now, I think the above will partly overcome the so much heard of objection that those who have faithfully served their time on the roads up to 45 years of age will still have the burden to bear. Now let someone else make an amendment to the above and maybe we can get the matter settled.

After a while, I stand, as I have heretofore stated, on the bull and school law and would like to know what others who are much better informed than I think of my suggestion. Please speak through the Banner as I write to draw suggestions from intelligent persons.

West Chilton, Oct. 4, '98

Editor BANNER—Dear Sir, will you please publish these few lines in regard to Mr. L. H. Reynold's bull law. I repeat again that Chilton county don't need any such nonsence law, and I think those men who are advocating a bull law must be over-balanced in their minds. I will admit that the cattle ought to be improved, but this can be done without confining the bulls. If there was a bull law forced over the heads of the people, the next thing would be a stock law. The bull law would be the first sly step to get the stock law in Chilton. We need more bulls and better bulls, and this can be done without a bull law.

In regard to a road law, we don't need any taxation to work the roads. A law of this sort would let out all the boys from 18 to 21 who would pay no tax. We need the Dallas county road law put in force in Chilton and that is this: Work every able-bodied man between 18 and 60 years of age 10 days in the year. This kind of a law would soon have Chilton county with as good roads as Dallas county now has, and no one hurt by taxation. We have to pay too much tax already.

In regard to a dog law, every head of a family should be allowed one dog free of tax, and all over that number should be taxed 50 cents a head or more, and that amount be added to the school fund. This would be better for the negro and white man too. A dog law of this kind would run our schools longer, and keep meal in the barrel longer, and more sheep in the woods. Success to the Banner and its editor. OLD MIKE.

Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin

"When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine in the first place; what experience tells you is best to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. Theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But if you can get Dr. Inclination, Dr. Experience and Dr. Reason to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

THE BANNER.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

CLANTON, - ALABAMA

The inventive facilities of the American girl seem practically unlimited. The Atchison (Kan.) Globe says: "By tying sandpaper about her ankles an Atchison girl produces the same effect as by buying an expensive silk skirt. The pieces of sandpaper rub together and sound just like a $12 skirt." Pretty rough on the dressmakers, though.

The Siberian railroad is offering great inducements to travelers. It provides not merely parlor and sleeping cars, but one fitted with a gymnasium and Russian baths, a dark room for photographers and a stationary bicycle, on which one may make century runs without leaving the train. It is not supposed that political exiles will travel in such cars. But then their number is growing less and that of free travelers in that land of vast expanses and vast possibilities is growing rapidly larger.

Travelers over the line of railway from the City of Mexico to the city of Vera Cruz are said to be greatly impressed with some of the engines they see in use on that route—double-headers as they are termed. The Mexican railway company has already as many as a dozen, adding them from time to time to its stock as business has demanded. Each of these mammoth constructions weighs 100 tons, and is capable of hauling 100 tons up a four and one-half per cent. grade. They are of Scotch manufacture, and have now been in the service of the road about ten years. The fact is mentioned as somewhat singular that these double-headers are used by no other road in North America.

The Santa Cruz Islands, which Great Britain has seized, have for some years been under a British protectorate, though at one time by the French. They lie near the Solomon Islands, which are British, and about an equal distance from the New Hebrides, which are under the control of a mixed French and British commission. They comprise a dozen volcanic islands and numerous mere rocky islets too small for habitation. Their total area is three hundred and sixty square miles, and their population about five thousand mixed Melanesians and Polynesians of uncommonly inhospitable disposition. The islands are of no strategic and of little other value, and the raising of the union jack upon them will not perceptibly alter the inclination of the Ecliptic.

Many of the United States senators from Southern states come from small towns, the policy in many parts of the South being to recognize country rather than city statesmen. Neither of the representatives of Texas is from Galveston; neither of the representatives from Georgia is from Atlanta; neither of the senators from North Carolina is from Raleigh; neither of the senators from South Carolina is from Charleston; neither of the senators from Kentucky is from Louisville; neither of the senators from West Virginia is from Wheeling, and neither of the senators from Missouri is from St. Louis. Some of the towns represented are Marietta, Ga.; Bennetsville, S. C.; Tyler, Tex.; Scottsville, Va.; Marshall, N. C., and Marion, Ky. Tennessee is the only Southern state whose two senators represent the two chief cities.

As pretty an illustration as we have yet seen of the new spirit which marks the interchange of comment between England and America appears in the last Spectator to arrive by mail, says the New York Times. Discussing the statement of the English captain at Manila, when asked by the German admiral what he would do in case the Germans interfered with the bombardment of the city—the statement being that only the English captain and American admiral had or could get any information on that delicate topic—The Spectator says: "There is something very naive in the German admiral imagining that we should allow him to bully Admiral Dewey—though, as far as that goes, there is no reason to think that the American sailors would want any one's help if it came to fighting the Germans." The first part of this sentence is entirely friendly, and only a few months ago the possibility that it might be a little irritating to American nerves would not have worried the Spectater a bit. But now an afterthought comes, and it gets instant expression. The words as they stand are not exactly a lesson in tact, to be sure, but aren't they delightful. They make the Atlantic ocean seem narrow indeed.

ORDER FOR OCCUPATION

Of Cuba Has Been Issued by Adjutant-General Corbin.

THE COMMANDER NOT YET NAMED.

Fourth Volunteer Infantry Directed to Take Station at Manzanillo and Report Arrival to Major-General Wade. Under Temporary Command.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special.)—The following order for the occupation of Cuba has been issued by Adjutant-General Corbin:

"By direction of the secretary of war the Fourth United States Volunteer Infantry, detached from the Seventh Army Corps, will be placed in readiness for immediate service in Cuba pursuant to general order No. 154, current series from this office, and proceed, fully armed and equipped, to take station at Manzanillo, the commanding officer reporting his arrival by telegraph to Major-General Wade, United States Volunteers, Havana, who will give instructions as to its duty and disposition.

"The quartermaster department will furnish the necessary transportation, and the subsistence department will provide the necessary suitable rations, and the surgeon-general make ample provisions for necessary medical attendance and supplies for the troops en route and after arrival.

"By command of Major-General Miles. H. C. CORBIN,
"Adjutant-General."

The published order forming the First Division for the occupation of Cuba, does not designate the major-general who will command it, but states that the division will be temporarily commanded by a senior officer on duty, until a permanent division commander is chosen by the president.

"Department of Porto Rico.

The president has issued an executive order creating Porto Rico into a new military department, to be known as the department of Porto Rico, with Major-Gen. John R. Brooke in command. The headquarters of the department will be at Ponce until after the evacuation of the Spanish army, when it will be transferred to San Juan.

ALABAMA NEWS.

Joseph L. Meade, a prominent member of the Birmingham bar, died Saturday.

The jury, after being out forty-eight hours, rendered a verdict finding Lut Evans guilty of murder of Parker Rowe, a prominent dentist, of Piedmont. Evans was given twenty-three years.

It looks now that the bridge across the Alabama river at Selma will not be made free before January, as the county has no authority to borrow money or issue bonds without an act of the Legislature.

Calvin Wheeler, of the well-known Wheeler spring near Palestine, Cleburne county, met with a serious, if not fatal, accident near the furnace. His horse became frightened at the switch engine, running away and throwing him out.

About October 10 Attorney General William C. Fitts will issue his biennial report, which will include the number of crimes committed in the state and arrests and convictions, and many other important matters connected with the administration of justice.

A special term of the supreme court will probably be held between now and November 3, the date when the new judges will occupy the bench. The calendar is now being overhauled. Under the old code the judges would not have entered into office until November 9.

Before War Investigating Commission.

The war investigating commission has decided to ask General Lee to follow General Wheeler in giving testimony concerning the charges made against the war department, and suggested Wednesday of this week as a date when he could be heard. General Wheeler will be before the committee on Tuesday, and will be interrogated both about Camp Wikoff and the Santiago campaign.

Minister in Trouble.

At Scottsboro Saturday Postoffice Inspector Resson caused the arrest of Dr. J. W. Shoemaker and son Lisle, charged with using cancelled postage stamps. Both parties were carried to Huntsville for hearing before the United States commissioner, and were put under bonds of $1,000 each.

Strike Settled.

The miners' strike at Mary Lee mines, Jefferson county, which has been on since July 1, when the yearly wage scale expired, has been settled by the operators granting the men the raise they asked. The new scale is 37½ cents per ton, an advance of 2½ cents.

Gomez Grateful.

Gen. Maximo Gomez has left the Rojas camp, and is retiring to the estate of Boarl Yaguyay, near Remedios, Province of Santa Clara. Gomez seems very grateful to the United States, and confident that the Americans will establish a stable and independent government.

The remains of Thomas F. Bayard were interred at Wilmington, Del., Saturday with impressive ceremonies.

DECREE SIGNED BY BLANCO

Granting Pardon to All Political Prisoners in Cuba.

HAVANA.—The official Gazette has published a decree signed by Captain General Blanco and bearing date of September 27, granting pardon to, and ordering the release of, all political prisoners in the island.

It is understood that orders have been given to the Spanish forces at Holguin to march to Gibara, concentrate there and hold themselves in readiness for shipment to Spain. The troops at Puerto Principe are expected to go to Nuevitas, those on the Jucaro Moron trocha to San Fernandino and those at Manzanillo to Cienfuegos. The third and fourth divisions of the first army corps will embark at Matanzas and the first and second divisions of the same corps from Havana. The forces in the provinee of Pinar del Rio and the division engaged in the defense of Havana, with General Blanco and his staff, will embark at Havana.

HOBSON'S WORK.

Young Constructor Will Be Given Further Aid in Raising Cristobal Colon.

Assistant Secretary Allen, who has been directly in charge of the arrangements made with the wrecking companies for raising such of the Spanish warships, sunk or stranded in the battle of July 3d as can be recovered, said, referring to Constructor Hobson's work on the Teresa, that the navy department had given the young constructor all of the assistance which it was possible to extend in the prosecution of his work. Moreover, it is now proposed to give him further aid in his effort to raise the Colon, by far the finest ship in the Spanish squadron. In the case of this ship, young Constructor Hobson has staked his professional reputation against the unanimous opinion of all the expert wreckers who have examined the ship. Yet the navy department is unhesitatingly supporting Hobson's judgment, as is indicated by the fact that it shipped from New York $20,000 worth of specially manufactured rubber air bags to be used in lifting the Colon.

VOTED FOR PROHIBITION.

Majority Against Liquor in Canada Will Not Exceed 18,000.

TORONTO, Ont.—The majority for prohibition in the entire Dominion will not likely exceed 18,000. All the provinces except Quebec voted prohibition, Ontario giving it a majority of about 10,000. Quebec's majority against, 4,000, is just about offset by the returns from the maritime provinces, while the returns from Manitoba, the territories and British Cobia show that the west is in favor of prohibition by a majority of 7,000 or 8,000. Even the prohibition papers consider the majority too small to influence the government to attempt to enact prohibition legislation.

Peace Commissions' First Meeting.

The American and Spanish peace commission assembled in Paris for their first business session at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the rooms assigned for their deliberations at the French foreign office on the Quai D'Orsay. A special entrance is set apart for the use of the commissioners in order to furnish them with every privacy and convenience possible. Both commissions maintain secrecy as to their proceedings.

Colonel Bryan Wins.

The question as to whether Colonel Bryan shall be retained in the military service was finally disposed of Friday when Secretary Alger notified Governor Holcomb, of Nebraska, that the selection of the Nebraska regiment to be mustered out will be left entirely with him. Colonel Bryan will once more become a private citizen, which will enable him to take part in the campaign.

Gen. Gomez's Views.

Gen. Maximo Gomez, in an interview at Camp Rojas, province of Santa Clara, is quoted as saying that the insurgent forces will disband and apply themselves to farm labor as soon as the Spanish troops evacuate the island.

Edhem Pasha Deprived of Power.

Edhem Pasha, the Turkish governor who is chiefly blamed for the recent rioting at Candia, Isle of Crete, has been deprived of the governorship.

Henry George for Governor.

At a meeting of the Chicago platform democrats in New York Henry George, the son of the single tax advocate, was nominated to head an independent democratic ticket. The nomination of Elliott F. Danforth for lieutenant-governor by the regular democratic convention of Syracuse was endorsed.

Preferred Death to Life In Camp.

Albert Nickens, corporal of the 2d Tennessee, at Nashville, on a furlough, committed suicide by taking poison rather than return to his regiment. Nickens told a young lady friend that he would rather die than return. He was 19 years old.

ARMY CAMPS.

The Troops to Be Quartered In Georgia and Carolina Towns.

The following official announcement of sites for army camps in the south, recommended by the Schwan board, sent south for that purpose, was posted at the war department Saturday.

The following points have been recommended by the Schwan board: Augusta, Ga.; Columbia, S. C.; Spartanburg, S. C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Macon, Ga.; Columbus, Ga.; Americus, Ga., and Albany, Ga.

CHINA'S EMPEROR IS DEAD.

Committed Suicide After Signing Decree Placing Empress on Throne.

SEMI-OFFICIAL CONFIRMATION MADE.

Reports of His Taking Off Differ—One Report Says He Died by Poison and Another That Death Was Caused by Strangulation.

A special dispatch from Shanghai says telegrams furnished by the taotai or local governor, to a Chinese paper there allege that the emperor of China committed suicide on September 21, after signing the decrees which placed the dowager empress at the head of affairs in China. This, it is added, is understood to mean that the emperor was assassinated.

All the English-speaking secretaries and the principal members of the Chinese foreign office, it is further announced, have been seized and banished.

A later dispatch from Shanghai said it was semi-officially announced that the emperor of China committed suicide on September 21.

Report Confirmed.

A special dispatch from Shanghai says the announcement of the death of the emperor is confirmed. The reports as to the means employed in his taking off differ. One story has it that he died by poison and another that death was caused by strangulation, while a third states that he was subjected to frightful torture, a red hot iron being thrust through his bowels.

ITS WORK COMPLETED.

The Congressional Committee Has Returned From Hawaii.

The steamer Gaelic has arrived at San Francisco from Hong Kong and Yokohama via Honolula, bringing the congressional committee from the latter place.

Under date of September 23 the Honolulu correspondent of the Associated Press writes that the congressional committee having completed its work, Senators Cullom and Morgan and Congressman Hitt left for Washington, where they will hold a meeting on November 14, which will be attended by Justice Frear and probably by President Dole.

During the last few days of their stay in Honolulu, a number of petitions were sent to the committee by various foreign residents. The American Union party, which claims to represent the American party in the islands, presented a memorial requesting of the commission a liberal form of territorial government. The memorial further favors a liberal suffrage, the extention of the United States tariff laws and shipping to Hawaii.

SCHEDULED FOR CUBA.

General Lee Would Prefer That His Command Occupy Havana.

Major-General Fitzhugh Lee was at the war department Friday. There seems to be no doubt in official circles that General Lee is scheduled to go to Cuba. Some question has aresen, however, as to the point in Cuba he will occupy. Quite a number of public men, and it is probable that General Lee himself, would prefer that his command go to Havana. There is some sentiment in the matter and many persons have expressed the hope that as Blanco marches out, that General Lee might march into the city. A number of men in official life have already interested themselves in this subject and will urge the president to issue his orders for the occupation of Cuba with this end in view.

SICK COMING HOME.

The President Orders All the Soldiers Ill in Porto Rico Brought Back.

The war department has posted the following: "The president has given instructions that all sick at Porto Rico be sent north as soon as they are able to travel with safety, his purpose being to relieve General Brooke of the further care of the sick, and at the same time enable the men to receive the treatment obtainable in the better appointed home hospitals. These men will be furloughed as in cases of those returning from Santiago."

A King's Narrow Escape.

A man has been arrested at Orsovekorsova charged with complicity in a plot to assassinate the King of Roumania. The police received timely warning and the attempt was frustrated. A vial of poison, a dagger and several other weapons were found in the man's posessions.

Young Lady Mangled by an Engine.

A frightful tragedy, which resulted in the death of Miss Susie Myers, occurred at Nashville Saturday, when she was run over by a switch engine of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad near the South Cherry street crossing and mangled beyond recognition.

Will Select Camps in Cuba.

The war department has decided to send boards of officers to Cuba to investigate and report upon locations for camps for the army of occupation in that island. Havana, Cienfuegos, Matanzas and Mariel will be visited. There will be five posts established, including Manzanillo, and six, counting Santiago.

The Red Destroyer.

The loss from forest fires in West Wisconsin is estimated at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

WILL NOT RESIGN.

General Wheeler Will Remain in Service if the President Wishes It.

General Wheeler will not resign from the army as long as the president needs his services in the field. The president has asked the general to reconsider his determination and remain under orders. The president has supreme confidence in General Wheeler and believes his congressional experience will be of special value just now in Cuba. General Wheeler had made up his mind to resign his commission when congress should convene, but his decision has been changed in accordance with the president's wishes. General Wheeler said that after appearing before the war investigating committee he will go to Huntsville, Ala., to assume command of a division placed under him. General Wheeler said that while his future movements have not been definitely settled, he understands that he will be sent to Cuba in command of a division of cavalry. He will probably be stationed in Santa Clara province.

WAR ON COLORED MINERS.

Masked White Men Visit Cabins Occupied by the Blacks and Drive Them Out of Town.

One hundred and fifty coal miners from Pana, Ill., went to Washington, Ind., Sunday and met at the fair grounds with the home union miners and organized. Sunday night they got together and, masked, visited all the shacks where the colored coal miners lived. About fifty of the negroes were corralled, and at the point of pistols were driven out of town. One negro refused to go and the miners fired on him. He has not been found, and may be killed. Chief of Police Call turned in the fire alarm and called out the citizens to assist in keeping peace. A new outbreak of trouble is feared and much bloodshed is likely to result. There are possibly fifty negroes who declare they will die before they will leave town.

AFFAIRS AT PEKIN

Causes Secretary of War to Order War Ships to Chinese Waters.

Secretary Long, upon advices received at the state department showing the existence of threatening conditions in China, has ordered Admiral Dewey to send two war ships immediately from Manila to a point as near the Chinese capital as possible for a war ship to approach. The vessels selected for this undertaking are the Baltimore and Petrel.

Foreign Fleet Assembling.

The state department has received the following cablegram from Minister Conger at Pekin: "There is no serious danger yet, but considerable anxiety for the future. The foreign fleet is assembling at Tien-Tsin. Some of the ministers are ordering marines to Pekin for legation guards.

Henry George Declines Nomination.

Henry George has declined the nomination for governor of New York on the ticket placed in the field by the Chicago platform democrats and the committee having authority to fill the vacancies nominated Henry M. McDonald, of the county of New York, for the place. Mr. George in his letter says that he is pursuing uninterruptedly in writing his father's biography and can do more for the principles of freedom than by engaging actively in politics.

More Troops En Route to Anniston.

The Second army corps will be shipped from Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., to Anniston, Ala., preparatory to being sent to Cuba. The movement will begin in about two weeks, and will be completed with the least possible delay.

The second division, in command of General Davis, is now moving to Anniston, and from there to Cuba to take the place of the First when it returns to muster out.

More Troops Ordered to Porto Rico.

The war department has decided to send more troops to Porto Rico. Orders have been issued directing that the Fifth Regular Cavalry now at Huntsville, Ala., the Sixth United States Volunteer Infantry, now at Chickamauga, and the Forty-seventh New York at Fort Adams, shall proceed to such port in Porto Rico as may be desired by the commanding general in that island.

Van Wyck for Governor.

The democratic convention of New York in session at Syracuse named the following ticket: For governor, Augustus Van Wyck, of Kings; lieutenant-governor, Elliot Danforth, of Chenango; secretary of state, Geo. W. Batten, of Niagara; comptroller, Edward S. Atwater, of Duchess; state treasurer, E. P. Morris, of Wayne; attorney general, Thomas F. Conway, of Clinton; state engineer and surveyor, Martin Schenk, of Rensselaer.

Gov. Taylor Worse.

Information from Johnson City, Tenn., says Governor Taylor's condition has become more critical than at any time during his illness.

Col. Hay Sworn in.

Col. John Hay was sworn into office as secretary of state at 11 o'clock Friday morning. The ceremony took place in the president's room at the white house and the oath was administered by Justice Harlan of the supreme court.

Admiral Sicard Retired.

Rear-Admiral Montgomery Sicard has been retired, having reached the age of 62 years. He will retain his place at the head of the promotion board.

Rents are paid from the first day of the

The rents amount to two-thirds and in some cases to three-fifths of the workman's yearly salary. The fund for burial expenses is furnished by the employers. In cases coming under invalid and old-age insurance, the parties receive rents from the time they are unable to work, without regard to age.
Old-age rents, from the seventieth year sum paid by the party is returned."

From 1885 to the close of 1897, $257,- 517,856 was paid for sick insurance and $86,847,842 for accidents. Invalid and old-age pensions began to be paid in 1891, and $60,696,997 has already been spent under that head.

It is true that some co-operative enterprises flourish despite competition.
These enterprises, as an almost invariable rule, are of such a nature that competition is not fierce, and that the co-operative method of production is positively lower in price than any other kind. Thus, co-operative creameries are generally successful; so are co-operative farms, so long as the farmers "stick." But when the product comes in close competition with that of other factories, etc., as in the case with shoes, hats, coal, etc., co-operation and profit-sharing is not apt to long hold up its head.

What Manual Work Is.

A writer in the London Graphic draws in the following paragraph a strong and true picture of just what manual toil is. The mere realization of it made him (or her) tired. "How little do idle people realize what an eight or ten-hour day's labor really means! It was my fate once to occupy a bedroom opposite a steam sawmill.
At 5:30 o'clock, just when I was plunged in the most delicious slumber, the sound of the carts of wood arriving woke me, the work-people filed in, the saw was set going. When, a little later, I sleepily arose and walked to the window, there was everything in full swing, the brilliant summer morning in its glory, the dew still standing on the grass, a sense of moisture and verdure in the air, the whole creation to live and labor. All through the hot morning, while a lounge under cool green trees seemed to me the only possible existence, that mill creaked and snorted, hissed and sawed without intermission. Men, singly or in groups, ran in and out like ants, offering hostages to its greedy maw. A short pause for dinner, and then, during that long, fiery afternoon, which seemed as though it would never end, the mill thundered, while hot and dirty men, their faces black with sweat, cut and planed and hammered in the sun, whose rays fell vertically, burning as they fell. The shadows lengthened, the very birds lay still, hushed by the tropical heat, the grasshoppers ceased to chirrup—only the sawmill still relentlessly worked on. Then from my cool vantage ground, as I watched the endless toil, I felt at last that I knew the meaning of work, of that constant grinding labor that leaves no respite, that bows men's backs and furrows their faces, and marks off the toilers from the idlers with as grim a brand as life knows how to fashion, which makes men prematurely old, and leaves them to die hopelessly when they are no longer of any use. It was evening.
The little stars began to peep out timidly one by one from the pale blue twilight, all nature had dropped into quiet, the plain was filled with shadow when slowly, regretfully almost as it seems, the men plodded out wearily along the dusty road, the horses were harnessed to the heavy wagons, and the last echoing creak of the wheels died away in the distance. The day's labor was over, and, tired out myself by the mere realization of its meaning, I crept away to bed."

Canadian Labor Congress.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Canadian Labor Congress met at Winnipeg, Manitoba, the past week.
Mr. Thomas I. Kidd, general secretary of the Amalgamated Woodworkers' International Union, was fraternal delegate from the Federation of Labor.

The basis of representation in the Congress is as follows:

Trades unions, local assemblies of the Knights of Labor, federal unions and directories of the Industrial Brotherhood shall be allowed one delegate for each 100 members or under, and one for each additional 100 or majority fraction thereof. Trades councils, central labor unions, national trades unions, national directory of Industrial Brotherhood and district assemblies of the Knights of Labor, three delegates each. Two or more trades unions, local assemblies of the Knights of Labor, or directories of the Industrial Brotherhood, whose aggregate membership does not exceed 150, may unite to send one delegate. No proxy representative is allowed and all delegates must be members of the bodies they represent.

In the towns of which London is composed private companies are seeking to compete with the vestries in supplying electric light.

PEOPLE WISE ENOUGH

WHY DEMOCRACY FAVORS THE REFERENDUM.

And Why the Republican Party Opposes It—Latter Does Not Want People to Have a Voice in Making Laws—Democrats Say People Must Rule.

In nearly every state, west and south, this year the representatives of the Democratic party in convention assembled have reindorsed the glorious principles of the Chicago platform. These reindorsements are not the perfunctory work that used to be done in the days when Cleveland and his Republican cohorts used to dominate the party. But the Democrats have gone further than the platform and have taken up the question of the referendum. In Illinois particularly, where a Republican administration has been selling legislation to corporations, the people are evincing a lively interest in that plank in the Democratic platform which says: "IF THE PEOPLE ELECT OUR TICKET NO MORE LAWS SHALL BE MADE UNLESS VOTED ON BY ALL THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE."

Question—What is a political platform?

Answer—It is a declaration of principles usually made at a state or national convention, by which the party indicates measures it favors.

Q.—When did the Democrats make their last platform?

A.—At the last national convention in 1896, known as the Chicago platform, and the state platform was adopted at Springfield July 12, 1898.

Q.—Is there any vital issue at stake now?

A.—Yes, the fundamental principles of the republic are at stake.

Q.—How so?

A.—Well, it is well known that the state and national government is now at the mercy of corrupt rings and monopolists. Mr. Taylor, in his book, "The People or the Politician," says: "At present everything favors the corruptionist. He has first the opportunity of nominating his tools, and, failing in this, he has the opportunity of converting the nominees into tools by offering to aid in their election or threatening their defeat, and then if men are elected on whom he has no hold he has resources and powers for influencing them which the average man finds it next to impossible to resist."

Q.—I don't believe it. Give me some proof of it.

A.—The last legislature passed the Allen bill, the most brazen, corrupt and venal law ever passed by the legislature of Illinois. John R. Tanner, the present governor, tried to get just such a bill through once before when John P. Altgeld was governor, who vetoed it. Altgeld was beaten for governor and Tanner was elected in his place. The bill came up first as the Humphrey bill, but that was too infamous, then modified, it passed as the Allen bill. John R. Tanner signed it and it is a law. Many voted for it who were not elected to vote for such bills.

Q.—Who got that bill through?

A.—John R. Tanner and a man named Yerkes, a street car magnate of Chicago, are said to have been its chief sponsors.

Q.—Were men corrupt who voted for that bill?

A.—There were too classes who voted for it—dishonest men and the men who were deceived. The former were paid for voting for it, the latter were not.

Q.—Didn't Democrats vote for that bill?

A.—Oh, yes! but they won't do so any more. They have been sent into political exile to repent their mistake.

Q.—What did the Republicans do to the fellows who voted for that bill?

A.—Oh, "they didn't do a t'ing to them." They nominated most of them again, and try to appear proud of their faults.

Q.—But don't the people of that party object?

A.—Yes; but the politicians don't care. They are used to that. They intend to whip them into line. At first Republican papers howled dolefully, but they are swallowing the pill without making a wry face.

Q.—But what can we do to stop such bills being passed?

A.—By direct legislation. Let the people make the laws. The people are too numerous to be bought.

Q.—What do you mean by direct legislation?

A.—Why at present you legislate through representatives. Direct legislation is to have the laws made by the people themselves.

Q.—How is that?

A.—By a system known as "THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM." That system is this: The legislature cannot do more than formulate (initiate) or start a law. Then it is referred to the people for their sanction at the next general election, and if the people ratify it, it becomes a law; if not, it is dead. Under such a system there would be no incentive for corruptionists to get their tools into office, for they could not serve their masters. Next, there would be no man fool enough to spend his money on a man who could not pass his law.

Q.—But will this not make matters more complicated?

A.—By no means. "We now have the Australian ballot system, secret voting, strict registration laws, special election of officers, etc., thus rendering the present system unnecessarily burdensome and expensive. The adoption of the referendum will make these precautions useless, both in the referendary and elective ballots, since not only will it be impossible for any class or combination of classes to influence the people sufficiently to secure legislation in their favor, but the transformation of the legislators into simple committee men will make them useless as tools to these classes and will make the election of one man no more to them than another.

Q.—Surely that is only a just way of legislating. Does any person object to that?

A.—Ah, yes! The Republicans.

Q.—What does the Democratic platform say on this question?

A.—It denounces the Allen bill as nefarious, and it favors and is pledged to the initiative and referendum. The Republican platform is as dumb as an oyster on these points and the corrupt leaders who secured the passage of that act are now in full control of the entire organization. With no legislative restriction like the initiative and referendum, the corrupt men of last legislature, if returned to power, can enact equally venal laws. If you send them back you indorse them. Therefore the issue is plain. The Republican convention, too cowardly to indorse and too venal to condemn the Allen law, have attempted to evade a direct issue. To return them to power means to indorse their platform. They promise you nothing, but secured by that curse of our state, "the cohesive power of plunder," they are quietly pushing themselves into power again, when they are not wanted, outside of the gang. The Democracy, on the other hand, condemned the Allen bill. It disowns the Democrats who voted for that bill. The Democracy promises to change the laws so as to effectually prevent, in the future, the passage of any others like it, by the initiative and referendum.

Prosperity and Republicanism.

From the Mississippi Valley Democrat: Republican delegates to the St. Louis convention report much "prosperity" among farmers, but they do not say how greatly it is helped out by the bond issue, by gold hoarding and the consequent drop in the price of wheat.

The Three Greatest Crimes.

From the Nonconformist: The three greatest modern crimes against humanity are the monopolization of natural bounties, the forced increase of debts and the periodical shrinkage of values.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

OF THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S GOLDBUG EDITOR.

Why Put Up the Price of Money?—Debtors and Creditors, Producers and Money-Hoarders — Dear Dollars Make Cheap Men.

One of the Chicago Tribune's recent editorials upon the money question caused James Cockrell, an Illinois farmer, to ask the editor to explain the following:

1. What do you mean by the term "44-cent dollar?" How can a piece of money coined by the authority of the government of the United States as a dollar, be a dollar and contain less than one hundred cents?

2. When you speak of the "most prosperous and progressive commercial nations of the world," do you have reference to the prosperity of the Rothschilds and a few hundred other bankers, brokers, money changers and landlords, or to the prosperity of the people in general?

3. Do you judge the prosperity of a nation by its commerce and the bonds and mortgages held by its money lenders, or by the wealth actually owned and controlled by those that produce all wealth (the common people)? If by the latter, are then, in your opinion, the common people in England, Germany, Italy, Austria and Spain prosperous? If so, is it due to the "gold standard?"

4. How would cheaper money ("44-cent dollars") have the effect of placing the American people on a level with Chinamen? Were the people of our country on a level with Chinamen before the coinage of silver was stopped and thus far silver demonetized?

5. If the free and independent coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, should, as you say it would, wipe out 60 per cent of the credits of the country, what would become of that wealth, if it be real wealth? If the creditor lost it would the debtor gain it?

6. If the creditor class (as you say) would lose 60 per cent by the full and complete remonetization of silver, how much then did the debtors lose by the demonetization of that metal?

7. During the last thirty years who has lost the most wealth, the creditor class by a fall in the value of money, or the debtors by a rise in the value of money? Have you kept track of this little matter?

8. If, after a thorough investigation of the matter, you should discover that the toiling, wealth-producing and debtor classes have been the constant losers and to the extent of billions of dollars, in consequence of money growing dearer and dearing during the last twenty-five or thirty years, would you then consent to have matters evened up a little by squeezing say 40 or 50 per cent of value out of money, and, to that extent, return it into the fruits of the toil of the real wealth producer? Is it any worse to rob a creditor than a debtor, and, if so, why?

9. You say there are "$2,010 saving bank depositors in Ohio, who have $33,000,000 on deposit." Do you know how many men there are in Ohio, out of a population of 4,000,000, who are paying interest to the savings banks for the privilege of using this money?

10. Do you know how many men, women and children in Ohio have not a dollar on earth, and who have no means of acquiring a dollar except through their labor? You, sir, give 2½ per cent of the population of the state as having bank deposits, what do you say about the 97½ per cent (ninety-seven out of every hundred), without any deposits?

11. Why is it that you are not as deeply interested in the welfare of the many who have money to buy or earn, as you are in the welfare of the very few who have money to sell?

12. Don't you reckon that the little 2½ per cent bank depositors would gain more than they would lose, if the Populists or somebody else should rob dollars of 60 per cent of their value by adding 60 per cent to the value of labor? I can think of no other way by which the trick can be performed, can you?

13. You have a good deal to say about the purchasing power of money. I suppose by that you have reference to the amount or quality one man can buy of the fruits of another man's toil, with one dollar; if you are contending for dollars of the greatest purchasing power, then why did you manifest so much joy when it took $1.75 to buy one bushel of wheat. If dollars of the greatest purchasing power are the best for everybody, don't you think that a general rise in prices, so that dollars would not buy so much, would be the worst thing that could happen?

The answers to these questions are obvious to the dullest understanding, but the financial editor of the Tribune has not attempted an answer.

Use Your Vote for Yourself.

What is your vote for? asks the Appeal to Reason. Does the mere act of putting a piece of paper, that other men have fixed, into a box tickle you? Or do you enjoy seeing some other man receive a big salary for doing nothing, whe nyou have to foot the bill? What good has your ballot ever done you? Has it arranged conditions that made it easier and more easy to make a living on the farm or in the shop?

Equality.

"Do you really have equality in America?" asked the Englishman of the American. "Why, certainly," answered the American. "For instance, our poor people pay as much war tax as our millionaires."—Herold des Glaubens.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The available cash balance in the United States treasury is close to $450,000,000. Can anybody give a plausible reason why even $1 more should be held idle in the treasury? The only reason that suggests itself is that it is a good thing for the money-changers.

This enormous surplus, which belongs to all of the people, is being distributed among the national banks by whom it is loaned out at regular rates of interest to some of the actual owners of the money.

The bankers and the stockbrokers paid the expenses of electing the present administration, and they are certainly getting the worth of their money.

When the people elect a president and a congress these matters will be changed. There will be no unnecessary surplus in the treasury, and there will be a very useful surplus in the pockets of the taxpayers.

Congressman Loud of California will be defeated for re-election, but during the short term of the present congress he will again bring forward his bill for the burdening of the country press and the suppression of reform publications. And Speaker Reed will crowd it through the house, but it will be stopped in the upper house by the Populist senators.

POINTS FROM THE PRESS.

Whenever a trust dies the price of the article or articles it controls goes down; yet trust makers always declare that they make prices lower by lessening the cost of producing and selling it. Why can't the fellows be satisfied with being thieves only?—Farm, Stock and Home.

Once there exists a written constitution there is an end to all freedom. The judges can make the law to suit themselves. There is really no one else to make the laws, because under a written constitution the state of the law depends upon interpretation.—Twentieth Century.

The Hannacrats are denouncing what they call an "unlicensed press." How long before they will begin suppressing "unlicensed" newspapers here, as they have done in Porto Rico?—Journal of Agriculture.

The world moves, the human progress is not to pay tribute to monopoly or stop, and don't you forget it. The people must now master these monsters or be mastered by them. By no use of money shall one man or corporation draw from the producers a part of the product of their toil.—Appeal to reason.

Better vote the other ticket once in a while than to let blind partisanship become a chronic disease.—Farm, Stock and Home.

The question to be decided by the voters on Nov. 8 is, Shall the people rule or shall monopolies be entrenched? Yes or no?—San Francisco Star.

A Lesson in Political Economy.

It is manifestly impossible that men in general, or all men, or indeed any but a small minority of men, can satisfy their material desires by stealing, since in the nature of things working or the rendering of service is the only way in which the material satisfaction of desire can be primarily obtained or produced.

Stealing produces nothing; it only alters the distribution of what has already been produced.

Therefore, however it be that stealing is to be considered by an individual economy or by an economy of a political division, and with whatever propriety a successful thief who has endowed churches and colleges and libraries and soup-houses may in such an economy be treated as a public benefactor and spoken of as Anthony spoke of Caesar:

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fills:

a true science of political economy takes no cognizance of stealing, except in so far as the various forms of it may pervert the natural distribution, and thus check the natural production of wealth.—Henry George.

Carrying Out the Policy.

From the Ottumwa Iowa, Democrat: Judge Grosscup of Chicago, with all of his top-loftical flights of oratory, was consistent in his demand that after swallowing the Philippines our next movement should be in the direction of China and secure a slice of that territory. This is but the legitimate outcome of the spread-eagle policy; there is no end to it. In order to round our possessions in the archipelago we must have a part of China; in the language of the grasping old farmer, "We want everything that jines us!"

Labor and Economics.

Issuing paper money does not add anything to the wealth of the country. Any thinker can see that. But it often happens that the increased facility for exchange, which such an issue affords, causes production to be so increased that the country really gains more than the amount of the money issued, and it seems as if the money had really been an addition to the wealth of the nations. But he who would understand economics must keep in mind the fact that labor alone creates wealth.—New Era.

FOR CONGRESS:

W. F. ALDRICH

In Georgia yesterday the Democratic State ticket was elected by about 70,000 majority.

A FREE vote and honest count is the battle-cry in this district. In the last two congressional elections the vote was too free in Dallas, and it took the committee on elections in Congress to get the count right.

A REPRESENTATIVE in Congress should represent the district from which he is returned. Does any one know what Gaston A. Robbins did for this district when he was supposed to be representing it?

AN Indian rising in Minnesota resulted in a battle between U. S. soldiers and the Indians. Four soldiers were killed, and a rumor is afloat that the whole company of 100 men has been massacred, but the report needs confirmation.

HON. Gaston A. Robbins, "the silent member," we believe had some appointment this week in remote parts of Chilton county. As we have not heard any mention of the honorable gentleman it is to be presumed he has been "wasting his sweetness on the desert air."

WE are glad to note the L. & N. R. R. Co., with its accustomed regard to the public wants, and recognizing the growing business of Clanton, has given our general depot agent a day operator as well as a night operator. This leaves Mr. Higgins free to attend to the freight business which increases every day.

THE Hon. Gaston A. Robbins has developed into a full-blown orator, and is desirous of exhibiting his ability to the voters of the Fourth Congressional district. He was dumb as an oyster in the session of Congress when he was supposed to be representing this distaict, and it is said many members of congress did not even know the Hon. Gaston existed. As to any thing he ever did for the Fourth Congressional district of Alabama no one has yet been able to find out. But now Mr. Robbins wants to tell the dear people all he has done for them, and invites Mr. Aldrich to stump the district with him and Mr. Aldrich very properly declines.

WE understand that several lists of names for managers of the forthcoming election have been submitted to the appointing board—the Probate Judge, Sheriff and Circuit Clerk. What this extraordinary proceeding is entended for it is hard to say. There are but two candidates, one the nominee of the Populists and the Republicans, and the other the Democratic nominee. If the recognized friends of both candidates submit a list of names it would seem to be all that is necessary, more especially as, under the law, it is within the power of the appointing board to ignore these recommendations, and appoint whom they please, so long as each party is represented at the election. The Banner has no partiality either as to managers of elections, providing the law is complied with, and both candidates have representatives at each polling place. We have every confidence in the honesty of the people of Chilton county; we have been enjoying fair elections in this county and will continue to do so, for the simple reason our people will not tolerate any other. So long as the appointments are made in full compliance with the law we have no objections to raise.

RECENTLY we referred briefly to the broad-minded, non-partisan spirit of the Populists and Republicans in the Eighth Congressional District in participating in the Democratic primary and making the nomination, which is equivalent to the election, of General Joe Wheeler for Congress, unanimous. This non-partisan spirit might well be emulated in other districts, and more especially in this, the Fourth. The Populists and Republicans in the Eight district show by their action that, given a good man, who will worthily represent the best interests of all the people, they are willing to accept him and vote for him, not letting their prejudices or party spirit so bias them as to insist upon having a member of their own party to represent them in Congress. This is highly to be commended, and we heartily congratulate General Wheeler on his nomination. But it seems to us that the Democrats in this district could easily follow the example set them in the Eighth district by the Populists and Republicans, and taking the man whom it is generally acknowledged will most worthily represent this district, should withdraw their candidate, Hon. Gaston A. Robbins, and so make the election of W. F. Aldrich unanimous. The Fourth district of Alabama has unfortunately, acquired an unenviable reputation throughout the States, and if our Democratic friends will only be broad-minded and liberal enough to do as their Populist and Republican brethren in the Eighth district have done, and we unanimously elect W. F. Aldrich, it will go far to place the Fourth district in a better light before the country. Let us try it!

How to Prevent Croup

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

Cotton Production.

Twenty-five years ago the United States produced 70 per cent of the cotton of the world; today she produces 85 per cent of the world's cotton. This increase in the percentage has been, not because of a reduction of the cotton produced in other parts of the world, but simply on account of the increase in our own. The cotton supply of the other cotton-producing sections of the world in 1872-73 was 1,667,000 bales, and in 1897-98 1,665,000 bales. The average cotton production of other countries from 1872 to 1878 was 1,618,000 bales per annum, and from 1890 to 1897 was 1,924,000 bales per annum, showing that there has also been a slight growth in cotton production in other parts of the world, while our own production has been increasing enormously.

Not only has the price of cotton fallen at about the same rate that the production has increased, but there has also been a corresponding fall in the price of cloths manufactured from cotton. The reports of the Bureau of Statistics show that cotton "printing cloths" were quoted at 7 88 cents per yard in 1872, while reports just published show an average rate of 2 17 cents per yard in the cotton year 1898 for the same grade of cloths the fall in the manufactured article thus having, in this case at least, nearly or quite kept pace with the fall in the price of raw cotton and the increase in production of that article.

It is proper to add that the prices quoted for the earlier years are based upon the currency values of that period, and if reduced to a gold basis would be slightly less. Cotton "printing cloths," whose prices are given in the table, are of the quality manufactured for use in printing calicoes and accepted as a standard grade by which prices are constantly quoted.—Montgomery Journal.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for the man who attempts to deceive you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. J. M. Stanfield.

Political Pointers.

Peoples Party Press Bureau
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 5, 1898

In spite of a subsidized press and a party anxious to shield him the disgrace of our chief executive, ament the late war, is piling up alarmingly. All the country has been scandalized by the disclosure that Mr. McKinley's eat doctor was put in charge of the medical department and that Corbin, who had almost unlimited power, rests under charge of cowardice and unfitness to command brave men during the civil war. Solemn faced delegations from many sections have been for weeks waiting upon the president, urging the immediate removal of Secretary Alger, as his war record is proving too great an ordeal for even case hardened campaigners to stand up under.

One of the most significant political movements of to-day is the widespread tendency of the negro voters to assume an independent attitude toward the G. O. P. At many points they have put out candidates who will run against the regular party nominees, and they seem at last to have fully awakened to the fact that they have been used as the cat's-paw to pull chestnuts out of the political fire for the Republicans long enough.

The Socialist Labor party of Texas has filed its first nominations and will support a full state ticket this year.

Governor Leedy's continued illness, which it is feared will cause him to lose an eye, has kept him out of the campaign, much to the regret of the Kansas people.

Only nine men, it is alleged, responded to a recent call for a mass meeting of all the Populists of New York City.

Ex-Governors Altgeld of Illinois and Stone of Missouri have agreed to exchange speeches during the present campaign. Unless these able men are incorrectly reported in Democratic papers, they are delivering about as good Populist talks as any one would care to hear.

The Trade Unionists of Butte, Montana, have entered a hearty protest against the street car companies of that city being given license to do a freight business.

Owing to the earnest protestations and petitions of the Trades Unions of San Francisco all children under fourteen have been excluded from working in the department stores of that city.

The Pittsburg Labor League has entered politics. The party will be known as the Union Party, and no man will be eligible for membership therein who will not, under oath, renounce all allegiance to all former party affiliations and pledge himself to support the nominees, who must be members in good standing of the new party and of some labor organization.

The ticket of the three allied parties, it has been decided by the Secretary of State of California, must be headed "Democratic," while the Anti fusionists are given the name "People's Party."

It is estimated that the corn crop of Populist Nebraska this year will be worth $37,500,000. Such crops, now that the horde of thievish Republican officials has been removed, ought to make a Populist administration synonymous with prosperity, thus robbing the G. O. P. of its chief campaign slogan.

At the recent Democratic convention in New York the gold wing controlled and the Bryanites will put out a separate ticket.

The demand for silver money is greater throughout the South and West than ever before. Each of the mints is turning out silver coin, chiefly dollars and half-dollars, at the rate of $500,000 per month, without being able to fill all orders. Of course everybody remembers how silver was dubbed "cumbersome" and "inconvenient" by '96 gold bug spell-binders. A. R.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, for her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. Thus writes W. G. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. Y. Trial bottles free at Clanton Drug co. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Her Faults.

Edith—There is one thing in particular that I like Mr. Tactin for. He is so frank, you know. He always tells me of my faults without the least hesitation. That was the agreement I caused him to make.

Bertha—And you mean to say that you do not get angry with him?

Edith—Never.

Bertha—Tell me some of the faults he has found in you.

Edith—Oh, he hasn't found any yet. When I ask him to name them he always says that I am faultless. —Boston Transcript.

An Old Idea.

Every day strengthens the belief of eminent physicians that impure blood is the cause of the majority of our diseases. Twenty-five years ago this theory was used as a basis for the formula of Browns' Iron Bitters. The many remarkable cures effected by this famous old household remedy are sufficient to prove that the theory is correct. Browns' Iron Bitters is sold by all dealers.

I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. DEFEAT OF THE DERVISHES--- THE SOUDAN RECONQUERED.

"Chinese" Gordon Avenged.

COMPLETE and overwhelming is the defeat of the Dervishes.

January 27, 1885—England was humiliated in the Soudan by the rout of her troops, the assassination of Gordon and the fall of Khartoum, the capital of the Equatorial Provinces of Egypt and the centre of British influence in Central Africa.

September 3, 1898—England and Gordon were avenged by the utter rout of the Mahdists, by the fall of Omdurman, the Mahdist capital, just across the Nile from the ruins of Khartoum, and by the complete re-establishment of British power in the rich Soudanese provinces. With the overthrow of the Mahdist empire the last stronghold of the slave trade in the world has been destroyed.

The man who has routed the Dervishes, Major-General Sir Horatio Herbert Kitchener, G. B. C. M. G., has rendered the greatest service to his country, both in a military and civil capacity. He was born in Ireland, of good old Irish fighting stock, in 1851 and obtained a lieutenant's commission when twenty years of age. He became captain in 1883, major in the following year, lieutenant-colonel in 1885 and colonel in 1888.

After the Soudan campaign he was selected to recognize the Egyptian army and appointed Sirdar of the forces, and striking testimony to his ability has been given by the efficiency of the troops under his command during the expedition which has culminated in the recapture of the stronghold of the fanatics.

The fall of Khartoum means that the power of the Khalifa Abdullah is practically overthrown and that Kardofan and the Soudan are restored to the rule of Egypt, and that a point of great strategic importance and of vast commercial possibilities has been gained. Seated at the confluence of the Blue Nile and White Nile, the city is bound to be a great emporium of trade. It is shaped like the head of an elephant, from which it derives its name. In the old days it was very beautiful, with white walls and domes and minarets gleaming through green palm groves. But the Khalifa's wild followers have probably made the city desolate.

The city has had an eventful history since 1882. Raouf Pacha was governing the Isle of Meroe for the Khedive in that year. News was beginning to arrive of a certain Dervish wandering in the Soudan, who was drawing all the natives to him, and especially those Arabs who lived by the slave trade, which Gessi Pacha had been extirpating.

This Dervish, Mohammed Ahmad by name, could turn, it is said, all government bullets into water, and had, in truth, once and again defeated Egyptian troops sent to arrest him. Then, becoming bolder, the pretender of a sudden openly called himself the Mahdi, a name derived from a word in the opening chapter of the Koran.

He called himself Mahdi Khalifat er Rasul, ("the successor of the Prophet"), while his adherents called him Sayid ("The Master"); Savid na el Mahdi ("Our Master, the Leader"). This troublesome and extraordinary person, with no drill or military science, no weapons to speak of, but plenty of ferocious followers, principally of the Baggara race, marched through the towns and villages of Kordofan, and with 30,000 men beseiged El Obeid and took the town after one repulse, cruelly murdering its brave defenders.

That conquest increased the name and fame of the Mahdi, who settled down like a king at El Obeid, while preparing for a further advance to Khartoum. By this time he had inflamed with his preaching and success the whole of Kordofan and of Sennar.

A DERVISH CHIEF.

except that corner where the city of Khartoum sits upon the junction of the White and Blue Nile.

Before he could master this central position he had to confront the expedition under Hicks Pacha, sent by the Egyptian Government to Rahad. Everybody knows the miserable issue. The Mahdi cut that force to pieces, so that hardly a man escaped, and by this victory gained almost the entire Soudan, and opened the way to the conquest of Khartoum.

Then the victorious and pious slave dealer set out for Khartoum, where the hapeless people, deceived by the hope of English help, had lingered to welcome Gordon. No notice was taken of that hero's proclamations to the Soudanese. His communications were cut with the north, and very soon a horde numbering 200,000 swarmed at the heels of the Mahdi into Omdurman and the outskirts of Khartoum. This was in October, 1884.

The low Nile left a part of the ram parts broken and indefensible. The vast mass of assailing Dervishes made thereby their rush, in two bands, just before the British relieving force came in sight of the white walls and green palm groves of the city. Gordon died at his hopeless post.

This undoubted triumph intoxicated his followers with faith, but demoralized the Mahdi. He took to unbridled luxury, and died of its consequences on July 22, 1885. The desert ascetic, whose bed had been a mat of straw, expired upon Persian carpets in all the splendor and state of a great Eastern prince, having founded in his brief career an empire built on the basis of slavery and reckless bloodshed. Before death he had himself nominated Abdullah as his successor, who thus inherited a dominion stretching from the Bahr-el-Ghaxal to Egypt, and from Darfur to the Red Sea.

The new tyrant began with very great ideas. He proclaimed that he would conquer all Egypt, as well as Abyssinia. Putting all laws on one side, he made himself absolute master over life and death in the Soudan.

THE KHALIFA ABDULLAH ON CAMELBACK AT THE HEAD OF HIS DERVISHES.

Some idea of the inner life of the Mahdi and the Kahlifa is found in the remarkable experience of an Austrian officer named Slatin, who, while acting as governor of a province in the Soudan under Gordon, was captured by the Mahdi and held a prisoner many years. When Khartoum was taken Slatin was living in a hut at Omdurman, heavily chained and exposed daily to the insults of the mob. After the taking of the city some Dervishes came to him with something rolled in a cloth, and, commanding him to stand forth, they unrolled suddenly their bundle and showed him the gory head of Gordon. Afterward he learned how Gordon had died. When Khartoum fell and the Mahdists were swarming through the city, Gordon came down the stairway of his house and demanded the leader of the invaders. He was speared to death where he stood, and his head cut off to show to the Mahdi.

The return of "The Man Who Was" in Kipling's story was no more dramatic than the actual return to the land of white men of Rudolph Slatin, or Slatin Pasha, as he is known. Sixteen years before the young and dashing Austrian officer had gone out into the wilds of Africa as governor of the great province of Darfur. For twelve years he had been a slave in the hands of the Mahdists, suffering every indignity that the ingenuity of the Mahdi and his successor, the Khalifa, could invent. One day a man disguised as an Arab trader, passed him in the street and whispered to him that he had been sent by Major Wingate, Director of Military Intelligence, Egyptian Army, and Baron Heidler, Austrian Ambassador in Cairo, to help him to escape. They managed to have several interviews, and finally one night, after the Khalifa had gone to bed and the city was asleep, Slatin mounted a donkey and rode to where the faithful Arab, Hussein, had camels in waiting. Then a long and hazardous flight began, which, after much suffering and many perils, ended in the officers' mess at Assuan.

AUTUMNAL FABRICS ARE WORKS OF ART.

WAR COLORS IN THE GOWNS.

LATE fall and winter dress materials of 1898 are works of art, and their variety is great. Many women hesitate to select fabrics for their winter gowns so early in the season, believing that new designs and materials will be brought out as the season advances. Those who plunge right in, however, have the wider choice. In colored goods, poplin and crepon vie with each other for first place. Many people understand by poplin a smooth one-toned material worn by their grandmothers, and by crepon almost any soft stuff with a raised figure. Such will open their eyes in astonishment when they come to view the brilliant goods now displayed. Among poplins there are exquisite shadow plaids on a poplin ground, broken plaids, two-toned poplin velours and plain two-toned poplins in all the new shades and standard colorings. One thinks that nothing in the way of dress goods could be prettier until the plain poplins in the new shades of red and blue and purple, with bayadere stripes of black plush, come into sight. Some of these have a black stripe, between the plush stripes, in serpentine braid effect.

In fact there is more chance than ever for woman to be beautiful, since now there are war colors in her gowns. She wears marine blue, military gray and cavalry yellow. Artillery red is also seen in the trimmings of her costumes and wraps and there is a martial air about them.

A Charming Design

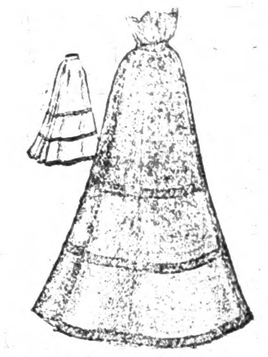
A charming combination is here represented in steel grey and white broadcloth decorated with black guipure lace and narrow black satin ribbon "frizzed out." The yoke and standing collar of white cloth is overlaid with black guipure lace applique to match decorating the fronts, back and sleeves. The fashionable fronts are cut low and crossed in "Indor" style, just enough fulness being collected by gathers at the waist to pouch becomingly over the belt. Glove-fitted linings that close in centre front support the deep yoke that is included in the right shoulder arm, and closes with the standing collar over on the left shoulder. The over fronts lap to the left and close invisibly with the shaped belt. Over the seamless back that is smooth at the top a rounded yoke facing is applied, the fulness at the lower edge being laid in overlapping plaits at the centre.

A novel feature is the smooth round bertha of white cloth that outlines the yoke edge with narrow black "frizzed" ribbon and the shaped belt that lengthens the waist line.

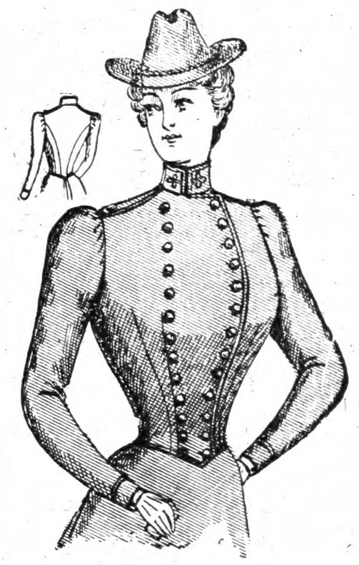
The stylish sleeves are shaped with two seams, the upper portions being adjusted by gathers and tacking over the fitted lining to form a puff at the top. At the wrists a narrow pointed cuff is joined that flares downward over the hand.

Very stylish dress goods are shown in white, many of them with the warp of silk with a fine wool weft. Black in stripes, checks and figures of silk with a velvet finish, satin with satin figures and many other new and artistic combinations are among the many novelties.

To make this waist for a lady of medium size will require three and a half yards of material forty-four inches wide.



THE FAVORITE SKIRT.



LADIES' ADMIRAL BASQUE.

AN "INDOR" WAIST.

and can be decorated in various ways, cross bands as here shown being best for tall and lengthwise for short figures.

The narrow front gore is set between two wide circular portions that meet in a seam at centre back.

The fulness at the top is laid in two overlapping plaits at each side of centre but gathers can be employed if so preferred. Small darts fit the top smoothly over the hips, the graceful flare to the foot resulting from the shaping that accords with the newest mode.

Cloth, serge, camel's hair, crepon, cheviot, mohair, etamine and all wide novelty fabrics will give satisfaction when developed by the model, braid, ribbon or bias bands of the material providing suitable decoration.

A skirt of black nuns veiling, henrietta cashmere or drap-de-sete trimmed with bands of crepe or dupp ribbon silk in this style will be very appropriate for mourning.

The skirt measures four yards at the foot in the middle size.

To make this skirt for a lady of medium size will require three and a half yards of material forty-four inches wide.

An Autumn Military Effect.

Military effects dominate the new season's styles, braid and brass buttons entering largely into the decorations.

All shades of blue are worn from the light greyish cadet to the darkest navy.

A perfect glove-fitting adjustment is the prominent characteristic of the "Admiral" basque shown in the large illustration. It is fitted with the usual double darts, under-arm and side back gores, that curve higher on the back than is usual and may be made with or without a centre back seam. The fronts lap in double breasted style to the neck, closing with graduated rows of brass buttons.

The lower outline reaches a trifle below the waist at the sides curving over the hips to pretty points front and back.

Shoulder straps are included in the neck seam, the pointed lower end being secured by single brass buttons.

The high military collar is trimmed with braid and all the free edges of the basque are similarly outlined.

The sleeves are shaped with upper and under portions, the moderate fulness being gathered at the top and the wrists have cuffs simulated by double rows of braid

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 9.

Lesson Text: "Jehosaphat's Good Reign," II Chronicles xvii., 1-10—Golden Text Proverbs iii., 6—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And Jehosaphat, his son, reigned in his stead and strengthened himself against Israel." Israel, or the ten tribes, had proved themselves to be the enemies of God and to stand with God means to stand against His enemies (Jas. iv., 4). How great the contrast in chapter xviii., 1, where we see Jehosaphat joining affinity with Ahab, the king of Israel, and thus necessitating the rebuke of the Lord in chapter xix., 2, "Shouldest thou help the ungodly and love them that hate the Lord?" To be for God at all times and under all circumstances is a rare thing and is seen perfectly only in the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. "And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah." Every king was king for the Lord (II Chron. ix., 8), and his strength was to be in the Lord and not in horses and chariots (Deut. xvii., 16). When we put our trust in things visible, we are apt to cease to see and rely upon God (Jer. xvii., 5). This is a constant temptation and a snare. The Lord is often proving us as He did Philip, and we, like Philip, venture to suggest to Him how it might be done, but all the while He Himself knows what He will do (John vi., 5-7). When we obediently and trustfully, under God's guidance, make ordinary provision, all as well. The difficulty is when we cease to see God.

3. "And the Lord was with Jehosaphat." This is the secret of all blessing. The Lord was with Joseph (Gen. xxxix., 2, 3, 21, 23). The Lord was with David (II Sam. v., 10). His comfort to Moses, Joshua, Gideon and Jeremiah was the assurance that He was with them (Ex. iii., 12; Josh. i., 5; Judg. vi., 16; Jer. i., 8). So when the Lord Jesus sent His followers into all the world the greatest encouragement He could give them was His assurance: "All power is given unto Me in heaven and on earth. Go ye, therefore, and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the age" (Math. xxviii., 18-20).

4. "He sought to the Lord God of his father and walked in His commandments." It is written of Zacharias and Elizabeth that they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless (Luke i., 6). God had said to Israel that if they would obey His voice and keep His covenant, they would be a peculiar treasure unto Him above all people (Ex. xix., 5), and in Titus ii., 14 (R. V.), it is written that He gave Himself for us to redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto Himself a people for His own possession, zealous of good works.

5. "Therefore the Lord established the kingdom in his hand." Joshua was told that if he would observe to do according to all the law, his way would be prosperous and he would have good success (Joshua i., 7, 8). In II Chron. xx., 20, Jehosaphat is heard saying to the people, "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established," and in Isa. vii., 9, is the contrast, "If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established." In God and in His word is the only establishment, for all else shall be shaken. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be shaken let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear, for our God is a consuming fire (Heb. xii., 28, 29).

6. "And his heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord." The margin says that he was encouraged in the ways of the Lord; those who seek to walk in the way of the Lord shall not lack encouragement to continue therein. There will be many a handful dropped for us on purpose to lead us in His way (Ruth ii., 16). They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles (Isa. xl., 31). The way of the Lord was so attractive and enjoyable that the way of the world and the devil became distasteful and the high places and groves were taken away. We cannot walk with God unless we humble ourselves so to do and make up our minds to be agreed with Him (Mic. vi., 8; Amos iii., 3).

7. "Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes to teach in the cities of Judah." What a suggestive foreshadowing of the time when "A king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment, and the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever" (Isa. xxxii., 1, 17). There cannot be anything more important than that men should know the Lord and His ways, and when kings and princes take up this as their mission, the kingdom will either have come or be very near. Just now our Government has given $50,000,000 for defense, for the purchase or manufacture of warships or war material, but was it ever heard that any Government ever gave even $1,000,000 to make known the living God?

8. "And with them Levites and priests." The priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth, for he is the messenger of the Lord of Hosts (Mal. ii., 7). Their calling is simply set forth in II Chron. xxix., 11, in these words, "My sons, be not now negligent, for the Lord hath chosen you to stand before Him to serve Him and that ye should minister unto Him and burn incense." Priests, prophets and kings were to recognize God alone as their Master and live only unto Him.

9. "And they taught in Judah and had the book of the law of the Lord with them and went about throughout all the cities of Judah and taught the people." There is nothing on earth so heavenly as the Word of God. It is all "true from the beginning" and "forever settled in heaven" (Ps. cxix., 89, 160). We are to receive it meekly, hold it fast, rightly divide it and hold it forth, for it is an engrafted word, a faithful word, a word of truth and a word of life (Jas. i., 21; Titus i., 9; II Tim. ii., 15; Phil. ii., 16). If all ministers and teachers taught only the Word of God and honored it as the Word of God, how much more would be accomplished for God! But when those who profess to be its friends dishonor and even set aside many portions of it what shall we say? Just this, "Forever, O Lord, Thy word is settled in heaven."

10. "And the fear of the Lord fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah." There was no war. Other nations brought presents and tribute, and Jehosaphat waxed great exceedingly (verses 11, 12). The remaining verses of the chapter tell that his army was 1,160,000, but the very next chapter tells of his downfall. Uzziah was marvelously helped till he was strong, but his strength was his weakness and the cause of his fall (II Chron. xxvi., 15, 16). Our only strength is in the Lord. Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.—Lesson Helper.

The Crops In Blount.

Crops in Blount county were never better. The cotton crop is not what farmers thought it would be a few months ago, but it is above the average. Corn, peas and potatoes will be gathered in abundance. The farmers will consume a great deal of these products in fattening their hogs, but if the proper economy is used, a large surplus will be left over which will, to a large degree, make up for the low prices of cotton, if a market found.

Ernest Schoenherr, aged 17, was knocked from a moving freight car at Oxmoor and crushed to death last week.

A Soldier's Escape.

From the Democrat-Message, Mt. Sterling, Ill.

When Richmond had fallen and the great commanders had met beneath the historic apple tree at Appomattox, the 834 Pennsylvania Volunteers, prematurely aged, clad in tatters and rags, broken in body but of dauntless spirit, swung into line for the last "grand review" and then quietly marched away to begin life's fray anew amid the hills and valleys of the Keystone State. Among the number Asa Robinson came back to the old home in Mt. Sterling, Ill., back to the fireside that he had left at the call to arms four years previous. He went away a happy, healthy farmer boy in the first flush of vigorous manhood; he came back a ghost of the self that answered to President Lincoln's call for "300,000 more."

The Soldier's Return.

To-day he is an alert, active man and tells the story of his recovery as follows:

"I was a great sufferer from sciatic rheumatism almost from the time of my discharge from the army. Most of the time I was unfitted for manual labor of any kind, and my sufferings were at all times intense. At times I was bent almost double, and got around only with the greatest difficulty. Nothing seemed to give me permanent relief until three years ago, when my attention was called to some of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had not taken more than half a box when I noticed an improvement in my condition, and I kept on improving steadily. I took three boxes of the pills, and at the end of that time was in better condition than at any time since the close of my army service. Since then I have never been bothered with rheumatism. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is the only remedy that ever did me any good, and to them I owe my restoration to comparative health. They are a grand remedy."

THE ILLS OF WOMEN

And How Mrs. Pinkham Helps Overcome Them.

Mrs. MARY BOLLINGER, 1101 Marianna St., Chicago, Ill., to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I have been troubled for the past two years with falling of the womb, leucorrhœa, pains over my body, sick headaches, backache, nervousness and weakness. I tried doctors and various remedies without relief. After taking two bottles of your Vegetable Compound, the relief I obtained was truly wonderful. I have now taken several more bottles of your famous medicine, and can say that I am entirely cured."

Mrs. HENRY DOHR, No. 806 Findley St., Cincinnati, Ohio, to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For a long time I suffered with chronic inflammation of the womb, pain in abdomen and bearing-down feeling. Was very nervous at times, and so weak I was hardly able to do anything. Was subject to headaches, also troubled with leucorrhœa. After doctoring for many months with different physicians, and getting no relief, I had given up all hope of being well again when I read of the great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing. I decided immediately to give it a trial. The result was simply past belief. After taking four bottles of Vegetable Compound and using three packages of Sanative Wash I can say I feel like a new woman. I deem it my duty to announce the fact to my fellow sufferers that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable remedies have entirely cured me of all my pains and suffering. I have her alone to thank for my recovery, for which I am grateful. May heaven bless her for the good work she is doing for our sex."

MRS PINKHAM TALKS TO THE FUTURE WOMAN.

Will the New Generation of Women be More Beautiful or Less So? Miss Jessie Ebner's Experience.

A pleasing face and graceful figure! The acme of perfection that widen the sphere of woman's usefulness. How can a woman have grace of movement when she is suffering from some disorder that gives to those awful bearing-down sensations? How can she retain her beautiful face when she is nervous and racked with pain?

Young women, think of your future and provide against ill health. Mothers, think of your growing daughter, and prevent in her as well as in yourself irregularity or suspension of nature's duties.

If puzzled, don't trust your own judgment. Mrs. Pinkham will charge you nothing for her advice; so write to her at Lynn, Mass., and she will tell you how to make yourself healthy and strong.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound strengthens the female organs and regulates the menses as nothing else will. Following is a letter from Miss JESSIE EBNER, 1712 West Jefferson St., Sandusky, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit your remedies have been to me. I suffered for over a year with inflammation of the ovaries. I had doctored, but no medicine did me any good. Was at a sanatarium for two weeks. The doctor thought an operation necessary, but I made up my mind to give your medicine a trial before submitting to that. I was also troubled with leucorrhœa, pains in stomach, dizziness, nervousness, and was so weak that I was unable to [illegible]. I have taken a [illegible] bottles of Lydia E. WINE OF CARDUI

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not suffer now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examination for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—displacements, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR

is the greatest Labor Organization the world has ever seen.

It is the only organization which, while striving to secure for wage-workers the best possible terms as to wages, hours and conditions, aims at reforming the causes of industrial injustice.

It secures to each trade and locality absolute control over its own trade or local affairs, yet its perfect organization enables its members to act unitedly, promptly, and, therefore, effectively when concentrated action becomes necessary to remedy injustice or to resist oppression.

It is pledged to work for the overthrow of the capitalistic system of production and exchange, yet, realizing that reforms can only be beneficial and permanent when they rest upon the convictions of a wisely educated people, it seeks to accomplish its objects only by appeals to reason and conscience—never by force.

It is a secret organization only so far as secrecy is necessary to protect its members in organizing and co-operation, and can never be used to shield wrongdoing.

Its doors are open to all who labor honestly and usefully either by hand or brain, without question or discrimination on account of creed, race or nationality.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 7, 1898

Editor BANNER—As I have noticed nothing from this part of the country lately in regard to the much talked of stock and road law would like to give my idea in reference thereto. Now, let's see about the stock law to begin with. The stock law is a nuisance, from the fact that it compels a poor man to make away with all of his cattle and hogs. Why so? Simply because he cannot afford to keep them up all the year and feed them. Oh, the other side will say, two or three acres in rye or oats or something like that will feed half a dozen head of cattle and then they will give so much more milk and butter. Now, I will ask what are they going to do with the man that has not got land enough to make a living for his family on if he uses it for pasturage? Then he must do something else besides farming for a living, or in other words if it takes all of his land to make a living for his family, then how is he to make a living for his family and his cattle too? It won't work. It is like putting a bushel of corn or wheat in a peck measure. Now we have got a nice bunch of cattle, just as fat as their hides will hold them 11 head in all, yet we have no stock law and do not want it. Let me make a suggestion right here. If a man wants the stock law, if he just builds a fence 8 or 10 feet high around his stock then he will have it. Here is the trouble; there are a few individuals in Chilton county that own large tracts of land. Now if they can get this stock law then they can turn their farms into pastures and realize more money out of them than they can by raising 4½ cent cotton, and they know that the poor man can't afford to make buzzard meat out of his stock and will have to come to their terms in order to get their stock fed, and their terms means about 24 dollars a year on a cow and other stock in proportion. Individually, the stock law would not hurt me in the least, but I don't think it right to run anything over the people that would be in the least detrimental to their interests. More anon. Success to the Banner and its editor. J. D. GRANT.

Shoults, Oct. 10, 1898

Editor BANNER—I see the question of a law relative to some kinds of stock running at large, also taxing dogs where a man owns more than one, is open for discussion. Now, we, the undersigned, wish to enter our solemn protest against any such infringements upon our rights. It smacks of stock law straight, and to pass the bill is sharpening the knife to cut our own throats. We have a right to own as many dogs as we wish, without being required to put collars on them. Next you would claim the right to say what kind of collar the dog should wear, get a patent for same, and have a monopoly of the business at once.

As to the hogs and cattle of course you want us to get good stock, fewer and better. We have the fewer now, and will and an improving grade at our own discretion or ability so to do. The proposed bill in curtailing the rights of citizens will cause no small amount of trouble. We should be very careful about passing laws infringing upon usages so long established until they are considered national rights. How strange it is that a great many people living around little burgs know so much more of our needs than we know.

And here are our neighbors in Perry county, liners who would be affected, join us in our protest against any such law.

Oakmulgee, Ala., Oct. 8, 1898

Editor BANNER:—As there is a great deal being said just now in regard to bull laws, etc., I would like to say a few words in regard to the election of a member of congress, as we are not interested in having laws enacted that would interfere with our rights as free people just yet. But we are interested in the election of Hon. William F. Aldrich to congress, and I think every man should be who believes in the majority of the people having a voice in government affairs, which we have only had in the last ten years through the never ceasing efforts of Hon. W. F. Aldrich, our present member of congress, to redeem our country from the clutches of Democratic usurpation. How many people have ever thought that they were not allowed to vote in State and National elections—that is, your votes are killed by fictitious votes made up from the black belt portion of the State mainly.

Now, as the all important issue before the people to-day is fair elections, and as the Hon. Wm. F. Aldrich is the acknowledged champion of said issue, true and tried, it is not only a privilege but it is the indispensible duty of every individual to go to the polls on the 8th of November and cast one vote for W. F. Aldrich, that is if they believe in every man having a right to have his vote counted as cast, and not over run by a fictitious vote from the black belt part of the district. Now, we want to hear from the people on the subject in every part of the county through the Banner. Wake up from your lethargy and let the people know how you stand, if it is only a half-dozen lines.

We should give Mr. Aldrich the biggest vote this time he has ever received from Chilton county, but to do it will require some effort. There will be many votes in this election that will go on record for future reference. "Choose ye to day whom ye serve." Well, I will close this time with three cheers Aldrich. WM. B. GREENE.

A remarkable family reunion on the 30th of September at the home of C. H. Dansby near Verbena was a remarkable family reunion of two brothers and two sisters, one brother and sister who had not met in thirty-two years. The eldest was 75, the youngest 58, only one had a living companion and all had been married. Their united ages were 267 years. They were J. V. Dansby of Pensacola, Fla., F. M. Dansby of Birmingham, Ala., Mrs. C. Glover of Marbleville, and Mrs. M. G. Sullivan of Dayton. The meeting was pleasant tinged with much sadness, pleasant recalling the joys of youth and saddened to think of the loved and lost. Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin.

"When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine in the first place; what experience tells you is best is to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. Theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But if you can get Dr. Inclination, Dr. Experience and Dr. Reason to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

The theory of teaching Spanish in our schools because of a possible commercial advantage may be put aside. English is the trade language of the future. King Louis's jest still holds. The best reason for learning Spanish is that one may be able to read "Don Quixote" in the original.

A certain individual writing on the perils of vacations at sea, remarks that if the voyager is a bachelor there is no sufficient reason against his leaving the vessel an engaged man. But where is he free from this danger? Where is the womanless Eden to which he can fly and be out of danger?

Switzerland is noted for its high schools, which are much frequented by foreigners, especially the English. But in regard to common schools there is a great difference between the Cantons. In Basel, Zurich and Geneva teachers receive a salary of $600 to $800 a year, whereas in Wallis, Freiburg and Tessin there are not a few who get only $100 and whose services are hardly worth more. The Canton of Aargau has just passed a law making the pay equal for men and women teachers, the minimum being $280, with an addition of $20 a year, up to $60.

Some curiosities of Chicago's population are shown in the recently completed school census, particularly as to the proportion of foreign-born. One block, for instance, in the Sixteenth Ward has only seven American-born residents out of a total of 2727, the majority being Poles, with a sprinkling of several other nationalities. Another block near by has a total population of 231, only about one-sixth of whom are natives, Germans predominating here. But the record for alien residents belongs to two other neighboring blocks, with a total population of 2584, of whom 2583 are Poles, the other man being a Chinaman. The total population of the city is estimated to be 1,851,588, which would indicate a growth of over seventy per cent. since 1890—a most remarkable increase in urban population.

When the Ohio Legislature enacted last spring that a jury in a murder case may accompany a verdict of murder in the first degree with a recommendation for mercy, which shall entitle the accused to a sentence of life imprisonment instead of death, it was not supposed that it was virtually abolishing capital punishment. The change in the law was regarded as a concession to the scruples of people who sometimes get on juries, and who hesitate to convict on circumstantial evidence when such conviction means capital punishment. In operation, however, the law is expected to abolish hanging in the State, except in the rare cases when exceptional atrocity in crime may awake the revengeful spirit in the minds of the jurymen. In the first murder case tried under the new law the jury exercised their veto power by a recommendation to mercy, and the convict went to prison for life, although it does not appear in the newspaper reports of the trial that there was the remotest doubt of his guilt.

The New York Sun says: On the 22d of June the army under command of Major-General Shafter landed at Baiquiri in Cuba. On the 14th of July, after a campaign of three weeks, conducted with brilliant impetuosity, came the surrender of Santiago. On the 25th of August, General Shafter relinquished the command of the department of Santiago de Cuba to General Lawton and embarked for the camp at Montauk Point, his job completed, the main part of his army having already been removed thither. All these great events, it will be observed, occurred within the space of two months only; two months of the hottest and unhealthiest season in Cuba. Our troops were transported 1100 miles; in three weeks they forced the enemy to surrender a force greater than their own, and in two months they are back in their own country crowned with complete victory. Now is there any precedent in the history of war for a campaign of such brevity, with results so glorious in their completeness, and with losses so small relatively to the difficulties encountered and the ends gained? At any rate, it was one of the most remarkably successful military operations ever conducted. Faults of detail may be found in it, but as a whole it was unassailable. It was quick work, well and thoroughly done. No army in the world would or could have done better.

HAWAII'S DEVELOPMENT.

Our New Territory by No Means a Wilderness Sheltering Savages.

People are beginning to ask practical questions about the nation's new domain in the Hawaiian Islands. There is a widespread inquiry as to opportunities presented in the islands for fortune-getting. Many of these inquiries betray the supposition that Hawaii is nearly an untrod wilderness, given over to half-naked savages in an aboriginal state of simplicity and heathenism. There is much picturesque material in the native life and customs, which invites the descriptive writer to turn aside and dwell upon it. It thus receives undue prominence. As a matter of fact, the native element is a constantly dwindling influence, not only by reason of the decrease in numbers of the race, but also of the increasing ratio of the foreign population and commercial and industrial improvements. With a total population in all the islands of much less than 100,000, it is easily seen that a small change in the absolute numbers may work vast changes in proportions. Thus, the introduction in the last few years of only a few thousand Japanese laborers has awakened grave fears of a new predominating influence in the affairs of the islands. But the little brown men have thus far proved themselves as quiet, contented and law-abiding as had the Chinese, who comprised the largest part of the male population after the growth of the sugar industry had invited the use of their labor.

But it is surprising how little effect all of these alien elements have in changing the prevailing Anglo-Saxon character of the little country's institutions. All matters, industrial, commercial, social and political, centre in Honolulu. And Honolulu is a New England town transplanted into the tropics and embowered in palms instead of elms. The selection of the site of Honolulu was not merely fortuitous. The deep bay, with the entrance locked by a coral reef, opening away from the prevailing trade winds, makes it the one secure harbor in the group, as it did when the New England whalers first made it their rendezvous for their annual expeditions. Even Pearl River Harbor itself, which is counted so valuable as a naval coaling station for the United States, offers its promise to the skilled eye of the engineer rather than to the heart of a mariner seeking refuge from immediate storm. Honolulu alone boasts of finished wharves, to which seagoing craft can come and unload and load their cargoes. The so-called "esplanade" in Honolulu presents a scene of bustle and activity at any time, with a fair showing of sailing vessels tied up to its wharves. The shipping and commission houses are the most powerful element in the business of the islands. The majority of them are American, but there are some strong British and German houses as well. Many of the plantations are owned and financed by such Honolulu houses, who may be also in the import business and own the bottoms in which they import dry goods, lumber and supplies of all kinds and export sugar. There are vessels thus owned which come out from Boston or from Liverpool and go on to China and India as traders. The young men of the islands consider themselves fortunate to secure business positions with these powerful Honolulu houses, and the young Americans, Englishmen and Germans who have this connection make up an important element in the life of the town.

One of the influential figures in the business life of the islands is Ah Fong, the well-known Chinese merchant. Ah Fong's principal business connections are in China, and he does a large import trade from there.

Small groceries and bakeshops in Honolulu are largely in the hands of Chinamen, and their little provision stores are dotted all over the island. They are also the purveyors of fruits and vegetables for the Honolulu householders. The country about Honolulu is much taken up with their immaculately kept gardens. A pocket handkerchief would more than cover any neglected or unfruitful portion of these gardens. They labor in them minutely and assiduously, crowned with broad, pagoda-like hats, carrying huge cans of water on a yoke stick across their shoulders down the furrows and sprinkling the vegetables on either side. In marketing his produce the Chinaman seeks no middleman, but yokes himself with his shoulder stick, with a basket on each end loaded with vegetables, and with a quick, swinging trot goes from house to house and delivers his produce to the cook-house. Fresh vegetables are cheap and always abundant, and owing to the equable climate one crop ripens after the other all the year around. The same is true of most of the fruits. It is no unusual sight to find fruit blossoms, ripe fruit and the intermediate stages all together on one tree. The Chinese are the household servants, almost without exception, and are highly prized, and also highly priced.

Living, on the whole, is rather dear in Honolulu, and there is large dependence on canned goods, both for meats and for fruits and vegetables, such as are not successfully produced in the islands. The Honolulu fish market is one of the sights of the town. The dealers are mostly native fishermen, and one may see here nearly all the uncouth monsters of the sea—the dying splendors of the dolphin, and the demoniac squid, which is a favorite article of diet with the natives. Fresh fish of choicest flavor can always be had from these native dealers, who form mullet ponds by building sea walls of stones, and have some skill in cultivating the fish. An ice factory affords ample supply for refrigerating purposes and for cooling drinks, the need for which is by no means pressing, as the temperature is rarely oppressive and is tempered during the larger part of the year by the northeast trade winds. The demands upon the time and energies of business men are not excessive. Life flows easily and equably in the little community. Many residents of Honolulu own cottages on the sea beach at Waikiki, only a few miles from Honolulu. The surf comes in over the coral reef and breaks on a shelving, sandy beach. A noble grove of cocoa-nut palms fringes the beach and shades the cottages. Here the well-to-do residents of Honolulu rusticate; and there is no lovelier spot the world around.

PINEAPPLE PATCH IN HAWAII.

The combined area of the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands, Cuba and Porto Rico, is 247,743 square miles, or a little less than that of Texas.

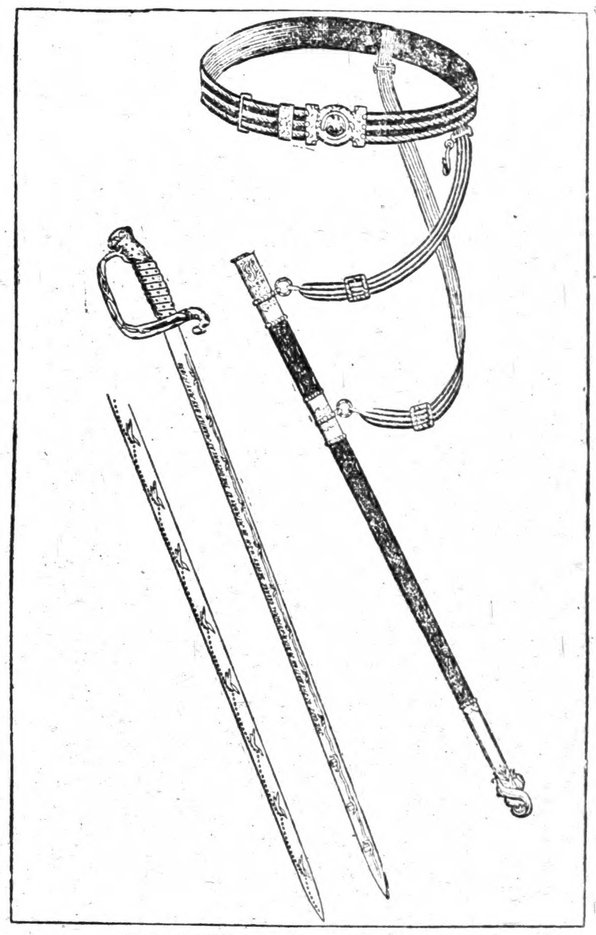
During the first seven months in 1898 the gold produced in Victoria, Queensland and West Australia amounted to 1,567,401 ounces.

REAR ADMIRAL DEWEY'S SWORD OF HONOR.

Of all the presentation swords which the United States Government has given in times past to its heroes of the army and navy, none equals in artistic beauty and skillful design the sword of honor soon to be given Rear Admiral George Dewey.

The cost of the sword will not be far from $10,000, which was appropriated by Congress last May to defray the expense, also, of manufacturing a set of bronze medals for the officers and men of the Asiatic Squadron.

With the exception of the steel blade and the body metal of the scabbard the sword will be made entirely of pure gold, of twenty-two carats fine; the grip will be covered with fine sharkskin bound with gold wire and inlaid with gold stars. Above the sharkskin the handle terminates in a richly carved and enameled gold collar and knot. A narrow band of oak leaves unites the sharkskin to the collar. Then come the arms of the Admiral's native State, Vermont, with the motto, "Freedom and Unity," and above this, and spreading toward the top, is the great seal of the United States, with the blue field of the shield in enamel; the shield in the arms of Vermont is also enameled.



REAR ADMIRAL DEWEY'S SWORD OF HONOR.
(Showing both sides of the blade, together with the scabbard and belt.)

The collar is surmounted with a closely woven wreath of oak leaves, the standard decoration for rank, and the intervening spaces between the decoration are studded with stars. On the pommel is carved the name of the cruiser Olympia, and the zodiacal sign for the month of December, when Dewey was born.

The guard is composed of a conventional eagle, terminating in a claw clasping the top, the outspread wings forming the guard proper. The expression of the eagle is one of cool determination, and, while firm, still bearing a message of peace in the laurel wreath held in the beak. The wreath serves as a protection, covering the point of the beak, and at the same time preserves the proper outlines of the guard.

The scabbard will be of thin steel, damascened in gold, with sprays of rose marinus, signifying fidelity, constancy and remembrance. The sprays are interlaced in the form of a series of cartouches, with a star in the centre of each, while dolphins fill the outer spaces. Sprays of oak leaves and acorns secure the rings and trappings of the scabbord; above these, on the front of the scabbord, is a raised monogram in brilliants entwining the letters "G. D.," and immediately under them are the letters "U. S. N.," surrounded by the sprays of rose marinus. The ferrule, or lower end of the scabbard, terminates in entwined gold dolphins.

The sword blade is damascened with the inscription:

> The Gift of the Nation to Rear Admiral George Dewey, U. S. N., in Memory of the Victory at Manila Bay, May 1, 1898.

The letters are of an ornamental character, and sufficiently large to be dignified. The Phœnician galley, representing the first craft of the world's navies, supplies the rest of the ornament on this side of the blade. On the other side of the blade is shown the flight of the eagles of victory, bearing festoons of laurel to the four quarters of the earth.

FARM WAGON BY TROLLEY.

A Special Truck to Carry It When Rails Are Reached.

A great many different schemes have been proposed, and some of them have been tried, for lessening the work of carting farm produce into town. The traction engine is used for that purpose to a considerable extent in England, although in America wagon hauling is done therewith. Then again there has been a good deal of talk of laying broad, guttered paths by the common highway for the wheels of the ordinary wagon to run in.

In some parts of the United States there are trolley lines reaching through the rural regions and carrying not only passengers, but also mail and express matter.

A Toledo man, named Bonner, has devised a special truck which is designed to run on a street railway and to carry a farm or express wagon. Inasmuch as the ordinary vehicle would not fit the truck, Mr. Bonner thinks it better to have his own wagons as well as his railway truck. He has obtained a franchise from the city of Toledo for running his wagons through the streets.

After the city service is fairly started Mr. Bonner will endeavor to secure rural patronage. Of course, it will be necessary for such farmers as wish to take advantage of his plan to have the right sort of wagons and to haul them by horse power near enough to town to reach the trolley tracks. But in Ohio there are numerous trolley roads extending from one town to another and attaining a length of ten, fifteen and even twenty-five miles. If a farmer only lives along one of these routes he will not need to haul his wagons more than a few rods. Indeed, if he has a switch and sidetrack and loads his wagons while they stand on the latter he will have an easy task before him. The rapid development of trolley lines through the rural districts nowadays makes Mr. Bonner's idea an interesting one. There is no telling how far it is likely to become serviceable to American farmers.

COTTON REPORT.

The Average Condition Shows a Decline of 4.4 Points in September.

WASHINGTON.—The October report of the statistician of the department of agriculture shows the average condition of cotton October 1 to have been 75.4, as compared with 79.8 September 1, a decline of 4.4 points. The average condition on October 1, 1897, was 70, and the mean of the October averages for the last ten years is 73.9. The decline during September, though by no means uniform, affected the entire cotton-producing region, being two points in South Carolina, Texas and Tennessee; four points in Alabama, five in Georgia and Arkansas, six points in Mississippi, seven in Virginia and Florida, eight points in North Carolina, nine points in Louisiana, fifteen in Oklahoma and twenty-two in Indian Territory.

The averages of the states are as follows: Virginia, 84; North Carolina, 76; South Carolina, 73; Georgia, 75; Florida, 66; Alabama, 76; Mississippi, 72; Louisiana, 67; Texas, 73; Arkansas, 84; Tennessee, 92; Missouri, 95; Oklahoma, 75; Indian Territory, 76.

DAMAGE SUITS COMPROMISED.

Claims for $105,950 Growing Out of the Wrecking of the 69th New York Quickly Settled.

One hundred and sixteen suits, aggregating $105,950, were filed in the city court at Birmingham Monday against the Louisville & Nashville railroad company and were immediately dismissed, having been compromised out of court. The suits grew out of the wreck of the special train on August 8 last at Hughes' Switch near Birmingham, which was bearing the Sixty-ninth regiment, New York Volunteers, from Fernandina, Fla. to Huntsville, Ala. The regiment was in command of Colonel Edward Duffy and was known as the famous "Irish Regiment." Four cars were derailed and piled in a heap, resulting in the death of Frank P. Glennon and Peter Forley and the injury of a number of other members of the regiment. It is understood that the compromise was effected on the payment of $50,000.

Mrs. McMahon has part of the costume worn on that occasion, and also has a badge, which is a piece of blue ribbon, faded now, on which is inscribed in plain gilt letters, "Lafayette, the Nation's Guest." Mrs McMahon belonges to one of the first families in Alabama. She is still active, and her mind is remarkably active for one of her age.

INDIAN TROUBLES REGARDED AS OVER.

Official Dispatches From General Bacon Reach Washington.

FIVE MEN KILLED AND TEN WOUNDED

In the Battle Fought Last Wednesday and Thursday—Step Will be Taken to Fix Responsibility Among the Indians for Their Stand Against the Government.

Reports received by the officials of the war department at Washington and the interior departments from the Indian outbreak are of a reassuring character, and they now feel that the uprising may be regarded as over. General Bacon, who has charge of the affairs in the department of which he is in command, will remain at Walker, Minn., for the present.

The following dispatches from Brigadier-General Bacon, bearing on the Indian troubles, have been received by the war department:

Adjutant General, Washington:

Walker, Minn.—Whilst protecting United States marshal at this camp on Leech Lake, opposite the Bear Island, with a detachment of eighty men, 3d Infantry, was attacked by a large force of Chippewa Indians Wednesday. Indians fighting from heavy timber and underbrush; Indians driven back. Our loss was: killed, Capt. Wilkinson, Sergt. Butler, Pvts, Olmstead and Ziebell; wounded, Sergt. Ayres, Pvts. Daley, Boucher, Brown, Wicker, Jenson, Turner, Zigler and Francony and Deputy Marshal Sheehan. Communication is most difficult by steamboat.

Adjutant-General, Washington:

Walker, Minn.—One soldier killed Thursday, and one Indian policeman killed and one wounded. Number of Indians killed impossible to estimate. They are now scattered in their canoes during night to the various islands in this section. Have accomplished all that can be done here at this late season, and will return with my command Friday. Communication with this point rare and difficult.

It is stated at the war department that the last dispatch probably means that Gen. Bacon will return with his command to Ft. Snelling, unless the force is actually needed for the protection of the people in the vicinity.

Steps will be made to have an investigation made with a view to fixing the responsibility among the Indians for their stand against the government.

SPAIN SENDS TROOPS

To Reinforce Its Garrison in the Philippine Islands.

Admiral Dewey has cabled the navy department that he has been advised that a number of Spanish troops have arrived at Singapore bound for the Philippines to reinforce the Spanish garrison at Iloilo, on the island of Panay. At this place is concentrated about all that remains of the Spanish army of occupation of the Philippines outside of the few troops on the island of Luzon.

In dispatching troops from Spain to the islands the Spanish government has raised the direct question as to the right to reinforce troops now engaged in active hostilities with the insurgent forces. The weight of opinion in Washington is that this action is permissable, and does not constitute a breach of the terms of the protocol suspending hostilities.

ENGLAND ANNEXING ISLANDS.

Three Groups in the Pacific Bagged by John Bull.

VICTORIA, B. C.—The islands recently annexed by the British warship Gold Finch are said to be the Duff, Cherrick and Mitre groups. The Mohawk planted the British flag on the Santa Cruz islands, the Reef islands and Swallow group.

The Duff group numbers eleven islands, all thickly inhabited by copper-colored natives. The islands are densely wooded and of great fertility. Mitre island is uninhabited, but Cherrick island has between 500 and 600 natives on it, the same race as the Tocupians. The whole of the recent annexations have been placed under the control of Mr. C. M. Woodford, the British resident in the Solomon group.

FAVOR ANNEXATION.

Wealthy Planters in Cuba Want Island to Become a Part of the United States.

WASHINGTON—Information has been received here that Senor D. Nicholas Rivero, editor of Del Diaro de la Marina, the official organ of General Blanco in Havana, has left that city and is on his way to Washington, where he is expected to arrive within a few days. Senor Rivero is president of the civil council of Havana, and one of the most prominent leaders of the autonomists. He is wealthy, and one of the most influential citizens of the Cuban capital.

His purpose in coming to Washington at this time is to lay before President McKinley and the state department a petition signed by several hundred of the most prominent and wealthy planters of Cuba, the majority of them Spaniards and owning large tracts of sugar lands on the island, praying that Cuba should be annexed to the United States. The petition which Senor Rivero bears recites at some length the condition of affairs in Cuba, with respect to the inland districts, and expresses the fear of the planters that inasmuch as many of them are Spaniards, having large interests at stake, they will not be safe under the independent government of the Cubans.

SAILED FOR PORTO RICO.

Sixth United States Immunes and 47th New York Have Embarked.

The 6th United States immunes sailed from New York Sunday and the 47th New York sailed Monday from Newport, R. I., for San Juan, Porto Rico. Both of the regiments are due to arrive at San Juan next Friday. Occupation is not formerly to be given to the American forces until the 18th instant. In case the Spanish authorities object to the landing of the regiments at San Juan prior to that date, General Brooke has discretionary authority to send them to any other point on the island.

The Spanish peace commissioners were all present. No allusion to the war, the evacuation or the political situation was made.

Work on the exhibition building and underground railroad has completely ceased. About sixty thousand men have gone out on strike, and the situation is causing consternation.

The Temps declares that the leaders of the men are aiming at a general strike, if not a revolotion, and points out what a dreadful thing it will be if the exhibition of 1900 is compromised

GEN. LEE'S COMMAND ORDERED TO SAVANNAH

To Be Held in Readiness to Embark for Havana.

PLANS OF SECOND EXPEDITION COMPLETED

Major-General Wade Will Command the Entire Force When He Has Completed His Duties With the Commission—Will Leave on the Last of the Month.

WASHINGTON—Major-General Fitzhugh Lee received an order from the war department Friday directing him to move his command from Jacksonville, Fla., to Savannah, Ga., and get it in readiness to embark for Havana by the last of this month.

The war department has completed its plans for the departure of the second expedition of troops to garrison Cuba. The First division is already under orders and should be started within a very few days from the southern ports near their camping grounds. The First division starts under command of Brigadier-General L. H. Carpenter, U. S. V., who commands the cavalry brigade composed of the Seventh and Eighth cavalry.

It is the intention of the war department that Major-General Wade, now president of the military evacuation commission, shall command the entire force of United States troops assigned to duty in Cuba, but he will scarcely take active command until he has completed his duties with the commission.

The Second division will comprise all the troops now under the command of Maj.-Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. These troops are stationed at Jacksonville, and the force comprises the following regiments, all volunteer troops:

The 2d, 4th and 9th Illinois Inft., 161st Indiana Inft., 2d Louisiana Inft., 6th Missouri Inf., 3d Nebraska Inft. (Col. Bryan's regiment), 1st North Carolina Inf., 2d South Carolina Inft., 1st Texas Inft., 4th Virginia Inft., and the 2d U. S. Vol. Cav.

The general orders which will be issued to this division are to begin the movement the last of this month, or as soon thereafter as practicable.

Messrs. Clardy & Son have finished the handsome new chapel at the Academy for the Blind at Talladega and the last touches are being given by the artisans to the indoor wood. This building, though costing the state only $10,000, is a beauty and a very fine specimen of the architectural art.

DEFERRED UNTIL 1899.

United States Prevents Conclusions of Delagoa Bay Negotiations.

LONDON.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Lisbon, Portugal, says that the Delagoa bay negotiations have been deferred until 1899, owing to the United States insisting upon Portugal's strict observance of the agreement that neither the railroad, the harbor nor public lands at Lorenzo Marquez be alienated until the Beroe award is completed.

The United States is interested in these proceedings on account of the estate of the late Col. McMurdo, an American, being involved.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT.

Statistician Hyde Gives the General Average of Crops for October.

WASHINGTON.—The department of agriculture Monday issued the following crop report:

The October report of the statistician of the department of agriculture shows the average condition of corn on October 1 to have been 82 as compared with 84.1 on September 1, with 77.1 on October 1, 1897, and with 82.9, the mean of the October averages of the last ten years.

The usual wheat report is withheld pending the result of further investigations. The preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of oats is 27.8 bushels. This is three-tenths of a bushel per acre less than the preliminary estimate of the crop of 1897, but 2.1 bushels per acre above the mean of the preliminary averages of the last ten years.

The preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of barley is 21.6 bushels, or 2.9 bushels per acre less than in 1897 and 1.3 below the mean of the October estimates for the last ten years. The average for quality is 93.3 as compared with 87.6 last year.

The tobacco reports as a whole are somewhat less favorable than last month. Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina show a decline of 19, 10, 7 and 8 points, respectively. Kentucky, however, reports a condition indicating 96 per cent of a full normal crop, an improvement of 4 points during the month; while Tennessee, Wisconsin and New York report 97, 98 and 100 per cent., respectively.

PHILIPPINES NOT CONSIDERED.

Subject Has Not Yet Been Discussed by Commissioners.

PARIS.—The United States peace commission held two sessions Monday. They were devoted to acquiring and weighing the information relative to all the questions involved in the matters under the immediate consideration of the commissioners. As the joint commissioners have not yet considered the Philippine question, the Paris papers appear to Americans as making the statements that the Philippines are under consideration in order to be in a position to adjure the American commission to treat Spain generously.

The Gaulois reviews the political situation and draws the conclusion that "between the alleged republican purpose of expansion and democratic opposition thereto, President McKinley and the American commissioners will be inspired after all with the sentiments of generosity which the honor of victorious nations demand."

FIRST AND SECOND MISSISSIPPI

Will Probably Be Moved to Birmingham to Be Mustered Out.

The First and Second Mississippi regiments, who are now encamped in various cities and towns in that state, will probably be moved to Birmingham to be mustered out. The government wishes to move the Mississippi troops out of that state on account of yellow fever. It is proposed to move 300 of the troops, which are stationed at Lauderdale Springs, just above Meridian, from that locality immediately. The remainder of the two regiments, about two thousand in number, it is proposed to remove out of that state early in November.

FOR CONGRESS:

W. F. ALDRICH

COLONEL W. J. Bryan has taken a vote of his regiment as to whether they favor going to Cuba or being mustered out. Eighty-seven per cent favor returning home. To Governor Holcomb has been left the decision as to which Nebraska regiment is to be released.

SENATOR Matthew S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, is defendant in a suit to come to trial at the November term of court. He is charged with unlawfully using large sums of the Commonwealth's funds for speculating in stocks, bonds and railroad building.

A WORLD embracing Trust, to control the building of armored ships and the manufacture of all material used in such construction, is just now engaging the attention of such men as Cramp, Carnegie and others. Those who believe in construction of war vessels would rejoice to see this trust formed—the more arbitrary and outrageous the better.

MR. ROBBINS wishes to discuss some of our Representative's official acts in Congress. We respectfully suggest he take up the Bill to punish offenses against the elective franchise, introduced by Mr. Aldrich, and tell us why he opposes it. Any man who desires honest elections must be in favor of this bill. Every man who wishes to see it become law will vote for W. F. Aldrich.

IN the forthcoming congressional election the marker or fixer will not be needed or at all events his services will be superfluous. Even a man who can neither read or write will be able to mark his ballot without the aid of a "fixer." The ballot is simplicity itmself, and will be practically the same as the sample ballot we print on page one. There will be only two names on it, W. F. Aldrich and Gaston A. Robbins, and they will be at the bottom of the ballot. All our friends need to do is to start from the BOTTOM, miss the last name, and put a cross mark in front of the name on the second line from the bottom. Try it once or twice with some of your neighbors who cannot read and you will see how easy it is to vote for the right man, W. F. Aldrich.

THE statement is so frequently made by some of our Democratic friends that because of his connection with the Republican party Mr. W. F. Aldrich must necessarily be a gold-bug, we have this week published the full text of a bill on the currency question, which was introduced by Mr. Aldrich in the last session of congress. The Populists in this district are well acquainted and fully satisfied with Mr. Aldrich's position on the money question, and it is the attention of our Free Silver Democrats we wish more particularly to draw to this bill. They will readily see that the man who introduced this bill is one they can conscientiously vote for, one who is in full sympathy with their views on the money question, one whom it is directly to their interests to vote for, one who will honor them by serving them as their representative. Let each man study this matter of a representative in congress for himself, and we have no doubt but that a large number of Free Silver Democrats will join us in again returning to congress W. F. Aldrich.

THE next issue of THE BANNER completes the sixth volume, and we are proud of the success the paper has attained, But while our subscription list continues steadily to increase, we are anxious to add a large number of new subscribers to commence our seventh year, and we intend to send out sample copies to every family in Chilton county this and the next few weeks. There will be no charge for these papers, we send them to you free, so do not be afraid to take them out of the post office. Our hope is that after you have received a few sample copies you will become permanent subscribers. All friends of THE BANNER who will send us a list of names of their friends and neighbors will do us a kindness for which we shall be grateful. We hope to make our seventh volume better than the preceeding six, and the more subscribers we have the better paper we can give you. Send in your subscription now; one dollar for 52 eight-page papers.

EVERY man in this district who is in favor of honest elections should read and study the subjoined bill introduced in the last congress by our Representative, W. F. Aldrich. Democrats, Populists and Republicans alike can, and will, vote for a man who is doing all in his power to secure to them a free vote and honest count.

In the House of Representatives, July 5, 1898, Mr. Aldrich introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress and ordered to be printed.

A BILL

To punish offenses against the elective franchise.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that every person who, by any unlawful means, hinders, prevents, or obstructs, or combines and confederates with another or with others to hinder, delay, psevent, or obstruct, any citizen from doing any act required to be done to qualify him to vote, or from voting at any election in any State, Territory, district, county, city, parish, township, school district, municipality, or other territorial subdivision, and every election officer who shall fail to make the returns required by law within the time limited by law, or who makes false or fraudulent returns of any election at which a Member of Congress or Presidential electors are voted for, shall be fined not less that five hundred dollars and shall be punished, in addition, with such punisement as is attached to such offense by the laws of the State in which the offense is committed.

How to Prevent Croup

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by J. S Johnson jr.

THE Democrats of New York having been dominated by such open autocrats and goldbugs as Croker and Senator Hill, have caused that portion of the party which adheres to the Chicago platform and believe that finance should be the main issue in 1900, to put out a full State ticket. Henry George, son of the great Single Taxer, was placed at the head, but he has declined to serve, giving as his reason that he believes it his first duty to complete the biography of his father, which he is writing. Mr. George in his letter reviews the fact that his father did not believe fully in the silver plank of the Chicago platform, but favored government paper money, and he wishes to publicly ascribe the same view. Henry M. McDonald was substituted for Mr George.

A CURRENCY BILL.

In the House of Representatives, June 23, 1898, Mr. Aldrich introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

A BILL

To retire the United States legal-tender notes and Treasury notes, and to substitute therefor Treasury certificates, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to issue five hundred million dollars in Treasury certificates as herein provided.

Sec. 2. That said certificates shall be of the denominations of ten, twenty, fifty, and one hundred dollars, and shall be in the following form, to wit: The United States will pay to the bearer on demand, in coin, on or after January first, and the United States will receive this certificate at its par value for all customs, taxes, and all public dues, and said certificates shall be a legal tender at their par value in payment of all debts, public and private. These certificates shall be divided into blocks of fifty millions each, and each block shall be made payable one year apart. The first block shall be made payable January first, nineteen hundred. The second block January first, nineteen hundred and one, and so on continuously until the entire issue is provided for. When any of said certificates are received into the Treasury under any law from any source whatever, and shall belong to the United States, they shall not be retired, canceled, nor destroyed, but they shall be reissued under a date at least ten years in advance and paid out again and kept in circulation: Provided, that no greater amount than fifty millions shall be made payable in any one year: Provided further, that nothing herein shall prohibit the cancellation and destruction of mutilated certificates and the issue of other certificates in their stead. Said certificates when held by any national banking association may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve. Said certificates shall be of uniform size and appearance, from designs selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, and a sum sufficient to carry into effect the provisions of this Act is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The United States shall receive said certificates as the exact equivalent of the standard money of the United States, dollar for dollar.

Sec. 3. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall, immediately upon the passage of this Act, prepare and issue the said certificates in place of all United States legal-tender notes and of Treasury notes issued under the Act of July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety, that may be in the Treasury; and shall continue the substitution of the said certificates for all the legal-tender notes and Treasury notes that become the property of the government by redemption, exchange, or otherwise. The said legal-tender notes, commonly called "greenbacks," and the said Treasury notes are to be canceled and destroyed.

Sec. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem the United States notes, commonly called "greenbacks," and also the Treasury notes issued under the provisions of the Act of July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety, when presented for redemption, in standard silver dollars or in gold coin, using for redemption of said notes either gold or silver coins, or both, not at the option of the holder, but exclusively at the option of the Treasury Department, and said notes when so redeemed shall be destroyed as provided in section three of this Act.

Sec. 5. That the gold held in the Treasury as a redemption fund for the legal tender and Treasury notes, when the process of substitution of Treasury certificates therefor shall have been completed, shall be set aside and used as a redemption fund for United States bonds and to pay the interest thereon.

Sec. 6. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to use such portion of the five hundred million dollars of Treasury certificates in the payment of the current expenses of the government as shall remain after deducting the total amount of legal-tender notes and Treasury notes outstanding on the passage of this Act from the said five hundred millions.

Sec. 7. That this Act shall take effect immediately.

Sec. 8. That all acts and parts of acts in conflict here-with are hereby repealed.

IF you had not yet decided whom you would vote for for Congress, after reading the foregoing bill, you will doubtless decide to vote for W. F. Aldrich.

A Fleshy Consumptive

Did you ever see one? Did you ever hear of one?

Most certainly not. Consumption is a disease that invariably causes loss of flesh.

If you are light in weight, even if your cough is only a slight one, you should certainly take of cod liver oil with hypophosphites. No remedy is such a perfect preventive to consumption. Just the moment your throat begins to weaken and you find you are losing flesh, you should begin to take it.

And no other remedy has cured so many cases of consumption. Unless you are far advanced with this disease, Scott's Emulsion will hold every inducement to you for a perfect cure.

A REMEDY FOR THE Effects of Tobacco.

THE excessive use of tobacco, especially by young men is always injurious and undoubtedly shortens life materially. Mr. Ed. C. Ebsen, compositor on the Contra-Costa News, Martinez, Cal., writes; "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and received much benefit from it. I was troubled with nervousness, dizzy spells and sleeplessness, caused by the use of tobacco and stimulants. I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with marvelously good results, allaying the dizziness, quieting the nerves, and enabling me to sleep and rest, proving in my case a very beneficial remedy." Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is especially adapted to restoring the nervous system to its normal condition under such circumstances. It soothes, heals and strengthens.

SILVER AND THE RATIO

SIXTEEN TO ONE BEST FOR THIS COUNTRY.

The Commercial Ratio of 30 to 1 Would Soon Change to 16 to 1 if the Mints Were Opened to the Free Coinage of the Constitutional Dollar.

Many people think that because there were but 8,000,000 silver dollars coined in the United States previous to 1873 we were not upon a bimetallic standard. The reason no more silver dollars were coined in the United States was because the ratio of 15½ to 1 prevailed at the French mint, which made silver worth $1.33 an ounce, instead of $1.29 an ounce. The holder of silver bullion in the United States at the expenditure of 1 cent per ounce could transmit his silver to the French mint and thus make 3 cents more per ounce than he could make by having it coined into American dollars. Is it any wonder, then, that there were no more silver dollars coined in America than 8,000,000. But during that period the great quantity of silver that we transferred to France was doing duty and service as money in Europe, and, was, therefore, relieving the strain upon gold equally as if that silver were in circulation in the United States. *It must be borne in mind also, in determining what great influence a powerful nation like the United States will have in establishing the parity of the metals, that, although the people of the United States are nearly equally divided upon the question of opening our mints to the free coinage of silver, 7,000,000 having voted for President McKinley and 6,500,000 having voted for Mr. Bryan, the minute that a free coinage act is passed all of this difference of opinion will vanish, and we will have a united nation and a united people using all their power to establish the equal value of the metals. Why is this true? Because all the capitalists in the country have obligations that are payable in lawful money, the United States bonds themselves held by national banks being payable in coin; and when silver under free coinage becomes lawful money, with full legal tender powers to discharge those obligations, immediately it becomes the interests of those capitalists and banks to elevate the price of silver, to make the purchasing power of silver just as good as they now desire the purchasing power of the gold dollar to become, and hence the minute a free coinage law is passed, that minute you have all the power of Wall street exercised to its utmost limit to elevate the price of silver.

JOHN F. SHAFROTH.

COMPARATIVE FINANCES.

Of all the ungrateful and treacherous attacks ever made on political allies the worst we have ever known is now being made by the Republicans on the financial record of Mr. Cleveland. The Republicans of Indiana profess to believe in the gold standard, and that its maintenance is essential to the welfare of the country. They have admitted repeatedly that it was necessary for Mr. Cleveland to issue bonds in order to maintain the gold standard. They praised him at the time for doing so, and have coddled the gold-bug Democrats with professions of vast esteem for them and their theories, yet now they are entering upon a campaign of abuse of Mr. Cleveland for issuing bonds "in time of peace."

All of them are at it. Senator Fairbanks and Orator Bederidge have sounded keynotes in that line. The Journal and its satellites have taken up the cry and are telling what a shame it was for Mr. Cleveland to issue bonds "in time of peace" to an amount greater than wise Mr. McKinley had issued for a whole war. Their object, of course, is to defend the recent unnecessary bond issue of McKinley by denouncing Mr. Cleveland, and for political purposes they are entirely ready to sacrifice him and his friends. But what are the facts? The last financial statement of Mr. Harrison's administration showed a practically bankrupt treasury. He had come into office with the benefit of the enormous surplus accumulated by Mr. Cleveland's first administration. He left it, as shown by Secretary Foster's statement of March 1, 1893, with a net cash balance of only $24,128,087.

In order to make this showing the treasury bookkeeping had been altered three times. One change was to include in the available cash the "minor coin"—dimes, nickels and cents—which had never been included in the credits, and these formed $11,497,839.74 of the net cash balance reported. The other changes were to transfer to the credits what has always been treated as trust funds, amounting to $54,388,475. These changes proving the embarrassment of the treasury, had already started the panic of 1893, which was forced on by the Wall street interests that wanted bonds, until the business of the country was at a standstill. Harrison's secretary of the treasury had ordered plates for the issue of bonds, but Harrison did not have the courage to issue them, and so the panic was allowed to develop and the bankrupt treasury was pushed over to his successor.

Mr. Cleveland issued the bonds and maintained the gold standard, and went out of office leaving the proceeds of the bond sales in the treasury. The Republican party has not been confronted by such a situation. On March 1, 1898, before the war appropriation was made, the net cash balance in the treasury, in excess of the $100,000,000 gold reserve, was $125,564,203.35. The first appropriation was of $50,000,000, and the extraordinary expenses have not run over $30,000,000 a month. It was evident when the bond sale was authorized that the war was near an end, and when the bond sale was actually made, it was certain that it was practically over, and that the revenue was coming in large quantities, but the Wall street influence got their bonds.

In consequence we have a net cash balance in the treasury of about $300,000,000, and the money from the bond sales is not all in yet. That is the difference between Cleveland and McKinley financiering. From the false gold standard point of view the Cleveland sale of bonds was necessary and the McKinley sale was not.—Indianapolis Journal.

In the Future.

The "great things" to be performed by the McKinley administration are always in the future tense. First "prosperity" was to follow the election, then it was to follow inauguration; failing then, it was surely to follow the regular session of congress. Now Postmaster General Smith, the silver-tongued orator of the cabinet, says, "It is essentially necessary to vote the Republican ticket again this year, to enable congress to "reform the currency" in order to insure the prosperity promised by the speakers of 1896. Always "in the future." The Republicans have had a majority in both houses; why do they not "reform" the currency? Like the promise of international bimetallism, it is a sham.

Gold Only.

The fact in regard to the use of gold and silver as money that the people are beginning to realize is that in demonetizing silver one-half the standard money of the country was destroyed, doubling the other half, which is gold, and depreciating property values to the extent that to obtain one of these dear dollars it takes double the amount of property, whether the dollar is represented by silver, paper or gold. The "milk in the cocoanut" is in the fact that money (gold only) fixes the value of property under legislation controlled by the power of money, and too many have, through the same influence, been led to regard the representative of money as money.

Horrors After the War.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer: If there was only a lull in the painful proceedings, and if there was only a promise of better management and results to come, we would be patient, but there are no such signs discernible; the horizon is still as black as night. Still come into port the transports from the south, each with its addition to the count of criminal culpability on the part of some one in authority, each with the same indictment of bad water, decayed and unsuitable rations and insufficient medical attendance.

The Prosperity Fraud.

Republican journals seem to think that the larger the amount of money piled up in the vaults of the treasury the greater degree of "prosperity" of the people. This large amount over which goldite papers are rejoicing as evidences of Republican prosperity has been withdrawn from general circulation for the purpose of purchasing bonds. How people can be made prosperous by taking from them that which they have, is a new "wrinkle" in political economy.

Commissions Badly Distributed.

From the New York Times: If the government had made the officers of the regular army the arbiters of the distribution of commissions, as they did in the case of the navy, the glaring incompetence which is now throwing shame on our entire military establishment would never have had the power to work evil. The officers of the regular army would have seen to it that only men properly qualified had commissions.

Going to Certain Defeat.

From the Memphis Commercial-Appeal: The young gentleman who is running for governor of Tennessee on the Republican ticket is excusable. He is very young. Were he a little older he would know better.

The Republican Catchphrase Slogan and What It Means.

NOT OVERPRODUCTION

THE SUPPLY OF WHEAT HAS NOT INCREASED.

Unquestioned Statistics Prove That the Price of Wheat Has Fallen—One-Half Its Production Has Actually Decreased.

The price of wheat is lower this year than it was last year; it was lower last year than it was ten years ago; the average price of wheat has been falling for the last thirty years, while the supply of wheat, in proportion to population, has been steadily decreasing.

The Wall street editors and orators insist that the fall in the price of wheat has been caused salely by enormously increased production, caused by the invention of self-binding harvesters, steam threshers, etc.

But the production of wheat has not increased. Probably every farmer who has cast a vote for a goldbug candidate believes that the low price of wheat is unavoidable because machinery has increased its production until the markets are glutted, but there is no truth in the assertion which has deluded them.

Wheat fell in price from 1891 to 1896; yet the world's supply of wheat, according to Goldbug Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton's reports, did not vary during the period more than 5 per cent any year, and the supply was slightly less in 1896 than in 1891, and population was increasing year by year.

Here are Secretary Morton's figures: World's wheat product for 1891, 2,432,322,000 bushels; 1892, 2,481,805,000 bushels; 1893, 2,562,913,000 bushels; 1894, 2,676,651,000 bushels; 1895, 2,546,494,000 bushels; 1896, 2,430,497,000 bushels.

After being convinced by Secretary Morton's statistics that the production of wheat was less in 1896 than it was in 1891, the gold-standard farmer should seriously ask himself and his political leaders why the price of wheat averaged 83.9 cents per bushel in 1891 and but 49.1 cents per bushel in 1896.

Some gold-standard farmers will at once reply that it is because Goldbug Harrison was president in 1891, while Goldbug Cleveland was president in 1896; but this could certainly not account for the state of the foreign markets, and the Liverpool price of wheat fell as low, proportionately, as the Chicago price.

The price of cotton has this year been lower than has ever before been known, and the increased production of cotton has not kept pace with the increased use of it. The prices of other farm products have fallen with wheat and cotton, and with all other products of labor.

But the necessary cash expenses—the "fixed charges"—of the farmers and workingmen have not been reduced in anything like the same proportion. Taxes and house rent, on the contrary, have increased. Freight rates have been reduced, but are much more burdensome than formerly, as they are now a greater share of the value of the crops than ever before. Debts have not been reduced one dollar, although the value of crops per acre has been reduced one-half.

The situation as it exists, therefore, is satisfactory to usurers, railroad monopolists, landlords and officeholders, whose incomes have not been reduced, while the purchasing power of their incomes has been doubled.

Wall street newspapers and orators parade statistics to prove that prosperity has returned, but farmers and workingmen ought to know that there can be no revival of prosperity while farm products are failing in price and wages are being reduced. Statistics prove the prosperity of usurers and monopolists only. Business men whose prosperity depends upon that of the farmers and workingmen know that they are making no headway, and that the claims of the goldbugs are fraudulent.

In the face of actual conditions Wall street theories can not be forced upon the people. The gold standard and the monopolies which fatten upon it must go.

PERCY PEPOON.

Prosperous Farmers.

Mr. C. A. Pillsbury, the great miller of Minneapolis, is said to have recently reported at the New York Produce Exchange that:

"Northwestern farmers are not going to market their wheat faster than the consumptive demand will take it. * * * There are very few farmers in Minnesota who have not money to loan. For the last year we have been able to borrow money cheaper in Minnesota than in New York or Boston. * * * Farmers don't want to sell their wheat to get money for running expenses. They have plenty of money and can not be forced to sell. There are hardly any mortgages left in Minnesota now. Minnesota and Wisconsin are probably the two states that lead, as far as general prosperity among farmers is concerned."

It is with keenest pleasure that F. S. & H. carries this glad tidings of great joy to the farmers of the states named. But it is difficult to square this rosy report with the fact that wheat prices are sadly demoralized by reason of the abnormal receipts of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth, being more than double what they were at the same time last year!—Farm Stock and Home.

CURRENT NOTES.

The hundreds of millions unnecessarily hoarded in the United States treasury are being distributed week by week among pet national banks, which loan it back to the people from whom it was extorted. This is profitable to the banks and politicians, most of whom are tax-dodgers, but where do the tax-payers come in?

Locked-out workingmen and strikers have been trying to take advantage of the injunction scheme, but have not once succeeded in making it work. Government by injunction is designed only for the benefit of the governing class, and workingmen, though in the majority, do not govern in this country by long odds.

An ancient Greek, when asked how he was getting along, replied, "I am beginning to be a friend to myself." It is time for the American voter to begin to be a friend to himself.

In every state where test has been made Populist administration has resulted in savings to the taxpayers and the exposure of official rascality.

An encouraging sign of the times is that our free-silver allies, the silver Republicans and Democrats, are constantly getting closer to true Populist principles. We shall soon have a great and victorious reform party.

It is incredible that the administration should even consider the proposition to impose our government upon Cuba and the Philippines without the consent of the people of those islands. We have no citizens to sacrifice to the yellow fever as Spain has been doing. We have no right to keep a single soldier in Cuba after the departure of the Spaniards, and if we do we shall suffer from it.

Repeal the war taxes upon industry and impose taxes upon plutocratic incomes to pay the plutocratic bondholders. And, as the contract so provides, we may as well pay them in silver.

Sixteen to One or Bust.

The immense increase in the productive power of machinery would be accompanied by a corresponding increase in the comfort of the people, says the Journal of Agriculture, but for two things:

1. Combinations to shut down factories and control supply.

2. Combinations to restrict the supply of money.

If the supply of money increased as does the productive capacity of machinery, prices would advance in spite of the great increase in production. There could be no such thing as "overproduction," as long as want exists in the world.

But with gold cornered and held out of circulation; with silver demonetized, and trusts controlling our factories, we will go from one period of depression to another.

Free coinage is an absolute necessity of business. Sixteen to One or Bust is a condition and not a theory.

The American Volunteer.

Pity the sorrows of the volunteer when he enlists in the service of a government that is ruled by millionaires.

The Mauser bullets of the Spaniards have not been half as deadly as the maggoty meat furnished by dishonest contractors.

The smokeless powder of the foreign enemy did not cause the loss of as many lives as the unsanitary camps at home.

Cervera treated Hobson and his men with far more humanity than many American officers have shown to the members of their regiments.

According to the reports that have been coming from the various camps, hundreds of our young men are being murdered by preventable diseases. Less than 300 killed in war, more than 1,500 killed in camps! What a record of murder for the Republican party to face!—Coming Nation.

The People Can Rule.

When the people have chosen a Congress and a President in harmony with themselves, any law they deem necessary can be passed. Should the supreme court pronounce it null and void, the decision may be wholly ignored. When the states-general of France were in session, a courier arrived and told the President that the King ordered them to adjourn. The President paid no attention to the announcement, whereupon the courier asked if he had heard the orders of the King. The President replied that he had, but that he would now find out the orders of the people. The time is coming, and coming rapidly, when the decisions of the supreme court of the United States will come into conflict with the decisions of the people.—Twentieth Century.

The Whiskered Popocrats.

Kansas has just had the pleasure of announcing that her debts are paid. And Kansas is governed by those wild and woolly whiskerites, the Popocrats, who stand for nothing but ruin, anarchy, repudiation and the unsettling of business confidence, if we remember aright.—Healdsburg Enterprise.

Washington has had similar experience. In both states the Republicans robbed with unsparing hands, leaving their successors to foot the bills.—Star.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

Cotton Industry Improves in Spite of Low Prices.

R. G. Dun & Co., in their Weekly Review of Trade, in part says:

It can do no good to disguise the fact that the large eastern advances on wool to be held for higher prices has helped to retard the natural decline in that product. The truth is that demand for goods is not helped by high prices for wool.

The cotton industry shows better conditions in spite of the falling prices to the lowest quotation ever known, and there is larger demand for these staple goods.

The iron industry still grows steadily that an unhealthy boom would seem to be in progress but for particular conditions. In spite of the combination of valley producers, which now propose a joint agency at Pittsburg, sales run a little below these large figures, $10 to being quoted at Pittsburg and $9.25 for gray forge, while southern and local iron are scarcely at Chicago, and anthracite is no stronger at Philadelphia, but the consumptive demand is remarkably heavy.

Wheat has been declining a little, with foreign reports somewhat more favorable as to European crops, and yet the actual shipments have been nearly as large as last year. Farmers are quite generally holding back their crop in the hope of higher prices, and collections at the west are almost everywhere retarded on that account, and yet the western receipts amount to 10,523,459 bushels against 8,810,720 for the same week last year.

Failures for the week have been 169 in the United States against 261 last year, and twenty-three in Canada against twenty-nine last year.

DECREES BY BLANCO.

By Which Many Spanish Soldiers Will Be Permitted to Remain in Cuba.

A decree of Captain-General Blanco, dated October 5, has been published in Havana. It provides, first, that a full discharge be granted to every enlisted man who has the right to it, and who desires to remain in Cuba, and, secondly, it provides for the transfer to the second reserve of those who, possessing the necessary qualifications, wish to remain in Cuba. Third, the decree provides for the return to Spain of those who may have previously lost the right to a return passage.

These orders are looked upon as being important. Many men now in the Spanish army will decide to remain, as there is a brighter future for them in prospect in Cuba than there would be if they returned to Spain.

One Killed and Many Wounded.

A double-head Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley freight train ran into the rear end of an Omaha passenger train in the yards at Omaha Saturday. The last car of the passenger train was the dining car "Delmonico." It was split almost in two lengthwise. Harry Jones, of Chicago, waiter, was killed, and many wounded. The accident was due to the inability of the engineer of the head engine of the freight to stop his train.

Lil Wants Lucre.

It is learned on good authority that ex-Queen Liliokalana will leave Honolulu for Washington about the middle of November to press her claims against congress for remuneration for the loss of her throne and the revenue from the crown lands, for which she feels that the people of the United States owe her some pecuniary compensation.

Sultan Yields to the Powers.

Ismael Bey, governor of the Island of Crete, informed the Mussulman nobles Friday that the sultan will withdraw the Turkish troops from Crete in accordance with the demands of Great Britain, Italy, France and Russia, who presented to the porte a collective note calling for a withdrawal of the Ottoman forces.

Two Cadets Drowned.

Cadets Burner and Morehead were drowned at Clever Military academy, at Norfolk, Ohio. The young men were in a small boat on the lake when it was overturned.

Dreyfus' Return.

The latest news of Dreyfus is that the government has arranged for his return to France in a merchant vessel. He will be lodged in Mont Valarian fort, outside of Paris.

Keeps the Gun That Saved His Life.

Don Stark, Ann Arbor's hero in the battle at Santiago, arrived home on a 20-day furlough, although he will, without doubt, be discharged from service on account of his disability. The news of his arrival spread and friends and neighbors invaded his home, anxious to hear first-handed an account of the memorable fight with the Spanish.

Stark brought back with him the Springfield rifle he carried and which saved his life. A Spanish shell struck the gun about 18 inches from the muzzle and bent it nearly at right angles. Glancing from this the shell struck his wrist and severed his hand from his arm as if by a knife. Had it not been for his gun, the shell undoubtedly would have killed him. At the time Stark was wounded he was on a railroad track and the Spaniards from a fort a mile and a half away rained shot and shell among the soldiers. He crawled to the shelter of the woods, and in five minutes was being attended to by the surgeons.—Detroit (Mich.) Tribune.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: "The Hounded Reindeer"—Let Those Who Are Pursued by the Hounds of Persecution Run to the Glorious Lake of Divine Solace.

TEXT: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."—Psa. xlii., 1.

David, who must some time have seen a deer-hunt, points us here to a hunted stag making for the water. The fascinating animal called in my text the hart is the same animal that in sacred and profane literature is called the stag, the roebuck, the hind, the gazelle, the reindeer. In Central Syria, in Bible times, there were whole pasture-fields of them, as Solomon suggests when he says, "I charge you by the hinds of the field." Their antlers jutted from long grass as they lay down. No hunter who has been long in "John Brown's tract" will wonder that in the Bible they were classed among clean animals, for the dews, the showers, the lakes washed them as clean as the sky. When Isaac, the patriarch, longed for venison, Esau shot and brought home a roebuck. Isaiah compares the sprightliness of the restored cripple of millennial times to the long and quick jump of the stag, saying, "The lame shall leap as the hart." Solomon expressed his disgust at a hunter who having shot a deer is too lazy to cook it, saying, "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting."

But one day David, while far from the home from which he had been driven, and sitting near the mouth of a lonely cave where he had lodged and on the banks of a pond or river, hears a pack of hounds in swift pursuit. Because of the previous silence of the forest the clangor startles him, and he says to himself: "I wonder what those dogs are after." Then there is a crackling in the brushwood, and the loud breathing of some rushing wonder of the woods, and the antlers of a deer rend the leaves of the thicket, and by an instinct which all hunters recognize the creature plunges into a pool or lake or river to cool its thirst, and at the same time by its capacity for swifter and longer swimming to get away from the foaming harriers. David says to himself: Aha, that is myself! Saul after me, Absalom after me, enemies without number after me; I am chased; their bloody muzzles at my heels, barking at my good name, barking after my body, barking after my soul. Oh, the hounds, the hounds! But look there," says David to himself. "That reindeer has splashed into the water. It puts its hot lips and nostrils into the cool wave that washes its leathered flanks, and it swims away from the fiery canines, and it is free at last. Oh, that I might find in the deep, wide lake of God's mercy and consolation escape from my pursuers! Oh, for the waters of life and rescue! 'As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God.'"

The Adirondacks are now populous with hunters, and the deer are being slain by the score. Talking one summer with a hunter, I thought I would like to see whether my text was accurate in its allusion, and as I heard the dogs baying a little way off and supposed they were on the track of a deer, I said to one of the hunters in rough corduroy: "Do the deer always make for water when they are pursued?" He said: "Oh, yes, Mister; you see they are a hot and thirsty animal, and they know where the water is, and when they hear danger in the distance they lift their antlers and sniff the breeze and start for the Raquet or Loon or Saranac; and we get into our cedar shell-boat or stand by the 'runaway' with rifle loaded and ready to blaze away."

My friends, that is one reason why I like the Bible so much—its allusions are so true to nature. Its partridges are real partridges, its ostriches real ostriches, and its reindeer real reindeer. I do not wonder that this antlered glory of the text makes the hunter's eye sparkle and his cheek glow and his respiration quicken. To say nothing of its usefulness, although it is the most useful of all game, its flesh delicious, its skin turned into human apparel, its sinews fashioned into bow-strings, its antlers putting handles on cutlery, and the shavings of its horn used as a pungent restorative, the name taken from the hart and called hartshorn. But putting aside its usefulness, this enchanting creature seems made out of gracefulness and elasticity. What an eye, with a liquid brightness as it gathered up from a hundred lakes at sunset! The horns, a coronal branching into every possible curve, and after it seems complete ascending into other projections of exquisiteness, a tree of polished bone, uplifted in pride, or swung down for awful combat. The hart is velocity embodied. Timidity, impersonated. The enchantment of the woods. Its eye lustrous in life and pathetic in death. The splendid animal a complete rhythm of muscle, and bone, and color, and attitude, and locomotion, whether couched in the grass among the shadows, or a living bolt shot through the forest, or turning at bay to attack the hounds, or rearing for its last fall under the buckshot of the trapper. It is a splendid appearance that the painter's pencil fails to sketch, and only a hunter's dream on a pillow of hemlock at the foot of St. Regis is able to picture. When, twenty miles from any settlement, it comes down at eventide to the lake's edge to drink among the lily pods and, with its sharp-edged hoof, shatters the crystal of Long Lake, it is very picturesque. But only when, after miles of pursuit, with heaving sides and lolling tongue and eyes swimming in death the stag leaps from the cliff into Upper Saranac, can you realize how much David had suffered from his troubles, and how much he wanted God when he expressed himself in the words of the text: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

Well, now, let all those who have coming after them the lean hounds of poverty, or the black hounds of persecution, or the spotted hounds of vicissitude, or the pale hounds of death, or who are in any wise pursued, run to the wide, deep, glorious lake of divine solace and rescue. The most of the men and women whom I happened to know at different times, if not now, have had trouble after them, sharp-muzzled troubles, swift troubles, all-devouring troubles. Many of you have made the mistake of trying to fight them. Somebody meanly attacked you, and you attacked them; they depreciated you, you depreciated them; or they overreached you in a bargain, and you tried, in Wall street parlance, to get a corner on them; or you have had a bereavement, and, instead of being submissive, you are fighting that bereavement, you charge on the doctors who failed to effect a cure; or you charge on the carelessness of the railroad company through which the accident occurred; or you are a chronic invalid, and you fret, and worry, and scold, and wonder why you cannot be well like other people, and you angrily blame the neuralgia, or the laryngitis, or the ague, or the sick headache.

I saw whole chains of lakes in the Adirondacks, and from one height you can see thirty, and there are said to be over eight hundred in the great wilderness of New York. So near are they to each other that your mountain guide picks up and carries the boat from lake to lake, the small distance between them for that reason called a "carry." And the realm of God's Word is one long chain of bright, refreshing lakes; each promise a lake, a very short carry between them, and though for ages the pursued have been drinking out of them, they are full to the top of the green banks, and the same David describes them, and they seem so near together that in three different places he speaks of them as a continuous river, saying: "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God;" "Thou shalt make them drink of the rivers of Thy pleasures;" "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water."

But many of you have turned your back on that supply, and confront your trouble, and you are soured with your circumstances, and you are fighting society, and you are fighting a pursuing world, and troubles, instead of driving you into the cool lake of heavenly comfort, have made you stop and turn around and lower your head, and it is simply antler against tooth. I do not blame you. Probably under the same circumstances I would have done worse. But you are all wrong. You need to do as the reindeer does in February and March—it sheds its horns. The Rabbinical writers allude to this resignation of antlers by the stag when they say of a man who ventures his money in risky enterprises, he has hung it on the stag's horns; and a proverb in the far East tells a man who has foolishly lost his fortune to go and find where the deer sheds her horns. My brother, quit the antagonism of your circumstances, quit misanthropy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers, be as wise as, next spring, will be all the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns.

But very many of you who are wronged of the world—and if in any assembly between here and Golden Gate, San Francisco, it were asked that all those that had been sometimes badly treated should raise both their hands, and full response should be made, there would be twice as many hands lifted as persons present—I say many of you would declare: "We have always done the best we could and tried to be useful, and why we should become the victims of malignment, or invalidism, or mishap, is inscrutable." Why, do you know the finer a deer and the more elegant its proportions, and the more beautiful its bearing, the more anxious the hunters and the hounds are to capture it. Had the roebuck a ragged fur and broken hoofs and an obliterated eye and a limping gait, the hunters would have said: "Pshaw! don't let us waste our ammunition on a sick deer." And the hounds would have given a few sniffs of the scent, and then darted off in another direction for better game. But when they see a deer with antlers lifted in mighty challenge to earth and sky, and the sleek hide looks as if it had been smoothed by invisible hands, and the fat sides enclose the richest pasture that could be nibbled from the banks of rills so clear they seem to have dropped out of Heaven, and the stamp of its foot defies the jack-shooting lantern and the rifle, the horn and the hound, that deer they will have if they must needs break their neck in the rapids. So if there were no noble stuff in your make up, if you were a bifurcated nothing, if you were a forlorn failure, you would be allowed to go undisturbed; but the fact that the whole pack is in full cry after you is proof positive that you are splendid game and worth capturing.

Yes, for some people in this world there seems no let-up. They are pursued from youth to manhood, and from manhood to old age. Very distinguished are Lord Stafford's hounds, the Earl of Yarborough's hounds, and Queen Victoria pays eight thousand five hundred dollars per year to her Master of Buckhounds. But all of them put together do not equal in number or speed, or power to hunt down, the great kennel of hounds of which Sin and Trouble are owner and master.

But what is a relief for all this pursuit of trouble, and annoyance, and pain, and bereavement? My text gives it to you in a word of three letters, but each letter is a chariot if you would triumph, or a throne if you want to be crowned, or a lake if you would slake your thirst—yes, a chain of three lakes—G-O-D, the One for whom David longed, and the One whom David found. You might as well meet a stag which, after its sixth mile of running at the topmost speed through thicket and gorge, and with the breath of the dogs on its heels, has come in full sight of Scroon Lake, and try to cool its projecting and blistered tongue with a drop of dew from a blade of grass, as to attempt to satisfy an immortal soul, when flying from trouble and sin, with anything less deep, and high, and broad, and immense, and infinite, and eternal than God. His comfort, why it embosoms all distress. His arm, it wrenches off all bondage. His hand, it wipes away all tears. His Christly atonement, it makes us all right with the past, and all right with the future; all right with God, all right with man, and all right forever. Lamartine tells us that King Nimrod said to his three sons, "Here are three vases, and one is of clay, another of amber, and another of gold. Choose now which you will have." The eldest son, having first choice, chose the vase of gold, on which was written the word "Empire," and when opened it was found to contain human blood. The second son, making the next choice, chose the vase of amber, inscribed with the word "Glory," and when opened it contained the ashes of those who were once called great. The third son took the vase of clay, and, opening it, found it empty, but on the bottom of it was inscribed the name of God. King Nimrod asked his courtiers which vase they thought weighed the most. The avaricious men of his court said the vase of gold. The poets said the one of amber. But the wisest men said the empty vase, because one letter of the name of God outweighed a universe.

For Him I thirst; for His grace I beg; on His promise I build my all. Without Him I cannot be happy. I have tried the world, and it does well enough as far it goes, but it is too uncertain a world, too evanescent a world. I am not a prejudiced witness. I have nothing against this world. I have been one of the most fortunate, or to use a more Christian word, one of the most blessed of men—blessed in my parents, blessed in the place of my nativity, blessed in my health, blessed in my field of work, blessed in my natural temperament, blessed in my family, blessed in my opportunities, blessed in a comfortable livelihood, blessed in the hope that my soul will go to Heaven through the pardoning mercy of God, and my body, unless it be lost at sea or cremated in some conflagration, will lie down in the gardens of Greenwood among my kindred and friends, some already gone and others to come after me. Life to many has been a disappointment, but to me it has been a pleasant surprise, and yet I declare that if I did not feel that God was now my Friend and ever-present help, I should be wretched and terror-stricken. But I want more of Him. I have thought over this text and preached this sermon to myself until with all the aroused energies of my body, mind and soul, I can cry out, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

Oh, when some of you get there it will be like what a hunter tells of, when pushing his canoe far up North in the winter and amid the ice-floes, and a hundred miles, as he thought, from any other human being! He was startled one day as he heard a stepping on the ice, and he cocked his rifle ready to meet anything that came near. He found a man, careworn and lame from long exposure, approaching him. Taking him into his canoe and kindling fires to warm him, he restored him and found out where he had lived, and took him to his home, and found all the village in great excitement. A hundred men were searching for the lost man, and his family and friends rushed out to meet him; and, as had been agreed, at his first appearance, bells were rung, and guns were fired, and banquets spread, and the rescuer loaded with presents. Well, when some of you step out of this wilderness, where you have been chilled and torn and sometimes lost amid the icebergs, into the warm greetings of all the villages of the glorified, and your friends rush out to give you welcoming kiss, the news that there is another soul forever saved will call the caterers of Heaven to spread the banquet, and the bell-men to lay hold of the rope in the tower, and while the chalices click at the feast, and the bells clang from the turrets, it will be a scene so uplifting I pray God I may be there to take part in the celestial merriment. "Until the day break and the shadows flee away, be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether."

A Domestic Incident.

From the Observer, Flushing, Mich.

"Early in November, 1896," says Frank Long, who lives near Lennon, Mich., "on starting to get up from the dinner table, I was taken with a pain in my back. The pain increased and I was obliged to take to my bed. The physician who was summoned pronounced my case muscular rheumatism accompanied by lumbago. He gave me remedies and injected morphine into my arm to ease the pain.

"My disease gradually became worse until I thought that death would be welcome release from my sufferings. Besides my regular physician I also consulted another, but he gave me no encouragement.

On Getting Up From the Table.

"I was finally induced through reading some accounts in the newspapers regarding the wonderful cures wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, to try them. I took the pills according to directions and soon began to notice an improvement in my condition. Before the first box was used I could get about the house, and after using five boxes was entirely cured.

"Since that time I have felt no return of the rheumatic pains. I am confident that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life and I try to induce my friends who are sick to try the same remedy. I will gladly answer inquiries concerning my sickness and wonderful cure, provided stamp is enclosed for reply. FRANK LONG."

Rather Fight Than Talk.

At the roof garden entertainment in New York the other night there was an illustration of Roosevelt's popularity and the enthusiastic spirit which possesses the people. A well-known impersonator of prominent characters introduced into his act several military features. He appears as General Miles, in the celebrated uniform; as Admiral Dewey and Colonel Roosevelt, dressed in his Kharkee uniform. When he appeared on the platform in this costume Monday night the audience was startled by a prolonged ki-yi-yi-yi, the war whoop of the Rough Riders, which came from a young man who sat at one of the side tables drinking beer with a party of friends and fondling a pair of crutches. Everybody arose and looked that way, and the war-whoop was repeated. In less than a minute everyone on the roof knew that a genuine wounded Rough Rider was in the audience, and although he was only a private, they made him take the platform and tried to induce him to make a speech. But his tongue was paralyzed, and although he might have faced the Spanish batteries without trembling he was frightened half out of his wits by the demonstration of the audience.—W. E. Curtis in Chicago Record.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

INDIANS DO NOT RECKON HIGH.

How $348 Was "Heap Plenty" in Settlement of a Claim for $3,000.

It is not so easy now to cheat the Indians in bargaining as it was in the days when Manhattan Island was bought from them for $23. Their long intercourse with the white men has taught them many things about the value of their possessions, and they are pretty sharp in making the ordinary trades which come up in their daily life. Nevertheless, it is still true that when it comes to a question of large sums of money thousands or even hundreds of dollars—the average Indian is bewildered at the mere idea of so much wealth. An incident which happened not long ago in New Mexico illustrates this point.

An Indian, while crossing the tracks of one of the railroads, had been killed by a train. His squaw demanded $3,000 as an indemnity for the loss of her husband, and the company was willing to settle the matter. So they sent to deal with the squaw a man who had had considerable experience in negotiating with the Indians. He took with him several bags of "dobe," or Mexican silver dollars, which pass freely among the Indians and settlers in that part of the country. Sitting down gravely with the aggrieved widow, he began counting out the big shining dollars one by one. When the pile had reached 100 he glanced inquiringly at the squaw. But she shook her head firmly. The agent went on with his counting. At the end of another 100 he looked up again. The squaw repeated the negative shake of her head, but her eyes began to brighten at the heap of silver. At 300 the agent paused a little longer. His customer still held out, though with unmistakable signs of weakening. The agent counted more slowly and impressively. When he reached $348 the squaw stopped his hand.

"Heap plenty, heap plenty," she said, with decision, and gathering up the silver she accepted in perfect contentment this settlement of her claim for $3,000.—New York Tribune.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENT FOR OCTOBER 23.

Lesson Text: "Isaiah Called to Service," Isaiah vi., 1-13—Golden Text, Isaiah vi., 8—Commentary on the Lesson of the Day by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple." Although King Uzziah was a leper, yet his life as a whole was right in the sight of the Lord (II Chron. xxvi., 4). There is a King who never dies, who is on the throne of the universe. We are continually to realize His position and our relationship to Him. The word "Lord" is Adonai, not Jehovah, and signifies ruler or possessor. It was none other than the Son of God whom Isaiah saw (John xii., 41). Ezekiel was qualified for service by a vision of the Lord as a man upon the throne (Ezek. i., 26).

2. "Above it stood the seraphims." These holy beings are mentioned only in this chapter in the Bible, while cherubim are mentioned many times from Genesis to Revelation. I am persuaded that the cherubim represent the church, the body of Christ, as part of Himself, one with Him in His glory and power when the time shall have come. The seraphim may possibly be identical with the living ones. Compare Rev. iv., with this chapter.

3. "And one cried unto another and said, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory." Compare the only other thrice holy in Scripture, Rev. iv., 8. On the last clause of this verse see the marginal reading and compare chapters xi., 9; Num. xiv., 21; Hab. ii., 14. There is no self praise in heaven, but all unite in glorifying Him who alone is worthy to be praised. No flesh shall glory in His presence. The Lord alone shall be exalted in that day (I Cor. i., 29; Isa. ii., 11, 17).

4. "And the post of the door moved at the voice of him that cried and the house was filled with smoke." In Ex. xix., 18; Isa. iv., 5, smoke and cloud are associated with the presence of the Lord. We read also of the pillar of cloud that led Israel and of the tabernacle and temple filled with His glory at their dedication (Ex. xl., 34; I Kings viii., 10, 11).

5. "Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone." As the prophet saw the King in His glory he was filled with a sense of his own unworthiness. Compare Job xlii., 5, 6; Dan. x., 8; Rev. i., 17. To serve the Lord aright we should we must not only be filled with a sense of His worthiness, but also with a deep sense of our own unworthiness, wisdom of words, but the power of God to do the work. Not any might or power of ours, but His Spirit. This is His word (I Cor. ii., 4, 5; Zech. iv., 6).

6. "A live coal from off the altar," the brazen altar in tabernacle and temple, suggestive of the work of Christ on Calvary for us, when He shed His own blood for our sins, gave Himself a sacrifice for us once for all. The golden altar speaks of His present work of intercession for us, by which we are saved and by the other we are kept day by day.

7. "Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." The mouth suggests the heart, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh (Math. xii., 34; Rom. x., 10). Nothing but the sacrifice of Christ can take away our sins or give us a clean heart. No works of ours can help. It is His work alone that does it, and we must accept it as His gift, as Adam and Eve accepted the coats of skins which the Lord Himself provided by the shedding of blood (Gen. iii., 21; Rom. vi., 23).

8. "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." To bring the time when the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord messengers must go forth in His name and proclaim His name and declare His glory, that He may be exalted (Isa. xii., 4). The messengers must be redeemed ones, knowing their sins forgiven, recognizing as their Lord the one living and true God, who says "Whom shall I send?" and the Trinity, who say, "Who will go for us?" When we remember that although we ourselves utterly unworthy, we are yet commissioned by a King, even the King of kings, having all power in heaven and on earth, and that He is in heaven for us, ordering and arranging all the details of the work which He would have us do, only to do through us, it gives great quickening and confidence in His service.

9, 10. "And He said, Go and tell this people." Then follows a commission which sounds anything but encouraging, for he is told that the people will not perceive what he is setting before them nor understand his message. The commission of Jeremiah and Ezekiel was in somewhat similar terms (Jer. i., 17-19; Ezek. ii., 3-7; xxxiii., 30-32). The words of these verses in Isaiah are quoted three times in the New Testament (Math. xiii., 14, 15; John xii., 40; Acts xxviii., 26, 27), and are referred to in Rom. xi., 8. When our Lord sent forth the twelve, He said, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves" (Math. x., 16). He afterward told them that not all the seed sown would bear fruit, that tares would grow with the wheat, that birds would get in the branches, and that the food would become leavened, but He also told them for their encouragement of the treasure and the pearl and that He had given up all to buy the field and the pearl. He is not discouraged. He will be satisfied, the kingdom shall be the Lord's, and every purpose of the Lord shall be performed (Isa. xiii., 4; liii., 11; Jer. xxiii., 20).

11-13. "Then said I, Lord, how long?" The Lord's purposes seem slow of fulfillment, and it oft seems to our eyes like a long and unnecessary delay, but the time will come when there shall be delay no longer (Rev. x., 6, R. V., margin), and we shall see that for all seeming delay there has been a cause (Ezek. xiv., 23). Isaiah was a messenger to Judah (Isa. i., 1), and our Lord Himself and His apostles were sent first to Israel, but it has come to pass as He said, and Israel has been scattered far away and her land is desolate. But the Lord's portion, a faithful remnant, has always been in Israel, even in her darkest days, and shall yet burst forth into full life to the glory of God. When the trees cast their leaves, they seem to be dead, but the life being there becomes manifest in due time. There will be a springtime for Israel when she shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit (Isa. xxvii., 6). Let us now tell every one of the redemption that is in Christ, so that from all nations those who may come to form His body, the church. If we receive the same treatment as prophets and apostles, let us not think it strange.—Lesson Helper.

WINE OF CARDUI

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their sufferings. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Thorsby, Oct. 11, 1898

Editor BANNER—Will you give me space in your valuable paper to reply to Mr. L. H. Reynolds' stock law. As for the community I don't think we need a stock law at present, but we do need a bull and boar law. We want better stock and we cannot have them until we improve them, and therefore we cannot improve them until we have this kind of law or get shut of all the scrubs. I want to say right here any man would rather have a cow that would give from two to four gallons of milk each day, and 1½ to 2 lbs butter per day. Say butter is worth 15 cents per pound, which it brings the year round, at 1½ pounds per day for one year we find one cow's butter is worth $82.12 per year; milk, even 3 gals per day, at 10 cents per gal nets $109 50; total for one improved cow for one year, $191 62.

Now, my brother readers, can't you see at once the difference in good stock and scrubs; it costs just the same to feed scrubs as it does good stock; profit is what we want, is it or not?

As to hogs, I had rather have one hog at one year old of good stock, with some feed, than two common piney woods rooters. There is more pay in them. I know what I am talking about, I have experience in this line. We will never have better stock until we have a bull and boar law in this county, the way everything stands at the present time.

As for the dog law, we certainly need one. I am in favor of every man or woman who keeps one dog, or more, to pay $1 each strictly, and let this money go to the school fund to educate the poor as well as the rich.

As to a school law, we need it improved. I hope some one will suggest a better plan than we have at present.

As to a road law, I am in favor of there being worked by taxation and convict system. I notice some say the young white men and negroes from 18 to 21 would escape work and tax. This is not the idea. Just have a per capita tax, say the tax is 50 cents or $1 a year for each man; this is nothing to pay as a tax. There is nothing advertises a country better than good roads. I hear some say we have good roads. I want to say I have not seen many roads worked yet; the hands generally work the roads by sitting down on the road side and telling yarns. I am bound to say that we need a road law, if our taxes cost us some more, for my living costs me as much as anyone on the farm, I hope to hear others express themselves.

Respectfully,
WM. PIERCE.

Death of Mrs J. M Stanfield.

On Friday morning last the angel of death visited the home of Mr. J. M. Stanfield and carried away the immortal spirit of his dearly loved wife, Jeffersonian, after many years of happy life together. Mrs. Stanfield's death was due to malarial fever, and it is thought the disease was contracted while she was engaged in assisting to clear up the cemetery. The remains were laid to rest on Saturday afternoon, Rev. W. B. Dennis, pastor of the Methodist church, of which the deceased was a prominent member, officiating. A good woman, a fond mother, and a kind neighbor has gone from us, mourned by all who knew her.

An Uncertain Disease.

There is no disease more uncertain in its nature than dyspepsia. Physicians say that the symptoms of no two cases agree. It is therefore most difficult to make a correct diagnosis. No matter how severe, or under what disguise dyspepsia attacks you, Browns' Iron Bitters will cure it. Invaluable in all diseases of the stomach, blood and nerves. Browns' Iron Bitters is sold by the dealers.

Jemison.

Last week, at a revival at Center Hill Baptist church, when there fifteen accessions to the church, something remarkable occurred. Mr. Spencer Ray, in his 98th year, joined the church. He told the young people to not serve satan a century. He was happily immersed to the delight of many friends. Mr. Ray is an inmate of the county hospital near Jemison.

Near us there are some model farmers, two brothers, Lincoln and Henry Durbin. You need not go to town looking for them sitting around idle, never! Fortunately they both have real nice, smart wives. Success to the Durbin brothers. Those brothers lost their father in the civil war, and are kindly caring for their aged mother.

Why don't everybody take the Banner?

Canton Locals.

Mrs. M. A. Mullins is building a new five-roomed dwelling house on the Sexton lot, which will be quite an improvement to that part of town.

Mr. W. M. Wilson is having erected a four-roomed dwelling house on the lot adjoining Mr. Sartor's place.

A much needed convenience is about to be furnished Clanton by Mr. J. M. Morgan who will build and run a livery stable on the corner lot across from the depot.

Mr. Tipton Mullins' new law office is about completed, and has a pretty appearance.

Mr. W. M. Adams is having some repairs done at the Adams place, and his new law office is finished.

Mr. W. H. Taylor's new and convenient barber shop is finished and everything is up to date.

The Telephone Company's men have pased through Clanton, and now the poles and wires along our principal streets give us quite a city appearance.

Circuit Clerk Deason has received his commission, and we presume the other elected officers have also received theirs, but have no positive information to that effect.

Mr. M. A. Killgore is on the sick list.

We are sorry to say Postmaster L. B. Pounds does not improve very fast.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has the largest sale of any Salve in the world. This fact and its merit has led dishonest people to attempt to counterfeit it. Look out for he man who attempts to deceive you when you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure. J. M. Stanfield.

Commissions Issued

The governor's office and that of the secretary of state this week sent out commissions to the sixty-six probate judges in this state the term of each of whom begins November 3. The secretary of state collects the fees for all commissions, and they are registered in his office. The most important and lucrative probate judgeships are those of Jefferson and Montgomery. The former is said to pays $12,000 or $15,000 a year, and the latter about $8,000 or $10,000. But out of these sums the judges have to pay heavy office expenses, which leave them barely decent salaries. In some counties the pay of probate judges is small. For examples, Lowndes county pays about $200 a month, Butler about $150 and Chilton $125. Dallas and Mobile pay very well.—Montgomery Journal.

More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in it's merits do you want? It cures piles, burns, scalds, sores, in the shortest space of time. J. M. Stanfield.

COTTON TALK.

Wall street has worried much lately over the poor price of cotton and depressing theories have gone the rounds based on the idea that low figures for cotton mean deplorable things for the south. A propos of this view and against it, are the following recitation of facts and expression of opinion by Mr. Henry Schaefer, of the firm of S. Gruner & Co., who on the cotton exchange holds high ranks as a thoughtful student of trade conditions. Says Mr. Schaefer:

"The cotton trade has learned in the last few years that cotton can be raised for very much less than a few years ago was thought possible. The conclusion has been arrived at through the continued large acreage which is being annually devoted to the production of the staple by the southern planters. If the present crop turns out as large as the last one there will undoubtedly be some difficulty in disposing of it except at gradually declining prices.

"But what the cost of producing cotton actually is we have never been able to find out. Should there be a low price maintained until the period when a new crop is being put in, this low price would seem to be the salvation of the planter, if it induced him to plant less cotton than heretofore.

"The various transportation interests and the laborer benefit by low prices and a large yield of cotton. To the real prosperity of the south it is, however, essential that the planter should have good prices for his product. There is a constant increase in the consumption of cotton, but notwithstanding this fact, it is evident that production has overtaken consumption. In China and Japan cotton spinning has been introduced where formerly the goods were bought entirely from other countries.

"Southern planters are at the present time in a better position to hold cotton than they have been in former years; but Texas, it is unlikely that at first the farmer will raise anything but cotton. This is always their money crop. Texas has also a corn and wheat crop, the production being mostly for their home consumption. The hog interest is an immense one, but it also is one which finds home consumption. To that extent the important state of Texas is ahead, in that they raise within their own borders the food required for their families instead of being obliged to take their supplies from the West."—New York Times.

When you call for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the great pile cure, don't accept anything else. Don't be talked into accepting a substitute, for piles, for sores, for burns J. M. Stanfield.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin

"When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine is the first place; what experience tells you is best to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. Theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But if you can get Dr. Inclination, Dr. Experience and Dr. Reason to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition. Maine is again to enter the list of copper-mining states. The deposits, which are numerous and valuable, were worked more than twenty-five years ago, but a sudden decline in the price of copper made them unprofitable; improved and cheapened method of production is the cause of resumption of work.

Here are some of the conclusions that English experts have arrived at concerning the naval features of the war: Fast battleships are everything; have big batteries aboard; teach the men to shoot well; as for personnel, the Anglo-Saxon can beat anything that floats. These specifications cover the ground pretty well, though it might be well to mention the importance of personal heroism, says the Boston Herald.

The only significance in the small increase in railway mileage in the United States last year is that pretty nearly every available section of the country is now fully accessible by railroad. The railway mileage will of course continue to increase in the future, but not at such a rate as in the past. With improvements that have been made in engine power and carrying capacity of cars, moreover, the present lines are able to accommodate more traffic. This means that fewer railroad lines are likely to go into the hands of receivers hereafter and at the same time that demands of traffic will be met.

The American death rate is in almost every state in the Union higher for males than for females. There is an excessive mortality among males in the earlier years of life, which, although the sexes differ but little in this regard at more advanced ages, makes itself felt in the total statistics. Males are also enormously more subject to certain common causes of death than females. Thus they are five times more likely to die of alcoholism, four times more likely to commit suicide, and three times as likely to be killed by accident. Females, on the other hand, succumb more readily than males to many of the diseases common to both sexes. They are, as the census shows, more likely to die of cancer, peritonitis, whooping cough, consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles.

The prune industry in California has had a remarkable growth in the last decade. In 1888 there were about 11,000 acres of bearing prune trees, and about 6000 acres more of young orchards. Between 1890 and 1894 about 40,000 acres of prune orchards were planted. Since then the growth has proceeded in lesser degree, but the total bearing area is now estimated at 55,000 acres, with 10,000 more to come into bearing within the next year or two. The investment in lands, trees, irrigation systems, agricultural tools, and packing houses is estimated at $25,000,000. This year's production of green fruit will amount to about 84,000 tons, and growers anticipate a crop of 100,000 tons within a few years. Of this year's yield, about one-fifth will be shipped east as green fruit; the remainder will be dried, making, with the water evaporated, about 24,000 tons.

A writer in the Scientific American seems to have taken careful note of the lifeboats on ocean steamers. He says: "Any one who has traveled to and fro a few times can but notice the paucity of lifeboats and the fact that the davit room is not all utilized. The examination of fifteen photographs, representing as many liners, showed an average of seven boats on each side; one ship only showing an interrupted line of ten large boats on each side. What does this average of fourteen boats to the ship represent? The fact that only those on the lee side can be used in rough weather reduces the total to seven; two must be considered as sacrificed, smashed or capsized during launching. Five are left, with a capacity of about 140 persons—less than the ship's crew. Lifeboats? If they are lifeboats, why do they fill and sink with such rapidity? What use are rafts and life preservers in such calamities as that of the Elbe and the Bourgogne?" These are alarming statements, and they are evidently made by somebody with knowledge of his topic.

A CRISIS IN PROCEEDINGS

Reached by the Peace Commissioners at Paris.

AMERICA WILL NOT ASSUME CUBAN DEBT

The Philippines Will Be Demanded—Day Informs Spanish Commissioners That Further Delay Will Not Be Tolerated.

A dispatch to London news agency from Paris says:

"Today (Monday) the conference reached a crisis for the first time. Judge Day presented the demands of the American commission in threatening words. He said that delay was the only possible object attainable by the persistent efforts of the Spanish commissioners to saddle the United States with the Cuban debt and would be tolerated no longer, as the United States would neither assume nor antee any part of the debt.

"The Spaniards replied that this placed Spain in a position of repudiating or of reducing the face value of the Cuban bonds from 50 to 60 per cent., paying only half the stipulated interest on the reduced value. Before they would adopt either alternative, they would surrender to the United States the entire Philippines.

"Judge Day responded that the Philippines would probably be demanded, irrespective of the Cuban or any other debt.

"This, to the Spaniards, the first intimations of the intentions of the United States as to the Philippines, resulted in a whispered consultation on the part of the Spanish commissioners, after which they asked for time to communicate with Madrid. Judge Day said that President McKinley had instructed him to demand the entire surrender of Porto Rico tomorrow (Tuesday) and the delivery of every town to the United States officers before midnight, together with the evacuation of Havana on or before November 1, when the United States would be at the gates ready to take possession.

"There was no alternative offered in the case of either of these demands, and the session consequently was very brief. The American commissioners have received dispatches from Washington indicating that the administration is irritated and indignant over the delay of the Spanish commissioners."

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS.

Are Being Made by France—Getting Cruisers Ready.

PARIS.—Inquiries made Monday at the offices of the French minister of marine confirm the report published by the Soliel in a dispatch from Toulon that Vice-Admiral Fournier, who is now at Tunis with the minister of marine, M. Rockroy, will return immediately to Toulon, where orders have been received to speedily prepare the armored cruisers Admiral Trechouart, Bouvines, Jemmapez and Valmy for active service, and that, in addition, orders have been issued to send the largest possible number of gunners to Brest without delay to man the forts and batteries there. The vessels mentioned are to be promptly placed on a war footing and sent to Brest. Rumors connect the French preparations with the Fashoda dispute.

England Demands That Chinese Emperor be Returned His Throne.

A dispatch to a London news agency from Shanghai says:

"Reports from Japanese sources are in circulation here to the effect that Sir Claude McDonald, British minister at Pekin, had informed the Chinese government that sovereignty appertains solely to the emperor, who has been forcibly abducted and deposed, and that he must be restored to his position, while Kank Yu Wei and the other reformers must be pardoned. Failing compliance, Great Britain will enforce these demands."

GOMEZ WILL BE MADE PRESIDENT

Cuban Assembly Will Meet at Santa Cruz Oct. 20.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA.—The meeting of the Cuban assembly at Santa Cruz is fixed for October 20, but owing to the lack of transportation facilities the members of the assembly will be unable to arrive at Santa Cruz on time, and the end of the month will probably have come before the election of a president and cabinet takes place.

El Cubano, a daily paper of Santiago, predicts the election of the following ticket:

President, Gen. Maximo omez; vice-president, Senor Bartholome Maso; secretary of foreign affairs, Dr. Domingo Mendez Capote; home secretary, Senor Benjamin Guerra; secretary of justice, Senor Jose A. A BLIZZARD IN THE WEST.

Heavy Fall of Snow Reported in Missouri and Kansas.

A Monday's special from Kansas City, Mo., says. A genuine blizzard prevails in the Southwest and West today. A heavy snow has fallen since 3 o'clock, and driven by a strong wind has prostrated wires in all directions and caused delay to railway traffic. The snow followed twenty-four hours of steady rain.

There has been a decided fall in the temperature, and the suddenness of the storm, coming as it has upon the track of Indian summer weather will undoubtedly cause great suffering, especially on the ranges covered with cattle. Kansas City is practically cut off from the West, as far as telegraph communication is concerned.

TO SAVE HIS WATCH

Edward Thomas Rushed Into a Fire and Burned to Death.

His love for a plain silver watch which was an heirloom caused the death of Edward Thomas, a watchman at the furnaces of the Pioneer Manufacturing company, at Thomas, Ala., Monday. Thomas was employed as top filler. His duties were in the top house, 150 feet from the ground. Gas from the furnace blown over by a driving southeast wind set the top house on fire. At this time Thomas was on the safety platform, but rushed across and entered the house to save his watch, and was literally roasted to death.

The exercises at the university, while hampered very much by wet weather, were still impressive in an extraordinary degree.

Alabama Negroes From Virden, Ill., Are in Jail.

The fifty-seven Alabama negroes that were sent to St. Louis from Springfield, Ill., after the union miners at Virden had refused to allow them to remain in that city, are in jail in St. Louis. They spent Sunday in religious service, and are anxious to get back to Alabama. Mayor Zeigenheim is trying to devise a way to get the hapless negroes back without legal intricacies. To send them to Alabama is not within the province of the St. Louis authorities, who had no connection with the trouble in Virden.

GREAT BRITAIN PREPARING

Talk of War Over the Fashoda Affair.

FRANCE MUST BACK DOWN OR FIGHT

Grave Situation Arising Out of the French Aggressions in the Soudan Indications That France Will Retire From Fashoda.

LONDON.—There has been a great deal of talk here about the possibility of war with France and various preparations upon the part of the British government reported to have been made. It is announced that a leading small arms firm at Birmingham was asked this week whether it was prepared to turn out a thousand magazine rifles weekly. The significance of this will be appreciated when it is pointed out that the British government works alone are capable of turning out 4,000 magazine rifles weekly. It is also rumored that war insurances have been effected at Lloyds during the last few days, but they appear to have been more in the character of bets than trading.

The situation arising out of the question between Great Britain and France as to the right of occupying Fashoda is extremely grave. Everything hinges on the nature of the report of Maj. Marchand, the French commander at Fashoda, who is is now on his way from Khartoum to Paris.

The evacuation of Fashoda by the French must, however, take place if war between Great Britain and France is to be averted, as the Marquis of Salisbury has nailed his colors to the mast and cannot recede from the position he has taken up, and in which he has received the unanimous support of the country.

The emphatic declarations English press and public men have already had a certain influence across the channel and the inspired statements of the French press belittle the importance of Fashoda and shift the ground to an undefined claim upon the province of Bahr-El-Ghaseal and a port on the Nile. The mouth-piece of the French foreign office is preparing France for the abandonment of Fashoda by asserting that Major Marchand overshot his goal and that instead of going to Fashoda he ought to have stopped at the confluence of the Bahr El-Ghaseal

THEY WILL NOT YIELD.

Firm Stand Taken by the American Commissioners at Paris.

MADRID.—The semi-official Correspondencia attaches much importance to Friday's meeting of the peace commissioners. It says it believes that besides discussing the Cuban debt and the evacuation of Cuba, the Philippine question was under discussion, which this paper claims to regard as incredible "as all unprejudiced people must think, that after the signature of the protocol, the rights and sovereignty of Spain would be unquestioned."

Continuing, the Correspondencia says: "The Americans are uncompromising and disposed to only yield on points of unimportant detail. They are not disposed to agree to arbitration, while Spain is willing to accept Russia or Germany. The public is anxious, but we cannot immediately reassure it, the telegraph not being under the present circumstances, the best means of information."

GARCIA'S ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

He Says the Present Cuban Government is Not Legal.

It appears that Garcia has unofficially expressed the opinion that the present Cuban government, owing to lack of members and personnel, could not be considered legal, as a quorum was impossible, and therefore its actions were unconstitutional.

Gen. Garcia, it seems from what his secretary says, in all questions of authority at the present moment only recognizes the general-in-chief of the Cuban army, though he recognizes the "transitory government of the United States as a consequence of intervention," and being commanded by the revolutionary government to accept and co-oporate with the American army and navy, he obeyed orders.

CULVER FILES ANNUAL REPORT

Reviews Work of His Department in Regard to Fertilizer—Agricultural Schools.

In his annual report to the governor, just filed, Commissioner of Agriculture Culver, of Alabama, says:

"One of the most important duties assigned to this department is the management and general supervision of the fertilizer trade of the state. Heretofore it has been the custom of this department to have the manufacturers submit samples of their fertilizers, and have them analyzed by the state chemist, this being the guarantee upon which goods are sold within the state. During the present season we have abolished this custom, and have received samples of the various brands direct from dealers after coming into the state. During the present year we hope to get our fertilizer dealers familiar with the workings of this plan, and we are sure that it will prove very beneficial to the fertilizer consumers of the state.

"The demand for farmers' institutes has been greater than for many previous years. I have visited many counties of the state, and everywhere the farmers have attended in large numbers, evincing a strong desire to become more familiar with the needs of their soils and the proper methods of fertilization and cultivation.

"I have visited all of the above schools during the year, and on close inspection find that they are complying with the law, both in teaching scientific agriculture and in making experiments on the farm. When the crops are gathered, the results of the experiments will be published in pamphlet form, as well as all the newspapers in their respective districts. Every pupil over the age of ten years is required to study agriculture and horticulture. The time once was when it only required muscle and some brain to cultivate our then virgin soils, which yielded so abundantly to the husbandman; but that day is in the past; we have worn down and dilapidated our soil until it no longer yields to mere force. It now requires to be built up as it is cultivated. This is what is being taught in our agricultural schools, and, in my humble judgment, the young men from these schools will revolutionize the farming interests of this country. I would urge every farmer in Alabama to send as many of his sons as possible to some one of these schools.

"The branch station located at Tuskegee for the colored race, under the direction of Professor Booker T. Washington, is also doing fine work. Professor Carver, who is an educated man, is teaching scientific and practical farming, and, in my opinion, that station should have an equal showing with the other schools of this character.

Proclamation by the Governor.

Governor Johnston Friday issued the following proclamation:

The LaFayette Memorial association are appealing to the youth of the United States for funds to erect a monument that will testify the gratitude this country has for gallant Frenchmen who gave such generous aid to our fathers in the war for independence. To aid in this work I appeal to the teachers of Alabama to give the pupils in their schools an opportunity to contribute to this monument, so that it may be erected during the exposition in Paris in 1900. All contributions can be sent to the state superintendent of education to be forwarded.

A Great Modern Industry.

One of the new and important American industries that has grown up during the last twenty years, along with the telephone, the bicycle, and the moving picture camera, is that of the typewriter. In 1880 the aggregate capital invested in all four of these industries was only a small part of what is now employed in the prosecution of any one of them. The telephone and bicycle lead in importance; the typewriter ranks next. In 1890 thirty typewriter factories were in operation; they employed 4,735 men, and the value of their product was $3,636,126. In 1897 one typewriter company gave regular employment to 2,300 workmen. During that year each of the leading makers was selling behind in their orders. In 1895 a careful estimate placed the number of machines in use not less than 500,000. During the year following 428 typewriters were used in thirty-four office buildings in New York city. A statement published in the Typographic World of April, 1896, showed that in New York there were more than 3,000 typewriters in the section of Fulton street and east of Broadway and that throughout the city the number of high-class machines in daily operation exceeded 35,000. Chicago was estimated, used 15,000; Philadelphia, 14,500; Boston, 6,000; St. Louis, 4,500; Baltimore, 4,300; Washington, 3,500; Cincinnati, 3,500, and San Francisco, 3,000, while Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburg and Detroit used more than 2,000 machines each. In some of the dozen smaller cities of the land were to be found less than 1,000, some of them had as many as 500. The total number in use in the United States was placed at 150,000, and the manufacture and sale of typewriters has greatly increased. The amount of the exact number now used at the present time is not known, certainly exceeds half a million, and reaches perhaps three-quarters of a million. Agencies for the sale of the machines and dealers in typewriter supplies are located in every city and in many small towns in the country. The number of schools in which typewriting is taught is estimated to be 1,500, attended by more than 75,000 pupils, a large majority of whom are women. Perhaps no other branch of American industry has been affected by foreign competition to that under consideration. Repeated attempts on the part of manufacturers of other nations to devise machines which would supplant those made in this country, the product is today as much a favorite abroad as it is at home. In fact, America practically supplies the world with typewriters all over the globe. The exportation of them during the last eight years has probably exceeded one-third of the entire product. The total value of the typewriting machines and parts exported during the fiscal year ending on June 30, 1897, was $1,566,916. Progress closely resembles that of labor, but it opens out vistas that are broader, longer and more impressive.

Some Labor in Germany.

Charles W. Erdman, United States consul at Breslau, Germany, has compiled a report of wages paid in the city of Breslau and the province of Silesia generally. In considering them it must be remembered that Posen, Silesia and adjacent parts of Austria are the places where lowest wages prevail. Mr. Erdman finds that in glass factories blowers get from $5.95 to $6.57 a week; cutters, from $4.29 to $5.71; engravers and painters the same; sorters get from $2.86 to $4.29; heaters, cutters, sorters and packers, $2.86. Grinding girls only $1.43. In glove factories cutters receive from $2.86 to $4.29; heaters, sorters from $1.19 to $1.43, and sewing girls from 95 cents to $1.19. Even the skilled labor is underpaid. Railroad engineers get from $1.90 to $1.90 a week, switchmen from $2.09 to $8.09, conductors the same as engineers, firemen from $4.47 to $7.61, brakemen from $3.57 to $5.47. Shoemakers receive from $2.86 to $4.80, tanners from $3.33 to $4.29, laborers from $2.86 to $3.57, bakers from $4.29 to $5.24, policemen from $4.53 to $7.14, electricians from $4.29 to $9.52, blacksmiths and horseshoers from $4.29 to $7.14, machinists from $4.29 to $5.71, boiler makers from $2.86 to $5.95 and so on.

Mr. Erdman asks how a country where unskilled labor is paid at the rate of from $1.25 to $2 a day is to compete with skilled labor receiving as little as 50 cents.

Some American firms have taken advantage of conditions in Silesia. Thus, Mr. Erdman reports that the Arbuckles coffee people placed a $50,000 order for posters there, because they got a lower price than American printers could quote. Several printing firms have solicitors for American trade. Many factories of different kinds are running day and night on American orders.

While this is true of the district where Mr. Erdman is stationed, the trade report of the German empire as a whole tell a different story. It is a fact, as shown by the recent treasury bulletin published in Washington, that German importations have, to a marked and material extent, fallen off this year. From 1894 to 1897 inclusive, taking the fiscal years of each year (year ending July 1) German exportations to the United States steadily increased each year. In 1894 they amounted to $60,000,000, in 1895 to $81,000,000, in 1896 to $94,000,000, and in 1897 to $141,000,000, the high mark. Last year the fiscal year recently ended, there was a decline to $69,000,000, a falling off of forty-five per cent. Other countries, it is true, exported less to the United States, last year than in some of the years preceding, the decline of French imports being about twenty per cent, compared with 1897, of British imports about thirty per cent, and of Holland imports about five per cent. Germany's excess of manufactured products is increased and diminished by the market for "cheap-made goods," and the present industrial conditions of the United States are not, and do not seem likely for many years to be favorable to a large sale of manufactured articles in the American market.

The American exports to Germany for which German goods or their equivalent are exchanged amounted to $97,000,000 in 1896, $125,000,000 in 1897, and $155,000,000 in 1898. The chief article of American exportation to Germany is cotton. Lard, oil cake, hides and timber are other items. There is also a large exportation of American tobacco to Germany, and of copper in bars.

The Individual.

Who is indispensable in the industrial world? Is any one indispensable, or are all indispensable? If you inquire of the average printer, he will tell you that the world could not well wag on without him and his craft. The Peoples' department of Grit has contained several frank admissions on the part of coal miners that they, like Dewey, are to be reckoned the "hot stuff" that "did it," and given special honor and glory, because they dug the coal that made the steam that lifted the shell that sank the Reina Christina. The tailor, the farmer, the shoemaker, the editor, and all the rest of us, incline to the fond delusion that "my" craft or occupation is the one indispensable thing, whatever may be the claims or merits of another. The truth is that no one is indispensable, in the sense that he may justly claim that without him or the product of his toil the world would come to a standstill. Occupations have arisen, flourished, and been so thoroughly superseded by others that scarcely a memory remains. In every large town the printer of 20 years ago is on the run; where he isn't on the run, it's because all of him has already run out. Yet newspapers and books are printed in greater number, and better, than before. The old kind of printer evidently wasn't indispensable, though he thought he was. Neither is the new kind. The sailor used to claim that he it was who must be considered if there was to be commerce across wide waters. The coal digger, engine builder and propellor-man came along and the sailor found that he wasn't "in it" as far as being indispensable is concerned. Coal today enters into the production of most things, and the prosecution of most enterprises, war included. But if all miners went on perpetual strike, and every coal deposit was sealed forever, no one need fear that the world wouldn't go right on progressing. If all experience counts for anything, coal and men who dig it would very soon be a dim recollection of something that had been, and the superiority of the new fuel would make forever impossible the return of King Coal's reign. While these things are true, it is equally true that in a sense all are indispensable. To no man or occupation belongs the arrogant prerogative of claiming that to him or it the world is beholden in especial manner. The progress of mankind is the resultant of all the intellectual and material achievements of the people. Anything that enters in the creation of a product, or the development of a nation, is indispensable, until it is superseded by something more efficient. The paper-maker, the freight-handler, the drayman, is just as indispensable to the production of a newspaper as is the editor, the printer, or the man who pays wages. Coal helps to develop a nation. So does wool. The miner has no claim for indispensability superior to that of the lad who tends sheep on an Ohio farm. The banker no claim above the baker. From all of which it follows that it's not a sign of good sense for a man to proclaim that to him or his craft the world should make obeisance.

The National Brotherhood of Blacksmiths offers $10 and the Trunk and Bag Workers International union offers $6 to organizers of the American Federation of Labor for every union formed by them of those crafts.

THE PARTY IS RIGHT.

THROUGH DEMOCRACY PLUTOCRACY MUST FALL.

The Republican Imperialistic Plan of Suppressing the Right of People to Vote—Plan to Govern by Military Force—Hannaism Growing Wilder.

It is reported that government architects in making plans for a proposed public building in Chicago have laid out the lower story on the lines of a fortification. Their objects for this defensive plan is not to provide against foreign aggression, but to resist domestic riot. For some time an influential body of our citizens, with the same danger in view, has advocated an increase in the army and its concentration in the centers of population. The remedy thus proposed to meet a recurring and increasing crisis is not the removal of the causes, but only the suppression of a manifestation of discontent. Those advocating military concentration at centers of population are placed on one or other horn of a dilemma. Either our political economy and method of government is so partial and discriminating as to justly discontent to the point of violence and insurrection in the body or the workers of our free institutions and popular government have produced a lawless and dangerous class so large as to defy peace officers and to require military control. Either of these views is a deadly arraignment of the American republic. Those who advocate permanent military establishments at large centers of population assume by logical implication, first, that existing sources of discontent will grow to need military force for the control of the discontented; second, that a large army is required for domestic rather than foreign foes, and, third, that American free institutions and popular control of government are insufficient to preserve order, protect property, or even to secure the life of the citizen from violence. In other words, the American republic is a failure; the powers of government can no longer be derived from the consent of the governed, but must henceforth grow out of a certain class of the people and be supported by an efficient military organization. Those who have given attention to the experiences of the world in military governments, and especially to such as relied on military force for domestic peace, cannot but know that it is in such governments that order, property and life are and have been the least secure. That there is an undercurrent of discontent in this country is true. It is also true that dangerous outbreaks in evidence of it occur from time to time. It is only reasonable to say that this discontent has its origin in real abuse and injustice, the lack of employment of labor due to the gold standard and its power to concentrate wealth in the hands of the few. It is folly for any one to say that our domestic discontent is without cause. Supporters of the American republic have but one course open to them. They must search out the abuses and injustice that breed discontent and remove them. The issue is a status quo of our political economy and methods of government, with an army establishment to suppress the insurrections which their unreformed continuance will bring on, upon the one hand, or, on the other, tireless and earnest work to remove the abuses and injustice and thus remove the discontent and avoid domestic insurrection.

Afraid of It.

In Hanapolis Sentinel—It will be observed that none of the Republican papers is saying anything about the "enlightened currency legislation," which the grand old party has pronounced for. Why don't they print the bill reported by the house committee on banking and currency, to which the Republican party stands committed and explain and defend its provisions? This bill, which is substantially the measure prepared by Mr. Hugh Hann's monetary reform commission, and introduced in the house by Jesse Overstreet, provided for the destruction of the greenbacks, for the total abandonment of silver as standard money, for the irrevocable establishment of the single gold standard, for the granting of a monopoly of the issue of paper currency to the national banks and the most vicious and dangerous expedient of reckless and dishonest finance, known as banking on assets. The issue presented by this measure is the most important before the country, save the question of humanity and justice raised by the war department scandals. Why don't the Republican press discuss this issue?

Wool Tariff a Failure.

The New York wool exchange has quit business. President Allen McNaughton, in explanation, says: "Owing to the depressed conditions of the wool market, and it appearing that improvement in that direction is not likely to occur for some time, it has been deemed for the best interests of the corporation and its stockholders to discontinue all farther operations in wool until a better outlook presents itself." Wool growers ought to learn by this time what little use a tariff is to give them good prices for wool. They ought to learn that promises held out to them by the Republican

SIXTEEN TO ONE.

O, what is the cry that is rending the sky,
All over the South and the West?
From far and from near the same slogan we hear,
With never a pause or a rest.
Though faint in the East, it is ever increased,
As you follow the course of the sun.
Till the Rockies are passed, with a wild trumpet blast,
For silver at sixteen to one.

It sounds to the tramp of the far mining camp,
Then comes over mountain and plain;
Till caught in the mouth of the planter down South,
While the farmer takes up the refrain.
Wherever 'tis found 'tis a magical sound,
And a wonderful work it has done.
Here, there, everywhere, it is filling the air,
Free silver at sixteen to one.

From the far Golden Gate to Washington State,
Thence east to Superior's beach
Take your course, and then ship down the broad Mississip,
Till the shores of Kentucky you reach;
Up the fair Ohio, past Virginia go,
Thence eastward the boundary run.
You will thus understand that three fourths of the land
Is howling for sixteen to one.

Though gold-bugs berate, and their partisans prate,
And their newspapers fill up their space;
They tremble in fear when that slogan they hear,
And find it growing apace;
Though they fume and they sweat, we will wallop them yet,
And won't we have oceans of fun,
As we bury them deep in their ultimate sleep,
'Neath ballots for sixteen to one?

As fair futures ope through a glory of hope,
To the vision enchanted of youth;
As the forces of right come on like the light,
And triumph with justice and truth
So the prospect we see of swift victory,
When the battle at last is begun;
Things are coming our way, 'tis the break of the day,
For silver at sixteen to one.

DEATH IN THE DEEP SEA

One Hundred and Sixty-Five Persons Drowned.

STEAMER STRANDED ON ENGLISH COAST

The Ship Was Blown on the Rocks and Scores Were Drowned Like Rats—Thirty-One Out of Two Hundred Saved.

LONDON.—The Atlantic Transport company's steamer, Moh Eagan, formerly the Cleopatra, of the Wilson and Furness-Leyland line, which left London for New York Friday, with 50 passengers and a crew of 150, ran ashore off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the lowlands. It is rumored that there has been a great loss of life.

It appears that when the Moh Eagan struck a gale was blowing and the sea was running high. Lifeboats put off from the Lizzard and from Falmouth, one returning filled with passengers. Several were drowned, however, it is reported, on the passage of the lifeboat to the shore. The coast at that point is extremely dangerous, and has been the scene of numerous wrecks.

A dispatch from Falmouth says that the Moh Eagan foundered and was probably blown ashore by the heavy sea and wind after her machinery was disabled.

Later.—According to a dispatch just received from Falmouth, out of 200 persons constituing the passengers and crew of the Moh Eagan, only 31 have been saved.

CONSPIRACY DISCOVERED.

Plotters Were Arranging to Overturn French Affairs.

PARIS.—It is announced that a military plot against the government has been discovered. The plot was discovered by a general holding an important position. The plotters were to have taken action on Saturday during the absence of the minister of war, General Chanoine.

It further appears that when the government was warned of the plot, the ministers were not surprised, having already obtained information regarding the conspiracy.

The Matin says the plot was not in favor of one of the pretenders to the throne of France, who has been talked about for some time, but was only for the purpose of changing certain officials of the government, without touching the president.

WAR WITH ENGLAND

Would Result From a Military Revolution.

LONDON.—The situation in Paris is regarded in well-informed quarters here as being more serious than at any time since the commune.

The St. James Gazette says: "A military revolution, however peaceful, which replaces the Brisson cabinet with the nominees of the generals, would imperil the relations between England and France almost to the breaking point. The semi-official and party-inspired Paris papers are still pretending that negotiations are proceeding between the two governments, and France believes it, although everybody in England knows that the statement is ridiculous. Even supposing Major Marchand is unconditionally withdrawn from Fashoda, the difficulties with France will in no way end. Behind it lies the whole question of the Behr el Ghazal, the richest prize in the Soudan.

ATE SPIDERS AND DIED.

Novel Means of Suicide of an Iowa Murderess.

Stranger than the death of Cleopatra from the sting of an asp was the death of Cora Smith, self-confessed murderess of her father, at the Anamosa, Ia., state prison. The court of the prison, where the female prisoners are allowed to take their exercise, is surrounded by high stone walls. Here the spiders come out from the crevices in the rocks to bask in the sunshine. Cora captured them, one at a time, placed them in her handkerchief and hid them in a paper bag in her cell. When she had accumulated enough, she began to eat them. A post-mortem examination revealed the cause of death.

Blanco Will Remain.

MADRID.—Senor Sagasta denies somewhat hotly that there were any difficulties with General Blanco on account of the latter's demands for money. He denied the truth of the report that General Blanco would be recalled, and said that on the contrary he would remain until the last.

Condition of Mrs. Lee Critical.

Major-General Fitzhugh Lee telegraphed Major General Greene Sunday that the condition of Mrs Lee was so critical that he could not talk business. He asked General Green to take command of the First division, Seventh corps.

Uprising at an End.

Adjutant-General Corbin Monday received the following dispatch from General Bacon indicating that the Indian uprising in Minnesota is practically at an end:

"Walker, Minn.—Adjutant-General: At council with hostile Indians today, the latter said they wanted no more fighting with United States soldiers and agreed to come and surrender on Wednesday. This is the result of their defeat when engaged with our men on the 5th."

GUARDING THE NEGRO MINERS.

Alabamians in Springfield Are Protected by Police.

All of the negro miners from Alabama, who went to work in the Chicago-Virden Company's mine at Virden, Ill., with the exception of a few who went north on the train from Springfield, are established in the headquarters of the local miners' union. Policemen are guarding the hall. The negroes number 100. It was understood that the negroes would be shipped back to Alabama, but it has not been done.

Adjutant-General Reece stated that the Federation of Miners refused to have anything to do with the transportation of the negroes from here to their homes; that the state authorities were in a quandary, because they had no authority to send them away.

FIGHTING IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Five Northern Provinces Rebel Against Aguinaldo.

A rumor at Manila says that Macabulos, chief of the five northern provinces of the Philippine islands, has rebelled against Aguinaldo, and that hard fighting has already taken place between the opposing factions. It is also reported here that General Rios, the Spanish commander at Iloilo, has sent emissaries from that place to undermine Aguinaldo's influence and induce the natives to demand that Spain retain the Philippine islands.

SICKNESS ON SULLIVAN'S ISLAND

Four Hundred Men Are Confined to Quarters.

The great amount of sickness among the enlisted men stationed at Sullivan's island, South Carolina, is causing the commandant, Colonel Rawles, much concern. During the summer many of the men were ill, and typhoid and malarial fever have almost assumed the proportions of an epidemic. At present 400 men are confined to quarters.

Progress of Evacuation.

The Spanish military commissioners in Havana delivered an official note to the American commissioners Friday, giving the number of Spanish troops shipped to Spain up to the present time at 6,617, not including those who go by the transports Montserrat and Miguel Gallart, which will take 2,200 additional men. In addition it was announced that transports to carry the entire garrisons of Gibara, Holguin and other places in those divisions will leave on October 20, 25, 26 and 30. After they have sailed, it is pointed out, half the island of Cuba will have been entirely evacuated.

American imports into China continue to increase, while those of other countries decrease.

The Summit Lumber company's large plant was destroyed by fire at Junction City, Ark. The loss is about $50,000.

J. McD. Scott & Co., wholesale shoe dealers of Pittsburg, Pa., have made a voluntary assignment. The liabilities are stated to be $200,000.

Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy have decided to respond the porte's suggested modifications in the ultimatum to the Turkish government on the evacuation of the island of Crete.

The Rt. Hon. Wm. St. John Brodrick, English under secretary of state for war, has been appointed under secretary of state for foreign affairs in succession to Lord Curzon, the new secretary of India.

It is reported that Chang-Yin-Hoan, who was recently dismissed from the tsung li yamin and from all his other offices, and banished to Illi, Turkestan, was murdered while en route to the place of exile, on a secret order from the empress dowager.

The May stock farm near Lexington, Ky., has been leased to Congressman Joseph C. Bailey, of Texas, to be used for breeding trotting horses. It is expected that Mr. Bailey will make his permanent home there.

It is the understanding at the war department that the Seventh and Eighth cavalry, now at Huntsville, Ala., will be the first troops that will go to Cuba, and it is not now expected that they will go with General Lee.

GOMEZ IS PRESIDENT.

General Commissioned to Reorganize the Cuban Army.

The Cuban Generals Maya, Madriguese and Nodaves left Havana Friday for Santa Cruz del Sur in answer to an urgent summons from the Cuban revolutionary government. It was given out here that the Cuban revolutionary ministers have commissioned these Cuban generals to reorganize the Cuban army in the eastern provinces.

It is understood that Gomez has already been elected president of the Cuban government.

Wyman in the South.

Surgeon-General Wyman, of the Marine hospital service, left Washington Friday for a trip of a week or ten days' inspection of the work in the south in fighting yellow fever. He will go direct to Cincinnati, Atlanta, Mobile, New Orleans and other points. He will confer with the state and local health authorities.

Argentine's New President.

Gen. Julio A. Roca was inaugurated president of Argentine Friday. Alcorta remains minister for foreign affairs.

FOR CONGRESS:

W. F. ALDRICH

THE peace jubilee at Chicago seems to be a howling success.

ADMIRAL Dewey is reported to be having a little scrimage with the Philippine insurgents.

Circuit Court will convene at Clanton on Monday, November 21, 1898.

BIRMINGHAM is talking of annexing the surrounding county and becoming "Greater Birmingham."

THE concensus of opinion in Chilton county seems to be against a stock law of any discription.

THE stars and stripes are floating over Porto Rico, which is now a territory of the United States.

THERE appears to be every reason to hope that Alabama will entirely escape yellow fever this year.

A FEW weeks more and the Legislature will meet, when we shall probably hear more of a constitutional convention.

TAKE a man who cannot read or write and show him how easy it is for him to mark his own ballot in the forthcoming election.

THE Peace Commissioners in Paris seem to be well matched. Both the American and Spanish commissioners know what they want, and both are trying for all they can get.

"SPEECH is silver, silence is golden." This makes Mr. Gaston A. Robbins a gold-bug sure enough, as his silence was profound during the session of Congress he had the honor of drawing the salary of the representative from this district.

WHAT's the matter with Clanton? Mr. Robbins disdainfully passed us by, and would not stop to let us enjoy and profit by one of those eloquent speeches for which he is famous (?), and now governor Johnston goes on to Jemison, ignoring the county seat. Mr. Robbins' visit to Jemison made votes for W. F. Aldrich, and no doubt the governor's visit will have the same happy result.

HON. Gaston A. Robbins, of Dallas, is a candidate for Congress from this district. We furnish this information to our readers, as the gentleman does not appear to have many friends in this county, and hear so little of him they may possibly imagine the only candidate before the people is W. F. Aldrich. To all intents and purposes he might as well be the only candidate, as he will get nearly all the votes.

WITH this issue we complete the sixth volume of THE BANNER, and beg to express our thanks to the people of Chilton county for their appreciation of our efforts to give them a good county paper. The next number will commence our seventh year, and as a large number of subscriptions become due at that time we hope to see or hear from our friends with a renewal of their subscription. New subscribers will also gladly be welcomed. Now is the time to subscribe!

THE question has been put to us, is the visit of governor Johnston to Jemison next Saturday to be made in behalf of Mr. Aldrich. We see no reason why it should not. The governor is naturally desirous of seeing the most representative man from this district returned to Congress, and few men are better aware than governor Johnston of the valuable assistance Mr. Aldrich has been, and is now, in developing the natural resources of this district. The governor is credited with having given the state of Alabama the best business administration known for many years, and also with having done much to induce men of capital to invest here and develop the natural resources of the state. It, therefore, stands to reason Gov. Johnston should be glad to aid Mr. Aldrich in his candidacy, and we welcome the governor to Chilton county to assist in the triumphant return of W. F. Aldrich to Congress.

THE Selma Times boasts that twenty years ago Mr. Aldrich's candidacy would not have been possible, and evidently laments that the high-handed proceedings of that period cannot be revived and Mr. Aldrich be driven from the district. The Times might find something better than the political methods of Dallas, which are notorious throughout the States. But it is the very fact that Mr. Aldrich has made it possible for the voters of this district to have their votes counted as cast that makes him the choice of the people and not of the professional politicians. The people have long since tired of the methods of twenty years ago and are glad there is no possibility of their return. That is why they have twice elected Mr. Aldrich to Congress and will do so again three weeks from next Tuesday.

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by J. S Johnson jr.

It is not for a moment to be supposed that the unfortunare army conditions of which complaint has been made cannot be speedily remedied. Already, under the lash of the press and the force of public opinion, the situation has greatly improved. In round numbers a hundred thousand of our volunteer troops have been mustered out of the service and have gone to their homes. We must, however, for some time to come maintain what for the United States will be considered a large army. All the flood of recent criticism, even though exaggerated at points, will have been very useful if it leads to such improvements in administration as will bring our army up to something like the standard of the navy. By this time it ought to be possible for the Government to utilize the services of men who know how to lay out out camps. It ought to be possible henceforth to give all the troops proper food. There ought to be some system of accounting for the men by which the friends of a sick soldier can trace him to the particular hospital where he has been sent. It ought to be possible to transport commissary supplies without getting everything hopelessly mixed up. It is not simply for the purpose of doing better in case of some future war that we need to take our recent experience to heart, but rather for application to immediate conditions. We shall have to maintain some troops in Porto Rico, far more in Cuba, and quite possibly still more in the Philippines than in the West Indies. Meanwhile we shall have to maintain at our military posts in this country for reserve purposes much larger bodies of soldiery than we had seen at any time since the Civil War up to the present season. It behooves us by all means, therefore, to probe all abuses and to introduce all new military reforms without delay or current uses.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for October.

Colonel W. J. Bryan writes from camp at Jacksonville, Fla., to W. H. Harvey, general manager of the ways and means committee of the Silver parties and enclosing a contribution, says: "The financiers can contribute large sums to support the gold standard, because the monopoly of money gives them great pecuniary profit. Surely we can appeal with confidence to the millions that suffer from a rising dollar and falling prices. Having brought freedom to Cuba, the American people can renew the struggle for the financial independence of the United States. Yours truly, William J. Bryan.

Governor Holcomb refuses to decide that either of the Nebraska regiments shall be mustered out. He suggests that enough men of both Bryan's regiment and the Third, which was sent to Manila, be allowed to return home to reduce each to 81 men. This returns Bryan's case to the War Department, and it is believed that his regiment will be among the first assigned to garrison duty in Cuba.

A ring of leading office holders at Washington, D. C., is urging comptroller of the currency, Dawes, to grant charters for national banks in the new colonies. High authorities maintain that such charters would be invalid under the existing National Bank Act, but these "patriots" (?), led by first assistant Post Master General Heath, are exerting a pressure that the present administration has not as yet shown its ability to withstand.

Nine of the national banks of Boston, Mass., have secured the necessary two-thirds vote of the stock holders to enable them to consolidate. Such a combine will cause stock already selling for 200 per cent and over to further appreciate. The banks of Boston are not alone in this nefarious scheme for self enrichment at the expense of the public.

Hon. Warner Miller, at a recent meeting of the Nicaraugua canal company of which he is president assumed the prophet's mantle and announced that work on the canal would begin soon after the convening of congress. Now for a grand steal!

One hundred tanneries are to be closed by the Leather Trust. This means that thousands of men will be thrown out of work at the beginning of winter and is a striking demonstration of the power of the plutocrats.

President McKinley's swinging round the circle in the middle West just now is a smooth scheme to allay criticism of the administration's war policy and to help Republican congressional candidates.

Governor Altgeld, who is out doing campaign work under the Democratic committees of various states, in his speeches unconditionally endorses fiat money—and his audiences cheer. So the educational work goes on.

The Democratic majority in the recent Georgia state election is placed at 60,000. The Populist vote has been very much reduced by reason of the contention that has taken place between the regular organization and the Tom Watson middle-of the roaders.

The recent conflict between striking coal-miners and the deputies and detectives employed by the coal operators at Virden, Ill., in which a score of men lost their lives, was caused by the attempt of the avaricious mine-owners to import negro ex-convicts from Alabama to take the place of the striking miners. So declares Governor Tanner, who promptly ordered the state militia to the scene of strife for the protection of life and property but not to aid the operators to run their mines with imported labor. The governor's stand is commendable.

Woman is the issue in the South Dakota campaign. Voters of the state will decide by the ballots they cast on November 8 whether full and equal suffrage shall be accorded to women, and whether the word "male" in the constitutional clause relating to "elections and the right of suffrage" shall be stricken from the statute books.

The assistant Republicans of Missouri, denominating themselves middle-of-the-road Populists, recently brought mandamus proceedings against the Secretary of State to force him to place their ticket on the official ballot, under the regular People's Party heading, but they have practically given up their attempt to steal the party name and are trying to get a place on the ballot by petition. Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand.

These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow. Eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides. No appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying "Electric Bitters" and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at J. S. Johnson's Drug Store.

"It seems to me," said the Spaniard, "that we should be considering plans for getting a new navy. A good navy, is the strong arm of a nation."

"I differ from you," replied the Spanish statesman. "If Spain had possessed no navy at all we might have continued the war with America indefinitely."—Truth.

MRS. JOHN WALLET, of Jefferson, Wis., than whom none is more highly esteemed or widely known, writes. "In 1899 I had a severe attack of LaGrippe and at the end of four months, in spite of all physicians, friends and good nursing could do, my lungs heart and nervous system were so completely wrecked, my life was despaired of, my friends giving me up. I could only sleep by the use of opiates. My lungs and heart pained me terribly and my cough was most aggravating. I could not lie in one position but a short time and not on my left side at all. My husband brought me Dr. Miles' Nerving and Heart Cure and I began taking them. When I had taken a half bottle of each I was much better and continuing persistently I took about a dozen bottles and was completely restored to health to the surprise of all."

is the greatest Labor Organization the world has ever seen.

It is the only organization which, while striving to secure for wage-workers the best possible terms as to wages, hours and conditions, aims at reforming the causes of industrial injustice.

It secures to each trade and locality absolute control over its own trade or local affairs, yet its perfect organization enables its members to act unitedly, promptly, and, therefore, effectively, when concentrated action becomes necessary to remedy injustice or to resist oppression.

It is pledged to work for the overthrow of the capitalistic system of production and exchange, yet, realizing that reforms can only be beneficial and permanent when they rest upon the convictions of a wise educated people, it seeks to accomplish objects only by appeals to reason and to science—never by force.

It is a secret organization only so far as secrecy is necessary to protect its members in organizing and persuasion, and can never be used to shield wrong-doing.

Its doors are open to all who labor honestly and usefully either by hand or brain, without question of color or of nation on account of race, creed or nationality.

THOUGHTLESS SHOPPERS.

One Who Lost a Clerk $500 In Sales While She "Looked Around."

"Talking about cranky shoppers," said the salesman in the jewelry and silverware store, "reminds me of a customer I had last year, two or three days before Christmas. About 11:30 one morning, just when the store was packed with shoppers, a lady came in and asked to look at novelties, also silverware. She was interested in only the expensive goods, and I took pains to show her fully our best line. Several parties whom I am accustomed to serve were in the store while she was there, but I let others wait on them and devoted my time to her. I flatter myself that I am a good salesman, and, moreover, that I can tell pretty quickly the shopper who really intends to buy that day and the shopper who is only looking around. This lady, after examining everything closely, pricing, comparing, getting my ideas and occasionally referring to the proprietor's taste as he came round, taking up an hour's time in the busiest part of the day, remarked carelessly that she had a son who was then on a hunting expedition in the south. 'He expects to be an usher for a wedding in June,' she said. 'I will write him about these things I have seen, and very likely when he comes back he will look in himself.'

"'In June, madam!' I could not help exclaiming. 'Are you looking at these things now for a wedding in June and all these people waiting to get things for the day after tomorrow?'

"'Why, yes,' she said, seemingly not a whit embarrassed. 'I thought all of your prettiest things would be out of their cases now and that it was a good time to get suggestions.'

"'Suggestions for a June wedding.' I whispered to one of the men as my customer swept out to her carriage, and then the laugh was on me, because all had expected to hear of a $1,000 sale at least. I counted up and found that I had lost exactly $500 worth of sales while that thoughtless woman was in the store.

"We have people in here sometimes who do such odd things that to tell about them sounds like exaggeration," he went on. "See this brooch?" pointing to a small gold leaf with vivid glowing berries. "We sold one like it to a lady who lives—well, not 100 blocks from here, and has the reputation of being wealthy. If those berries were rubies, the brooch would be costly, but being garnets it is worth only $40. The day after the brooch was sent to the purchaser, a tall, self collected, stern looking man came in and addressed himself to me.

"'You sold this brooch to my wife, I understand,' he said, holding out the brooch.

"'I want you to take it back and refund the money.'

"'Anything wrong about it?' I asked.

"'No. But you had no right to sell such an expensive piece of jewelry to my wife without first finding out if she bought it with my consent. I do not choose that she should buy goods all about town in this fashion; when I wish her to have personal ornaments, I will get them for her. Besides, you overcharged her because she was a woman.'

"He was so in earnest and berated me so roundly that I really felt uncomfortable, although I knew it was all ridiculous. I explained that the sale was made, that the lady had paid for the article, and that the firm did not take back goods under such conditions. He got into a towering passion, argued with me to the top of his bent, although there were other customers listening, and then, when he found that it was no go and that we would not take back the brooch, he pitched the case out through the open door into the middle of the muddy street and took himself off.

"What did we do? Why, one of our boys ran out and picked up the case from under the very feet of a cab horse. We packed the brooch carefully in a new case and sent it round to the lady's address. What was it that made the man act in that way? Crankiness, pure and simple. He is one of the kind that objects to his wife's making any disposal of his money without consulting him. He is not close fisted, either. That very Christmas he bought her a superb brooch and some other things, costing six times the amount of that little gold leaf with the garnets."—New York Sun.

Tennyson's Love For Flowers.

An elaborately illustrated article, "Tennyson and His Friends at Freshwater," by W. C. Scott O'Connor, appears in the December Century. The author says of the poet:

Willingly, he took no part in the destruction of life. His sympathy with nature led him to mourn over the cutting down of trees, as if they were, like the grove in Dante's "Inferno," the abode of his personal friends, and he never would consent to his flowers at Farringford being plucked. "I can very well remember the look on his face," Miss Weld, his niece, tells me, "when he met me one day, returning from his meadows with a wheelbarrow full of fading daffodils plucked by me with the lavish hand of a child. He gazed at them very sorrowfully and in gentle words expressed his regret that so much beautiful life had been needlessly sacrificed."

GROUND FOR EXPERIMENTS.

The area of ground that can be used for conducting a number of experiments need not be large. An acre will give sixty-four plots each 25x25 feet square, and a comparison of different crops, under various methods of cultivation, will give more practical experience and information to those interested than can be gained by many years' cultivation without regard to system or regularity.

FEEDING SHEEP ON SILAGE.

It is reported that an Australian farmer fed 14,000 sheep on silage in a year and a half. It cost him thirty-five cents a ton, and its use in time of drought saved his 8,000 sheep, worth at lowest rates $10,000. Others have carried their sheep through such a season by feeding straw cut fine and sprinkled with molasses and water. They eat it greedily and hold their condition well.

FARMERS' FRIENDS AND FOES.

The farmer is fast learning who are his friends and who his foes. In years gone by a war of extermination was continually waged against toads, bumble bees, all kinds of snakes and hornets, but now they are let severely alone when run across in field or garden. The hornet is death to all slugs and is worth more than his weight in gold out in the orchard. We would have very little clover seed if there were no bumble bees, and toads and snakes live mostly on mice, flies and insects that eat up our crops. We now have a fine black snake in our barn and have never seen so few rats and mice about the premises. The boys don't like to go into the hay mow after dark, but the orders are that his snakeship must not be molested.—Farmers' Guide.

WINTER DAIRYING.

One of the chief difficulties in winter dairying is to secure cows that will be in fresh flow of milk in the fall. The gestation of the cow is about nine months, and to secure calves in October or November the cow must be bred during the shortest days of the year, when the weather is cold and when it is more difficult than at any other time of year to bring cows in heat. It is comparatively easy to breed cows during the late spring and summer months, and to this fact as much as anything is due the great number of calves dropped in March, April and May. It is only by feeding highly nutritive foods that cows can be induced to breed during the winter months. Flaxseed meal with some oil in it is one of the best foods for this purpose. It is exceedingly nutritious, and therefore only a very little can be given at a time. It will make the cow have a glossy coat of hair, and this is the best sign that it is putting her in fit condition for breeding.

FERTILIZING SMALL FRUITS.

While as a rule fertilizers in the shape of barnyard manures and the commercial product are supplied in the spring, both with farm crops and for orchards, it has been demonstrated that in some localities, especially in the sections south of Massachusetts and north of Maryland, late summer or early fall is the best season for the application of fertilizers. This is especially true of commercial fertilizers applied to such plants as raspberries, blackberries and currants. This fall application prevents the natural tendency of the plants to ripen and shed their leaves, and induces a vigorous fall growth of cane which enables them to winter better and come out in good shape in the spring.

Barnyard manures may be applied in the late fall or indeed at any time during the winter, even when the ground is frozen. The strength of the manure will work down into the ground and be taken up by the plants as soon as growth starts in early spring. If applied late in the spring after growth is well along, it is apt to cause an unusual growth of cane at the expense of the fruit crop.

GRAPE GROWING ON LITTLE LAND.

It is surprising how little extent of earth's surface is needed to root a grape vine. If it can grow upward and have open space enough on one or two sides to get plenty of sunshine, the area in which its roots can run is matter of comparatively little importance. We have seen thrifty and productive grape vines where there was only three feet of space between a house with its cellar wall on one side and the street sidewalk on the other. As the sidewalk was made of plank, the grape roots undoubtedly extended under it. But even with this there was scarcely a space seven by twenty-five feet on the earth's surface, and this supported for years two grape vines, each of which ran up a trellis as high as the house, and bore every year fine clusters of luscious fruit at the top.

This was probably an extreme case. But is shows plainly that many whose places are small do without grapes, when if they would economize what space they have, they might have this fruit in abundance. One thing, however, must be well understood, and that is that only the south or west sides of a building can be used for grape growing. The south side is best of all if it can be had. If planted on the east side of buildings the grapes are likely to be brought forward too fast, and the foliage will be nipped by frost in the spring. The sun shining on the west walls of a building through the afternoon accumulate heat enough to keep off frost in most cases after the vine is forward enough to be in danger from it. No matter how small the space is, a trellis should be built up a little way from the wall for the vine to run on. As in most houses occupied at night, windows will open on this trellis, the warm air from rooms will make the grapes on the upper part of such a trellis ripen several days earlier than they would away from any wall. The effect of the wall is to break the force of violent winds, which nearly always carry away much more heat than they bring. It was years ago, on a trellis on the south side of a building, that we were able to ripen the Catawba grape, which would nowhere else be ripened in the open air near that locality.—American Cultivator.

FATTENING ANIMALS JUDICIOUSLY.

It has been demonstrated time and again that animals may be fattened for market at this season of the year on good grains, and the cost of the grain be easily made good by the manure, or in the increased weight of the animal, leaving the manure as net profit. In order to do this the stock to be fattened must be well selected and judiciously fed. Young animals fatten more cheaply than older ones, and the square, "blocky" animal takes on flesh more rapidly and less expensively than the long, lanky one. Food used for fattening should be well balanced; that is, contain proper proportion of nitrogenous and non-nitrogenous foods, and the feeding should be done carefully.

If bran and corn is used, feed the bran freely at first and less of the corn. As the feeding proceeds, increase the quantity of corn and decrease the bran. Coarse fodder given should be of the best. Do not force the fattening process too fast, for an animal is able to consume only a certain amount of grain and assimilate it properly. Any addition to this amount is pure waste, for a medium-weight cow or steer, for example, will make as much gain on an average of ten pounds of meal per day as on fifteen. Get the animal fattened just right, and then market it. If kept beyond the period when experience tells you it is in proper condition for the market, the additional feed given will come from the profits, as it frequently does when an attempt is made to add a few pounds weight to a hog already tipping the scale at 600 pounds.—Atlanta Journal.

HEN HOUSES.

"I am thinking of building a new hen house for a flock of from a hundred and fifty to two hundred. What do you consider the best size and plan for such a building?" "Please give plans for substantial but economical hen house." "How would a sod house plastered and whitewashed do for poultry?" are samples of questions that come to my desk.

In answering them the section of country from which they come must be considered as a factor in the construction of the buildings.

There are two or three things that must be considered in building every hen house. They must be dry, warm and large enough for the flock to be kept. All other matters in construction and ornamentation may be left to the taste and means of the builder.

The necessary cost of the poultry house will depend very much upon the price of lumber and other materials in the locality where built. To this must be added the wages paid for labor. The latter expense will be saved by a great many who keep poultry, especially those who keep a small flock upon a farm or in a suburban village, as they will do the work themselves.

As examples of the range in cost of buildings we mention one in Massachusetts for one hundred hens, where lumber and wages are high, that cost but a few cents less than $100. Another in the same state, to accommodate 500 hens, cost $400 where the owner did most of the work himself. In Ohio houses that would accommodate fifty fowls each were built at $20 apiece where the labor was paid for as well as all material bought. "Out West" a house for 100 was built with an outlay of only $10 for material. This was the only money outlay. The "material" bought was a few rough boards, nails, glass and window sash. The work was done by the owner and the other "material" that entered into the construction of the building was poles, sods and straw.

This house may have been called "handsome" if "handsome is that handsome does," for it was warm and the occupants laid right along through the severest winter weather.

Give hens "warmth" when the mercury is playing around below zero twenty to thirty degrees, and they will talk merrily and rejoice your pocket-book with high-priced eggs, regardless of the lack of beauty and "lovely" surroundings that adorn their quarters—proper feed, of course, being given them. Beauty of outside finish and architectural symmetry will not produce eggs without warmth. Bear that in mind always.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

A Wellington Anecdote.

A tailor vainly tried to make clear his identity to the Duke of Wellington. "Why," said he, "General, don't you know me? I made yer breeches." Recognition dawned in the great Duke's eyes as he cordially grasped his interlocutor's hand, and exclaimed: "Why, Major Britches, how are you?"

BILL ARP'S WEEKLY LETTER.

TIMES THAT TRIED MEN'S SOULS AND "SOLES" ARE RECALLED.

WAR INCIDENTS AND ACCIDENTS.

How the Bartow Man Assisted a Friend to Hide Out From a Provost Guard.

Only a reminiscence. The veterans do not naturally love to recall the dark side of the civil war. They do not "nurse their wrath to keep it warm," as did Tam O'Shanter's witch. They are too busy in making a living to spare much time to memories of marches and battles and hardtack and ragged clothes. But they do indulge in little war incidents and accidents when they meet a comrade and something reminds them of something. The four-year war was full of heroism and thrilling events, but I believe the aftermath, the patching up of peace, was more provoking and discouraging and of longer continuance than the war itself.

"As iron sharpeneth iron so does a man's face sharpen the face of his friend."

It is only a reminiscence that I am going to relate. I met the old gentleman yesterday, and as we grasped hands our minds and memories went back to the troubled days of 1865 when first we met, one dark and dreary night. "Who is that?" he said cautiously as I knocked at the door. "Talk low," said I; "they are after your brother to take him back to Virginia and try him for kukluxing those scoundrels. I have brought him over here and hid him in your ginhouse loft, under the straw. Don't let anybody but your wife know where he is." It was about daybreak, and the old gentleman was in his night clothes. "Lord, help us," said he. "Are you telling me the truth? Who are you? Let me light a candle." When he brought it he unlocked the door and opened it just enough for him to see my face, and for me to see him and his double-barreled gun that was near his hand. "Who are you?" he repeated. When I whispered my name he grasped my hand eagerly, for he knew that I was his brother's counsellor and friend. Hurriedly he put on his clothes, and we went a blind path to the ginhouse, which was nearly a quarter of a mile away. Not a soul was stirring; not a dog barked. "Good Lord," said he, "has it come to this. Those villains whom my brother helped to whip and made them leave the country up in Virginia were worse than the tories of the old revolution. They robbed and plundered our people, and had negroes to help them, and we appealed in vain to the yankee officers for protection. Our wives and our daughters were in continual danger, and we had to kuklux these scoundrels or leave the country ourselves."

It was in June, 1865, while I was living in Rome, that I was aroused from sleep about midnight and learned from my Virginia friend that he was in great peril, and wanted assistance and advice. A warrant had been issued for him in Virginia and sent to the federal provost marshal at Rome, and he was to be arrested in the morning and sent back for trial. He briefly related the circumstances, and told me he had a brother living in Bartow county, about eighteen miles distant, but nobody about Rome knew him, nor was his brother implicated in the kuklux business, and he might be concealed on his brother's farm somewhere until the federal soldiers left here.

"All right," said I, "go back at once and get you a change of clothing and meet me at Norton's corner." It did not take me long to hitch my horse to the little rockaway and drive down to Broad street and take him in. We took roundance on the soldiers' quarters and were soon out of town on the road to old Cassville. The night was dark and misty, but we had a good horse, and in about three hours we were nearing the farm. When opposite the ginhouse we stopped to reconnoiter. We had not passed a man on the road, nor seen a light in anybody's house. So we felt that we were safe so far. Driving out to a secluded place we hitched the horse, and then made haste for the ginhouse. The way was clear and the place comfortable.

Leaving the brothers to arrange their plans, I drove on to Cassville and thence back to Rome in time for breakfast. There was quite a stir in the town that day, for it was soon noised around that one of our citizens was wanted and could not be found. A lieutenant in blue had a squad of Dutchmen moving stealthily around as if in search of somebody. At night they watched the house from a back alley, but saw no sign. For a month or more the inquisition was kept up. His wife and son and daughter and myself and wife exchanged significant glances when we met, but there was no sign or conversation on that subject. In course of time these soldiers were withdrawn. Civil law was restored, and one morning about sunrise my friend surprised his family by walking in to breakfast. Advices from Virginia told how the prosecutor had got into trouble and left the country for his country's good.

Strange to say, the man who informed my friend about the warrant was a negro—a negro of mixed blood—a middle man, who, in those perilous and exciting times, did the utmost to keep peace and good will between the races. He was raised by the Berriens, of Savannah, and was highstoned and well educated and of good principles. The provost marshal made a confidant of him, supposing that he was on their side and frequently took his advice where there was a conflict between the whites and the blacks. But for him I would myself have been sent a prisoner to Louisville and been punished as mayor for permitting a confederate flag to be displayed one night at a play in the city hall. Those were the times that tried men's souls and soles."

How old Father Time does mellow us down. That old flag can be displayed now at a tableau and give no offense. Now we can have Confederate reunions and can build monuments to Confederate heroes and even the north pays honor and tribute to our loyalty, and the blue and the gray fight side by side in defense of our country. Time is a good doctor, but he is slow, awful slow. We fought four years, but it took longer than that to make peace. We fought four months this time, but how long it will take to make peace no man can tell.

Two thousand years ago a Latin poet wrote about a great conqueror and said he made a solitude and called it peace. I reckon that is what the Spaniards think of us. We destroyed their navy and took all their islands and call it peace. But one thing is certain: The election is over and we will now have political peace. Of course, we have all felt excited and anxious about our state elections, but happily it is all over and nobody feels aggrieved. We have a good governor and he has a good cabinet and our members of the legislature are unusually select and so our ship will sail on smooth waters unless old Satan is doing like he did in Job's day—"going to and fro in the earth and walking up and down in it." I wonder if he is doing that all the time pretty much.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

STATE NORMAL COLLEGE.

Its Twelfth Year Starts Off With Largest Enrollment in Its History—Dr. Curry's Visit.

This institution, but entering its twelfth year's existence, starts off with the largest enrollment in its history—above 500 on the attendance courses, in all departments and classes. This is due in part to the facilities for scholarships per senators and representatives in the state legislature, and the new provision for fellowships to post graduates while on a course for higher training.

Dr. Curry recently visited this college and found not only professors, teachers and pupils busy with regular work, but a large force of workmen overhauling the college buildings, repairing and adding to, or upon the campus grading, fencing and beautifying, and expressed himself as highly delighted, both with the "college work" and "college improvements." He seemed pleased to look into the faces of representatives of thirty or more Alabama counties, and of students from several other states, too, and gave assurance that Peabody fund would stand by the college in its labor and fight for "free public schools" in Alabama. The college people and citizens of Troy were greatly stirred up by his three powerful addresses in behalf of "Universal Education Under Trained Teachers" everywhere.

Dr. Curry is the prince of southern educators and his visits are an educational benediction to any institution or locality. Dr. Curry presented the Troy State Normal college with a fine portrait of George Peabody, the philanthropic founder of the fund for "Southern Education," bearing his name. Miss McMillan, art director of the college (sister to Governor-elect McMillan, of Tennessee), will paint for the new auditorium to be built a life-size portrait from this gift of Dr. Curry, so highly prized by the college people.

In no other place are Dr. Curry's visits more appreciated than at Troy, and he promises to return again next spring, to the delight of all.

Dr. Curry was given a private "Tea" at President Eldridge's home, and there met students from about twenty different counties, who gave him a most hearty reception and became his "Escorts of Honor" to the train as he left for Montgomery, Wednesday night, last.—Troy Messenger.

Wheeler in Command.

Major-General John J. Coppinger left Huntsville for Washington Friday, being succeeded in command of the Fourth corps by General Joseph Wheeler.

BRIEFLY MENTIONED.

W. P. Oden, a prominent attorney of Sylacauga, died suddenly on a train of the Central of Georgia railroad last Friday.

For the first time in sixteen years Birmingham is without telephone service, due to a fire in the exchange Friday night, which practically burned out every phone in the city.

A small wreck occurred on the Mobile and Birmingham railroad seven miles below Selma. Ten cars and the engine were derailed. The engineer was slightly bruised. A switch had been tampered with, causing the trouble.

There will be a special session of the supreme court, beginning on the 25th inst., and continuing until November 8th, at which the court will hand down opinions in decided cases, act upon applications for rehearing and transact any other business properly coming before it.

A Deserter Shot.

H. H. Dickinson, a deserter from Company B, Third Georgia regiment, was shot at Griffin, Ga., and will probable die from the effects of the wound. He was resisting arrest by a squad sent to bring him back to camp Northen.

WRECK OF THE MOHEGAN.

Over a Hundred Lives Were Lost—Machinery of Vessel Defective.

ALMOUTH, ENG.—It is certain that over 100 lives were lost by the wrecking of the British steamer Mohegan in the vicinity of the Lizard. Rumors received here showed that forty-five survivors out of 200 persons on the Mohegan were landed at Port Houstock, Cornwall, where the bodies of five dead persons have also been received. Then came the announcement that fourteen of the crew of the wrecked steamer had been found alive on the rocks near the scene of the disaster.

One of the passengers rescued by the Port Houstock life boat says that all the passengers were dining when the catastrophe occurred, though some of the children and those who were seasick were in the bunks. Suddenly the Mohegan struck with a grating noise. At first the engineers thought this was caused by coal falling down in the bunkers, but a second shock followed and the vessel began to settle.

The survivors without exception speak in the highest terms of the devotion and coolness displayed by the officers and crew of the ill-fated steamer, and declare that all were instantly at their posts when it was known that she had struck.

The perilous position of the ship was noticed on shore and a warning rocket was sent up, but it was too late then to avoid the catastrophe, which occurred so suddenly that there was not sufficient time to get all the life-saving apparatus out of the ship. The terror of the scene was indescribable—men jumped overboard in an agony of despair, and the women passengers huddled together and refused to leave the deck.

The officers remained on the bridge to the last, and many instances of sacrifice are recorded.

Steamer Was Defective.

The Mohegan, it is now said, has been an ill-fated vessel from the start. It is added that she was only bought by the transport company when its boats had been sold to the United States government during the war. She was formerly the Cleopatra, of the Wilson & Furness-Leyland line, and was bought direct from the Hull shipyard. She never ran for the Furness line and only made one voyage out and home.

OPERATORS DETERMINED.

Will Bring the Negroes to Virden and Put them to Work.

ST. LOUIS.—The fifty-seven negro men with their fifteen women and children, who were brought to St. Louis after being driven out of Virden, are being cared for by the city temporarily. The negroes desire to be taken back to Alabama, but they have no transportation.

Mr. Mills received a telegram from the Chicago-Virden Coal company at Virden, Ill., telling him to keep the fifty-seven negro miners here, the coal company to pay their expenses. The telegram said that the negroes would be kept in St. Louis until protection for them at Virden could be had and then they would be taken there and put to work in the mines at that place.

STEEL MILL PURCHASED.

Plant at Fort Payne Bought by E. N. Cullom for $80,000.

The Alabama Steel Mills at Fort Payne were purchased Saturday by E. N. Cullom, president of the Alabama Trust & Savings Company of Birmingham. The plant was sold under an order of the chancery court, the purchase price being $80,000, paid in cash and bonds of the company. The original cost of the plant is estimated at more than a quarter of a million. The machinery is of the most modern pattern, and is practically a duplicate on a smaller scale of a plant recently put in by Andrew Carnegie at Homestead, Pa. It is thought the plant will be put in operation soon.

Will Give Impetus to American Shipping.

The war regulations relating to Porto Rico have been modified by Secretary Alger so that hereafter vessels trading between the United States and Porto Rico and vessels in the coasting trade of the island are exempted from tonnage taxes. The effect of the order should be to increase over three-fold the employment of American tonnage in the Porto Rican trade.

SIXTH AT SAN JUAN.

With Band Playing the Mississippi Put into the Harbor.

SAN JUAN, P. R.—The steamer Covadonga sailed for Spain Saturday, carrying 2,500 troops.

The Reina Maria Christina sailed Sunday for Spain with Captain-General Macias and his staff on board.

The United States transport Mississippi with 800 troops on board, arrived at daybreak Saturday morning with her band playing.

The University.

The University continues to grow in numbers. The net enrollment now reaches 190. This includes about forty law students and "co-eds" and about 150 academics. The latter are very mature in the main, coming from all sections of the state. These facts and figures indicate that the University has, as it deserves, the confidence of the people of Alabama.—Tuskaloosa Times.

Masso Will Urge Disbandment.

Sevan Bartolome Masso has arrived at Manzanillo and had a conference with Colonel Ray. Sevan Masso promised to urge the disbandment of the Cuban troops.

many descendants you will have in the four thousandth year of the world's possible continuance? Do not let the grandmothers any longer think that they are retired, and sit clear back out of sight from the world, feeling that they have no relation to it. The mothers of the last century are to-day in the person of their descendants, in the Senates, the Parliaments, the palaces, the pulpits, the banking houses, the professional chairs, the prisons, the almshouses, the company of midnight brigands, the cellars, the ditches of this century. You have been thinking about the importance of having the right influence upon one nursery. You have been thinking of the importance of getting those two little feet on the right path. You have been thinking of your child's destiny for the next eighty years, if it should pass on to be an octogenarian. That is well, but my subject sweeps a thousand years, a million years, a quadrillion of years. I cannot stop at one cradle, I am looking at the cradles that reach all around the world and across all time. I am not talking of mother Eunice. I am talking of grandmother Lois.

Good or bad influence may skip one generation or two generations, but it will be sure to land in the third or fourth generation, just as the Ten Commandments, speaking of the visitation of God on families, says nothing about the second generation, but entirely skips the seconds, and speaks of the third and fourth generation: "Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the third and fourth generation of them that hate me." Parental influence, right and wrong, may jump over a generation, but it will come down further on as sure as you sit there and I stand here. This explains what we often see—some man or woman distinguished for benevolence when the father and mother were distinguished for penuriousness, or you see some young man or woman with a bad father and a hard mother come out gloriously for Christ, and make the Church sob and shout and sing under their exhortations. We stand in corners of the vestry and whisper over the matter, and say, "How is this, such great piety in sons and daughters of such parental worldliness and sin?" I will explain it to you if you will fetch me the old family Bible containing the full record. Let some septuagenarian look with me clear upon the page of births and marriages, and tell me who that woman was with the old fashioned name of Jemima or Betsy or Mehitabel. Ah, there she is, the old grandmother, or great-grandmother, who had enough religion to saturate a century.

There she is, the dear old soul, Grandmother Lois. In beautiful Greenwood Cemetery there is the resting place of George W. Bethune, once a minister of Brooklyn Heights, his name never spoken among intelligent Americans without suggesting two things—eloquence and evangelism. In the same tomb sleeps his grandmother, Isabella Graham, who was the chief inspiration of his ministry. You are not surprised at the poetry and pathos and pulpit power of the grandson when you read of the faith and devotion of his wonderful ancestress. When you read this letter, in which she poured out her widowed soul in longings for a son's salvation, you will not wonder that succeeding generations have been blessed:

This day my only son left me in bitter wringings of heart; he is again launched on the ocean—God's ocean. The Lord saved him from shipwreck, brought him to my home, and allowed me once more to indulge my affection over him. He has been with me but a short time, and ill have I improved it; he is gone from my sight, and my heart bursts with tumultuous grief. Lord, have mercy on the widow's son, "the only son of his mother."

I ask nothing in this world for him; I repeat my petition, Save his soul alive, give him salvation from sin. It is not danger of the seas that distresses me; it is not the hardships he must undergo; it is not the dread of never seeing him more in this world; it is because I cannot discern the fulfillment of the promise in him. I cannot discern the new birth nor its fruit but every symptom of captivity to satan, the world, and self-will. This, this is what distresses me; and in connection with this his being shut out from ordinances at a distance from Christians; shut up with those who forget God, profane His name, and break His Sabbaths; men who often live and die like beasts, yet are accountable creatures, who must answer for every moment of time and every word, thought and action. O Lord, many wonders hast thou shown me; Thy ways of dealing with me and mine have not been common ones; add this wonder to the rest. Call, convert, regenerate and establish a sailor in the faith. Lord, all things are possible with Thee; glorify Thy Son and extend His kingdom by sea and land; take the prey from the strong. I roll him over upon Thee. Many friends try to comfort me; miserable comforters are they all. Thou art the God of consolation; only confirm to me Thy precious word, on which Thou causedst me to hope in the day when Thou saidst to me, "Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive." Only let this life be a spiritual life, and I put a blank in Thy hand as to all temporal things. I wait for Thy salvation. Amen.

With such a grandmother, would you not have a right to expect a George W. Bethune? And all the thousands converted through his ministry may date the saving power back to Isabella Graham.

God fill the earth and the heavens with such grandmothers; we must some day go up and thank these dear old souls. Surely God will let us go up and tell them of the results of their influence. Among our first questions in Heaven will be, "Where is grandmother?" They will point her out, for we would hardly know her, even if we had seen her on earth, so bent over with years once and there so straight, so dim of eye through the blinding of earthly tears and now her eye as clear as Heaven, so full of ashes and pains once and now so agile with celestial health, the wrinkles blooming into carnation roses, and her step like the roe on the mountains. Yes, I must see her, my grandmother on my father's side, Mary McCoy, descendant of the Scotch. When I first spoke to an audience in Glasgow, Scotland, and felt somewhat diffident, being a stranger, I began by telling them my grandmother was a Scotchwoman, and then there went up a shout of welcome that made me feel as easy as I do here. I must see her.

Make it as easy for the old folks as you can. When they are sick, get for them the best doctors. Find the place for them in the hymn book. Never be ashamed if they prefer styles of apparel which are a little antiquated. Never say anything that implies that they are in the way. Make the road for the last mile as smooth as you can. Oh, my! how you will miss her when she is gone! How much would I give to see my mother! I have so many things I would like to tell her, things that have happened in the thirty years since she went away. Morning, noon and night let us thank God for the good influences that have come down from good mothers all the way back. Timothy, don't forget your mother, Eunice, and don't forget your grandmother Lois.

Mothers, consecrate yourselves to God and you will help consecrate all the ages following. Do not dwell so much on your hardships that you miss your chance of wielding an influence that shall look down upon you from the towers of an endless future. I know Martin Luther was right when he consoled his wife over the death of their daughter by saying: "Don't take on so, wife; remember that this is a hard world for girls." Yes, I go further and say, It is a hard world for women. Ay, I go further and say, It is a hard world for men. But for all women and men who trust their bodies and souls in the hand of Christ the shining gates will soon swing open. Don't you see the sickly pallor on the sky? That is the pallor on the cold cheek of the dying night. Don't you see the brightening of the clouds? That is the flush on the warm forehead of the morning. Cheer up, you are coming within sight of the Celestial City.

The Major's Experience.

From the Detroit Free Press.

One of the staunchest supporters of the deep-water way from the Great Lakes to the ocean is Major A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, a civil engineer of wide experience and considerable prominence in his profession. He was assistant engineer on the Hudson River Railroad in 1850 and has since conducted large engineering operations. He has been located in Detroit since 1851, and has a large acquaintance among the business men and citizens of this city.

Two years ago, for the first time, Major Bishop was in the hospital. For two months he had the best of medical attendance, but when he was discharged he was not like the Major Bishop of old. When asked regarding his health, he said: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight. I could not gain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks.

Major Bishop.

"I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution.

"A. C. Bishop."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this eight day of January, 1898.

Robert E. Hull, Jr., Notary Public.

The pure, powerful vegetable ingredients in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People supply the antidote for poisonous matter in the blood and add those elements needed to build up body and brains. Many diseases long supposed by the medical profession to be incurable have succumbed to the potent influence of these pills. They can be taken by young or old, being harmless in their nature, but powerful in eliminating disease.

DISCOVERIES IN LEAP CASTLE.

Eleventh Century Staircase Found in an Early English Structure.

A Birr correspondent writes that a series of interesting "finds," just discovered in the historic Leap castle, have been shown to a number of visitors. The first and most important was an eleventh century stone spiral staircase springing from the first floor level and terminating at the summit of the great tower, 100 feet high. This relic of a remote past is in a splendid state of preservation. The finely cut stone steps are laid with mathematical accuracy and are large, like the passage itself. The O'Carrolls, princes of Ely, whose chief stronghold this castle was, were all big men—in fact, a race of giants—as the fey relics of them extant attest. Hence the reason why everything about the castle is large.

The second "find" is an entrance to the guard room cut out of the rock, and which was up to the present believed to be a mass of solid masonry. Here numerous bones, coins of the reign of Edward the Confessor and other relics were found. Human bones in large quantities, flints and spear heads were also found in the extensive range of dungeons which have been brought to light beneath the castle, these curious prison-houses being rock-hewn, and their existence having been previously unknown to the owner of the castle and lord of the soil, Jonathan C. Darby. This gentleman is the descendant of the royal house of O'Carrolls of Ely, whose family have remained in uninterrupted possession of the Leap for many centuries.

The present owner, aided by Mrs. Darby, has put into a complete state of preservation the ancient chapel, an apartment twenty-five feet square and high, which is on top of the tower, and here has been discovered a very large and fine English window, which, from its great elevation, commands a view embracing eight counties. A little below this is a remarkable room, which none of the servants will enter after nightfall. It was the state bedroom of one of the princesses of Ely, who was murdered six centuries ago by her lord, and the solid oak door retains the bloodstains of the royal victim. This part of the building is reputed to be haunted, and Mr. and Mrs. Darby, who do not believe in ghosts, admit that they cannot account for the extraordinary noises that occasionally come from the death chamber of the murdered princess, and which make it nearly impossible for them to retain their female servants in their employment. The manifestations are reputed to take the form of shrieks, which resound and reverberate through the building and set all the dogs in the kennel whining and barking.—Leeds Mercury.

Kind of a Wife He Wanted.

An advertisement which appeared in a recent edition of a Japanese paper published at Waisan, Korea, deserves to be rescued from oblivion. It ran as follows: "A bachelor, 27 years old, without wealth, of quiet disposition, living on a reasonable monthly income, and having but little parental restrictions, desires to be married to a lady possessed of the following qualifications: 1. She must be 21 years of age and of good health; 2. Of more than average beauty; 3. A working knowledge of arithmetic; 4. A working knowledge in sewing; 5. Not given to much talk; 6. Possessed of some property; 7. Virtuous; 8. Hater of liquor; 9. Have little or no parental restriction.

Enjoying an Earthquake.

According to the Argonaut, a lady—"an old lady," to quote the Argonaut literally—having returned to Michigan after a visit to California, was asked by one of her neighbors if she had experienced an earthquake. "Yes," said the lady, "we had one, a pretty severe one, and I rather enjoyed it. You see it was the first thing that has happened since John and I married that he didn't think I was to blame for."

The cakes of Ivory Soap are so shaped that they may be used entire for general purposes, or divided with a stout thread into two perfectly formed cakes for toilet use. For any use put to, Ivory Soap is a quick cleanser, absolutely safe and pure.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

GERSTLE'S Female Panacea

Cures All Diseases of Women.

MANY women are under the impression that the diseases peculiar to their sex are natural and incurable because so many suffer constantly from them. This is a mistake. Few women are so badly diseased that they cannot be cured. It is true, that had they taken a remedy that was efficient when the first symptoms of disease appeared, a more rapid cure would have been the result. No woman should neglect herself. When the monthly period becomes too frequent, painful, profuse, obstructed, or irregular in any way, or if she suffers from falling of the womb, whites, or any other female trouble, she should at once resort to the use of

It matters not if other remedies have been tried and proven failures—Gerstle's Female Panacea will not fail. If there is any tendency to costiveness, indigestion or biliousness, move the bowels gently with a few mild doses of St. Joseph's Liver Regulator. If your druggist does not keep these medicines write us and we will send them to you, all charges paid, upon receipt of price. Panacea, $1.00 per Bottle. WINE OF CARDUI

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. I. ADDISON, M.D., Cary, Miss., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it a most excellent preparation for female troubles."

Bessemer, Ala., Oct. 25, 1898

Editor BANNER—Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to reply to those wanting stock law, bull and boar law, road law, and school law. I will say to my dear people of Chilton county I have lived in Macon county, Ala., where they had stock law and it just means poor men and no stock, and I ask each of you never to vote for stock law. I am in favor of the road law; I know there are no public roads in Chilton, for I have lived in Jefferson county two years now and I have seen two mules pulling 22 oak ties, hauling them 7 and 8 miles. We have what is known as macadamised roads here; they are built and kept up by contract; people are taxed to pay this contractor and I have ever been in favor of working roads by taxation and convict system.

And now I will say a little about the boar and bull law. I think people have but very little to do or say when they say we want these laws. I say there is no law or statute that prohibits anyone from buying fine stock, and I think it a question uncalled for, and I will ask every reader of the Banner if I am not right. I think it would be better if every one writing about this would take his family to Sunday-school and to church and devote the same time in serving God, and call his family up round the family altar, and have family prayer and teach his children that there is a blessed Redeemer and keep them to be ready when they are called from this world of trouble. So I will close hoping to hear from someone in next issue.

Yours truly,
DOLL HILL.

Jemison.

Governor Johnston spoke at Jemison on 22d inst. to a fairly good number, yet it is surprising that the governor of the great state of Alabama called no more out. We were compelled to excuse Mr. Johnston in useing the pronoun "I" so much, considering it took that to explain all the favors he has administered to his beloved people in regard to curtailing expenses and minutely looking after things in general as a business man will, etc. We did wish to ask him one question when he said he had sugar and coffee and lightbread withheld from the convicts. What we wish to know is this: If our economical governor should possibly have a brother or son in prison would he move to have a hot cup of coffee of mornings withheld from them, to say nothing about sugar and lightbread? It seems to be possible for economy to be pushed to extremes. It would look better in the eye of God, whose wise cognisance and music would dispense a more correct equilibrium in humanity. What a precious jewel consistency is, it nourishes righteousness and grace. In regard to economy there cannot be too much weight of admiration for that, provided the scales are right etc.

Again, the governor said, "a good Populist," or Populite he called them, "was simply an over ripe Democrat." May the good Lord increase the number of over ripe Democrats. Yes, let them develop and ripen by the thousands, until purification and salvation takes the place of present conditions. All honor to the governor where it is due. We should not fail to ask some friend to teach the governor the principles and design of the initiative and referendum, as he seemed rather dull of comprehension in what we deem to be the saving grace. He alluded to the last Populist platform having engrafted the initiative and referendum. He failed to state that the great state of Illinois has engrafted these planks in their platform. We admire hearty confessions on important matters.

We are glad to note the generosity and kindness of Hon. L. H. Reynolds who met governor Johnston at the depot, and took charge of him, carrying him in a double team buggy to Thorsby in ample time for the governor to speak according to appointment. We feel certain that Mr Reynolds is one of the over ripe Democrats. On their return from the town of Thorsby the governor was escorted to the hotel for dinner. Hon. L. H. Reynolds would have happily took him to his own beautiful home but for some afflictions in his family.

Singing at Salem.

The citizens of East Chilton and surrounding neighborhoods met Sunday at Salem church for an all day exercise in vocal and instrumental music. At the regular time we had a sermon on music by Rev. J. H. Thomas. The discourse was an eloquent pictragal of the importance of music in religious assemblies. "Praise," says the Psalmist David, "is comely," and also he claims" oh that men would praise God for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men." How dry and ineffectual for good would be our worship without the inspiration of song, thus banning adoration to the Great Giver of every good and perfect gift. "The man," says the poet, "that hath not music in his soul is fit only for stratagems, treasons and spoils." Even the lower order of animals have been made to dance with delight at the concord of sweet sounds. We are told that the spheres in their revolutions chant heavenly music to the great Creator who dispenses blessings to all His creatures. There is nothing so indispensible to the enjoyment of the christain as to be able to sing correctly. Let the children be taught to sing and it will be not only an ornament to their lives but add much to their usefulness and happiness. These periodical gatherings to improve the youth in our communities in the art of vocal music can but redound to the spiritual uplifting of the soul and ultimately to the glory of God. If then, our meeting together for a good purpose eventuates in moral benefit to all concerned, let us persevere in our benevolent work.

At 10:30 a.m. organization was consumated. W. H. Robinson was chosen chairman and Walter Kendrick secretary. The committee men were R. F. Grant, D. S. Robinson and T. J. Bates. After which a short prayer by N. J. Jones. The singing was conducted by the following leaders N. J. Jones, Thomas Pyron, J. S. Jones, W. H. Robinson and T. L. Robinson and Misses Tempie Grant, Martha Pyron, Dora Robinson and Queenie Grant, four beautiful young ladies serving as organist. We thank the dear people of Salem for their hospitality shown to visitors.

Respectfully,
WALTER KENDRICK, Sec.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at Dr. J. S. Johnson's Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1. Guaranteed or price refunded.

There is an excuse for lazy men in the politics of China or Russia or some other semi-somnolent state, but there is no excuse for it here. This is that blessed home of dear bought freedom, where the voice and power of the individual cannot be suppressed—a country where the rewards of political effort come to the active ones, whether they be good men or bad. In so vast a country it is not well nor necessary that we should all agree as to methods, but we must agree as to means in conducting its affairs—those means include at the very outset to every man a vote, and back of every vote a conscience.

Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin

"When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine in the first place; what experience tells you is best to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. Theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But if you can get Dr. Inclination, Dr. Experience and Dr. Reason to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition. PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

CLANTON, - ALABAMA

Perhaps the Czar of Russia is just as eager for universal peace as he pretends to be, but he will probably continue to build warships and enlarge his battalions as rapidly as ever. The dream of peace will in no way retard the preparations for war.

Queen Wihelmina's proclamation upon the occasion of her accession to the throne of Holland is modest, womanly and dignified. It merely confirms the opinion hitherto expressed, namely, that Wihelmina is by all odds the nicest girl now engaged in the reigning business anywhere in the world.

The practice among nations of exacting money from a conquered foe is, in its present form, somewhat modern. In ancient times the victor despoiled the enemy he had overcome, sacked cities, and took whatever of value he could carry away. Now he respects private property, but he usually makes the conquered nation pay the whole cost of the war. In either case the practice is analogous to that of civil courts, which assess costs upon the defeated party.

The Japanese, it appears, have not a little poetry in their souls, as they give their warships such pretty names as "Daybreak," "Darkening Clouds," "Evening Mist," and "Will o' the Wisp." This is rather more sensible than the English custom of naming their small vessels after insects, while they bestow upon their huge ironclads alarmist names that may be supposed to strike terror into the hearts of their foes. It is a pity that Americans are not more partial to the fine old Indian names that abound in different parts of the country.

According to the Post-Express of Rochester, N. Y., that city is felicitating itself over a remarkable decrease in mortality during the last few years, especially among children, and is pluming itself over being the healthiest city in the state. The official figures show a decrease for the month of July in the mortality of children under five years from 175 in 1887 out of a population of 120,000 to 58 in 1898 out of a population of 180,000. The Post-Express attributes this gratifying exhibit to the liberal appropriations made by the city to maintain the standard quality of milk, and the efforts of the physicians to arrest the havoes of tuberculosis.

John E. Kehl, United States consul at Stettin, tells why the German farmer is prosperous despite the fact that he has poorer land and less land than his American brother, and no labor-saving machinery worth the mention. Co operation is the secret of his success He has co-operative credit banks, co operative dairies, co-operative steam plows, and co-operation in drainage and irrigation, in both of which he is an expert. He is also an intensive farmer, and gets out of the ground pretty much everything which it is capable. Farm laborers get thirty-five cents a day, with a small house to live in and a half-acre of land to cultivate for their own use. In harvest seasons they get fifty cents a day.

In an article written for the Lumberman by B. F. Seymour attention is called to the almost unlimited variety of uses of which the red cypress is susceptible, principally for house work, inside and outside. For natural beauty of appearance, the red cypress of Louisiana is especially notable, and is extensively used by manufacturers for all descriptions of cisterns, tanks, tubs, for brewery, creamery, and similar applications, and for durability and strength, cannot be equalled in the case of large railroad tanks. Car builders and railroad companies have long been partial to this material for siding and roofing on box freight cars. It possesses the advantage of taking and holding paint in a degree equal to white pine, being also free from pitch or gum. When used for outside work, including bevel siding, porch floors and columns, step planks, gutters, etc., it is more durable than any other wood in use.

Families Badly Mixed.

On Butler Taylor's farm bantam chickens and quails are mixed. The quail hen hatched chickens and the bantam is the proud mother of a covey of little quails. The little chickens followed the quail mother off into the copse and are as wild as real quails. The bantam's little quails deport themselves in the yard and coop the same as regulation chickens.—Carrollton (Ky.) Democrat.

DELAY IN CUBAN EVACUATION

Task Imposed Upon the Spaniards Beyond Their Ability.

CANNOT LEAVE IN TIME SPECIFIED.

The American Commission Has Not in Any Sense Abated the Pressure Being Brought to Bear Upon the Dons to Leave the Island.

WASHINGTON.—(Special.)—It is now certain that the complete evacuation of Cuba will be delayed beyond the period originally fixed by the administration. This will follow entirely without reference to anything that has occurred in Paris before the peace commission.

The war department has about satisfied itself that the task imposed upon Spanish authorities, namely, the removal and transportation to a great distance by sea of about 120,000 soldiers, sick and well, with their accoutrements, was beyond the ability of the Spaniards.

The magnitude of the task is shown by the fact that the great Trans-Atlantic Steamship lines crossing the Atlantic from New York, all combined, in prosperous seasons, could transport only about 50,000 persons in one year—less than one-half the number that the Spanish officials with their poor facilities were expected to transport in about ten weeks.

Delay in the evacuation of Cuba will cause a delay in the relinquishment of sovereignty by the Spaniards over the entire island, which was set for December 1.

It is not to be understood from this that the American military commission is in any sense abating the pressure it has brought to bear upon the Spanish military commissioners to secure the evacuation of the island and the relinquishment of sovereignty of Spain. On the contrary, they have redoubled their efforts to secure these objects, but are not disposed to insist upon the performance of impossible tasks, and their demands will be largely shaped by their knowledge, but the Spaniards are acting in perfectly good faith in their efforts to carry out the terms of the protocol.

FRENCH MUST LEAVE FASHODA.

Britons Hope the Egyptian Question Won't Lead to War.

LONDON.—Government circles here are apparently satisfied that the Fashoda question will not lead to war. At the same time the assertion is reiterated not to budge from the position which has been taken up, no matter what the outcome may be. It is said on good authority that the government has also determined not to brook unreasonable delay, and that in the event of France declining to evacuate Fashoda the Marchand party will be removed from that place, although it is not expected that it will be necessary to resort to such extremes.

BUBONIC PLAGUE IN VIENNA.

Physician Who Attended Victim Exhibits Symptoms of Fatal Malady.

VIENNA.—Dr. Mueller, the physician who attended Herr Barisch, the assistant in Professor Nothnagle's bacteriological establishment, who contracted the bubonic plague while assisting in cultivating the plague bacillus, and who was buried with remarkable precautions, is himself seriously ill, exhibiting every symptom of the fatal malady. There has been no improvement in condition of the two nurses who attended Herr Barisch. The symptoms of one are already pronounced hopeless.

Bank Bookkeeper Comes to Grief.

It has developed that Charles G. Henning, an individual bookkeeper at the Bank of Louisville, is a defaulter in a sum ranging between $8,000 and $10,000, and that he has fled from the city. Henning's downfall is said to be due to wine, women and a broken engagement with a St. Louis girl.

Damages for Lynching.

The circuit court in session at Urbana, O., has handed down a decision in the case of Ben Church against Champagne county for $5,000 damages. The suit grows out of the lynching of Click Mithell two years ago, and the verdict gives the nearest of kin $5,000.

Race Riot in Texas.

A special from Fort Worth, Tex. says: Trouble between whites and blacks over politics has culminated in a fight in which Hope Adams, independent candidate for sheriff, and leader of the independent movement against the white men's union association, was shot and killed. McKINLEY TALKS IN TWO STATES.

President Crosses Indiana and Ohio on His Return Trip.

CINCINNATI, O.—One continuous ovation marked the passage of President McKinley over the states of Indiana and Ohio. Defying the wind and rain of a most disagreeable October day, the citizens of these states congregated in great numbers at every station along the line, and never were they disappointed, for the president graciously appeared at every point where the crowds awaited his coming to speak a few words.

Perhaps the most imposing demonstration of the day was at Indianapolis, where the streets through which the president was driven to the state house were jammed with cheering people. Here, on the steps of the state capitol, almost within the shadow of the statue of Thomas A. Hendricks, the president delivered one of the most striking and eloquent addresses of his long western tour. In the course of it he paid grateful tribute to the memory of Hendrics, and referred also to ex-President Harrison, both of which references were received by the people with deafening applause.

At Connorsville, Ind., a 2-months-old baby was handed over the railing of the rear platform into the arms of Secretary Wilson, who presented it to the president, his youngest namesake, William McKinley.

CHINESE REBELS BEHEADED.

Ten Thousand People Witness the Decapitation.

According to the latest advices by mail from China, eight subordinate leaders of the Kwang-ski rebellion have been beheaded at Wuchow. The heads were carried in baskets through the principal streets as a warning spectacle, amidst the laughter and jeers of men, women and children. Ten thousand people witnessed the decapitation and made it a gala day. Little children copied their parents, who joked at the dying rebels a second before the ax fell. When it was all over the children played among the headless, bleeding corpses and made sport with the black, disfigured heads. Mandarins and headsmen improvised a sort of May-pole, and the heads of the rebels were placed on top in tiers, the children dancing around them. The governor advised the mandarins to make the beheading as festive as possible, so as to inspire disgust with the rebels in the hearts of the people. A banquet was afterward held.

STORM IN SOUTHERN TEXAS.

Much Damage Done to Cotton—Building Demolished—A Railroad Smash-up.

The wind and electrical storm which swept over Texas was very severe in South Texas. Damage to cotton is enormous. Damage to cotton is enormous. At Deer Park, twenty miles from Houston, the residence of C. E. Adams was demolished. At Pasadena the residence of John Stout was wrecked and the six occupants were injured. At Missouri City a number of freight cars were blown from the siding out on the main track. The California express, running forty miles an hour, dashed into the cars at full speed. George Johnson, of San Antonio, the engineer, was killed. None of the passengers were hurt.

Farmer Accidentally Killed.

Wednesday, near Nicholson, Jackson county, Georgia, an old farmer named Hunt met a tragic death. He was driving his wagon along the road and was sitting high up on two bales of cotton. The wagon struck a stump and pitched the old man off. His head and body struck a stump with great violence. His skull was crushed and several ribs were broken. Death ensued in a few hours.

LAWS TO GOVERN SANTIAGO

General Wood Defines Rights of Cubans Under American Rule.

PROCLAMATION IS VERY CLEARLY STATED.

Every Right of the Citizen is Protected in the Courts—Right to Worship God According to Conscience is Guaranteed to Every Individual.

SANTIAGO.—General Wood, military governor pro tem of the department of Santiago, Friday issued a proclamation in ten sections, which is a sort of declaration of independence. The first articles guarantee to the people the right of assembly for the common good and to apply to those in power by petition or remonstrance for the redress of grievances.

The second section guarantees the right to worship God according to individual conscience, provided there is no interference with any existing form of worship.

The third section directs that courts of justice shall be open to all and that no private property shall be taken by the government without compensation.

The fourth section, dealing with criminal trials, invests the accused with the right to be heard himself or by counsel, and to have compulsory process to secure the attendance of a witness in his behalf.

The fifth section says no person accused of crime shall be compelled to give evidence against himself.

The sixth section declares that no person who is once accused of the charge brought against him shall be tried again for the same offense.

The seventh section provides that all persons charged with crime shall be entitled to bail, except in cases of capital offense, and that the writ of habeas corpus may not be suspended except the commanding general of the department deems it advisable.

The eighth section says that excessive bail shall not be required, and that no excessive fine or unusual punishment shall be inflicted.

The ninth section provides that in order to secure the people against unreasonable search there shall be first established under oath a presumption of guilt.

The tenth section guarantees to all the right to write or print freely on any matter, subject to responsibility for abuse of right.

The municipal laws are to be administered in accordance with these declarations of rights, subject to modifications, which, in the judgment of the commanding general, would be beneficent, and promote the principles of enlightened civilization.

HARD FIGHTING IN TRANSVAAL.

Tribe Rebels Against the Government and Troops Are Called Out.

PRETORIA.—Serious trouble is brewing with the Magato tribe in the Zoulpansberg district, south of the Limpo river. The natives recently massacred a Lutheran missionary and his family at the town of Zoulpansberg and the Transvaal government sent an expedition to punish them. The affair has now assumed serious proportions. Chief Opefu, with 20,000 followers fully armed, with four cannon, supplied by white traders, has attacked the Laager.

The ultimatum of the commanding officer of the Transvaal troops, General Joubert, demanding an unconditional surrender, has been ignored by the tribesmen and he has summoned 3,000 burghers to re-enforce the 5,000 now in the field.

Anarchy in Philippines.

Well authenticated reports have reached Manila of a terrible state of anarchy in the southern Philippines. The Spaniards there are cooped up in the principal towns. The Americans continue capturing the rebel vessels as they arrive at Cavite. Two have been captured this week.

Want the Colored Cavalry.

The Philadelphia peace jubilee committee has telegraphed General Wheeler requesting him to allow the Tenth cavalry, colored, to be sent to Philadelphia to participate in the parade. The committee offers to pay all expenses incurred by the regiment during the trip.

No Battle at Manila.

The sensational Spanish report of a naval battle between Admiral Dewey's vessels and the insurgent navy in the Philippines is received with absolute incredulity in both the navy and war departments. If there has been any recent action, Admiral Dewey has failed to mention it, and neither General Otis nor United States Consul Wildman have regarded it as worthy of notice.

Steam has been raised on the City of Mobile at Mobile in order to try her machinery. The test proved all to be in perfect order. It will soon be plying the waters of the Alabama.

Bought Land in Cuba.

An American syndicate, representing Detroit capital, has purchased a large tract of land at Manzanillo, Cuba, which contains several good iron mines.

ANNEXATION IN FAVOR.

Majority of Philippine Insurgents Voted to Become a Part of the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The United States transport Rio De Janeiro, which arrived here Saturday, brought advices to the Associated Press, dated Manila, September 22.

The Philippine chiefs have been in session since September 15. The first thing decided was that the Philippine republic should not countenance any policy that should be agreed upon whereby Spain would have anything further to do with the islands and would resist by force of arms any such measure. A vote was taken on the policy of annexation to the American republic and annexation was decided upon by a large majority, some seven out of eight voting in favor of it. Aguinaldo now expresses himself as personally in favor of annexation, adding that he does not think that the natives generally will support such a policy.

When interviewed by the Associated Press representative on September 11, Aguinaldo stated that his army consists of 37,000 insurgents, regularly armed and equipped with modern weapons, and that he had some 9,000 prisoners of war at this time, including the larger portion now being held in the vicinity of Manila. He stated that an army of 100,000 could easily be raised to fight for the cause of independence, adding that "the whole population is willing to fight for the cause of independence, and will oppose any European power taking possession."

When asked how it was that so many natives openly declare themselves in favor of annexation to America, he stated that the natives who profess to favor annexation are insincere.

He expressed himself as entertaining the greatest friendship for the American people, adding that he hoped there would be no trouble between the republic of the Philippines and America.

ANTI-AMERICAN CAMPAIGN

Is Being Waged by the Cubans—Abetted by Spaniards.

HAVANA.—The Cuban general, Rego, has arrived from Puerto Principe and is preaching in the Havana cafes and the insurgent camps near the city a holy war against the Americans. He has interviewed many of the leaders of the Cubans, and has urged the carrying on of war against the Americans if independence is not at once granted to Cuba. The Cuban colonel, Torriente, has also arrived at Havana from the east, and is carrying on a strong campaign against the Americans and Calixto Garcia, whom he professes to look upon as a traitor to the Cubans and as bribed by American gold.

A secret circular has been sent to the presidents of all the Cuban patriotic committees denouncing a large number of Cubans who are looked upon as traitors to the cause of Cuban independence and are charged with being attached to the Americans.

The Spanish colonel, Cervera, military governor of Mariano, advises the Cubans not to surrender their arms, and to make resistance until the independence of the island is declared. Colonel Cervera is an intimate friend of General Parrado, president of the Spanish evacuation commission.

INSURGENTS BECOME DESPERATE

A Menacing Attitude Is Assumed by the Philippinos and Trouble Is Ahead.

MANILA.—The commission of Spaniards sent here recently by General Rios, Spanish chief representative in the Philippines, and governor-general of the southern portions of the archipelago, arranged a temporary commercial convention. Accordingly, traffic was resumed, but it is now again interrupted, this time by order of General Rios. The steamer San Nicolas, which left Manila flying the American flag, was compelled to return by a Spanish gunboat, whose commander offered as a plea for his action that the crew consisted of Filippinos who might smuggle contraband articles. The San Nicolas, after reporting her experience, sailed again, followed by the United States gunboat McCulloch.

The insurgent schooner Mauriola entered Manila harbor flying the insurgent flag, which was promptly hauled down by the Americans.

The attitude of the insurgent troops has become very menacing. Their supplies are growing scarce and they are becoming desperate. Their leaders assure the troops, who have had no pay for months, that they will soon capture Manila. The Philippine newspapers insist upon absolute independence, and denounce annexation to the United States or an American protectorate with equal energy. The American authorities, naval and military, are taking precautionary measures, although no immediate battle is anticipated.

Chinese Emperor's Affliction.

The emperor of China is believed to be afflicted with an incurable kidney disease, though it is probable that he will linger for a considerable time.

Alabama's Crop Conditions.

The crop report for October shows a slight falling off in the cereal condition throughout the United States, as compared with October, 1897. The average yield of bushels per acre and average conditions of the crops of Alabama on October 1 were as follows: Oats, 16.8; rye, 11.1; corn, 95 per cent; cotton, 76 per cent; Irish potatoes, 71 per cent; tobacco, 87 per cent, sweet potatoes, 96 per cent; sorghum, 97 per cent; sugar, 99 per cent; rice, 95 per cent; apples, 67 per cent.

RAILROAD WRECK

Freight Train Breaks in Two—Four Killed.

A wreck on the Rock Island near Fort Worth, Tex., resulted in the death of five men. Three others die and two are seriously injured. A freight train broke in two at the foot of a steep grade. The rear portion could not be stopped, and ran into the front section, wrecking and derailing several box cars. In the wreck cars were telescoped, evidently stealing a ride. Five of the men were instantly killed and three others died. Two escaped fatal injuries.

UNFORTUNATE POSITION

Spaniards Daily Commit Acts Against Protocol.

The American commission at Havana is placed in an unfortunate position. The Spanish government, it is alleged, daily commits some act in violation of the terms of the protocol, the legality of which is doubtful, such as the removal of guns or other government property, against which all the American commission can do is to protest, which it does regularly, only to see the protests ignored.

...ion in so busy in the last ...supplying its own market ...entered into full com... ...the other nations of the ...China trade. Japan has ...considerable home market to ...supply, and it is to this market that her energies will be devoted principally for the next decade. The Japanese, however, are well aware of the commercial opportunities of China and the advantages which will result to the nation first occupying the ground. As they are the shrewdest people of the eastern world, the readiest to adapt themselves to European customs, the most skillful workmen and the best traders, they have amply earned the title of the Yankees of the Orient.

Russia will not enter into competition in manufactures for many years to come, but in other lines her competition is to be dreaded by Americans, possibly more than all the other nations combined. Russia has vast wheat fields, the products of which she will be enabled by the new Trans-Siberian railroad, with its connections, to lay down at the doors of the Chinese as far south as Pekin, and, by means of the new American railroad, so far as Canton. By the same means she will be enabled to transport the products of her iron mines and coal mines and her oil wells, and, by exerting her power, force the Chinese to admit them at the lowest rate of import duty. Already Russian petroleum has begun to undersell American oil, and between the Russian and Sumatran oils American oil is apt to be forced out of the market entirely. Although 1897 was a bad year for import and export trade of China, the importation of oil increased 32,000,000 gallons. In 1894 the importation of American oil amounted to 51,000,000 gallons, of Russian oil to 17,000,000, and of Sumatran oil only 500,000 gallons. In 1897 the importation of American oil had fallen off to 48,000,000, while that of Russian oil had increased to 36,000,000 gallons and that of Sumatran oil to 14,000,000.

When one stops to think of the immensity of the Chinese market which still is yet untouched by European commerce, one is lost in wonderment. The most conservative estimate of the population of China is 400,000,000 souls. China proper is about 1,475 miles in length and 1,355 miles in breadth, and contains an area of 1,348,870 miles, covering a territory in which the tea plant and the cocoon are produced at one extreme and fur-bearing animals at the other. At present its agricultural resources have been only slightly developed, so far as commercial purposes are concerned, although, owing to the density of the population, it has been necessary that every available foot of territory should be highly cultivated. The mineral wealth of China, which is vast, has practically never been touched. Although, owing to the great population and the cheapness of living, manufacturing in China could be carried on at less expense than anywhere else on the globe, and the raw materials, such as cotton, silk and iron, are right at hand, manufacturing as we know it has never been undertaken in China, and the day must come when the primitive handloom must give way to the machinery driven by steam and electricity.

The density of the population and the possibility of the agricultural and mining resources of interior China not only guarantee that railroads will be extremely profitable, but offer the greatest field in the world for electric railroads, which could run from town to town and village to village, forming a system which could be spread all over China like a network. The building of such roads would keep armies of Chinamen employed for years and would furnish work for millions of American mechanics. Thousands of steam engines, freight cars and locomotives, millions of tons of rails, hundreds and thousands of miles of wire, thousands of electric motors, a million street cars and other accessories would be needed for this purpose alone. The opening up of China would soon be followed by the adoption by the Chinese of American customs, as has been the case in Japan. This alone means millions and millions of dollars' worth of trade to America.

Notes.

A colony of 3,000 Russians will settle in the Canadian Northwest.

Experiments made in Paris show that an electric wagon costs forty-seven per cent less to run than a horse wagon and thirty-two per cent less than a petroleum motor.

So far this year 75,240 acres of land have been taken up in the Swan river district of Manitoba for settlement. This district is just being opened by the extension of the Dauphin railway.

The employes of the Rankin rod mills, at Pittsburg, have been breaking records for rod production. Recently the day turn made 410 tons of finished rods in 10 hours, which broke the record of any mill in this country for the same length of time. The night turn surpassed the day turn's record by six tons, and later the day turn produced 425 tons.

The largest cargo ever carried on the lakes was taken last week by the schooner Roebling of the new iron ore fleet from the docks at Duluth. It consisted of 7,865 net tons of ore. The vessel was towed by the steamer Stevenson of the same fleet, which also towed the schooner Nasmyth, the combined cargo of the three vessels being 19,761 net tons, the largest tonnage ever drawn by one engine on the lakes.

Municipal ownership of electric light plants is one of the phases of progressive city government that have shown marked development in Maryland during the past few years. It is now being agitated in Hagerstown, where the municipal authorities have declined to renew a 10-year contract with a private electric light company, and the people are considering the feasibility of purchasing a municipal light plant.

He Can't Change the Issue.

NOT MONEY ENOUGH.

ALTGELD HITS MONEY POWER IN VITAL SPOT.

They Can't Get Over the Argument That There Is Not Enough Money to Keep the People at Work, and Thereby Stimulate Enterprise and Invention.

Do we want the civilization of the Portuguese, for they have the gold standard? The truth is that there are many things which determine the civilization of a nation, the most important of any being climate; and I apprehend that there is no danger of bringing the climate of Mexico to the United States. But these silver-standard nations, compared to their former condition of five years past, are marvelously advanced. In the last five years the exports of Mexico have increased more than 50 per cent. The number of manufactures in Japan and Mexico have more than doubled, and the railroad building in every silver-standard country has been increasing enormously, while in the gold standard countries, instead of an increase of manufactures, there has been, during these five years, a shutting down and closing of them to an extent unknown before in the history of the nation. It is true that on account of the famine in India, the shortage of crops in Europe, and the war between the United States and Spain there has, in the last eighteen months, been an upward tendency in the price of some commodities, but when conditions become normal the same low prices must again prevail. These silver-standard countries, by reason of the increase in their commerce and manufactures, are in need more and more of a greater circulating medium, and consequently it becomes pertinent to inquire whether nations having such need for increase of money can easily yield up any quantity of money they have now for the purpose of bringing it to our mints for coinage into American dollars. When we look into the monetary statistics of those countries, we are struck with the fact that they have entirely too small a circulating medium for their own use to be able to part with any of their money. Mexico has a circulating medium of but $4.71 per capita, Japan but $4.09 per capita, the Central American states but $3.78 per capita and China but $2.08 per capita, while the United States have a circulation, according to the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, of $24 per capita, and France has a circulating medium of nearly $40 for each inhabitant. Is it possible that those silver-standard countries with a shortage of circulating medium now would be willing to part with that circulating medium in order to flood the United States with silver? Why, if Mexico should send all her silver here, it would be but a bagatelle. The total circulating medium of Mexico in 1895 was but $50,000,000, and that is only about one-fourteenth part of the demand caused by the withdrawal of the $696,000,000 of gold.

JOHN P. ALTGELD.

UNCLE IKE ON THE PEACE JUBILEE.

Yes, I noticed in your sermon on the endin' of the war,
That you think that jubilatin 'is the proper caper for Our great nation to be cuttin'; and you say that you don't see Why some people are opposin' the Chicago jubilee.

I suppose you meant me, Parson; Deacon Jones says I'm the one,
And I'm ready when the shoe fits to set down and put it on;
So I'll up an' tell you, Parson, jist what's ailin' Uncle Ike,
And jist what he thinks about it and and the things that he don't like.

I've been readin' in the papers what they're goin' to have to eat,
And when I took up that program I own up that I felt beat;
I've been readin' of the papers somethin' over sixty yeat,
And when all that I could master was four words I did feel queer.

But on furder down the column, writ in plain United States,
I found out jist what's the matter, and jist why the price of plates
Figgers up to fifteen dollars; it's a furrin fandango,
So the program must be furrin—plain American don't go;

And the wine from royal cellars of the European kings,
And the dresses made in Paris and the other furrin things
Shows that them that runs this country, them that boss in war and peace
Are a set of furrin barons living' here jist for to lease

Out their lands and other interests to a set of native fools
Who are glad to have the honor to be cheap and handy tools
For the buildin' up of fortunes that are mostly spent abroad;
And I somehow can't help thinkin' that we're on the downward road.

When I read that in this country sich a feast was never spread,
That the ball-togs of the women fetched from Europe for to shed
Royal glory on our nation are the finest ever seen
And will make all former frolics common, low and cheap and mean,

And then think of starvin' families of our soldiers out of jobs
And the millions of our workmen that this furrin power robs
Of their wages; then their claimin' all the credit for the war
Sounds a heap like Betsey's husband tellin' how he killed the "bar"!

Parson, I believe in eatin' and can always make a hand
At the table, but I tremble for the fate of this fair land
When our haughty furrin rulers lay Belshazzar in the shade
With their feastin', while the people see the wealth that they have made

Bein' squandered jubilatin', by a horde that loafs around
While the half of them is homeless, ownin' not a foot of ground,
And dependin' on the loafers for a beggar's chance to earn
Jist enough to keep from starvin', making that their main concern,

'Stid o' standin' up like freemen and demandin' what is theirs
And insistin' on their power to conduct their own affairs,
'Stid o' askin' furrin nations what they may and mayn't do
In what was a land of freedom 'fore we had this furrin crew.

Parson, I believe this frolic got up by this furrin crowd
Ain't to celebrate the freedom that they talked about so loud;
But to jubilate their gittin' wider fields for them to rule;
And to make the job more certain git up doin's for to fool

People into half-believin' that we ort to own the moon.
Parson, if they're in for freedom they should sing another tune;
If they're in for freein' Cubans let them up and show their hand
Givin' freedom to the toilers in our own dear, blood-bought land.

—George McA. Miller in Democratic Magazine for October.
Chicago, October 15, 1898.

Credit Money.

There are in existence $346,000,000 of credit money, called United States notes, the existence of every dollar of which is due to the fact that we have not enough circulating medium without those notes. Every dollar of those notes could be retired by the substitution of the silver dollar or the silver certificate, and thus there would be a demand which the government could create for $346,000,000 more of silver. I am free to say that if the law providing for the free coinage of silver were passed today, under President McKinley's administration, with the secretary of the treasury discriminating against silver, as he has in the past, this government could not establish the parity of the metals. But under an administration that would use the powers of the government for the purpose of establishing the parity of the metals, I have no doubt of the ability of this nation to establish that parity.

RACE WAR IN MISSISSIPPI.

The Battle Continued Several Hours, and at Least Twelve Men Killed.

WHITE OFFICERS AMBUSHED BY NEGROES.

The Fight Was the Result of an Attempt to Arrest a Negro—The Whole County Is Aroused—Race Trouble in North Carolina.

A Sunday's special from Meridian, Miss., says: The most bloody race war that has occurred in Mississippi since the days of the reconstruction period, is raging in Scott county, fifty miles west of Meridian. The war grew out of an assault on Charles D. Freeman, a white man by Bill Burke, a negro. Freeman and Burke became involved in a quarrel which ended in Burke assaulting Freeman with a hoe. A warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Burke and Constable Thompson, with fifteen men, went to the house of Burke, who live a mile from Harperville, at 9 o'clock last night to execute the writ. When Constable Thompson and his posse arrived they found Burke fortified in his little log house, with fifty or sixty negroes ambushed on the premises and the officers' demand for a surrender was answered with a volley.

Officer Sibley, one of the posse, was instantly killed and three others, including Constable Thompson, seriously wounded. The posse was thrown into confusion by the volleys, but the fire was returned and for a time a desperate battle raged in the dark. The negroes were greatly in the majority, however, and the officers retired and sent out runners for help. The sheriff responded with heavy reinforcements and the battle was renewed this morning. The fight has been kept up all day and when the last courier reached the nearest telegraph office, ten miles from the scene of the battle, at a late hour tonight, they reported that ten negroes had been killed and several wounded. Four negroes were captured and taken to Forest, where they were guarded by 200 white men to prevent their rescue by negro sympathizers. A general alarm has been sent out over Scott and the adjoining counties of Rankin, Newtown and Smith and hundreds of white men are under arms and on their way to Harperville.

Gov. A. J. McLaurin left Brandon for Harperville Sunday night.

RACE WAR IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Whites at Lumberton Telegraphing for Winchesters.

A special from Lumberton, N. C., says: At 3 o'clock Sunday morning a squad of the negroes who were dispersed at Ash Pole, Robeson county, crept up to the town and shot three whites stationed there as guards. They were Albert Floyd, Robert Inman and Wm. Bullard. Bullard is seriously wounded, the others slightly. A hundred whites with bloodhounds are now in pursuit, and four of the negroes have been caught. There is great excitement at all points in the state in telegraphic communication with Lumberton. The whites are telegraphing the principal towns in the state for Winchester rifles to be sent there immediately.

SERIOUS TROUBLE PREDICTED.

Indians Have Commenced Killing Cattle Belonging to Texans.

A special from Perry, O. T., says: Serious trouble is brewing among the Comanche, Kiowa and Apache Indians. For thirty years since the Medicine Lodge treaty, the government has fed these Indians, but that treaty expired July 1. They have commenced killing cattle belonging to Texas cattlemen, and a crisis is near. These Indians have no crops, few cattle and have had no money for months. Men who know predict great starvation among them this winter and serious trouble. There are 1,500 Comanches, 1,300 Kiowas and 600 Apaches.

Instantly Killed.

Tom Malone, a well known young man of Marshall county, Tenn, was thrown from his horse near Lewisburg and almost instantly killed. He and two other young men were speeding their horses on the pike when the accident occurred.

Commission at Anniston.

The war investigating commission, at Anniston, sat from 9 o'clock to 5:30 Monday, and examined about a dozen witnesses, including a number of officers and men of the regular troops, as well as a number of volunteer officers. The commission will leave for Huntsville Tuesday night.

"Wild Bill" Killed.

"Wild Bill" Turner, a noted character in the mountains, was shot and killed by Will Coombs. Turner kept a moonshine saloon on the State line between Kentucky and Tennessee and had made a fortune. He had killed several men. He is the sixth brother killed and is the last of the family.

Helped Build His Gallows.

Robert Lewis, who killed J. F. Haynes, foreman of a gang of men erecting a building at Atlanta, has been sentenced to hang November 10. Lewis being a workman at the new jail several months ago, helped to build the gallows on which he will be put to death.

Colonel Alston Dead.

Colonel Joseph R. Alston, First South Carolina, died Friday, at Yorkville, S. C., while waiting orders prior to mustering out.

PREPARING FOR BATTLE.

British Admiralty Hurrying Ships for War—French Active at Toulon.

LONDON.—The British Admiralty issued a number of significant orders Monday morning. The dock yards at Portsmouth, Devonport and Chatham have each received instructions to prepare six thirty-knot torpedo boat destroyers for commissioning so that they will be able to put to sea in twenty-four hours. Overtime hours have begun on the first-class cruisers Europa and Andromeda so as to hurry them for sea service. Several gunboats in the different dock yards have been ordered to postpone necessary refitting. Finally, the Cunard line and White Star line have received from the admiralty an intimation to hold their subsidized steamers in readiness for turning over to the navy officials.

Preparing at Toulon.

PARIS.—The municipal authorities of Toulon have been notified that that place will be the center of important naval and military preparations, and have been instructed to arrange for the immediate reception of four battalions of infantry, 1,500 marines and 600 artillerymen.

The naval authorities have been ordered to expedite the preparations for the outfitting of the new squadron.

The newspapers here warmly praise the exposition of the French side of the Fashoda question presented by the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, in the yellow book, on the subject issued Sunday.

Ordered to Mobilize.

HALIFAX, N. S.—The commanders of all warships of the British North American squadron have received orders to mobilize at Halifax. The Pallis, Talbot and Indefatigable will come here at once, together with two torpedo boat destroyers now at Bermuda. The torpedo boats at the dock yard are being overhauled. The crew of the flagship Renown will be sent to Lawler's Island this week for field practice. The Renown went to sea Monday for heavy gun practice.

FIRE AT OPELIKA.

One of the Most Disastrous Conflagrations in the History of the City.

Opelika was visited at 2 o'clock Monday morning by one of the most disastrous fires in the history of the city. From some unknown cause fire broke out in the large furniture store of B. Y. Cooper & Sons, and building and stock were soon a mass of flames. The two-story building adjoining, owned by F. Watkins, was badly damaged. The two-story Harwell building, west of the furniture store, caught next in a lower story, the grocery store of Goodwin & Lowe and the jewelry store of J. C. Condon. The loss is over $50,000. B. Y. Cooper & Sons suffered the greatest, having a $12,000 stock destroyed, with only $5,000 insurance. The other losses are about half covered.

Death of Colonel Pickett.

Colonel R. O. Pickett, the oldest member of the Florence bar, died Monday, in Leighton, Ala. Colonel Pickett was about 85 years old, and a unique character. He was a merchant in Florence in the thirties, but afterward read law with James Irvine and practiced at Moulton, Lawrence county, until the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted as captain in the Thirty-fifth Alabama, and was made a colonel before the war ended.

Physical Examination of First Alabama.

The work of mustering out the First Alabama goes steadily on. The surgeons began making the physical examinations of the men on Sunday, Company I being the first examined. Companies G, D and M have been completed. A great many of the men are found defective, that is a great many more than was supposed there should be. A great many of the men are entitled to pensions.

To Establish Toll Gates.

It is reported that Colbert county, Alabama, which has within the last several years expended $200,000 on turnpike roads, will instruct its representative, Hon. Wilson B. Brown, in the next legislature, to introduce a bill providing for the establishment of toll gates to protect its roads from the free use by persons of adjoining counties.

COST OF THE EVACUATION.

Spanish Authorities Estimate the Amount Needed Will Reach $16,000,000.

The Spanish authorities at Havana estimate the total cost of evacuation will be $16,000,000. Twenty-four vessels will be employed to embark troops, of which six are hospital ships. The French mail steamers Chribon and Notre Dame, which have just arrived, have been chartered by the Trans-Atlantic company as transports.

The Spaniards evacuated Biaz on October 15.

Two Men Killed.

One of the houses of the Judson Dynamite Works at Oakland, Cal., blew up Sunday. The explosion killed two men.

Ministerial Crisis.

The Madrid newspapers regard a ministerial crisis as imminent, and they urge the ministers to sink their differences in view of Spain's many difficulties.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the North Alabama conference, M. E. church, is in session at Talladega.

FOR CONGRESS:

W. F. ALDRICH

SPECIAL OFFER. THE BANNER one year for 50 cents.

MONKEYING with the ballot-box may possibly be good sport to some people, but remember there are Federal penalties attached to it.

To deprive an United States citizen of his rights is a Federal offense, and ballot-box stuffing is an offense against the Federal laws. Watch the congressional election.

HON. A. P. Longshore has been meeting with intelligent audiences this week in Chilton. Our people are always glad to listen to Bro. Longshore, and despite the busy season always find time to go out and hear him speak the truth.

THERE is a rumor afloat that Judge Honeycutt is in favor of the Democratic nominee. Generally, we don't pay much attention to Dame Rumor, but in this case we would be glad to hear from Judge Honeycutt whether he is supporting the Populist or the Democratic nominee. Please let us have a direct answer, Judge.

THE Democratic party of this district have evidently seen the handwriting on the wall, and are laying their plans on the same old foundation. An address has been issued to the white voters of Dallas county urging them to come out on the 8th of November and vote for Gaston A. Robbins. This simply means that the majority for the Democratic candidate is to be, as of old, made up in Dallas, when they propose to claim that all the white men and all the colored men of Dallas have voted for the Democratic nominee.

THE election laws of the State of Alabama are far from being what they should be, and frauds in elections are much too prevalent in some parts of the State. The Federal laws, however, are not so lenient as the State laws, and it is a very serious business indeed for any man to enter into a conspiracy to defraud a citizen of his rights. In this, the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama, we are accustomed to fraud on the Democratic side, in the election of a member of Congress, but we desire to inform those who may be contemplating fraud in some counties in the Fourth District of Alabama, that anything in the nature of fraud in the forthcoming Congressional election that each and every one will render himself liable to prosecution in the Federal courts, and that the Federal law will be enforced to its fullest extent.

"Dallas is prepared to roll up the usual majority for the Democratic nominee," declares the Age-Herald. No one doubts it. Dallas, (and this means the Democratic party of Dallas) is doubtless prepared to manufacture any majority that is needed to furnish a certificate of election to its favorite son. But we are somewhat inclined to doubt if Governor Johnston will sign a certificate based upon a majority made up wholly in Dallas. This scheme has been worked so often that it is threadbare. When five white counties return a majority for W. F. Aldrich, what becomes of that stupid Democratic cry of white supremacy in this dirtrict, if it is to be over ridden by the one black county of Dallas?

WE hope every voter in the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama will read the following clipping from the Birmingham Age Herald, published in this (Thursday) morning's issue of that paper. It is a lie from beginning to end, and shows the desperate straits to which the Democratic nominee is put in this district. Read this:

"Representative Aldrich will not receive the support or vote of Probate Judge elect S. M. Adams, of Chilton. That is the story that comes from the Fourth District, and it is quite the most interesting news of to-day concerning the congressional campaign."

Isn't that nice? The Age-Herald has grace enough to characterize it is as a "story," which is the polite expression for a lie. On the authority of Judge Adams himself we say it is a lie. The whole "story" originates with the Democrats and was carefully planned for Governor Johnston to give it a good send-off at his speech at Jemison. In the course of his speech Governor Johnston turned to Judge Adams, who was in the audience, and asked him if he could support a gold-bug. To this question, of course, Judge Adams, as would every other Populist or Silver Democrat, replied he never had supported a gold-bug and never would do so. In this reply Judge Adams was eminently correct. We know he would not support a gold-bug, and we would be very sorry indeed if he could be induced to do so. But the Democrats have twisted the Governor's question to be, would he support Mr. Aldrich. Mr. Aldrich, as everyone, whether Populist, Republican or Democrat, knows is not by any means a gold bug. Every Populist knows that Mr. Aldrich's position on the money question is fully in accord with their views and is in every particular satisfactory to them. Judge Adams, in making the fight for the probate judgship, was glad to avail himself of the assistance of Mr. Aldrich, and naturally wishes to help Mr. Aldrich in return. Judge Adams, and every man who voted for Judge Adams, as well as many who for the sake of old friendship supported Mr. Honeycutt, will all cast their votes next Tuesday week for W. F. Aldrich.

THE Age-Herald gives the whole thing away when it says; "It would be a calamity if Alabama failed to send a solid Democratic delegation to the next congress." Well, it would be a calamity if Gaston A. Robbins was returned from the Fourth district of Alabama, and, as we are confident he will not be, the Age-Herald will have to put up with it.

Many a household is saddened by death because of the failure to keep on hand a safe and absolutely certain cure for croup such as One Minute Cough Cure. See that your little ones are protected against emergency. J. M. Stanfield.

THE five white counties in this district will undoubtedly give Mr. Aldrich a larger majority than ever before. Then will come the same old game, the black county of Dallas will run up a fictitious majority for the Democratic nominee. And yet some of our Democratic friends call this white supremacy.

EVERY good Populist will go to work all next week and get his neighbor to come to the polls on Tuesday week and vote for Aldrich.

SPECIAL OFFER. THE BANNER one year for 50 cents. This offer is good for two weeks only. Now is the time to subscribe.

How to Prevent Croup

We have two children who are subject to attacks of croup. Whenever an attack is coming on my wife gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always prevents the attack. It is a household necessity in this county and no matter what else we run out of, it would not do to be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. More of it is sold here than of all other cough medicines combined.—J. M. NICKLE, of Nickle Bros., merchants, Nickleville, Pa. For sale by J. S Johnson jr.

YOUNG LOVE'S AWAKENING.

It Came Just In Time to Prevent the Step That Is Not Easily Retraced.

"Years ago," said a Cleveland man, "I made a long stay in an English county. I visited one of my relatives, who owned a small estate near a big manufacturing town, and, being a young fellow with plenty of time on my hands, I staid on much longer than I originally intended. I made a number of acquaintances, and among them a family named Jerrold, father, mother and daughter. They had a neat little place a few miles from where I was stopping, and I became quite well acquainted with them. So well, in fact, that I fell in love with the daughter. She was a fine, big girl, with very black hair and very red cheeks and a voice that could be heard across a ten acre field. She could ride like the wind and walk 20 miles without a murmur.

"Well, she sort of carried me away with her impetuosity. I became a frequent visitor at their home and everybody made me welcome. One day I had fairly made up my mind to pop the momentous question. Miss Laura was more fascinating than ever, despite her boisterous ways, that I never could quite forgive, and the day was one of those lovely ones in early May, when nature seems at her very best. It was just a little chilly, but the sunshine tempered the raw edge of the atmosphere delightfully. Laura and I went out for a walk. When we came back, I left her in the house and went out to look for her father. I had fully determined to ask him for her hand.

"Laura told me I would probably find him at the stables, and I started in that direction. I had left my light top coat in the hall, and as I started across the big lawn I felt chilly and turned back to get the coat. I made no noise in entering, and was just taking down the garment when I heard my name called. The speaker was Laura, and she was in the morning room, as they called it, just back of the hall. Laura's voice was so penetrating that I could not help hearing every word she said. I should not have listened, but for the life of me I couldn't help it.

"'Yes,' I heard her say, 'I've bagged him sure. He's out to the stables now, looking for you, popper, and when he gets your reluctant consent he'll see me. Now, what are you going to offer him as my wedding portion?'

"There was a murmur of words that I couldn't catch, and then Laura laughed.

"'Going to turn over the Bumblecomb calling stock, are you? Well, you are a sly old popper. Never mind, he won't know the difference. And are you sure that the letters you received are all straight?'

"There was more talk that I could not understand, and then Laura spoke again:

"'Rich daddy, eh, and nice town house and society relatives. That's all right. Anyway, it's better than genteel poverty over here. Don't you be afraid. He shan't slip away.'

"I didn't wait to hear any more, but tiptoed out. I didn't try to find her father, who I suppose was lying in wait for me on my return from the stables, but just as soon as I could decently do so I rode back to my relatives, and a day or two later started for home. Laura's daddy was a choleric old fellow who had been in the army, and I didn't know what sort of a row he'd kick up if he saw me escaping. But I got away safely with love's young dream very rudely shattered and have always thought I had a very narrow escape."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CUNNING AFRIDIS.

Methods Employed by the Crafty Savage Tribesmen In Battle.

In any account of the ways the Afridis fight it is necessary to include in the description the military characteristics of the frontier natives without regard to differences of tribe.

Their style of fighting is specially adapted to the geographical conditions of the country. Both at Fort Saraghari and at Fort Cavagnari I had an opportunity, with other officers, of learning the peculiar fighting ways of the Afridis. Every race, of course, has its own method of combat, and the Afridis conduct their operations against an enemy in a manner altogether their own. It is as shifty as it is effective. Few civilians can realize how deadly it may become.

It is bad enough when an enemy, creeping slowly up a hillside, lodges itself in sections behind huge bowlders, and, under cover of these, pours volley after volley at the human targets, as those engaged in the task of guarding the summit become. Watching the advancement of a foe is not at any time an inspiriting occupation. It is worse to see the half naked Afridis creeping slowly and slowly from bowlder to bowlder. This is what takes place in broad daylight, but even then the cunning Afridi can circumvent nature. Take, as an illustration of this, the way in which Fort Saraghari fell. It occurred in broad daylight and within sight of the neighboring fort of Cavagnari, where the stealthy operations of the tribesmen were observed by the imperial troops. Attempts were made by means of signals to warn the defenders of the British flag of their danger, but to no avail.

Although considered impregnable, Fort Saraghari, built of square stone with two bastions at opposite angles, was fatally defective in design. It had a "dead" point underneath each bastion—that is, a point from which an enemy could be neither seen nor hit by the defenders. The result was that while the contending forces were firing against each other—the defenders in the forts and the assailants behind stone breastworks and within ten yards of each other—a few native born "engineers" among the Afridis who had crept up to the "dead" point were mining a breach in one of the bastions. Before this was made sufficiently large to admit the savage tribesmen to make their deadly rush into the fort the undermining operations were seen by the small force holding Fort Cavagnari. These signaled to their brothers in arms the danger awaiting them, but the latter were too busily employed in repelling the onslaughts of the enemy to benefit by the telescopic observations of their comrades, and so every one of the 21 Sikhs guarding Saraghari died at his post.

If the Afridi were crafty in daylight, his cunning at night became superhuman. Many a sentry has fallen silently and mysteriously in the Indian night. A naked form, moving stealthily in the dark as the sentry paces backward and forward, getting almost motionless as the sentry draws nigh; a sudden bound, followed by a dagger thrust—this is the end of many an Indian soldier and the secret of many a tribal victory.—"An Officer" in London

Is the greatest Labor Organization the world has ever seen.

It is the only organization which, while striving to secure for wage-workers the best possible terms as to wages, hours and conditions, aims at reforming the causes of industrial injustice.

It secures to each trade and locality absolute control over its own trade or local affairs, yet its perfect organization enables its members to act unitedly, promptly, and therefore, effectively when concentrated action becomes necessary to remedy injustice or to resist oppression.

It is pledged to work for the overthrow of the capitalistic system of production and exchange, yet, realizing that reforms can only be beneficial and permanent when they rest upon the convictions of a well-educated people, it seeks to accomplish objects only by appeals to reason and conscience—never by force.

It is a secret organization only so far as secrecy is necessary to protect its members from wrong and persecution, and can never be used to shield wrong-doing.

Its doors are open to all who labor honestly and usefully either by hand or brain, without question or distinction on account of creed, race or nationality.

THE BONES OF COLUMBUS.

Mystery Enshrouds the Final Resting Place of the Great Discoverer.

Mystery and secrecy surround the exhumation in Havana, Cuba, of the remains of Columbus, and this fact has given rise to grave rumors, which appear to have some foundation, as there has been no attempt at denial from any source. The removal of the remains was effected behind the closed doors of the Cathedral, which were guarded by an armed forced. Few of the authorities were present, the names of those who were to attend being handed to the Chief of Police the night before in General Blanco's own handwriting.

No official account of the ceremony or statement regarding the condition of the remains has been made public, but it has leaked out from an authoritative source that they are not in the same condition as when they were placed in the niche.

When the remains were placed in the mausoleum a small casket was enclosed, containing coins, gold and silver medals, precious stones and rolls of parchment, as was then the custom upon the occasion of a burial. It appears that this casket had been tampered with and rifled of its contents, and further rumors say that only portions of the remains are left.

Gossip and speculation are rife, the exact truth of which the authorities make no effort to affirm or contradict. A quasi-official explanation, however, is to the effect that secrecy was given to the ceremony because a cable dispatch received reported that General Toral had been murdered in Madrid the day before, and fears were entertained that disorders might occur if the public and military came together in great numbers.

Some of the more rabid Spaniards go to the length of saying that the whole ceremony was a farce, the Washington Government having objected to the removal of the remains and their Government going through the pantomime in order to make the public believe that the remains, which really are left there, were shipped to Spain.

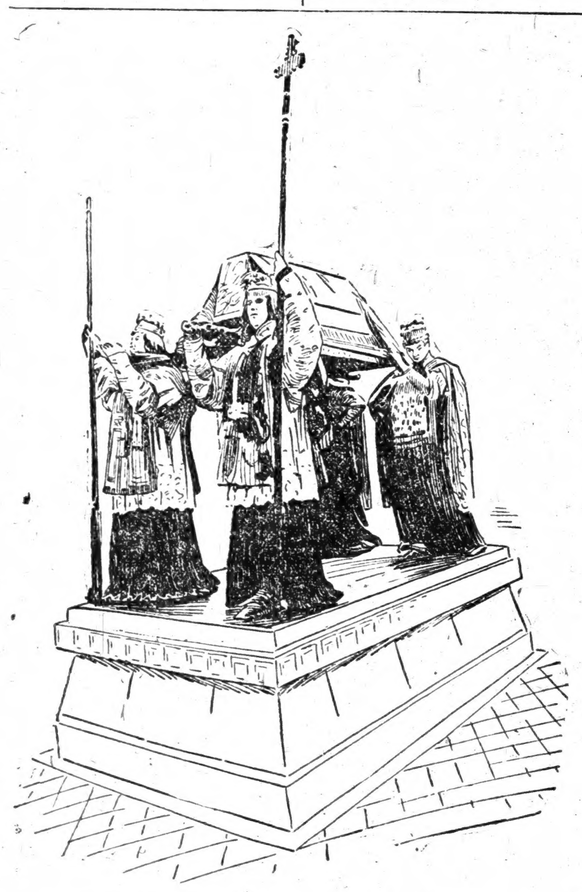
Spain's pitiful appeal to be permitted to remove the bones of Christopher Columbus from Havana to Madrid will likely be passed upon by the Paris peace commissioners, but before any discussion is reached four nations will become involved in the controversy. The four nations not only claim the right to possess the remains of the great discoverer, but they assert that they already have them and are prepared to back up the assertion with all sorts of proof. There is a quartet of Columbian graves in different parts of the world and each one is separately worshiped as the real article. One of these is in Havana, one is in Santo Domingo, one is in Genoa, Italy, and one is in Valladolid, Spain.

LEAD CHEST CONTAINING THE BONES OF COLUMBUS.

When Santo Domingo, where his body was interred after having been brought from its resting place in Seville, became a possession of France, the Spaniards removed what they supposed to be the bones of Columbus, with many of the other valuable and sacred relics of Spanish rule, to Havana, where they have since remained. As a matter of fact historians are now agreed that the bones which the Spaniards conveyed to their only remaining possessions in the Western Hemisphere were not those of the great navigator, but of his son, Diego Columbus, a former Governor-General of Santo Domingo, who was buried in the same sepulchre with his father. The certainty that the Spaniards had made a blunder in removing the body was established through a very curious circumstance.

Just before his death, Columbus, greatly aggrieved by the injustice and cruelty with which he had been treated by the people for whom he had done so much, requested that the chains in which he had been brought back a prisoner from his last voyage to the West Indies, and which he always kept in his room as a memento of Spanish gratitude, might be buried in the coffin with him. His request was scrupulously regarded by the members of his family, and without the knowledge of the Spanish officers these relics were placed in his coffin before it was finally sealed.

A Frenchman who chanced upon some autograph letters written by the explorer found among other interesting documents the navigator's will. He was struck by the strange clause relating to the shackles, and made inquiries whether or not any such things were found when the coffin was removed from the tomb in Santo Domingo. As no one remembered to have heard of any such thing, an investigation was set on foot, with the result that the bones of Columbus were found to be still peacefully reposing in the new French colony. As a matter of course, the Spaniards have derided the notion that they could by any possibility have made a mistake, but subsequent discoveries have only tended to strengthen the idea that the Spaniards had merely given one more example to the world of the carelessness and superficiality with which they carry out all their official acts.



TOMB OF COLUMBUS IN THE CATHEDRAL AT HAVANA.

VIAL CONTAINING THE ASHES OF COLUMBUS AT GENOA, ITALY.

The sepulchre which contained what passes among the Spanish inhabitants of Cuba for the bones of Columbus is extremely simple in character. The cathedral in which it is situated, however, is a very handsome structure. The bones were in a plain stone vault made of marble, placed to the right of and at the foot of the main altar. The stone vault surmounted by a bust supposed to resemble the explorer, but said to differ in every detail from his portraits. The bones of Columbus, the Spaniards say, were taken to Havana in 1795 and placed in a grave dug under the spot where the vault now stands. In 1822 the Spaniards in Cuba erected the present tomb and placed beneath the bust of Columbus the following inscription:

O, grand Columbus!
In this urn enshrined
A thousand centuries
Thy bones shall guard!
A thousand ages keep thine image fresh,
In token of our nation's gratitude.

SLAB OVER THE COLUMBUS TOMB AT HAVANA.

When the supposed bones of Columbus were removed from Santo Domingo, the ceremony was made the occasion for a display of Spanish grandeur such as had never before been seen in the Western Hemisphere.

It is easy to concede that the lead chest found at San Domingo was not the one in which the bones of the Admiral were taken to San Domingo, for it is generally admitted that the name America, which appeared on the casket, was used before 1509, and the Gothic characters in the interior of the chest were not common until the seventeenth century.

The circumstance that the chest found at San Domingo is small, also confirms the suspicion that it was made to contain half a skeleton. That sent to Havana, although of the same length and depth was wider, perhaps to give more room to the hip bones and the skull, besides the other bones corresponding to those found at San Domingo.

The San Domingo chest contained some fragments of lead which bear the unmistakable signs of age. This suggests the probability that the chest was cast from an older one.

After a distinguished career in Europe and Asia, Mgr. Roccococchia, the discoverer of the remains of Columbus at San Domingo, was made Bishop at Orope, Vicar of San Domingo, and delegate to Hayti and Venezuela in 1874. The leaden chest was found on September 10, 1877. The work in the cathedral had just begun when a hidden tomb was discovered at the left of the altar. A leaden chest was found. It contained the remains of Don Pietro Colombo, the discoverer's grandson.

The chest containing the bones of Columbus was at the right of the first. When the discovery was made, besides Mgr. Cocchia, the Italian Consul; Giobatta Cambiaso, his brother, Luigi, and the authorities of San Domingo, were present. The Consul, who was a Genoese, seized a pinch of the ashes in the chest and placed them in a crystal vial. A ribbon was attached to the vial, bearing an inscription in Italian to this effect:

"Ashes of the immortal Christopher Columbus, discovered in the Cathedral of San Domingo the 10th of September, 1877. To the City of Genoa, from her affectionate sons, Giobatta and Luigi Cambiaso."

When the vial arrived at Genoa the municipality decided to preserve it in an urn of bronze. The urn was executed in 1886 by Pandiani, of Milan. It is in the style of the seventeenth century. Four sea horses sustain it at the corners, and graceful designs adorn the frame, which bears on each side the arms of Genoa. The whole is surmounted by a female figure representing Genoa, the Queen of the Mediterranean. The left hand rests upon an anchor, and with the right the figure holds aloft the wreath of victory.

Pavia received a similar honor, for at her university the discoverer of the New World completed his studies. The ashes were placed in a small pyramid of crystal, and this was deposited in a splendid receptacle.

THE REALM OF FASHION.

Ladies' Cape With Applied Yoke.

Heavy black silk poplin is used for this stylish cape, the applied yoke being of rich guipure lace over white satin and the decoration of satin ribbon ruching.

The cape is shaped on fashionable lines which slope gradually to points in front and back.

A SEASONABLE CAPE.

Darts at each shoulder with a seam in centre back cause a snug adjustment at the top, graceful fulness in rippling folds below the shoulders to a comfortable and fashionable length. The circular yoke is applied after the darts are sewed and may be cut with or without a centre seam.

The high standing collar is shaped in four sections joined to fit the neck comfortably and flare becomingly at the top.

A ruffle of net, lace or chiffon is placed inside the collar, a large bow of the same being tied over the closing in front.

The fronts are closed as far as the waist with coat hooks and eyes.

An interlining of wadding or canton flannel gives richness as well as warmth to capes of satin, silk or poplin, a silk lining of some becoming color adding elegance to its finish. Capes in this style can be worn at any age and are dressy enough for church or visiting. Velvet can be appropriately chosen with passementerie for the yoke and fur or any desired decoration may be adopted.

To make this cape for a lady of medium size will require one and five-eighths yards of material fifty-four inches wide.

The New Winter Hat.

My lady's new winter hat is shown in the large engraving. An extremely chic affair of no particular period reproduced. The knots and twists under the front brim and the high trimming at one side recall the sportive modes of 1830. But hats then were large in size, and the fashion this autumn calls for head coverings only medium in circumference, except in carriage hats, which are huge and heavy laden with plumes.

At a favorite shop where many women inspected fall hats, Madame, the milliner, said that there is no common name for this style in hats, nor, as a general thing, for any sort which is brought forth at that store.

"So far as possible," said Madame, "every hat we make is unlike every other, so we cannot give a general name which would be at the same time individual."

That hats are to be worn "off the face," as was predicted in the summer. It is only the exceptional headpiece which is fashioned for the woman without a pompadour. The roll of hair over the brow just fills in the space between brim and forehead. And many of the turbans are arranged to fit around the back hair, which should be done on the crown of the head.

TYPE OF THE WINTER HAT.

Stylish puffs are mounted on fitted sleeves, which may be omitted as here shown and the dress may be finished without the yoke to wear with or without different guimpes. The front and back are shown of cashmere having embroidered edge, while the sides are completed with an embroidered frill of cashmere.

Cashmere, veiling, challie and all other soft wool or silken fabrics will develop prettily by the mode, lace and embroidered edging and insertion, ribbon or braid being suitable trimming.

While material of this kind is not always available, the design furnishes suggestions that may be carried out daintily in similar fabrics in one or a combination of material or coloring. It is also pretty for wash dresses of thin white stuffs that are worn by little girls over slips of silk or satin all winter.

FOR ORDINARY OR PARTY WEAR.

To make this dress for a child of four years of age will require two and one-half yards of material thirty-six inches wide.

Such is the most patent fact about new autumn hats. That the largest number of them turn away from the face. Though a few with straight brims are for sale to those who cannot or will not abide these upturned effects.

A Woman Physician's Work.

Dr. Katherine Kollock, a medical inspector for the girls' high school in Philadelphia, during the last year examined more than 5000 pupils. As a result of her work it is said the standard of health among the girls has been better than that of any previous year.

Edison's Tribute to Woman.

Thomas A. Edison declares that women have more quickness and insight about machinery than men have, and he prefers to employ them in carrying out the details of his electrical inventions.

Child's French Dress.

This dainty dress of embroidered cashmere in pale blue, showed yoke and sleeves of dark blue velvet which were made adjustable so as to do for ordinary or party wear.

A short body lining supports the shirring that adjusts the fulness in front and back, the top being arranged to form frilled headings.

The sides are gathered to the lower edge of body lining, a band of the embroidered cashmere passing all around the short waist. Bands to match pass over the shoulders to foot of dress in front and back, pretty gathered bretelles standing out over the sleeves.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: "Across the Continent"—Spiritual Thoughts Suggested While Viewing Scenes of Majesty and Grandeur Wrought by the Hand of God.

TEXT: "Streams in the desert."—Isaiah xxxv, 6. "He toucheth the hills and they smoke."—Psalms civ., 32.

My first text means irrigation. It means the waters of the Himalaya, or the Pyrenees, or the Sierra Nevadas poured through canals and aqueducts for the fertilization of the valleys. It means the process by which the last mile of American barrenness will be made an apple orchard, or an orange grove, or a wheat field, or a cotton plantation, or a vineyard—"streams in the desert." My second text means a volcano like Vesuvius or Cotopaxi, or it means the geysers of Yellowstone Park or of California. You see a hill calm and still, and for ages immovable, but the Lord out of the heavens puts His finger on the top of it, and from it rise thick and impressive vapors: "He toucheth the hills and they smoke!"

Although my journey across the continent this summer was for the eighth time, more and more am I impressed with the divine hand in its construction, and with its greatness and grandeur, and more and more am I thrilled with the fact that it is all to be irrigated, glorified and Edenized. What a change from the time when Daniel Webster on yonder Capitoline Hill said to the American Senate in regard to the centre of this continent, and to the regions on the Pacific Coast: "What do you want with this vast, worthless area, this region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts and cactus, of shifting sands and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever put these great deserts or these great mountains, impenetrable and covered with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the Western coast, rock-bound, cheerless and uninviting, and not a harbor on it? I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific coast one inch nearer Boston than it now is." What a mistake the great statesman made when he said that! All who have crossed the continent realize that the States on the Pacific Ocean will have quite as grand opportunities as the States on the Atlantic, and all this realm from sea to sea to be the Lord's cultivated possession.

Do you know what, in some respects, is the most remarkable thing between the Atlantic and Pacific? It is the figure of a cross on a mountain in Colorado. It is called the "Mount of the Holy Cross." A horizontal crevice filled with perpetual snow, and a perpendicular crevice filled with snow, but both the horizontal line and the perpendicular line so marked, so bold, so significantly unmistakable, that all who pass in the daytime within many miles are compelled to see it. There are some figures, some contours, some mountain appearances that you gradually make out after your attention is called to them. So a man's face on the rocks in the White Mountains. So a maiden's form cut in the granite of the Adirondacks. So a city in the moving clouds. Yet you have to look under the pointing of your friend or guide for some time before you can see the similarity. But the first instant you glance at this side of the mountain in Colorado, you cry out: "A cross! A cross!" Do you say that this geological inscription just happens so? No! That cross on the Colorado mountain is not a human device, or an accident of nature, or the freak of an earthquake. The hand of God cut it there and set it up for the nation to look at. Whether set up in rock before the cross of wood was set up on the bluff back of Jerusalem, or set up at some time since that assassination, I believe the Creator meant it to suggest the most notable event in all the history of this planet, and He hung it there over the heart of this continent to indicate that the only hope for this nation is in the Cross on which our Immanuel died. The clouds were vocal at our Saviour's birth, the rocks rent at His martyrdom, why not the walls of Colorado bear the record of the Crucifixion?

I supposed in my boyhood, from its size on the map, that California was a few yards across, a ridge of land on which one must walk cautiously lest he hit his head against the Sierra Nevada on one side, or slip off into the Pacific waters on the other—California, the thin slice of land, as I supposed it to be in my boyhood. I have found to be larger than all the States of New England and all New York State and all Pennsylvania added together; and if you add them together their square miles fall far short of California. And then all those new-born States of the Union, North and South Dakota, Washington, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. Each State an empire in size.

"But," says one, "in calculating the immensity of our continental acreage you must remember that vast reaches of our public domain are uncultivated heaps of dry sand, and the 'Bad Lands' of Montana and the Great American Desert." I am glad you mentioned that. Within twenty-five years there will not be between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts a hundred miles of land not reclaimed either by farmers' plough or miners' crowbar. By irrigation, the waters of the rivers and the showers of heaven, in what are called the rainy season, will be gathered into great reservoirs, and through aqueducts let down where and when the people want them. Utah is an object lesson. Some parts of that Territory which were so barren that a spear of grass could not have been raised there in a hundred years, are now rich as Lancaster County farms of Pennsylvania, or Westchester farms of New York, or Somerset County farms of New Jersey. Experiments have proved that ten acres of ground irrigated from waters gathered in great hydrological basins will produce as much as fifty acres from the downpour of rain as seen in our regions. We have our freshets and our droughts, but in those lands which are to be scientifically irrigated there will be neither freshets nor droughts. As you take a pitcher and get it full of water, and then set it on a table and take a drink out of it when you are thirsty and never think of drinking a pitcherful all at once, so Montana, and Wyoming and Idaho will catch the rains of their rainy season and take up all the waters of their rivers in great pitchers of reservoirs, and refresh their land whenever they will.

But the most wonderful part of this American continent is the Yellowstone Park. My two visit there made upon me an impression that will last forever. Go in by the Montella route as we did this summer and save 250 miles of railroading, your stagecoach taking you through a day of scenery as captivating and sublime as the Yellowstone Park itself. After all poetry has exhausted itself concerning Yellowstone Park, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and the other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other realizations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone Park is the geologist's paradise. By cheapening of travel may it become the nation's playground! In some portions of it there seems to be the anarchy of the elements. Fire and water, and the vapor born of that marriage, terrific. Geyser cones or hills of crystal that have been ever five thousand years growing! In places the earth, brobbing, sobbing, groaning, quaking with aqueous paroxysm. At the expiration of every sixty-five minutes one of the geysers tossing its boiling water 185 feet in the air and then descending into a swinging rainbow. "He toucheth the hills and they smoke." Caverns of pictured walls large enough for the sepulchre of the human race. Formations of stone in shape and color of calla lily, of heliotrope, of rose, of cowslip, of sunflower and of gladiolus. Sulphur and arsenic and oxide of iron, with their delicate pencils, turning the hills into a Luxemburg, or a Vatican picture-gallery. The so-called Thanatopsis Geyser, exquisite as the Bryant poem it was named after, and Evangeline Geyser, lovely as the Longfellow heroine it commemorates.

But after you have wandered along the geyserite enchantment for days, and begin to feel that there can be nothing more of interest to see, you suddenly come upon the peroration of all majesty and grandeur, the Grand Canon. It is here that it seems to me—and I speak it with reverence—Jehovah seems to have surpassed Himself. It seems a great gulch let down into the eternities. Masonry by an omnipotent trowel. Yellow! You never saw yellow unless you saw it there. Red! You never saw red unless you saw it there. Violet! You never saw violet unless you saw it there. Triumphant banners of color. In a cathedral of basalt, Sunrise and Sunset married by the setting of rainbow ring.

Gothic arches, Corinthian capitals, and Egyptian basilicas built before human architecture was born. Huge fortifications of granite constructed before war forged its first cannon. Gibraltars and Sebastopols that never can be taken. Thrones on which no one but the King of heaven and earth ever sat. Fount of waters at which the hills are baptized, while the giant cliffs stand around as sponsors. For thousands of years before that scene was unveiled to human sight, the elements were busy, and the geysers were hewing away with their hot chisel, and glaciers were pounding with their cold hammers, and hurricanes were cleaving with their lightning strokes, and hailstones giving the finishing touches, and after all these forces of nature had done their best, in our century the curtain dropped, and the world had a new and divinely inspired revelation, the Old Testament written on papyrus, the New Testament written on parchment, and this last Testament written on the rocks.

Standing there in the Grand Canon of the Yellowstone Park for the most part we held our peace, but after awhile it flashed upon me with such power I could not help but say to my comrades: "What a hall this would be for the last Judgment!" See that mighty cascade with the rainbows at the foot of it? Those waters congealed and transfixed with the agitations of that day, what a place they would make for the shining feet of a Judge of quick and dead! And those rainbows look now like the crowns to be cast at His feet. At the bottom of this great canon is a floor on which the nations of the earth might stand, and all up and down these galleries of rock the nations of heaven might sit. And what reverberation of archangels' trumpet there would be through all these gorges and from these caverns and over all these heights. Why should not the greatest of all the days the world shall ever see close amid the grandest scenery Omnipotence ever built?

I have said these things about the magnitude of the continent, and given you a few specimens of some of its wonders, to let you know the comprehensiveness of Christ's dominion when He takes possession of this continent. Besides that, the salvation of this continent means the salvation of Asia, for we are only thirty-six miles from Asia at the northwest. Only Behring Strait separates us from Asia, and these will be spanned by a great bridge. The thirty-six miles of water between these two continents are not all deep sea, but have three islands, and there are also shoals which will allow piers of bridges, and for the most of the way the water is only about twenty fathoms deep.

The Americo-Asiatic bridge which will yet span those straits will make America, Asia, Europe and Africa one continent. So, you see, America evangelized, Asia will be evangelized. Europe taking Asia from one side and America taking it from the other side. Your children will cross that bridge. America and Asia and Europe all one, what subtraction from the pangs of seasickness! and the prophecies in Revelation will be fulfilled, "there shall be no more sea." But do I mean literally that this American continent is going to be all gospelized? I do. Christopher Columbus, when he went ashore from the Santa Maria, and his second brother Alonzo, when he went ashore from the Pinta, and his third brother Vincent, when he went ashore from the Nina, took possession of this country in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost. Satan has no more right to this country than I have to your pocket-book. To hear him talk on the roof of the temple, where he proposed to give Christ the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them, you might suppose that Satan was a great capitalist or that he was loaded up with real estate, when the old miscreant never owned an acre or an inch of ground on this planet. For that reason I protest against something I heard and saw this summer and other summers in Montana and Oregon and Wyoming and Idaho and Colorado and California. They have given devilistic names to many places in the West and Northwest.

As soon as you get in Yellowstone Park or California you have pointed out to you places cursed with such names as "The Devil's Slide," "The Devil's Kitchen," "The Devil's Thumb," "The Devil's Pulpit," "The Devil's Mush-Pot," "The Devil's Tea-Kettle," "The Devil's Sawmill," "The Devil's Machine-Shop," "The Devil's Gate," and so on. Now it is very much needed that geological surveyor or Congressional Committee or group of distinguished guests go through Montana and Wyoming and California and Colorado and give other names to these places. All these regions belong to the Lord, and to a Christian nation; and away with such Plutonic nomenclature! But how is this continent to be gospelized? The pulpit and a Christian printing-press harnessed together will be the mightiest team for the first plough. Not by the power of cold, formalistic theology; not by ecclesiastical technicalities. I am sick of them, and the world is sick of them. But it will be done by the warm-hearted, sympathetic presentation of the fact that Christ is ready to pardon all our sins, and heal all our wounds, and save us both for this world and the next. Let your religion of glaciers crack off and fall into the Gulf Stream and get melted. Take all your creeds of all denominations and drop out of them all human phraseology and put in only scriptural phraseology, and you will see how quick the people will jump after them.

On the Columbia River we saw the salmon jump clear out of the water in different places. I suppose for the purpose of getting the insects. And if when we want to fish for men and we only have the right kind of bait, they will spring out above the flood of their sins and sorrows to reach it. The Young Men's Christian Associations of America will also do part of the work. They are going to take the young men of this nation for God. These institutions seem in better favor with God and man than ever before. Business men and capitalists are awaking to the fact that they can do nothing better in the way of living beneficence or in last will and testament than to do what Mr. Marquand did for Brooklyn when he made the Young Men's Christian palace possible. These institutions will get our young men all over the land into a stampede for heaven. Thus we will all in some way help on the work, you with your ten talents, I with five, somebody else with three. It is estimated that to irrigate the arid and desert lands of America as they ought to be irrigated, it will cost about one hundred million dollars to gather the waters into reservoirs. As much contribution and effort as that would irrigate with Gospel influences all the waste places of this continent. Let us be prayer and contribution and right living all help to fill the reservoirs. You will carry a bucket, and you a cup, and even a thimbleful would help. And after a while God will send the floods of mercy so gathered, pouring down over all the land, and some of us on earth and some of us in heaven will sing with Isaiah, "In the wilderness waters have broken out, and streams in the desert," and with David, "There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God." Oh, fill up the reservoirs! America for God!

A Wasp's Mistake.

It is generally supposed that instinct unerringly teaches birds and insects the best way in which to build their homes or nests, and also to provide for their offspring. The following incident, recently under personal observation, will show that instinct is not always infallible:

A friend placed three small empty vials in an open box on a shelf, in an upright position in close contact, and they were uncorked. A short time afterward it was a matter of surprise to find that these had been appropriated by a female mud wasp. She had placed a goodly number of spiders in the center vial, doubtless intended as food for her future brood; then proceeded to deposit her eggs in those on either side. She next closed tightly the mouths of all three receptacles with a hard lime cement. Having finished her work she then, doubtless, went on her way, satisfied all had been done for her offspring that a thoughtful mother could do.

But just think of the sensations of those little wasps when they came into existence, for, while starving in their sealed cages, they can plainly see, through the impenetrable glass walls, the bountiful supply of food that was provided for their use.—Scientific American.

COMFORTING WORDS TO WOMEN.

The Surgical Chair and its Tortures May be Avoided by Women Who Heed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice.

Woman's modesty is natural; it is charming.

To many women a full statement of their troubles to a male physician is almost impossible. The whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham because she is a woman, and her advice is freely offered to all women sufferers.

Mrs. O. E. LADD, of 19th and N Sts., Galveston, Texas, whose letter is printed below, was completely discouraged when she first wrote to Mrs. Pinkham. Here is what she says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I wrote to you some time ago, telling you of my ills, but now I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. I have used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three packages of Sanative Wash, and one box of Liver Pills, and to-day I call myself a well woman. I suffered with backache, constant headache, whites, sick stomach, no appetite, could not sleep, and was very nervous. At time of menstruation was in terrible pain. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I never can say enough in praise of it. I have recommended it to many friends. If only all suffering women would try it, there would be more happy homes and healthy women. I thank you for the change your medicine has made in me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice, have saved thousands of women from hospital operations.

The lives of women are hard; whether at home with a ceaseless round of domestic duties or working at some regular employment, their daily tasks make constant war on health. If all women understood themselves fully and knew how exactly and soothingly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts on the female organs, there would be less suffering.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure

Editor BANNER.—The Democratic executive committee, through its chairman, F. W. Gist, has gall and effrontery to issue a circular addressed to the Populists of this district, and is mailing to well known and influential Populists this circular. Such stuff is mere rot and full of lies made out of whole cloth, and contrary to their expectations rebounds upon its authors and to the discomfiture of their weakling candidate, because true to Democratic bent, manipulators and teachings it is but a tissue of lies from beginning to end in that it charges Mr. Aldrich with having voted for the Dingley tariff bill and against the Stanley Matthew resolution for the coinage of the silver seigniorage. Mr. Gist knew when he signed and issued this circular, that Mr. Aldrich was not in congress, but that others through theft and Democratic ballot box stuffing were filling the seat in congress out of which Mr. Aldrich had been defrauded and robbed by Democrats of the Robbins stripe, and that as a matter of fact Mr. Aldrich had not been given his seat at the time congress voted on these matters. Chairman Gist was in Washington at the time and knows such to be the fact. Still true to Democratic theft and ballot-box stuffing he unblushingly attempts to palm his lying circular off on honest people. You cannot do this, Mr. Gist, for the people of this district are already surfeited with Democratic lies, ballot-box stuffing and general inefficiency.

That lying circular of Mr. Gist was intended to be a ten strike, and it was as a lying machine. The people of this district have no patience with liars and falsifiers of the public records.

An Old Idea.

Every day strengthens the belief of eminent physicians that impure blood is the cause of the majority of our diseases. Twenty-five years ago this theory was used as a basis for the formula of Browns' Iron Bitters. The many remarkable cures effected by this famous old household remedy are sufficient to prove that the theory is correct. Browns' Iron Bitters is sold by all dealers.

Some of our farmers are very much distressed over the present price of cotton. We admit that the price of cotton is somewhat discouraging, but cotton is not the only plant that can be raised in our Sunny South. We trust that the time is not far distant when the farmers will realize this fact and begin to make what they need at home.

Mr. Simmie Kilgore, one of our most aspiring young men, says though his girl has refused to allow him to visit her any more he still has the privilege of loving her without her permission. Just as you like it boys.

I wonder what so many young men were doing at Mr. Bennetts Morris' residence last Sunday, as Miss Ara is his only marriageable daughter. One would naturally suppose that if a case of matrimony was got up someone would get left.

Political Pointers.

Peoples Party Press Bureau
St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 2, 1898

Wonderful to relate, the Supreme Court has decided that the anti-trust law is constitutional. The Joint Traffic Association made a test case of the matter recently and this decision against it affects vast railroad interests. Another remarkable decision from the Supreme Court limits and defines the rights of the Pullman Palace Car Company, so that its right to purchase land and build a town, to be rented to working men, is unconstitutional and not in conformity with its charter.

It is a pleasure to note that the Reform press has at last opened its batteries on the many small alleged parties which get out tickets and adopt platforms similar to that of the Populists—thus dividing the vote and assuring the election of the Republicans.

W. O. Atkeson, a middle-of-the-roader, candidate for Circuit Judge in one of the Missouri Districts, and who was a leading shouter for Wharton Barker at the late Cincinnati convention, has withdrawn from the race and substituted the name of the Republican nominee for that position. This is but one of many instances that are daily occurring.

W. J. Bryan, who has been ordered to Savannah, Ga., enroute to Cuba with his regiment, is again reported ill with fever.

Much complaint is heard among the government employes at Washington over the heavy campaign tax demanded of them. One-fourth of this month's salary received is not an unusual demand.

Rev. F. Laverty, chairman of the People's Party Territorial Committee of Oklahoma, has resigned, giving opposition to fusion as ground for so doing. Republican papers announce that this move will insure the election of the notorious Dennis Flynn as a delegate to Congress.

The committee of the allied silver parties in Nebraska is doing good work toward securing Senator William Allen's re-election. In a recent address issued by them, his valiant work for reform is reviewed and all anti-goldbug voters are urged to support him. Senator Thurston, his Republican colleague, backed by ample means, is making a strong campaign against him.

The Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an euthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

It is now proposed in Spain that all the military schools in that country be closed. The idea is a good one. The boys would do much better at farming.

The new copyright law of Mexico makes no distinction between the rights of native and foreign authors. All that is necessary is that the work be published in Mexico. It will cost a foreign author $50 to copyright his book in that republic. A copyright holds for ten years.

The American may be a foreigner by birth, but he is a hero by naturalization, says the Denver (Col.) Times. As soon as he lives under the stars and stripes long enough to appreciate what they stand for he is ready to protect them. There is a whole lot of broken English spoken in the lines of an American regiment, but there is no break in the line of patriotism.

The scream of the locomotive is to sound in the mountain fastnesses of Madagascar. A French company has been granted the concession to build a railway which will run from Tamatave to Tananarivu, shortening the distance between the places by fifty per cent. and affording facilities for transportation of freight and passengers to the various distributing points on the south and west coasts of the huge island. Because of the chasmed country the road will be very expensive. Construction is to begin at once.

The decisive battle of Omdurman in the Soudan shows the perseverance of the English government. The advance of this expedition has consumed two years, and has been a striking example of sustained and steady effort. The caprices of the Nile had to be waited for, a railway had to be built, half-trained Egyptian troops had to be fully trained, and 25,000 men had to be moved hundreds of miles across desert wastes, and every mile of that way well guarded. It was a great undertaking, and as compared with the disastrous campaign of the Abyssinia/ shows most distinctly the difference between the Anglo-Saxon and the Latin races as soldiers.

A new phase of philanthropy has appeared in Allegheny, Pa., in a movement for the cheer of the sick in hospitals. It is proposed to establish an association for the loaning of pictures to be hung on the walls of the hospitals, the pictures to make the tour of the hospitals, and then to be returned to their owners. One of the first to respond offered sixty of the pictures from his home. In an accompanying letter he remarked that many persons spend a part of the year out of the city, and during that time the pictures would do much good in the hospitals without in the least depriving their owners of the enjoyment of them. It is a beautiful charity, akin to that of providing flowers for the hospitals, and may be widely copied if arrangements can be made for insuring the safety of the pictures while out of their owners' possession.

The New York Sun says:—The cable cars are not alone responsible for a new ailment which has lately made its appearance. A medical journal which has published an account of the new ailment attributes it chiefly to the trolley, although in both cases the active participation of the patient is necessary. According to the investigations of a physician, this new trouble consists of a fracture of one of the bones of the spine caused by striking the back of the seat in a street car. He finds that most persons rise in their seats before they have reached their destination or before the car has come to a full stop. In many cases they are thrown back on their seats when this happens or against the back of the seat, and this violent contact is likely to break one of the small bones in the spine. Luckily the result is not nearly so serious as it sounds and is much more likely to be inconvenient than dangerous. As the investigations which proved the existence of the new ailment were made in a Western town where transportation was chiefly by means of the trolleys, the same effects might not have been expected here. But the physician found that the trouble was likely to be caused by any quickly moving vehicle quite independently of what the motor power was. So persons suffering from unexplained backaches may discover that they stood up too soon while those who have so far escaped may take warning and keep their seats, in the words of the conductor, until the car stops.

CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Proclamation by the President Naming Thursday, November 24,

AS A DAY FOR REJOICING AND PRAISE.

Abundant Harvests, Increased Commerce, Better Public Credit and a Victorious War Cited as Blessings for Which to Give Thanks to God.

The president after the cabinet meeting Friday issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

"A Proclamation.

"By the President of the United States.

"The approaching November brings to mind the custom of our ancestors, hallowed by time and rooted in our most sacred traditions, of giving thanks to Almighty God for all the blessings He has vouchsafed to us during the past year.

"Few years in our history have afforded such cause for thanksgiving. We have been blessed by abundant harvests, our trade and commerce have been wonderfully increased, our public credit has been improved and strengthened, all sections of our common country have been brought together and knitted into closer bonds of national purpose and unity.

"The skies have been for a time darkened by the cloud of war, but as we were compelled to take up the sword in the cause of humanity, we are permitted to rejoice that the conflict has been of brief duration and the losses we have had to mourn, though grievous and important, have been so few considering the great results accomplished, as to inspire us with gratitude and praise to the Lord of Hosts. We may laud and magnify His holy name that the cessation of hostilities came so soon as to spare both sides the countless sorrows and disasters that attend protracted war.

"I therefore invite all my fellow-citizens, those at home as well as those who may be at sea or sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe Thursday, the 24th day of November, as a day of National Thanksgiving, to come together in their several places of worship, for a service of praise and thanks to Almighty God for all the blessings of the year; for the mildness of the seasons and the fruitfulness of the soil, for the continued prosperity of the people, for the devotion and valor of our countrymen, for the glory of our victory and the hope of a righteous peace, and to pray that the Divine guidance which brought us heretofore to safety and honor may be graciously continued in the years to come.

"In witness whereof, etc.

"John Hay, Secretary of State."

They were eventually rescued. The cargo was a total loss. The Kate belonged at Key West.

She failed to give him a satisfactory answer and he shot her through the breast near the heart. She may die. The housekeeper heard the screams of her young mistress, and when she rushed to the door Kennedy turned the gun on her and fired, but without effect. He ran a block, stopped, and placing the pistol at his temple, blew his brains out. He died three hours later.

SPAIN GIVES UP CUBA.

Sovereignty Relinquished Without Even Terms or Conditions.

PHILIPPINES WILL BE TAKEN UP NEXT.

The United States Guarantee That Life and Property Shall Be Secure in Cuba. Mutual Understanding Reached as to Porto Rico and Guam.

PARIS.—The Spanish peace commissioners have accepted the negative view of the United States commission toward the assumption by the United States of the Cuban debt. The American commissioners have firmly, but courteously, declined to assume for the United States the entire or joint responsibility for the Spanish financial conditions.

Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish commission, and his colleagues, with faithful insistence, sought another result, but they failed to attain it, and have finally abandoned the effort, and have agreed that the Cuban article of the protocol shall, without conditions, have a place in the ultimate treaty of peace. Thus Spain relinquishes sovereignty over and claim to Cuba without either terms or conditions. The one concession as to Cuba that our commissioners will make will be the guarantee of the United States that life and property shall be secure in Cuba. This responsibility the United States will assume only to such time as a stable government shall be formed and operative in Cuba. There will be no perpetual guarantee on that score.

All difficulties, if any existed, regarding Porto Rico and the selection of the Island of Guam, were also arranged by a mutual understanding, and the commissioners found themselves well-nigh touching the Philippine question, which will be taken up next.

FAVORS ANNEXATION.

But Senator Morgan Would Have Cuba Come In of Her Own Free Will.

Senator Morgan spoke in Birmingham Friday to a large audience. Regarding Cuba he said that the United States will not take the island by the ear and pull it into the union, but will hold it until the Cubans realize that their greatest security and prosperity lies in annexation to the union as a state. As to the Philippines, he said their great distance makes their situation different from Cuba or Porto Rico, but he did not believe there is a man in America who favors this country turning its back upon these people struggling for liberty and enlightenment. He thought that time would develop the Philippine question satisfactorily. He believed the demand for our silver money in the new possessions would practically force the remonetization of silver.

GOV. TANNER'S THREAT.

Great Activity in Birmingham District.

The greatest activity in iron and coal industries continues in the Birmingham district. Every furnace that is in operation has a demand for every pound of iron that it can make, and consequently the furnace capacity of the district is being kept as nearly the top notch as is practicable. The Pioneer Mining and Manufacturing Company is preparing to let a contract for the construction of a railroad from its furnaces at Thomas to its new coal mines at North Birmingham, and will also build 300 houses at the mines to be occupied by the men employed there.

The state mine inspector estimates that this year's coal production will go considerably past the 6,000,000 ton mark, thus breaking the "bumper" records of last year and the year previous. Every mine in the district is working to its full capacity, and some half a dozen new ones are being opened. Since the quarantines have been lifted Walker county coal has begun again to move to the Mississippi river for shipment down that stream to New Orleans and other Louisiana points. Four and a half miles of new railroad is to be built at once in Walker county to connect the various mines of the Ivy Coal and Coke Company with the Southern railway.

Iron shipments to Europe continue active. Furnaces are sold a long time ahead, and in consequence prices continue stiff with a decided upward tendency.

Big "Little" Industries.

It's the little things which count, so averred the amateur statistician, and especially is this true of the manufacturers, imports, exports and commercial pursuits of New York, where the trade in the insignificant trifles of personal use or articles common to the economy of the household requires an expenditure of millions and millions of dollars every year.

For instance, said he, consider the number of handkerchiefs annually sold. A prominent dealer estimates that the daily consumption of the United States is about 25,000 dozens, or 27,375,000 dozens yearly—28,500,000 single handkerchiefs. Even this estimate is regarded as entirely too low, for it allows only between four and five handkerchiefs to each person in the country. There are at least 1,000,000 lace handkerchiefs imported every year and their value is in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

When you go to buy clothespins at the corner grocery they give you 50 for 5 cents and you are, perhaps, inclined to wonder how they can afford to sell so many for so little money. But your nickel goes to swell a total of millions which are annually spent for these articles, for wherever the wash is hung out to dry the world over it is generally secured to the line with clothespins of American manufacture. They are turned out entirely by machinery, counted by machinery into boxes containing 720 each, and the boxes are nailed up by machinery. From the time the prepared blocks of wood enter the machines until as perfected clothespins they are packed in cases, not a human hand touches them. Two grades are made, firsts and seconds. First grade pins cost but 35 cents a box.

Between 13,000,000 and 14,000,000 cigar boxes are annually used in the United States. Of this number about nine-tenths are made in New York, and the trade rivals the great clothing industry in point of capital invested and the number of people employed.

Mirrors are seldom lost and never intentionally broken; therefore, it is inexplicable that the annual sales should amount to $8,000,000; but it is true, nevertheless. There are more than 2,000 persons employed in the manufacture of looking glasses. Of that number, which is composed almost entirely of men, fully one-half are in the state or city of New York. The industry is controlled by metropolitan capital.

New York yearly exports to Europe, Africa, South America, and Australia tons of wooden meat skewers, and, while they are made principally in the west, the bulk of the trade is controlled in that city. Skewers are almost exclusively made of hickory, and, like most manufactures of wood, they are turned out by factories located in close proximity to the forests whence the wood of which they are made is taken. Skewers are made in several lengths, 4½, 5, 5½, 6, and 7 inches, and up to gigantic fellows 16 inches long. They are made entirely by machinery, like the clothespin, and sold very cheap. Completed skewers are put up in bunches, which vary in the number contained, according to their size. Billions of them are annually used, and in New York city no less than 250,000,000 are consumed every year.

Labor Notes.

Mr. R. E. Coffey of Lynchburg, Va., is said to have invented a machine to strip tobacco which will revolutionize the business.

The strides made in silk manufacturing in America during the past few years have been very great, and imports of this class of foreign made goods are gradually diminishing.

Mr. W. H. Barret, superintendent of the Kansas and Texas Coal company, is endeavoring to secure white union members at Pana, Ill., to go to Huntingdon, same state, to work. He is meeting with little success. The men say they are determined to remain at Pana and fight the operators and blacks to the bitter end. They say they expect to win the strike, but can accomplish nothing so long as the military are kept there. Capt. Craig, the military commander, says the troops will be continued at Pana indefinitely.

Prominent members of the Liberty Dawn Association of Cab Drivers of New York city say that an international organization made up of all cab, coach, delivery wagon, express wagon, truck and ash cart drivers and all street railway employes is being perfected. The new organization will be known as the Vehicle and Traffic Trades council.

America grows 70 per cent of the world's cotton crop, and year by year a larger proportion of it is manufactured in this country, and in the south, near the cotton fields, have the spindles multiplied most rapidly. Such an increase in the cotton manufactories means a greater demand in America for American cotton, the market for our goods will be enlarged and the price of raw cotton will be stimulated. Its market price will be fixed on this side of the Atlantic, rather than in Liverpool, and the grower will reap the benefit.

BUTTING A STONE WALL.

GOLD IN OLD ROME.

AN OBJECT LESSON FROM THIRD CENTURY.

Conditions There Were Similar to Those Now Existing Here—Gold Men Would Not Surrender and the Empire Crumbled to Dust.

That the United States can and should by legislation immediately restore silver to a parity with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1 is made plain by a well-authenticated object lesson in Roman history that occurred 1,600 years ago, in which the financial facts and circumstances involved presented the same issue that is presented by the similar financial facts and circumstances that are to be dealt with in this country, and by which it is shown that silver was then and there remonetized with perfect success by the greatest of constructionists, Diocletian. Upon assuming imperial power, A. D. 284, this peasant-born military leader found the empire paralyzed and disintegrating under the benumbing and crushing effects of the single gold standard. He set things booming by simply restoring silver to the coinage at the old ratio of 12 to 1, with the same legal tender power as gold. Both Mommsen and Lenormant say that Augustus established the double standard of gold and silver, and that in the course of time, after many modifications, the single gold standard had been adopted. Our quotations about this change and about the restoration are from the Encyclopedia Britannica, Article "Numismatics," by Reginald L. Poole. It appears that "under Elagabalus the taxes were paid in gold alone.' That "this was ruinous" will not surprise any one who will consider American experience with greenbacks. The two issues of them that were receivable for government dues always kept even with gold. But those that were not good enough for Uncle Sam went down until gold was at a premium of 185 per cent in 1864. The emperors between Elagabalus and Diocletian were all unfriendly to silver, so that finally it was no longer used in the coinage. We have not space to repeat many interesting facts incident to "the depreciation of silver, which has ceased to have any real value." During Diocletian's reign and "before A. D. 293, the coinage of silver recommences with the denarius of the standard of Nero." "The denarius was the unit of reckoning." No more was heard of depreciated or worthless silver. Thus by Diocletian silver was rehabilitated to its old place with gold, there to remain yoked together until 1873. Yet what he did was but a practical application of that most profound of currency principles which long previously had been thus announced by Aristotle. "Money (nomisma) by itself is but a mere device. It has value only by law (nomos), and not by nature, so that a change of convention between those who use it is sufficient to deprive it of its value and of its power to purchase our requirements." By virtue of voluntary convention, money (nomisma) has become the medium of exchange. We call it "nomisma" because its efficiency is due not to nature but to law (nomos), and because it is in our power to regulate it. "The function of money" (nomisma), said he, "is to measure value." In all this the wisest of Greeks is in harmony with the wisest of Americans, Dr. Franklin, when he said that "gold and silver are not intrinsically of equal value with iron. Their value rests chiefly on the estimation they happen to be in among the generality of nations." Diocletian made many other great innovations and reforms in the constitution of the empire which were of such an enduring character that they gave form and direction to the affairs of state until the fall of Constantinople in 1204. De Quincy said he was "doubtless that man of iron whom the time demanded." However, after a reign of twenty-one years, he voluntarily retired to his farm in Dalmatia. To one who would have him return to power he wrote, "Were you but to come to Salona, and see the vegetables I grow in my garden with my own hands, you would no longer talk to me of empire." Diocletian at Salona cultivating his garden reminds us of the farming of some of our statesmen in retirement. Jackson at the Hermitage, Jefferson at Monticello, and Washington at Mount Vernon. Parton tells us of Jackson's sunset days that "he lived the life of a planter, carefully directing the operations of his farm." That "he still took the keenest delight in a flourishing cotton field, and loved a fine horse as much as he did when he brought Truston home from Virginia thirty years before." The same author says of Jefferson at this period of life that he "loved gardening and farming, the fields, the orchards, and his asparagus beds." Lossing remarks of Washington's closing years that "he rode upon his farms entirely unattended, opening the gates, pulling down the 'bars,' and inspecting with careful eye every agricultural operation." The late Mr. Custis has left on record a description of one of these occasions, in the latter years of his life, which he gave to a gentleman who was out in search of Washington: "You will meet, sir," said young Custis to the inquirer, "an old gentleman riding alone, in plain drab clothes, a broad-rimmed white hat, a hickory switch in his hand, and carrying an umbrella with a long staff which is attached to his saddle bow; that person, sir, is Gen. Washington."

PLENTY MONEY CREATES CIVILIZATION.

On Page 8 of "An Honest Dollar," by E. Benjamin Andrews, president of the Brown University, I find the statement made that the national debt on Sept. 1, 1865, amounted to about two and three-quarters billions of dollars, and that at that time it would have taken 18,000,000 bales of cotton (the human toil represented in 18,000,000 bales of cotton) to have paid the whole debt, and that after this debt had been reduced to a billion and a quarter—in other words, after there had been a payment of 55 per cent of the entire debt and all the interest due—it would have required 30,000,000 bales of cotton (the human toil represented in 30,000,000 bales of cotton) to have paid the balance, or 45 per cent of the original debt. If Messrs. Horr and Laughlin, both monometallists, are correct, if "human toil" is the measure of value, how can any honest man insist that there is any semblance of justice in compelling the payment of twice as much of "human toil" in the shape of cotton on a bond now as it would have taken to pay it when it was issued. In an address made by President Andrews before the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, which was published on the motion of Senator Cockrell, as a document by this body, this statement is made:

"Between 1870 and 1884 the public debt decreased not far from three-quarters of a billion of dollars, say seven hundred and fifty millions. Yet if we take wheat, corn, beef, oats, coal, cotton, and iron together as a standard—and they did not make a bad standard—the debt did not decrease, but increased not less than 50 per cent. Mr. Horr's standard, then, of human toil "shows distinctly that the burdens of the people have been enormously increased by the silent and unseen operation of unjust laws which do not deserve longer to disgrace the statute books of this great republic." The era of a lessening volume of money from the coming of Christ to Columbus was one of growing ignorance, tyranny, degradation; it was a period of retrogression, notwithstanding the power of the Christian religion which had just been revealed to man. When an increasing money supply created commerce, aroused mankind, stimulated ambition, created civilization, which in time widened into a system of education and enlightenment; it showed itself to be the most powerful aid to the great cause of Christianity and more good, more advancement, was accomplished in the four centuries succeeding the discovery of the gold and silver mines in America by the Spaniards than was accomplished in all of the fifteen centuries preceding it. The constantly decreasing value of money proved a great blessing to mankind, perhaps more than compensating for the injuries which had been entailed by the opposite condition of a constantly decreasing volume of money during the first fifteen centuries of the Christian era."

MAY BREAK NEGOTIATIONS

Spaniards Will Not Accede to Our Demand for Philippines.

WILL REFUSE TO SIGN PEACE TREATY

Civilized Nations Will Be Called Upon to "Witness the Abuse of Force" to Which They Will Be Subjected—French Comment.

PARIS.—The French papers derive their news of the work of the peace commissions from Spanish sources, and, therefore, the morning papers are interesting as indicating the atmosphere in the Spanish quarters and the trend of French views and tendencies. It must be recalled that the Spaniards have utterly accepted the refusal of the United States government to assume any of the Spanish debt, and the Cuban question has been set aside to await its place in the final treaty, provided the differences on the question of the Philippine islands shall not prevent the making of any treaty. As the whole is composed of its parts, so must the Philippine question be mutually agreed on, or none of these questions previously agreed on will find a place in the treaty.

This is all the provision or provisional understanding existent. In view of the facts then, the Paris press has initiated a tendency to confuse the situation.

The Matin says: "It is well understood that the cession of Porto Rico was tantamount to the payment of a war indemnity in cash, and entirely freed Spain from any subsequent repetition on the subject."

Referring to Monday's meeting, the Matin says: "The Spaniards said they would make their answer known on Friday. But, it is easy to foresee what it will be—a refusal, precise and formal. The Spanish plenipotentiaries have made up their minds, in the event of the United States adhering to the Philippine proposition, to decline signing the act of peace, to break off the negotiations and to call upon the civilized nations to witness the abuse of force to which they will be subjected and the violation of the provisions set forth in the Washington protocol."

BRITISH FLAGSHIP PUTS TO SEA.

The War Preparations of England and France Continue.

A Tuesday's special from Victoria, B. C., says: The Imperieuse, the flagship of the British North Pacific squadron, will follow the Amphion southward. A rush order for forty tons of provisions was placed Tuesday. The Imperieuse will sail under sealed orders not to be opened until the vessel is out of sight of land. The Amphion took on board one of the fast torpedo boats of the station, and Leander, now in dry dock, has also taken one on board. The torpedo destroyer Virado is provisioned and coaled and it is thought will accompany the flagship.

No Specific Details.

LONDON.—There is no noticable cessation in English preparations, and the officials are confident of the country's ability to meet all emergencies. There were large shipments of guns, shells, and war stores to Malta and Gibraltar Monday.

The dispatch from France announces equal activity in Toulon, Brest, Marsailles and elsewhere.

The Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says: "France is making great preparations at Bizarta, about forty miles northwest of Tunis. Guns and ammunition arrive daily, and men are strengthening the forts, working day and night. The object is said to be to cut communication between Malta and Egypt in the event of hostilities with Great Britain."

WILL KEEP THE PHILIPPINES

The Entire Archipelago Will Be Demanded by United States.

SPANISH DEBT WILL NOT BE ASSUMED.

A Definite Proposition to Be Submitted to Spaniards This Week—Believed That Spain Will Gladly Relinquish the Islands and Lessen Her Debts.

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Hay Saturday had an interview with the president presumably about matters before the Paris peace commission, but nothing is known of the contents of dispatches which may have been received from Mr. Day. It was intimated, however, that our representatives in Paris probably would be prepared to take up this week and submit to the Spanish ministers a distinct proposition on the Philippine question. It is fairly assumed, however, that this proposition may be subject to change as the negotiations progress. On the general subject of the Philippines members of the cabinet are usually reticent, and this fact is assumed by some to indicate that up to this time the administration itself has not fully determined on what it will or will not demand in this connection, beyond the fact that the entire archipelago must remain in the possession of the United States.

This determination has undoubtedly been reached, and under no circumstances will this government, through its Paris representatives, consent to a treaty which does not involve a complete surrender of Spanish sovereignty therein.

It may be further stated that this government will not assume any Spanish debt or obligation, possibly beyond the guarantee of certain municipal obligations which have been incurred in substantial municipal improvements. The debt which Spain has incurred in her efforts to put down insurrections will neither be paid, assumed nor guaranteed by the United States. This fact, it is quite certain, was distinctly stated to our commissioners before they left Washington. Whether or not this government would consent to payment of any sum of money to Spain for any part of her territory taken possession of by the United States, should any be found due upon a final settlement of the account, cannot be stated at this time, and it is believed that this particular feature of the question has never been raised in the president's conferences with the members of his cabinet.

Advices from Paris are to the effect that there is no change in the peace negotiation question, and that negotiations are in a fair way to be brought to a speedy termination.

Confirmed in Paris.

PARIS.—While the Spanish and American peace commissioners now stand on the threshold of the Philippine question, it seems probable, in the light of this hour, that the United States will take over the entire archipelago.

Some well informed persons believe that Premier Sagasta has determined to be rid of the Philippines and would direct his commission to sign a treaty by which the United States should take the islands and assume the $40,000,000 of debt.

Spaniards now in Paris declare that the Philippines are a drag and assert that Spain would lift a cry of joy to be relieved of them if the terrific debt pressure should be thus lessened.

The document was prepared on February 11, 1898, when Miss Davis was about to sail for Egypt, and by its terms she gives and bequeaths to her mother, Varina Howell Jefferson Davis, everything, both real and personal property, and any returns that may come from literary work, any stocks or moneys.

FOR CONGRESS:

W. F. ALDRICH

SPECIAL OFFER. THE BANNER one year for 80 cents.

NEXT Tuesday is election day.

VOTE for W. F. ALDRICA.

EVERY Populist owes it to himself, his family and his county to go to the polls on Tuesday next and vote for W. F. Aldrich.

DON'T be satisfied with going alone to the polls next Tuesday. See that your neighbors go with you, and all vote for W. F. Aldrich.

THE last report from Springfield, Ill., is that the middle-of-the-roaders have no right to a place on any ticket—state, congressional or legislative, owing to the fraudulent character of petitions presented.

THE People's candidate, W. F. Aldrich, will be returned again to Congress next Tuesday by a larger majority in the five white counties than ever before. Dalias, says the Age-Herald, will roll up the usual Democratic majority.

THE chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee has prepared a forecast of the probable result in the forth coming election. He confidently predicts that the Republicans will lose the House and that the Democrats will have a majority of 25 members in that body. The Republican committee however, is just as confident of success.

THE appointment of "Coin" Harvey as financial manager for the joint executive committees of the three free silver parties, is giving the gold Democrats and Republicans a good deal of uneasiness, as it means a probable union of these forces in the campaign of 1900 and a renewal of the political struggle on the lines of 1896.

THREE Populist tickets will appear on the official ballot in Missouai this year, as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court in the mandamus proceedings brought by the middle-of-the-roaders to compel the Secretary of State to file their ticket. The nominees of this faction were also certified by petition in compliance with the statute and the Secretary could not refuse to recognize them. Since the court has so ordered, the middle-of-the-road ticket will appear under the Populist heading with the regular People's Party nominees. The Supreme Court thus declares all three Populist tickets constitutional. The decision leaves all parties who desire to do so, free to file nominations without scarcely a limit or restriction. This practically annuls the Australian ballot law in the State. The Court, however, did not pass upon the quettion as to which faction of the People's Party had a majority of delegates to the State convention.

SPECIAL OFFER. THE BANNER one year for 50 cents. This offer is good for two weeks only. Now is the time to subscribe.

The sooner a cough or cold is cured without harm to the sufferer the better. Lingering colds are dangerous, Hacking cough is distressing. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures it. Why suffer when such a cough cure is within reach? It is pleasant to the taste. J. M. Stanfield.

SENATOR John T. Morgan, in 1894, in an interview in the city of Washington, which was extensively published in the public press, speaking of ballot-box stuffing, said:

"It is the most heinous of all crimes unless we except murder or rape, and a man who would aid in doing it would steal the bread from the altar or the sacred vessels from the communion table. A man who would reject a legal ballot, throw it out, or make a false return is not fit for human society. He would rob his mother; he would steal the savings of a begger. I would not trust him with anything."

IT is greatly to be hoped that before Senator Morgan makes his speech at Clanton he will take the trouble to read the evidence in the two last Congressional contests. We have a lively recollection that some four years ago, when the Senator made a speech at Clanton, we said he had never SEEN any election frauds perpetrated. This may very well be. But there are doubtless many things the Senator has not seen and yet knows to be true. But he may easily see the evidence taken in the case in which Mr. Robbins was concerned, and if after reading that he feels disposed to urge upon the Democrats of Chilton county to support Mr. Robbins we shall be mistaken.

THE Democratic nominee, Mr. Robbins, has already, in his despair, called upon Gov. Johnston to come to his assistance, and now seeks aid from Senator Morgan. Of course we have nothing to say against Mr. Robbins calling in any of his friends. But do they do him any good? No; they cannot. The best of workmen must have good material to work if they are to accomplish anything. In this case the material is of such inferior quality it is impossible to do any thing with it. Gov. Johnston did not make a single vote for Mr. Robbins, and with all due deference to Senator Morgan he will not be able to do any better. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Robbins, and all that he represents, is thoroughly understood by the people of Chilton who refuse to have any of it, and cannot be induced to vote for Mr. Robbins by Senator Morgan or any other speaker. We shall be glad to hear what the Senator has to tell us about his trip to Hawaii, but will be surprised if he advances any one solid reason why any man should vote for Mr. Robbins.

HON. W. F. ALDRICH has been keeping his appointments in Chilton this week and everywhere he is more firmly convinced the voters he is the man to vote for next Tuesday. This morning, at Clanton, he again went fully into his views on the money question, which his audience found entirely to their liking. He pulled to pieces the flimsy circular issued from Democratic headquarters, and showed it to be a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end. He told of some of the steps that have been taken to secure to the people a free vote and honest count, and we are assured of a big majority in the five white counties.

Capt. A. T. Goodwyn made an exceptionally strong speech, which we wish every voter in Chilton could have heard, and begged every Populist to turn out and vote for W. F. Aldrich.

EVERY free man has the right to vote, and every free man should vote for W. F. Aldrich.

PROBATE Judge S. M. Adams duly took the oath of office this morning and was installed in the Probate office for the next six years. Circuit Clerk Deason also took the oath and possession of his office. These two gentleman are well known to everyone in the county, and the people are thoroughly satisfied they have done well in electing them to the responsible positions they occupy. We congratulate Judge Adams and Circuit Clerk Deason on their induction into office, and we congratulate the people of Chilton county on having put them there.

THEY WERE SUDS, NOT SOUP.

And the Female Investigator Didn't Get Her Name In the Paper.

There is an ambitious young woman reformer in St. Louis whom every reader of the papers knows. Not long ago she heard that the city government was about to make an inspection of the workhouse, and she made up her mind to forestall the investigation by making one on behalf of the alphabetical association of which she was a member. She had heard horrible stories to the effect that the Wandering Willies in the workhouse were sadly mistreated, starved, bastinadoed and deprived of many of the things which are essential to the advancement and welfare of mankind.

Armed with a permit from the secretary of her society and wearing the badge of a member, she swooped down upon the workhouse one morning, and, after gaining admission to the grounds, stole with stealthy steps around the basement of the building in search of the kitchen. She knew she would find the cook making sausage out of the day's killing at the adjoining dog pound or serving the dishwater as soup to the friendless inmates. It was just dinner time. She would catch the miscreants redhanded and expose them in the public prints. Her name would appear as one of the leading reformers of St. Louis, and maybe Lady Somerset would send her an autograph photograph of herself. Oh, rapture!

She stepped into a long hall unobserved and was rewarded by seeing two men, apparently waiters, marching toward her. Each carried a mighty caldron of steaming liquid.

"Soup!" hissed the reformer lurking in the shadows. "I'll see whether they are feeding dishwater to these poor prisoners and calling it 'soup,' the villains." And she waited for the coming waiters.

"Stop," she almost shrieked in her excitement, as the two soup carriers came opposite her. "Set down these caldrons. I am Mrs. Hot Stuff, second vice president of the Woman's Society For the Prevention of Dishwater Soup," and she gave her name and showed the aluminium star on her heaving bosom. The men set down their burdens in awe.

"Get me a spoon," said Mrs. Stuff, sniffing the steam from the liquid while one of the carriers disappeared into a doorway, to return in a moment with a soup spoon. "This smells to me like dishwater," said the lady, ladling up a spoonful of the stuff. The men stood grimly by while the dauntless reformer blew upon the hot liquid a breath like the south wind on the sanitary company.

Then she sipped the "soup" with a grimace. "That is not soup," she said solemnly. "You know it is not fit to drink."

"No, ma'am, it is not soup," said the first wretch.

"It is dishwater, and you know it," said the reformer.

"No, ma'am, it is not dishwater," said the second wretch humbly.

"What is it, then? Speak out. It may be that it is not your fault, and I will intercede for you if you tell me."

"You see, madam, this is wash day. After the washing is done we get the hot water from the laundry and use"— But she was gone. She didn't wait to learn that the two trusties were going to scrub the superintendent's back porch with the hot "soup," and the next morning there were no flaring headlines about workhouse abuses and the brave woman reformer.—St. Louis Republic.

I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children. E. J. SCANTLEBURY.

IN THE LIGHT OF DEATH.

When all the wheels of life are running slow,
And all the fires of life are falling low
And flickering to an end,
Then, in death's dawning light, we seem to know
What it all means—why things must happen so,
And not as we intend.

I thought to keep my own life good and fair,
Now broken, blotched and ugly, it lies there,
Spread like a map in view.
I made the blots, the blunders, everywhere,
The bitter disappointments in full share,
The sorrows, old and new.

But, though fresh failures come with each fresh day,
Though pain persists and will not pass away
Till life itself shall cease—
Taught by this gleam of death's keen searching ray—
"No human life is whole," I've learned to say,
"But of God's whole, a piece."

Each individual life is not our own
'Tis in God's building just one little stone
Chiseled to fit one place.
Useless—not cut to shape, but left alone.
Useful, if, when its proper place is known,
It fits it, by God's grace!

For through God's temple rise in noble state
Smooth marble blocks of wondrous weight
And polished pillers tall.
But there are other stones, not smooth nor great,
Seeming despised—thrown out—yet, soon or late,
Wanted, however small.

So, if the Master Builder needs in me
A broken fragment only fit to be
A fragment, out of sight,
Still, in his house a stone—if even he has chosen me for this use, ah, then I see
All I thought wrong is right.

—Good Words.

From Extreme Nervousness.

THAT no one remedy can contain the elements necessary to cure all diseases, is a fact well known to everyone. Dr. Miles' System of Restorative Remedies consists of seven distinctively different preparations, each for its own purpose.

Mrs. L. C. Bramley, 37 Henry St., St. Catherines, Ontario, writes: "For years I suffered from extreme nervousness and annoying constipation, developing into palpitation and weakness of the heart. I was unable to sleep, suffered much from headache, pain in my left side, palpitation and a constant feeling of weakness and prostration. I began using Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills and the Anti-Pain Pills to relieve sudden paroxysms of pain and headache. I soon felt much improved and the pains and aches and weariness left me. I then took Dr. Miles' Restorative Tonic and am now restored to my former good health."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, is the greatest Labor Organization the world has ever seen,

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR

It is the only organization which, while striving to secure for wage-workers the best possible terms as to wages, hours and conditions, aims at reforming the causes of industrial injustice.

It secures to each trade and locality absolute control over its own trade or local affairs, yet the perfect organization enables its members to act unitedly, promptly, and, therefore, effectually when concentrated action becomes necessary to remedy injustice or to resist oppression.

It is pledged to work for the overthrow of the capitalistic system of production and exchange, yet, realizing that reforms as only be beneficial and permanent when they rest upon the convictions of a wisely educated people, it seeks to accomplish objects only by appeals to reason and conscience—never by force.

It is a secret organization only so far as secrecy is necessary to protect its members from wrong and persecution, and can never be used to shield wrong-doing.

Its doors are open to all who labor honestly and usefully either by hand or brain, without question or discrimination on account of creed, race or nationality.

THE WILD TRIBES OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Poisoned Arrows and Murderous Daggers Among the Weapons Used by the Native Islanders.

The native inhabitants of the Philippines can be conveniently divided into four groups: the civilized Indians, the Mohammedans, the wild Indians and the Negritos or Attas. These same divisions existed at the coming of the Spanish in 1519, though their relative numbers, location and other conditions must have changed greatly since that time.

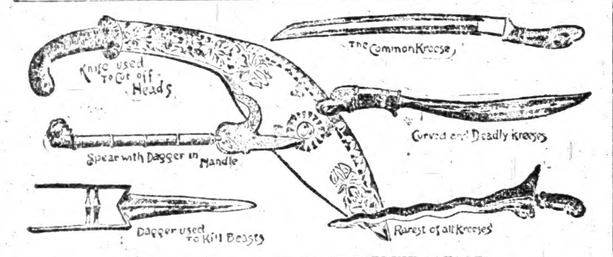
The uncivilized Indian tribes occupy much of the interior and mountainous parts of all the large islands of the group, except Cebu and Bohol, in which they have either been Christianized and merged with the civilized Indians or have been driven out. They still occupy nearly all the territory of the great islands of Mindoro and Palawan. They number, according to Spanish estimates, some three or four hundred thousand, belonging to over fifty different tribes.

PHILIPPINE ABORIGINES.

They are shut off from the sea and means of communicating with one another and the outside world by the civilized Indians about them, and probably remain in much the same condition of savagery as when first observed by the Spanish.

Like the civilized Indians, the savages are brown in color, with coarse, straight black hair and little beard. They seem to be somewhat smaller and slighter of figure than their Christian neighbors.

Their languages show close kinship to those of the civilized tribes adjacent and also as close to those of the savages of Formosa. Few of the tribes possess lands fit for the cultivation of lowland rices, and fewer still have the necessary skill and implements and plow beasts (buffaloes) for cultivating such lands. Their recourse is the common one of savages nearly the world round—they cut off small portions of the forest during the dry season, and after burning this over, they plant, at the beginning of the rainy season, upland rice, maize, sweet potatoes, etc., among the blackened logs and stumps. The supply of food thus gained is usually insufficient, and after it is eaten up they lead a miserable existence, scouring the woods for game and wild fruit and going to the sea beach wherever they can reach it for shell fish and other food. Their method of cultivation compels continual change of place.



UGLY WEAPONS USED BY PHILIPPINE SAVAGES.

Their houses are usually built after the plan of those of the civilized Indians—a basket-like structure of bamboo and palm leaves raised upon posts above the ground, but they are not so well built and are occupied but for a few years. They are not built into compact villages, but a few scattered houses are formed without streets, but near enough to be within call. Necessarily, what can be said of such a multitude of detached tribes in regard to their clothing, arms, religion, etc., must be of the most general character.

Their clothing usually consists solely of the taparabo, or breech clout, all else generally being in the nature of ornament and consisting of beads about the neck and head and arms, and anklets or leglets of boar's bristles, and frequently with bright colored pearl shells hanging upon the back or breast. The Spanish authorities do not allow the savages to enter the towns in their ordinary state of nakedness, which accounts for the unusual amount of clothing shown in the accompanying photographs. They frequently blacken the teeth, and in some cases file them to a point.

Some of the wilder tribes of North Luzon are said still to hunt the heads of their enemies with which to ornament their dwellings, like the head-hunting savages of Formosa and the Dyaks of Borneo, but the tribes in contact with the Christian Indians content themselves with hanging the skulls of monkeys, deer, wild boar and buffaloes about their doors.

The weapons used by savages in the interior of Luzon, Mindanao and the smaller Philippine Islands are perhaps more deadly than those of any other race. The quaint and curious shapes of their daggers and kreeses lend to them a distinct peculiarity not found in the weapons of other races. Small in size, skilfully carved and pointed, they can be handled with great effect, and in most instances a single trust is sufficient to do the work. Like the Indian arrow heads some of them are poisoned at the point, which means sure death once a wound is inflicted.

Perhaps the most deadly of all the Philippine weapons are the daggers carried by the chiefs. These are made of iron, mostly of a poor quality, and are about eighteen inches long. They are crooked or wavering in shape, with a rough, uneven surface. The edges are as sharp as a razor, the point almost like that of a needle, and they are carried in a case which fits the blade to perfection. The cases are made of hard wood, the handles bearing beautifully carved inscriptions, representing the name of the chief and tribe. These crooked daggers are carried exclusively by the chiefs, the right to possess them being considered a great honor.

The kreese, though, is the most important of all Filipino weapons. The more savage tribes lasso the foe and cut off his head with the kreese. Others steal up behind the foe and aiming a little below the base of the brain decapitate him with a single blow.

The Medical News publishes a letter from its special correspondent at Manila, describing the plan pursued by the Philippine natives to poison arrows and their dexterity in inflicting barbarous punishment upon their enemies with daggers. He says: It will have to be taken into consideration that most of the Philippine Islanders are savages who fight with lances and poisoned arrows. I once had the privilege of witnessing the preparation of a number of these poisoned weapons, and as nearly as I can remember the process was about as follows:

"The poison was made from the bark of two different trees, the names of which I have forgotten. One of the pieces of bark was beaten almost to a jelly, pressed and dried, then moistened and again pressed. Though the man used his bare hands in doing this, he apparently was not injured in any way by contact with the poison. The juice of the bark thus extracted looked very much like pea soup as it simmered in an earthen vessel over a slow fire. When it had reached the consistency of a syrup a quantity of pulp from the second piece of bark was scraped off and the juice of this squeezed into the syrup over the fire.

"The juice of the second piece of bark was dark brown in color, and the liquid in the vessel was darkened and changed as soon as the new ingredient was stirred into it. The mixture was then allowed to simmer for some time, until it had attained the consistency of jelly, when it was scraped out of the vessel with a chip and put on a large leaf which had been plentifully sprinkled with ashes. This preparation can be kept a long time without losing any of its strength. To poison an arrowhead a piece of this jelly-like substance about the size of a hickory nut is warmed and rubbed all over the point, which can be used repeatedly without the poison losing its virtue.

"The natives also have daggers with sharp-pointed blades about four inches wide and a foot long, which they call bararaos. They are very dexterous in the use of this weapon, and if they can lay hold of an adversary by the hair, they cut off his head with one sweep of the arm and carry it home as a trophy of the war."

NATIVES OF ABRA.

The Reigning British Beauty.

In the constellation of English beauties a new star has appeared in the person of Miss Pamela Snowden. She shines with added brightness in the exclusive set by setting off her beauty with a quaint individuality in dress and through her possession of a strangely peculiar pair of eyes, one of which is blue and the other brown. An enormous fortune, even though made "in trade," does not tend to dim the luster of her social success. Miss Snowden shows independence of the mode most especially in her headdress. Her flaxen hair is brought lightly back from her face and invariably held in place by a wreath of lilies—a Norma wreath. With it is always worn an empire gown. No jewels adorn her fair person. Her social position is most secure, as she was wise enough to have as her sponsors the powerful society leaders, the Marchioness of Granby and Mrs. Asquith. Lady Alice Montagne, daughter of the Duchess of Manchester, is one of Miss Snowden's most cherished friends, and affects her quaint style of dress.

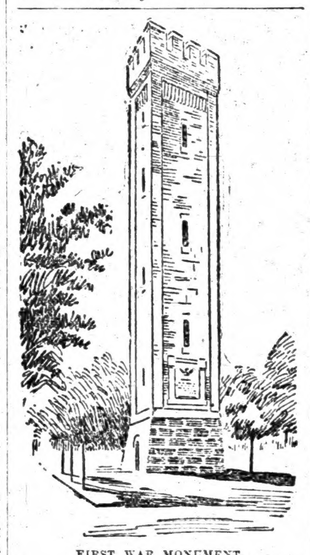
MISS PAMELA SNOWDEN.

A Clear Case of Nemesis.

Each year for seven years there has appeared in the famous agony column of the London Times an in memoriam notice of a young man who was murdered in Scotland about the year 1890. "Vengeance is mine; I will repay thee, saith the Lord," is the quotation that has always accompanied the notice. The alleged murderer was tried and acquitted of the crime, more from the lack of positive evidence than from any belief in his innocence on the part of the jury. The notice may or may not appear when the anniversary of the murder comes around again, as the alleged murderer has now been convicted of forgery and fraud and has been sentenced to a long term of penal servitude. It seems to be a pretty clear case of Nemesis.—Boston Herald.

Cincinnati's Tribute to the Sixth Infantry.

Here is the first monument to the dead of the war so far erected. It stands in the suburbs of Cincinnati, and bears a tablet to the memory of the fallen heroes of the Sixth Infantry. The tower, upon whose four sides bronze tablets have been placed, guards the entrance to Fort Thomas. It is one hundred feet high, and each bronze tablet is seven by ten feet in size.



FIRST WAR MONUMENT.

It is an unusual tribute, and one to be commended. The regulars go from post to post, and belong neither to State nor city, but the Sixth Infantry, which went to the war from Cincinnati, had been stationed for six years near that city, and was well known and much liked there. When it marched away, all Cincinnati cheered; and after it had gone, Cincinnati followed its record. The Sixth's loss in the assault of San Juan hill was greater than that of any regiment except the Sixteenth. Cincinnati lamented, but was proud of its regulars, and the memorial tablet being suggested, the money for it was promptly raised by the Chamber of Commerce.

Cubans Eaters of Rice.

Rice is a staple article of food in Cuba, where it is consumed in immense quantities; in fact, no meal is complete without it, and it is served as invariably as bread or potatoes. The rice is boiled and steamed, so that each grain will stand apart from its neighbor.

Richest Part of Britain.

Wales is the richest part of Great Britain in mineral wealth. England produces annually about $10 to each acre, Scotland a little less than $10, but the product of Wales amounts to over $20 per acre.

THE REALM OF FASHION.

An Indispensable Garment.

Hunting-red cloth makes this smart little reefer, black braid in scroll rows and scroll design with gilt military buttons adding much to its up-to-date style. This style of jacket retains its well-merited popularity, no child's wardrobe being complete without it. The stylish cape collar closing at the neck affords just the protection most necessary when a jacket is required at all. The simple shaping includes underarm gores, shoulder and centre-back seams, extra fullness being disposed in an underlying box pleat below the waist line in centre-back.

CHILD'S REEFER JACKET.

The neck is finished with a rolling collar trimmed on its free edges to match the cape collar. The two seamed sleeves are of fashionable shape, with modified fullness at the top, and the wrists are decorated to match the collars. Serge in blue, tan or cream, pique, duck crash, as well as faced cloth, are all used to make jackets in this style. The collar can be of white pique trimmed with embroidered frills and finished separately, so as to launder when necessary.

To make this jacket for a girl of six years of age one yard of material fifty-four inches wide will be required.

A Seasonable Costume.

Smooth-faced cloth in dark hunter's green is the material chosen for the stylish "May Manton" coat, shown in the large engraving, which is one of the newest this season. Large bone buttons close the fronts in double-breasted style, and machine stitching gives the correct finish. The body is closely fitted with single bust darts, under-arm and side-back gores, the seam in centre-back curving stylishly above the deep coat laps just below the waist-line. Deep skirt portions are joined in cross-hip seams to the body portion, coat pleats being formed where they join the back, a large button marking the top. These skirt portions may lap with the fronts or be cut off and finished in centre with round or square lower corners. The fronts are faced, and roll back in wide lapels that meet the rolling collar in notches. Large pocket laps are included in the hip seams and give a jaunty air to the coat. The two-seamed sleeves may be pleated, gathered or dart fitted at the top. For coats in this style, plain faced cloth in shades of blue, brown, tan, green gray and mode is mostly chosen, braid or stitch straps being appropriate decorations. A tailor finish or machine stitching is always correct and in good taste.

To make this coat for a woman of medium size will require two and one-quarter yards of material fifty-four inches wide, two and one-half yards of material forty-four inches wide if the skirt is to be pieced, three and one-half yards of material forty-four inches wide if the skirt is not pieced.

The Gored Skirt.

This skirt models our well-known seven gores gain rather than lose in favor. The five gored shape has a rather wide side breadth. The popularity of the seven piece suit is largely due to the fact that it is a medium style—neither too full nor too scant in breadths—and also to its general contour and effect as it proves alike becoming to stout as to slender figures, to women tall or short, and is an excellent model for either silk or wool material.

For Street Costumes.

Ladies' cloth will be much used in making street and calling costumes.

One of the Smart Wraps.

This handsome cape has the charm of novelty, and is one of the smartest wraps seen this season. Gray broadcloth is represented, with black silk applique embroidery, pleated inch-wide black satin ribbon adding greatly to the stylish decoration, and the lining of rich red satin gives warmth to the coloring. The hat is of gray felt, with facing of black velvet, red satin loops and rosette and jet-black wings. The close adjustment at the shoulders is secured by short darts, and the cape flares slightly at the lower edge, where it droops in back and round up to the neck in front. The circular flounce is joined to its lower edge and continues on each front, where it is arranged to fall softly in jabot effect over the closing in the centre. The seam is hidden by a band of embroidery. The neck is finished with a sectional collar that flares becomingly at the upper edge, a lace-edged circular ruffle or frill of lace placed inside giving a dainty completion.

WOMAN'S COAT OR CIRCULAR SKIRT.

For dressy wear rich silk, satin and velvet are chosen for capes in this style, but no material is more satisfactory for ordinary purposes than good broadcloth, covert, whipcord, camel's-hair or any good material made en costume. A pretty lining is a necessary accompaniment, and ribbon or velvet, plain or ruched, braid or bands of the cloth, can be used for decoration.

To make this cape for a woman of medium size will require two and three-fourths yards of fifty-four-inch material.

WOMAN'S CAPE, WITH CIRCULAR FLOUNCE.

Successful Entertaining.

Luncheons, afternoon teas and dinners are all within the province of the housekeeper's occasional indulgence. To insure success to any one of these functions she, herself, must preside, at least oversee, to the arrangement of the table, which may be as elaborate or simple as her circumstances or inclination dictates.

The linen must be spotless, the glass, china and silver exceptionally clean, the whole service dainty—the dining room well aired and lighted. If flowers be used for decoration, instead of the usual conventional centrepiece of ferns, a few long-stemmed roses, or other flowers of one color, with plenty of their own foliage, similarly arranged in a deep, richly colored glass vase, will be more graceful and a greater variety of flowers "packed together."

When a number of guests are to be entertained, small tables, seating four to six, are often used, and at a luncheon taught by Boston caterers on the piazza or under the trees the entertainment is given in the dining room during the day time.

After the arrangement of the table is satisfactorily completed all instructions for serving are carefully gone over with the waitress, it is the duty of the hostess to call her attention to her guests and see that they are pleasantly entertained.

Endeavor to unite only congenial people; if your friends are apt to lose no time in introducing one another. In seating your guests considerable tact may be exercised in placing a good talker beside a good listener, a person with decided views beside one who is so easy and amiable that he or she will agree with everything you may say, or luncheon is to be a success you must exercise a little judgment as to the table. Success of the entertainment depends much upon the hostess.

Eggs.

Egg Bread.—Make a cup of crumbs soaked in a pint of milk, two eggs, two cups sour milk, a spoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful soda, one cup flour; soak the bread crumbs over night.

Marrow Rings on Toast.—Ask the butcher saw five inches of the bone of a marrow bone. Cut slices of bread in circles, butter each slice, put in a roasting pan and put a piece of marrow bone on the middle of each slice, sprinkle each lightly with salt, a saltspoon of salt and a scant saltspoon of cayenne. Stand in a hot oven until a light brown. Remove to a platter, slip a paper frill over the bone, and serve.

Columbus Salad.—One-half dozen hard boiled eggs. Cut a slice from the large end of each and remove the yolks and mash them fine. Remove the yolks and mash them fine. Add two or three tablespoonfuls of boned sardines, tongue or ham, add butter and season highly with mustard and pepper, and moisten with a little vinegar or mayonnaise if to be used. Fill the white cases carefully, so as to leave no space at the end, and pile water cress around.

Molded Tomatoes.—Remove the skins from small tomatoes, sprinkle with salt and invert for half an hour. Mix any vegetable salad—finely minced celery, beans, lettuce. Set in form and cover with aspic under and between, using a teaspoonful in each tomato. Add mayonnaise of cream dressing on top. When the mold has been filled, finish the top with sliced cucumbers, capers, and set in larger mold with lettuce. Almost too beautiful to demolish.

White Cocoanut Pie.—Grate the milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two rounded tablespoonfuls of flour, two or three ounces grated cocoanut, yolks of four whites of eggs, small piece of butter, pinch of salt. Bake with one crust alone. Mix the starch, sugar and salt together dry and stir them into the butter and cocoanut. Let this cool to get cold. Whip the whites to a stiff froth, and mix them with the other ingredients. Flavor to taste. Bake in thin crust. Makes two small pies.

Spain Will Make a Tremendous Effort to Secure Pecuniary Compensation for the Philippines.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Standard says: "The government has good reasons to believe that the United States intends to retain the Philippines on the ground that President McKinley must satisfy public opinion. The government believes that the American commissioners will argue the necessity for thus deviating from the spirit and text of the protocol.

"Spain, however, cannot yet believe she will be deprived of the Philippines without some pecuniary compensation in addition to a recognition of the Philippine loan of 1896. Therefore, upon the question of the Philippines the Spanish commissions will make even a stronger resistance than they have made over the Cuban debt."

MAD MAN'S DEED.

Cuts a Citizen's Throat and Wounds Two Atlanta Police Officers.

W. G. Shockly, an insane farmer of Auburn county, Georgia, cut the throat of J. D. Bishop, and wounded Police Captain John Thompson on a street car in Atlanta Friday. Robert McCoy, an ex-policeman, in effecting the capture of the demented murderer, was seriously, but not fatally stabbed. Bishop died instantly.

Shockly called at the police station during the morning and asked to be locked up as he was going insane, but was thrown out of the station. Shockly then called on Governor Atkinson and asked for protection from lynchers, and while the governor was telephoning the police, the insane man departed.

Shockly was sitting next to Bishop in the car, and without a word drew a razor, reached around and nearly severed the head from the body.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

Easy and Inexpensive Treatment of Hog Cholera.

During the past two years the department of agriculture has conducted a series of experiments in the use of serum as a remedy for hogs affected by cholera or swine plague. The experiments were conducted by the chief of the bureau of animal industry, and the results were eminently satisfactory, proving that the dread disease can be successfully and inexpensively treated. The losses suffered by the farmers of the United States annually from hog cholera aggregate an enormous sum. In Iowa alone during 1896 it is estimated that hog raisers lost through the ravages of the disease $15,000,000.

CASE OF FANATICISM.

Colored Woman Dies From Practicing Doctrine of Fasting.

A case of fanaticism of the extreme type has been discovered at Los Angeles, Cal., when Nell Thompson, colored, died while being taken from the home of Mrs. Minerva Williams, who is said to call herself a representative of Christ, and who has been preaching the doctrine of fasting as a means of grace. The Thompson woman practiced this doctrine, having gone without food for eight days and sleeping in the river bottoms on a piece of matting in pursuance of what is said to be Mrs. Williams' teachings.

A Nation of Dyspeptics.

From the Mountaineer, Walhalla, N. Dakota.

The remorse of a guilty stomach is what a large majority of the people are suffering with to-day. Dyspepsia is a characteristic American disease and it is frequently stated that "we are a nation of dyspeptics."

Improper food, hurried eating, mental worry, exhaustion—any of these produce a lack of vitality in the system, by causing the blood to lose its life-sustaining elements. The blood is the vital element in our lives and should be carefully nurtured. Restore it to its proper condition, dyspepsia will vanish and good health follow.

For example, in the county of Pembina, North Dakota, a few miles from Walhalla, resides Mr. Earnest Sulder; a man of sterling integrity, whose veracity cannot be doubted. He says:

The Doctors Disagreed.

"I became seriously ill three years ago. The doctor gave me medicine for indigestion, but I continued to become worse. I had several physicians at intervals who gave me some relief, but the disease would return with all its accustomed severity.

"I read in the newspapers articles regarding the wonderful curative powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and finally concluded to try the pills. Five months ago I bought six boxes. The first box gave me much relief, and after using four boxes I was cured."

These pills are recognized everywhere as a specific for diseases of the blood and nerves. For paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other diseases long supposed incurable, they have proved their efficacy in thousands of cases.

Deaths from Disease in the Army.

An editorial writer in The Sun gives the surgeon-general's estimate of the number of deaths from disease up to the present time as about 1,500, or only about three-fifths of one per cent. in a total force of about 250,000 men. He cites a Konversations-Lexicon published in Leipsic—Brockhaus', we presume—as stating the loss of life from disease in the German army during the Franco-Prussian war to have been nearly two per cent. A French medical authority, Dr. Cheun, according to The Army and Navy Journal (also cited by The Sun's writer), gives the number of "sick and frostbitten" in the French army as 339,421. The Hispano-American war has lasted thus far about five months. The Franco-Prussian lasted about seven months. The advantages of the Germans in being thoroughly prepared, the writer thinks, go far to neutralize this disparity of duration.

Good Advice.

Life is too short and full of care and sorrows for one to be the cause of adding one feather's weight of trouble to another's load. Will Carleton, the poet, in the "First Settler's Story," we believe it was, makes the old man say, in speaking of his wife, that she used to stand around and boss the job, and by her kind words lifted whole tons. Kind words have the same effect the world over. They lift a fellow out of the slough of despond; they break the stiffened, set features of the worried into a pleasant, hopeful smile. And how much better it is to cultivate the habit of treating everyone as though a time would come when we should lay down the mortal form; and that to leave behind a character and reputation of fairness, truth, and honor is the most enduring of riches. —Scientific American.

There are frauds in soaps as well as other things. Sometimes a grocer will offer you a substitute for Ivory Soap, because his profits are larger on the substitute. He and the purchaser are losers in this transaction. The dealer ultimately loses the customer, and the customer suffers from the mischief of the substitute. A person accustomed to Ivory Soap will not be satisfied with any other. Ask for Ivory Soap and insist upon getting it.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

NERVOUSNESS

you will very soon be cured of Nervousness and all other female troubles as well. If costive, move the bowels with mild doses of St. Joseph's Liver Regulator.

I HAVE SUFFERED FOR YEARS with painful menses, attended with sour stomach, rushing of blood to the head, and occasional whites. I also have severe nervous spells and heart palpitation so bad I cannot rest. I have used various female remedies for a long time but found no relief until about two months ago, when I commenced using your Gerstle's Female Panacea and ST. JOSEPH'S LIVER REGULATOR, and they are doing me more good than all others. I shall continue their use.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

It is impossible to promise particular features that will appear in the "AMERICAN MONTHLY" during the coming year, for it is a Review, as Dr. Beckman says, "a great monthly newspaper." As such it presents to its readers an illustrated account of the notable things which make the history of the month, of the political, economic and literary world, which are of value to intelligent men and women. The "Progress of the World" is concisely an illustrated story of the month. The "Leading Articles" give the best thought and information of the current magazines in the various departments; the contributed articles furnish the character sketches of the notable men of the month, and give timely discussions by authorities on any question of special and serious import.

"We know of no review published, in this country or in Europe, which is conducted so successfully as the AMERICAN MONTHLY. The alertness, and energy of its editor, the sound judgement, carefully weighed opinions, exact knowledge, and well-composed English of the purely literary portions."—The Outlook.

The result of this comprehensive effort to edit in one monthly volume the important information needed by intelligent people of "live" interests is best proved by the opinions which the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY have seen fit to express. These are thinking business men, clergymen, editors, lawyers, professors, engineers, the wide-awake women of America. They write that the AMERICAN MONTHLY "is indispensable"; "is simply invaluable"; "is a generous library in itself"; "a historical cyclopedia of the world"; "the best means of aid for a busy man"; "the best periodical of the kind we have ever had"; "a triumph of editorial genius"; "the world under a field-glass," etc., etc.

Jemison, Nov. 5, 1898

EDITOR BANNER.—We have carefully noticed the articles in the Banner concerning ownership of male stock etc. We are glad to see so many in favor of freedom on this important subject. It is nice to have the opinions of the people for our Legislator to act upon. We are glad we are not to come under the ruling of a king while we remain in a republic.

This subject has created no little excitement lest our liberties be snatched away from us. This question was leading up as we think to an uncalled for stock law. Every man has a right to buy the kind of brute he chooses, and that right he must maintain. By all means let us improve our stock. It is a duty we owe to ourselves and children. In regard to regular stock law, we detest it.

Go with me, if you please, to Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. There I will show you real poor cows bristled, staked out in the midst of fine grass from knee to waist high. These cows give the hungry farmers and family half-gallon of milk, while if they could go free, as God would have them go, these same cows would give two and one half gallons of milk every day. Besides, the anxious, honest, poor people could raise a plenty beef. Cut us out of our beef and our bill of fare is incomplete. Every household likes to have a nice young beef to sell. Yes, then they could fatten on God's pasture, but for the stock law. That law is only for those already independent. Deliver us and our children from any kind of stock law. Oh, isn't it nice for a man who has hundreds of acres under fence to turn a lot of cattle in there till butchering time. Now, what about the other fellows with small farms, or no land at all, who can scarcely make buckle and tongue meet? He wants cows, hogs, sheep and grazing and culling around on free pasture. Oh for American freedom! Let all remember the Banner, it is the people's friend.

"Oh, mem, it's terrible finanshul distress me an the childer's in!"

"Why, what is it—are you out of employment?"

"No, mem; work's in a fair state o' stiddiness, and not a cint do I owe, but it's fashius o' trouble I've got!"

"Are you not paid promptly?"

"As promptly as the day cooms round."

"What is your financial distress, then?"

"Well, mem" (in a burst of horror), "what's killin me is, I earn $6 the week an pay $4 for me boord, an God only knows how I do it!" Short Stories.

Antique.

Says a dealer in antiquities: "I had a fat woman in here the other day. Well, sir, she was a caution, was that fat woman. She would have the antique all through her house, sir, nothing but the antique for her house decoration. Why, sir, judging by what that fat woman said and bought in this shop, I should judge she was heartbroken, sir, that she couldn't get the shades of her ancestors for her parlor windows."

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. Preferred a Solo.

A gushing, sentimental girl and her matter of fact aunt sat on a green hillside, the aunt endeavoring to enjoy nature, while her niece discoursed of things far and near without a noticeable pause for breath.

At last she spoke of the beauties of the landscape at great length. "I love to listen to the music of that brook as it babbles on and on," she said unwisely.

"Yes," said the aunt, seizing her first opportunity, "the babbling of a brook is a pleasant sound, my dear. I think I prefer it as a solo, however, rather than with another part. I don't care so much for a babbling duet."

Then for a few delightful moments there was silence on the green hillside. —Youth's Companion.

Time Allowance.

"Waiter," said the bicyclist at the little country inn, "bring me three eggs and boil them four minutes."

Fifteen minutes elapse, and the waiter returns with one egg.

"Very sorry, sir, our eggs is out. This is the only one we had left—but we boiled it 12 minutes, sir."—Harper's Bazar.

A Long-Felt Want Supplied.

Clanton has long wished for an up-to-date livery establishment. Great are the inconviences caused by the absence of one. Citizens who wish to go somewhere, perhaps on urgent business, have to lose valuable time hunting around for a horse and buggy. Drummers anathemize a place if they cannot procure a conveyance to carry them on their way. Old men and matrons, bachelors and spinsters, desiring to visit friends in the neighborhood, sigh for a vehicle to take them, while what words can depict the dejected appearance of the gentle youth dying to take his best girl for a ride and can't get a team? But no longer shall they suffer at Clanton. Messrs. Morgan & Chandler have built a fine stable across from the depot, and have purchased brand new buggies and splendid horses which are at your command at any time. And when our friends come to town their stock can be well taken care of while they attend to their business. We congratulate Morgan & Chandler upon their enterprise and wish them unbounded success.

"History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

The German meteorologists are sometimes able to call the turn on the weather. One of them, Professor Rudolf Talk, recently predicted a thunderstorm for Berlin which came at the appointed hour, the lightning striking churches. The old school Hohenzollerns would have burned him for a wizard.

Science again and again comes to the aid of the farmer. Professor Merriam, of the Agricultural Department, is the latest benefactor in defining what he calls life and crop zones in which successful agricultural work may be assured. The farmer who has lost capital and vital spirit in vain efforts to make crops flourish in unsuitable soil will appreciate the new aid.

The first free school in the United States was opened in Boston April 13, 1635—a period of only five years after the settlement of that town. Connecticut was the first of the States to establish a common-school fund. This was done in 1795. New York followed in 1805, and Massachusetts in 1834. The Federal Government early showed interest in the public schools, a national land ordinance of 1785 dedicating one thirty-sixth part of the western territory then in possession of the Government to common schools. It is to this rich provision that the efficiency of the schools in the Western States is largely due.

Whatever may be the reliability which attaches to the figures of the celebrated English statistician, Mr. Michael G. Mulhall, there can be no controversy over the fact that they are full of practical interest. They cover almost every field of investigation and deal with almost every country on the globe. One of the latest subjects which this authority has taken up is that of illiteracy, and as the result of careful research into the matter he has recently compiled data showing the degree of illiteracy which exists among different nationalities. At the head of the list he puts Sweden and Norway, with only two per cent. of illiteracy Well at the bottom of the list he puts Russia, with eighty-five per cent. of illiteracy. In this classification the United States ranks sixth, with its illiteracy put down at thirteen per cent. Th give the entire list of countries enumerated by the statistician, the order is this: Sweden and Norway, two per cent.; Germany, four per cent.; Switzerland, five per cent.; Scotland, six per cent.; England, nine per cent.; United States, thirteen per cent.; Holland, fourteen per cent.; France, eighteen per cent.; Belgium, twenty per cent.; Ireland, twenty-six per cent.; Austria, forty-five per cent.; Italy, fifty-three per cent.; Spain, seventy-two per cent., and Russia, eighty-five per cent.

The typewriter's rapid progress in the last few years seems almost incredible in view of its extremely slow development prior to twenty years ago. The idea of devising a machine that would record words appears to have been first conceived in 1714. In that year Henry Mill, of England, patented and produced a contrivance for the purpose of printing embossed letters for the blind, and, strangely enough, it is said that his invention had several characteristics in common with our modern typewriters. Seventy years passed before the invention of another writing machine. This appeared in France. In 1829 a typewriter was patented by W. A. Burt, an American. In 1833 France was again in line with a queer-looking machine called the "ktypograph," which was designed to write music as well as words. Ten years later a resident of Worcester, Mass., contrived a typewriter, the most objectionable feature of which was its slowness of operation. Next came the invention, in 1850, of O. T. Eddy, of Baltimore, whose device was intricate and otherwise unsatisfactory. From that time until the invention of John Pratt, of Alabama, in 1866, four or five American patents were issued for similar machines, but none of then was of much practical value. Pratt's patent was closely followed by numerous others, from which the modern typewriters have been evolved. Judging from the present activity of inventors, the machine's evolution is still progressing at a lively rate.

MARIA TERESA GOES DOWN.

The Rescued Spanish Cruiser Sinks in the Midst of a Furious Storm.

NO LIVES LOST IN THE DISASTER.

Rents in Her Hull Which Had Been Patched Gave Way and She Rapidly Filled With Water—Abandoned Near Watling Island.

The ocean tug Merritt put into Charleston Saturday morning for supplies. She reported the loss of the cruiser Maria Teresa, raised by Constructor Hobson recently, off San Salvador, Bahamas, November 1, in the midst of a furious storm.

The cruiser left Caimanera, Cuba, on the morning of October 30, in tow for New York. She had already passed Cape Maysi and started northeast around the Bahamas. A furious storm, warning of which had already been sent out, overtook her, and in her condition she was unable to brave the gale. The strain opened rents in her hull which had been patched to enable her to make the journey and she began to fill rapidly. The Merritt took off Captain Harris and the crew from the sinking ship and she soon went down. The Merritt brought the captain and 136 men, who will proceed north by rail. No lives were lost.

The survivors of the Maria Teresa lost all their clothing and personal effects and are supplied scantily. The Teresa sunk thirty miles off Watling Island at midnight Tuesday after battling with the gale six hours.

She met the storm Tuesday morning and the vessel began to strain in the high seas. Parts of the hull thought to be safe became weakened, rivets broke and the water made rapidly in the hold, and finally extinguished the fires in the engine room. The pumps would not work. The whole vessel showed signs of a collapse and the men stood stripped, awaiting orders to quit the ship. The Vulcan was towing the Teresa, while the Merritt rescued 114 of her crew, made up of volunteers from the Cincinnati, Newark and Vulcan. The ropes were then cut and the Teresa rapidly filled. The Vulcan and Leonidas deserted the Merritt, which put into Charleston with the rescued. Captain Crittenden and Captain Lasade, of the Merritt, had their arms sprained.

ILLNESS AND STARVATION

Continue Their Work of Death Among the Poor of Havana.

Illness and starvation still continue their work of death among the poor of Havana. The direst misery prevails in every direction, and the necessity for an organized system of relief was never more urgent than at present. Trade is at a standstill, owing to the uncertainty regarding the introduction of the new tariff. Employment is difficult to obtain, and the almost complete cessation of municipal work and the gradual withdrawal of the Spanish administratien preparatory to evacuation has closed many avenues of subsistence.

Added to this, the winter weather has set in with cold northern squalls and a sharp fall in the temperature, increasing the wretchedness of the miserable beings, who are houseless and homeless, and whose huddled forms nightly crowd the pavements.

STEAMER BURNED AT SEA.

Five of Twenty-Seven Persons on Board Were Drowned.

A disaster at sea, fortunately with a small loss of life, five persons in all, was made known at Vineyard, Haven, Mass., Friday by the landing of twenty-two persons, who escaped from the burning steamer Croatan, of the Clyde line, bound from New York for Wilmington, N. C., and Georgetown, S. C. The disaster occurred November 1, about eighteen miles north of Cape Charles. Of the twenty-seven persons who were on board twenty-two survived. These passengers were landed by the schooner Alice Clark, of Portland, Me., which had been in the vicinity of the Croatan at the time she was burning.

WILL GO TO CUBA.

General Carpenter's Brigade Will Sail at an Early Date.

The quartermaster's department of the army has began arrangements for the shipment of General Carpenter's brigade to the province of Puerto Principe. It is probable that Neuvitas will be selected as the place of landing, but the transports will not be able to get within ten miles of the port, and the troops and supplies must all be landed with lighters. The troops are to be in Puerto Principe on the 22d. It is intended to have the troops embark at Savannah.

THE NEWS OUR OWN STATE.

WIRE AND NAIL PLANT.

Contracts Let for a Great Industry at Birmingham.

It is stated authoritatively that the contract for the erection of the much talked of wire, rod and nail plant at Ensley City has been let by the newly formed Alabama Steel and Wire company to the Garrett-Cromwell Engineering company. The mill will have a daily output of six hundred tons and will adjoin the steel plant of the Alabama Steel and Shipbuilding company now in process of erection. The new wire company is closely identified with the steel company, and has a number of northern men behind it. It has acquired twenty acres of land upon which its plant will be built. The company has a capital stock of $2,000,000. It is expected at an early date to increase the capacity of the plant to 900 tons if the mill proves a success. The enterprise is a large one. Work will begin at once and the expectation is to have the plant ready for operation by the time the Alabama Steel and Shipbuilding company's steel mill is completed.

WILL NOT GO TO CUBA.

Troops Will Go to Southern Camps, as Originally Intended.

The order which designates the troops to occupy different portions of Cuba has raised a question as to whether the intention of the war department to have the troops go direct from their nearest camps to Cuba instead of occupying their southern winter camps selected some time ago. It can be stated that such is not the intention, and that the troops will be removed from Knoxville and Lexington and Middleton to these camps very soon. It will be nearly two months before all the troops designated for Cuba are sent to the island, so there will be quite a long time for them to remain in Georgia and South Carolina.

A Lynching in Autauga County.

News of a lynching in Autauga county reached Selma Saturday. Mrs. Stridler, wife of a merchant and justice of the peace at Jones' Switch, while preparing to retire Friday night discovered a negro under her bed. Upon her screaming for help the man sprang for the door and made his escape, leaving behind a strip of bar iron with which he intended to do his murderous work. A negro section hand, John Williams, living near by, was suspected and placed under arrest. He was tried and committed to jail. Constable Queen started to Prattsville with him, and when about a mile from Jones' Switch was met by a crowd who took the negro and swung him to a tree. The negro admitted that the iron bar and some clothing found in Mrs. Stridler's room were his property.

Boy Accidentally Killed.

Clarence Mealy and his brother, of Bessemer, went out hunting in the country near that place last Saturday. The first named, who carried the gun, thought he saw a squirrel, and cocked his gun. However, he was mistaken, as no squirrel was to be found. He forgot to let down the hammer of the gun, and a few moments later began proddling the stock of the weapon into a brush pile to frighten a rabbit. The gun fired, the entire charge passing through the boys body, killing him instantly.

Florence to Have a Camp.

Florence will get a camp of United States soldiers during the winter, having been selected over a large number of cities which were after the location. The secretary of war has stated to Florence representatives in Washington this week that he would send troops to that place as soon as possible. It is thought that not less than five regiments will spend the cold season in that city.

Still Raided.

The destruction of a small distillery near Sturdevant, in Tallapoosa county, has been reported to the office of the internal revenue collector. It was of fifty gallons capacity, capable of turning out about eight gallons of "moonshine" per day. T. M. Milner and Sam Ray were arrested.

Dr. J. B. Bass will erect a $25,000 flouring mill at Ashville. There is also good prospects for that town to get an improved ginnery and feed grinding machinery erected in the near future.

Death Rate in the Army.

Of the 250,000 soldiers who enlisted for the war with Spain in response to the call of the president. 247,000 are alive today. Less than 3,000 soldiers, all told, have died. War was declared more than six months ago, and in the whole six months fewer than 3,000 out of 250,000 have died. The world's history contains no parallel for the record of the United States in this war.

Third Illinois Sails From Ponce.

The United States transport Roumanian, with the Third Illinois on board, sailed from Ponce, Porto Rico, Friday for New York.

Was a Financial Success.

Saturday the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition association, at Omaha, began paying back 95 cents on every dollar of stock that was subscribed for its construction. After this is accomplished, enough money will remain in the treasury to more than pay the remaining 25 per cent and fulfill all obligations.

EXPLOSION IN THE CAPITOL

Wrecks the Supreme Court Room and Destroys Books and Records.

DAMAGE TO THE BUILDING IS $200,000.

Millions Could Not Replace the Books—No Duplicate of Many of the Records In Existence—Library of 20,000 Volumes Practically Destroyed.

WASHINGTON.—An explosion and fire at 5:13 Sunday evening wrecked the supreme court rooms and the rooms immediately adjoining on the main floor of the capitol. The damage is enormous. The entire central eastern part of the great marble pile from the main floor to the subterranean basement practically is a mass of ruins. The force of the explosion was so heavy that the coping stones on the outer walls just east of the point where the explosion occurred were bulged out nearly two inches, windows in all that parts of the building were blown out and locked doors were forced from their hinges quite 150 feet from the scene of it. Fire followed the explosion so quickly as to seem practically simultaneous with it. The explosion shook the immense structure to its foundation and was heard several squares from the capitol. It occurred in a small room tightly enclosed by heavy stone walls in the subterranean basement immediately below the main entrance to the old capitol building. In this room was a 500-light gas meter, which was fed by a four-inch main. Very little gas is used in that part of the building, but at the time of the explosion it had not been turned off in the meter.

The meter itself was wrecked and the gas pouring from the main caught fire. The flames originating from the explosion darted up the shaft of the elevator, which had been completely destroyed by the force of the explosion, and communicated with the record room of the supreme court, the office of the marshal of the court and the supreme court library. Before the flames could be subdued the priceless documents in the record room had been almost totally destroyed, and serious damage had been done in the marshal's office and some minor rooms in the immediate vicinity. The library of the supreme court, located immediately beneath the supreme court room, was badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, water practically destroying the great collection of law reference books. The library contains about 20,000 volumes, and was used not only by the justices of the supreme court, but by members of congress and lawyers practicing before the supreme court.

Mr. Justice Harlan said that the library was very valuable. Many of the works it contained would, he thought, be difficult to replace.

The most serious damage, in the opinion of the justices of the supreme court, is to the records stored in the sub-basement. These included all the records of the supreme court from 1792 to 1832. The rooms contain records of cases and opinions rendered by the fathers of the judiciary system of the government. Apparently the documents in this room are either totally destroyed or so badly damaged by fire and water as to be useless.

The supreme court room was damaged principally by water and smoke, the fire not reaching that point.

Adjoining the court room, both the marshal's office and the senate barber shop furnished food for the flames.

While many theories are offered as to the cause of the explosion, it seems beyond doubt to have been due to escaping gas.

The busts of Chief Justice Marshall and other distinguished members of the supreme court, which were arranged on small pedestals about the supreme court chamber, were either badly damaged or wholly destroyed, and with their destruction the country has suffered an irreparable loss. Many of them have been treasured as exhibits in the supreme court chamber for half a century.

In the opinion of capitol officials and mechanics who examined the structure, the loss will probably reach $200,000 to the building. The loss on the library and records can scarcely be estimated in dollars and cents.

A million dollars could not replace them, because of many of them no duplicates are in existence.

Train Goes Through a Bridge.

A trestle gave way Saturday night on the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham railroad, near Amory, Miss., while a freight was crossing it, and eight cars loaded with fresh meat from Kansas City, were wrecked. Three bents of the trestle were knocked down. No one was hurt, so far as could be learned.

England's War Preparations.

LONDON.—The military authorities at Devonport, the site of the largest naval arsenal in Great Britain, received orders Sunday for the immediate mobilization of all the troops in the Western district.

Killed by Train.

Quite a sad accident happened at Sulligent, Ala., Saturday afternoon. Engine No. 13 of the Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham railroad, ran over and killed Sammie Noe, of Pine Springs. Young Noe was riding in a wagon, driving a pair of mules, and in attempting to cross the track in front of the train he and the mules were killed and the wagon knocked into splinters.

BRITISH WAR PREPARATIONS

Are Connected With the Philippine Question, Says Berlin Correspondent of the Daily News.

LONDON.—Despite the jubilation of the country over the favorable announcement by Lord Salisbury regarding Fashoda at the Kitchener banquet, there is serious uneasiness as to the real object of continued war preparations, which can hardly be justified even by Lord Salisbury's warning that there are still matters in dispute with France.

A dispatch from Hong Kong comments upon the usual naval and military activity there.

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News says: "It is asserted in well informed quarters that the British war preparations are connected with the Philippine question, in which the United States government is acting in accord with England. The rumor is revived that the United States intends ceding to England some of the islands or granting coaling stations there."

FRANCE HAS YIELDED.

Will Withdraw the Marchand Mission From Fashoda in the Interest of Peace.

PARIS.—A semi-official note issued Friday says the government has resolved not to retain the Marchand mission at Fashoda, adding that this decision was arrived at by the cabinet after an exhaustive examination of the question. The government, replying to an interpellation to be asked in the chamber of deputies, will avail itself of the opportunity to explain the motives for this reason.

The chamber of deputies reopened with a crowded assembly, after its adjournment on October 25, the day of the fall of the cabinet presided over by M. Brisson.

Amid great animation the new premier, M. Dupuy, read the ministerial declaration. He began by declaring that the cabinet fully recognized the difficulties and responsibilities of the task undertaken and affirmed the supremacy of civil power as the fundamental principle of a republican state and expressed confidence in the army, which, he added, would faithfully respect the laws of the republic.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

Order Directing Movement at Once, But First Landing Will Not Be Made Before November 22.

Secretary Alger has issued the first order looking to the military occupation of Cuba by the United States troops. The order was issued only after very careful consideration of the reports of the military officers now in Cuba and of the Hecker board and other expert commissioners, which have been in the field. The order looks to the occupation of two points to begin with, namely, Nuevitas and Puerto Principe, but the occupation will be extended as rapidly as the Spanish evacuation proceeds. The order directs the movement to begin at once, but according to the calculations of the department it will scarcely be feasible to make the first landing before November 22.

PENSION FOR EX-CONFEDERATES.

Constitutional Amendment, Voted on Tuesday in Texas, Carries.

The constitutional amendment voted on last Tuesday in Texas authorizing the pensioning of ex-Confederate soldiers has been carried, though full returns are not in. It provides that all ex-Confederates who settled in Texas prior to 1880, are elegible to pensions, but no one shall receive more than $8 a month, and the appropriations for pensions shall not exceed $250,000.

Secretary of State Madden estimates there are 48,000 ex-Confederates in the state, a majority of whom settled in the state since 1880, and are therefore not eligible to pensions.

A majority of the ex-Confederates voted against the amendment. The negroes also voted against it.

Will Dissolve the Joint Traffic Association

The board of control of the Joint Traffic associatien has decided to dissolve the organization. This step was taken because of a recent decision by the supreme court of the United States that the efforts of the association to control rates were illegal.

Industries to Resume Operation.

Florence, Ala., capital has reorganized the mining and furnace interests at West Point, Tenn., just across the Alabama line, and will put the industries there into action at once. The new company has a capital of $50,000 and will be known as the West Point Mining company. There are 100 acres of fine brown ore, and machinery for loading fifty cars.

Railway Improvements.

The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway has begun the erection of a new warehouse, 308 by 60 feet, on the site of its old depot at Huntsville.

CUBANS STRIKE.

Islanders Employed in Cleaning Santiago Demand Higher Wages.

The Cubans who have been employed in cleaning and repairing the streets of Santiago have gone on a strike for higher wages, though they have been receiving $1 a day; or 50 cents and two rations—higher wages than they have ever been paid before for similar work. The Cuban laborers at the best are lazy and slipshod. They want an increase of 50 cents a day. General Wood absolutely refuses to accede to this demand.

LEONIDAS AT NEWPORT NEWS.

Carries in Its Hold Maria Teresa Guns and the Hobson Raft.

The collier Leonidas and the repair ship Vulcan arrived in Hampton Roads Monday. They started from Santiago with the Maria Teresa.

Officers of both vessels give substantially the same story of the foundering as that given out by Lieutenant-Commander Harris, who was in command of the Maria Teresa and the last man to leave her before she was abandoned in the terrific gale off Salvador. These officers speak in the highest terms of the brave and gallant work of the seamen during the storm, and say that officers and men acted nobly.

In the hold of the Leonidas are twenty-three of the guns of the destroyed Spanish fleet, ranging in size from five to eleven inches. Some of these are still loaded, as the charges could not be drawn. The raft upon which Lieutenant Hobson left the Merrimac after he had blown up the boat in the mouth of Santiago harbor is also in the hold, though somewhat disfigured from a shell.

DEAD IN HIS CAB.

Engineer House Ran His Locomotive Even After Death.

While the fast refrigerator train on the Chicago & Alton was speeding toward Glendale, just east of Kansas City, Mo., Monday evening, Engineer Richard A. House sat dead in his cab, his hand grasping the throttle, his glazed eyes fixed straight ahead on the track and a smile on his face.

Fireman John Verndell, who had been busy for some minutes in the tender, walked into the cab, continuing his firing, and it was not until he spoke to House that he discovered that his mate was dead. The train was stopped, the remains were carried back to the caboose and at Glendale transferred to an incoming train. The cause of his death is not known.

TO ABANDON WORK.

Government Will Make No Further Effort to Raise the Cristobal Colon.

Captain Chester's decision to abandon the work of wrecking the Colon, declares the end of that undertaking on the part of the government. It was said at the navy department the captain was directed to stop the work when in his opinion it was no longer profitable. Because his contract with the wrecking company has been ended it does not follow that there is no hope of raising some of the sunken Spanish warships. The navy department is ready to engage with thoroughly responsible wrecking concerns, providing the latter absolve the government from payment unless the ships are delivered in a United States navy yard.

GOING TO CUBA.

Fifteenth Infantry Left Huntsville Sunday Via Savannah.

The Fifteenth Infantry was detached Saturday from the Fourth army corps and given over to the command of Brigadier-General L. H. Carpenter. He issued a general order assuming command of the brigade composed of the Fifteenth Infantry, Third Georgia Infantry, and the Eighth Cavalry. General Carpenter and his aide, Lieutenant John W. Craig, Fifth Cavalry, will proceed without delay to Savannah and make arrangements for the shipment of the command to Cuba.

Rumors Rife of Riot in Paris.

The London Daily Chronicle says: We have received information from a reliable quarter of a well-organized plot in Paris, in the event of the inquiry before the court of cassation proving favorable to Dreyfus, to foment a riotous outburst in the French capital to attempt to overthrow the civil power and to assassinate the leading champions of Dreyfus.

The reports are confirmed by interviews with M. Trarieux, former minister of justice, and M. Depressioso, former editor of the Temps as well as others. The police have warned those friends of Dreyfus to change their residence temporarily, or at least to carry revolvers.

Veteran of Mexican War.

MORE TROUBLE AT PANA.

A Battle Between Union Men and Imported Negroes.

There was a renewal of hostilities at Pana, Ill., Sunday, between the union miners and the imported negroes from Alabama. A negro attacked James Boyle, a union miner, near the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern depot, which caused the battle. Two negroes were slightly wounded. No white miners were wounded. Major Butler sent a detachment of soldiers and a gatlin gun to the scene. No arrests have been made thus far.

More Spaniards Employed.

Agents of two mining companies at Santiago reported to General Wood Saturday morning that they had employed 400 more Gallegos miners from the Spanish army, making nearly 1,000 Spaniards who will soon be at work in the vicinity of Santiago.

Mrs. E. Lavender fell at Selma and broke her hip. She is 84 years old and it is feared she can't recover from the accident.

MOBILIZING CHINESE TROOPS

In Large Numbers in the Neighborhood Of Pekin—Dowager Empress' Rule.

PEKIN.—In spite of the formal promises of the Chinese foreign office, there is every indication of a concerted move of Chinese troops in the neighborhood of the capital.

Dowager Empress' Rule.

WASHINGTON.—Recent edicts of the dowager empress of China, copies of which have been received by Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister here, show with what a strong hand the empress is directing the affairs of the government, and overcoming some of the ultra-reform tendences of the young emperor, which cropped out just before the empress assumed the reins of office. One of the recent edicts restores the ancient departments of Pekin and the the governorships of the outlying country, which had beed abolished not many week ago by an edict of the emperor. These places were sinecures.

Another edict by the empress dowager directs that the temples be used exclusively for the religious rites and not as schools. The emperor had previously inaugurated a marked reform in directing that many of the old temples throughout the empire be turned into school houses, in order that education might be fostered. But the empress dowager, while upholding the desirability of education, does not want the ancient temples of China turned into school houses if it is possible to secure schools elsewhere. She therefore directs that the temples be used exclusively for worship, except when no school facilities are available elsewhere, or when the temples have been turned to immoral uses.

In each case the action of the empress dowager is a return to the ancient methods of the country.

NICARAGUA CANAL.

Commission Will Unanimously Report That the Project Is Feasible.

The Nicaraguan canal commission appointed by the president under an act of congress directing a complete inquiry into this project with particular reference to its practicability and cost, has about completed its work, and the present prospect is that the report will be handed to Secretary Hay in about a month.

The conclusions reached by the commission will not be announced until the report is submitted. It is known, however, that on the two salient features—practicability and cost—the commission will report first that the project of the canal joining the Atlantic and Pacific by what is commonly known as the Nicaraguan route is entirely feasible and practical, presenting no engineering problems which cannot be met; and second, that the cost can be presented with a fair degree of mathematical exactness, allowing for excavation, construction and other items. The cost will be about $125,000,000. The report will not refer to the practical questions involved, but will confine itself to the scientific engineering problems.

FIFTEEN LIVES LOST.

Crushed to Death by the Falling of a Five Story Theater.

The new five-story Wonderland theater building at Detroit, Mich., collapsed Saturday and fifteen or more lives were sacrificed. Shortly before 2 o'clock, while some thirty-five men were at work in various parts of the half finished theater, a portion of the roof fell in without a moment's warning. Nearly every one of the workmen were carried down into the theater pit. The top gallery was crushed down upon the lower gallery, carrying along a struggling company of men into the pit below, very few of whom escaped injury.

ENGINEER WAS CARELESS.

Seven Men Killed by an Accident in a Pennsylvania Mine.

Seven men were killed and three fatally injured at the Exeter collery of the Leigh Valley Coal company, at West Piston, near Wilkesbarre, Saturday. The accident was due to the alleged carelessness of Engineer David Price, who, acting in disobedience to positive orders, caused three cars to run into the top of the shaft. These cars, loaded and weighing eleven tons, fell down the 360-foot shaft and crashed with frightful force upon the carriage carrying ten men. Seven were almost instantly killed.

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S FLEET

Will, Except England's, Be the Most Formidable in Eastern Waters.

Admiral Bunce telegraphed the navy department that the cruiser Buffalo, Commander Hemphill, had sailed at noon Friday for the Philippines via Suez. The gunboat Helena sailed the day previous for the same destination. With these accessions coming immediately upon the heels of Captain Barker's squadron of battleships and colliers, Admiral Dewey will have a formidable fleet, probably second in offensive power to only one European power—England—in eastern waters.

The colored Methodist church at Greenville, Ala., caught fire and was burned to the ground Saturday. Two other houses were burned also. The church at the time was used by the colored industrial school.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: "Improvements In Heaven"—Heaven Has Improved in Numbers, Society and Knowledge—A Great Consolation to Good People.

TEXT: "And I saw a new heaven."—Rev. xxi., 1.

The stereotyped heaven does not make adequate impression upon us. We need the old story told in the new style in order to arouse our appreciation. I do not suppose that we are compelled to the old phraseology. King James's translators did not exhaust all the good and graphic words in the English dictionary. I suppose if we should take the idea of heaven, and translate it into modern phrase, we would find that its atmosphere is a combination of early June and of the Indian summer in October—a place combining the advantages of city and country, the streets standing for the one, and the twelve manner of fruits for the other; a place of musical entertainment—harpers, pipers, trumpeters, doxologies; a place of wonderful architecture—behold the temple! a place where there may be the higher forms of animal life—the beasts which were on earth beaten, lash-whipped, and galled and unthanketed, and worked to death, turned out among the white horses which the Book of Revelation describes as being in heaven; a place of stupendous literature—the books open; a place of aristocratic and democratic attractiveness—the kings standing for the one, all nations for the other; all botanical, pomological, ornithological, arboreseent, worshipful beauty and grandeur.

But my idea now is to speak chiefly of the improved heaven. People sometimes talk of heaven as though it were an old city, finished centuries ago, when I have to tell you that no city on earth, during the last fifty years, has had such changes as heaven. It is not the same place as when Job, and David, and Paul wrote of it. For hundreds and hundreds of years it has been going through peaceful revolution, and year by year, and month by month, and hour by hour, and moment by moment, it is changing, and changing for something better. Away back there was only one residence in the universe—the residence of the Almighty. Heaven had not yet been started. Immensity was the park all around about this great residence; but God's sympathetic heart after a while overflowed in other creations, and there came, all through this vast country of immensity, inhabited villages, which grew and enlarged until they joined each other, and became one great central metropolis of the universe, streeted, gated, templed, watered, inhabited. One angel went forth with a reed, we are told, and he measured heaven on one side, and then he went forth and measured heaven on the other side; and then St. John tried to take the census of that city, and he became so bewildered that he gave it up.

That brings me to the first thought of my theme—that heaven is vastly improved in numbers. Noting little under this head about the multitude of adults who have gone into glory during the last hundred, or five hundred, or thousand years, I remember there are sixteen hundred millions of people in the world, and that the vast majority of people die in infancy. How many children must have gone into heaven during the last five hundred or thousand years. If New York should gather in one generation a million population, if London should gather in one generation four million population, what a vast increase! But what a mere nothing as compared with the five hundred million, the two thousand million, the "multitude that no man can number," that have gone into that city! Of course, all this is taken for granted that every child that dies goes as straight into heaven as ever the light sped from a star; and that is one reason why heaven will always be fresh and beautiful—the great multitude of children in it. Put five hundred million children in a country, it will be a blessed and lively country.

But add to this, if you will, the great multitude of adults who have gone into glory, and how the census of heaven must run up! Many years ago a clergyman stood in a New England pulpit, and said that he believed that the vast majority of the race would finally be destroyed, and that not more than one person out of two thousand persons would be finally saved. There happened to be about two thousand people in the village where he preached. Next Sabbath two persons were heard discussing the subject, and wondering which one of the two thousand people in the village would finally reach heaven, and one thought it would be the minister, and the other thought it would be the old deacon. Now, I have not much admiration for a life-boat which will go out to a ship sinking with two thousand passengers, and get one off in safety, and let nineteen hundred and ninety-nine go to the bottom. Why, heaven must have been a village when Abel, the first soul from earth, entered it, as compared with the present population of that great city!

Again: I remark that heaven has vastly improved in knowledge. Give a man forty or fifty years to study one science, or all sciences, with all the advantages of laboratories and observatories and philosophic apparatus, he will be a marvel of information. Now, into what intelligence must heaven mount, angelhood and sainthood, not after studying for forty or fifty years, but for thousands of years—studying God and the soul and immortality and the universe! How the intelligence of that world must sweep on and on, with eyesight farther reaching than telescope, with power of calculation mightier than all human mathematics, with powers of analysis surpassing all chemical laboratory, with speed swifter than telegraphy! What must heaven learn, with all these advantages, in a month, in a year, in a century, in a millennium? The difference between the highest university on earth and the smallest class in a primary school cannot be a greater difference than heaven as it now is and heaven as it once was. Do you not suppose that when Doctor James Simpson went up from the hospitals of Edinburgh into heaven he knew more than ever the science of health; and that Joseph Henry, graduating from the Smithsonian Institution into heaven, awoke into higher realms of philosophy; and that Sir William Hamilton, lifted to loftier sphere, understood better the construction of the human intellect; and that John Milton took up higher poetry in the actual presence of things that on earth he had tried to describe? When the first saints entered heaven, they must have studied only the A B C of the full literature of wisdom with which they are now acquainted.

Again: heaven is vastly improved in its society. During your memory how many exquisite spirits have gone into it! If you should try to make a list of all the genial, loving, gracious, blessed souls that you have known, it would be a very long list—souls that have gone into glory. Now, do you not suppose they have enriched the society? Have they not improved heaven? You tell of what heaven did for them. Have they done nothing for heaven? Take all the gracious souls that have gone out of your acquaintanceship, and add to them all the gracious and beautiful souls that for five hundred or a thousand years have gone out of all the cities and all the villages, and all the countries of this earth into glory, and now the society of heaven must have been improved! Suppose Paul, the apostle, were introduced into our social circle on earth; but heaven has added all the apostles. Suppose Hannah More and Charlotte Elizabeth were introduced into your social circle on earth; but heaven has added all the blessed and the gracious and the holy women of the past ages. Suppose that Robert M'Cheyne and John Summesfield should be added to your earthly circle; but heaven has gathered up all the faithful and earnest ministry of the past. There is not a town, or a city, or a village that has so improved in society in the last hundred years as heaven has improved.

Again: I remark that heaven has greatly improved in the good-cheer of announced victories. Where heaven rejoiced over one soul, it now rejoices over a hundred or a thousand. In the olden times, when the events of human life were scattered over four or five centuries of longevity, and the world moved slowly, there were not so many stirring events to be reported in heaven; but now, I suppose, all the great events of earth are reported in heaven. If there is any truth plainly taught in this Bible it is that heaven is wrapped up in sympathy with human history, and we look at those inventions of the day—at telegraphy, at swift communication by steam, at all these modern improvements which seem to give one almost omnipresence—and we see only the secular relation; but spirits before the throne look out and see the vast and the eternal relation. While nations rise and fall, while the earth is shaking with revolution, do you not suppose there is arousing intelligence going up to the throne of God, and that the question is often asked before the throne, "What is the news from that world—that world that rebelled, but is coming back to its allegiance?" If ministering spirits, according to the Bible, are sent forth to minister to those that shall be heirs of heaven, when they come down to us to bless us, do they not take the news back? Do the ships of light that come out of the celestial harbor into the earthly harbor, laden with cargoes of blessing, go back unfreighted? Ministering spirits not only, but our loved ones leaving us, take up the tidings. Suppose you were in a far city, and had been there a good while, and you heard that some one had arrived from your native place—some one who had recently seen your family and friends—you would rush up to that man, and you would ask all about the old folks at home. And do you not suppose when your child went up to God, your glorified kindred in heaven gathered around and asked about you, to ascertain as to whether you were getting along well in the struggle of life; to find out whether you were in any especial peril, that with swift and mighty wing they might come down to intercept your perils? Oh, yes! Heaven is a greater place for news than it used to be—news sounded through the streets, news ringing from the towers, news heralded from the palace gate. Glad news! Victorious news!

Now, I say these things about the changes in heaven, about the new improvements in heaven, for three stout reasons. First, because I find that some of you are impatient to be gone. You are tired of this world, and you want to get into that good land about which you have been thinking, praying, and talking so many years. Now be patient. I could see why you would want to go to an art gallery if some of the best pictures were to be taken away this week or next week; but if some one tells you that there are other beautiful pictures to come—other Kensetts, Raphaels, and Rubens; other masterpieces to be added to the gallery—you would say, "I can afford to wait. The place is improving all the time." Now, I want you to apply the same principle in this matter of reaching heaven and leaving this world. Not one glory is to be subtracted, but many glories added. Not one angel will be gone, not one hierarch gone, not one of your glorified friends gone. By the long practicing the music will be better, the procession will be longer, the rainbow brighter, the coronation grander. Heaven, with magnificent addenda! Why will you complain when you are only waiting for something better?

Another reason why I speak in regard to the changes in heaven, and the new improvements in heaven, is because I think it will be a consolation to busy and enterprising good people. I see very well that you have not much taste for a heaven that was all done and finished centuries ago. After you have been active forty or fifty or sixty years it would be a shock to stop you suddenly and forever; but here is a progressive heaven, an ever-accumulative heaven, vast enterprise on foot there before the throne of God. Aggressive knowledge, aggressive goodness, aggressive power, aggressive grandeur. You will not have to come and sit down on the banks of the river of life in everlasting inoccupation. O busy men, I tell you of a heaven where there is something to do! That is the meaning of the passage, "They rest not day nor night," in the lazy sense of resting.

I do not think it was superstitious when, one Wednesday night, I stood by a death-bed within a few blocks of the church where I preached, and on the same street; and saw one of the aged Christians of the church going into glory. After I had prayed with her I said to her, "We have all loved you very much, and will always cherish your memory in the Christian church. You will see my son before I see him, and I wish you would give him our love." She said, "I will, I will;" and in twenty minutes she was in heaven—the last words she ever spoke. It was a swift message to the skies. If you had your choice between riding in a heavenly chariot and occupying the grandest palace in heaven, and sitting on the throne next highest to the throne of God, and not seeing your departed loved ones; and on the other hand, dwelling in the humblest place in heaven, without crown or throne, and without garland, and without sceptre, yet having your loved ones around you, you would choose the latter. I say these things because I want you to know it is a domestic heaven, and consequently it is all the time improving. Every one that goes up makes it a brighter place, and the attractions are increasing month by month and day by day; and heaven, so vastly more of a heaven; a thousand times more of a heaven, than it used to be, will be a better heaven yet. Oh, I say this to intensify your anticipation!

I enter heaven one day. It is almost empty. I enter the temples of worship, and there are no worshipers. I walk down the street, and there are no passengers. I go into the orchestra, and I find the instruments are suspended in the baronial halls of heaven, and the great organs of eternity, with multitudinous banks of keys, are closed. But I see a shining one at the gate, as though he were standing on guard, and I say, "Sentinel, what does this mean? I thought heaven was a populous city. Has there been some great plague sweeping off the population?" "Have you not heard the news?" says the sentinel. "There is a world burning; there is a great conflagration out yonder, and all heaven has gone out to look at the conflagration and take the victim out of the ruins. This is the day for which all other days are made. This is the Judgment! This morning all the chariots, and the cavalry, and the mounted infantry rumbled and galloped down the sky." After I had listened to the sentinel, I looked off over the battlements, and I saw that the fields of air were bright with a blazing world. I said, "Yes, yes, this must be the Judgment;" and while I stood there I heard the rumbling of wheels and the clattering of hoofs, and the roaring of many voices, and then I saw the coronets and plumes and banners, and I saw that all heaven was coming back again—coming to the wall, coming to the gate, and the multitude that went off in the morning was augmented by a vast multitude caught up alive from the earth, and a vast multitude of the resurrected bodies of the Christian dead, leaving the cemeteries and the abbeys and the mausoleums and the graveyards of the earth empty. Procession moving in through the gates. And then I found out that what was fiery Judgment Day on earth was Jubilee in Heaven, and I cried, "Door-keepers of heaven, shut the gates; all heaven has come in! Doorkeepers, shut the twelve gates, lest the sorrows and the woes of earth, like bandits, should some day come up and try to plunder the City!"

A shooting scrape in which John Peek, a negro, was killed occurred at a dance near Atlanta, Ga., a few nights ago. The sister of another negro had been insulted by Si Pekin, and her brother, Tom Duffie, unable to find Pekin, shot his brother-in-law.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 13.

Lesson Text: "The Assyrian Invasion." II Kings xix., 20-22, 28-37—Golden Text: Psalms xxvi., 1—Commentary on the Lesson by the Rev. D. M...

20. "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to Me against Sennacherib, king of Assyria, I have heard it." In the fourteenth year of Hezekiah the king of Assyria came against Judah and greatly blasphemed the Lord both by word and by letter. Hezekiah, when he read the letter, spread it before the Lord and prayed (verses 14-19). Many times have I followed Hezekiah's example and known rest. If we ask anything according to His will He heareth us (I John v. 14), and it is His will that we tell Him everything and have regard in every detail to praising. See in verse 19 that the great desire in asking was that all the earth might know that the God of Israel was the only true God.

21. "This is the word that the Lord hath spoken concerning him: The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee and laughed thee to scorn." The people of God in Judah, called the daughter of Zion, the daughter of Jerusalem (compare Lam. ii., 13), having God as their defender as Avenger, need fear no enemy. In their strength Moses and Joshua (book), Gideon also, and David when he went fearlessly against Goliath. When we seek only the honor and glory of God, He will not fail us.

22. "Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed, the Holy One of Israel?" As in the next verse, "By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord." They spake against the God of Jerusalem as against the gods of the people of the earth, the works of the hands of man, and for this cause Hezekiah, the king, and the prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven (II Chron. xxxii., 19, 22). God heard their prayer, and now we will see how He answered it.

23. "I will turn thee back by the way which thou camest." This is a part of the word of the Lord concerning Sennacherib. See also verse 28, "I know thy abode and thy going out and thy coming in and thy rage against Me." He who created all things can set bounds that none can pass. We can only go here and there or do this or that if the Lord will (Jas. iv., 15). Man does not stop to consider that all his words and even his thoughts are known to the Lord (Ps. cxxxix., 1-4), and that it is impossible to hide anything from Him. Even Adam, blinded by satan, thought he could hide from God among the trees (Gen. iii., 8). Happy are those who live as in the sight of the Lord.

29. "And this shall be a sign unto thee." By comparing this verse with Lev. xxv., 21, 22, the sign seems to have been the special blessing of God upon the Sabbath year, or, in other words, the blessing of God on His obedient people. What but the hand of God could cause land to produce a three years' crop in one year? In the R. V. margin of Prov. x., 22, we read that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich and toil addeth nothing thereto.

30. "The remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward and bear fruit upward." The doctrine that it is ever the few out of the many who are really the Lord's and who glorify Him is found in all Scripture. The stories of Noah, of Lot in Sodom, of Elijah and such statements as "Few there be that find it," "An afflicted and poor people who shall trust in the Lord," indicate that which God sees to be ever true. See Math. vii., 14; Zeph. iii., 12.

31. "Out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant; the zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall do this." The zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall also bring the kingdom of peace on earth which have no end (Isa. ix., 7). All shall be accomplished in and through the Son of David, our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom it is written, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (Ps. lxix., 9; John ii., 17). It is nothing with the Lord to work with many or with few; nothing is too hard for Him (II Chron. xiv., 11; Jer. xxxii., 17).

32. "Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria." Our Lord doeth according to His will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth (Dan iv., 35). His thoughts and purposes are as good as accomplished (Isa. xiv., 24; Jer. li., 29).

33. "By the way that he came, by the same shall he return and shall not come into this city, saith the Lord." This was the decision of Him who had all the hosts of heaven under His control and all power to carry out His purposes. He could say, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther" (Job, xxxviii., 11). Even the great adversary must stop when God shall say so, and he shall go to the pit for a thousand years, and to the lake of fire forever.

34. "For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake and for my servant David's sake." See also chapter xx., 6, and compare Isa. xxxi., 5; Zech. xii., 8. The "I will's" of Jehovah are a study of greatest possible benefit. They often occur in sevens and in connection with the statement "I am Jehovah." See Ex. vi., 6-8; Gen. xvii., 1-8; Ps. xci., 14-16. Because He is what He is, He will do what He says, not for Israel's sake, but for His own sake. See Ezek. xxxvi., 22; Ps. cvi., 8. We must not look for worthiness or merit in ourselves, but in Him, who alone is worthy (Ps. xxx., 1; Rev. v., 4, 5). Take all the comfort you can find in such passages as Isa. xliii., 25; I John ii., 12.

35. "And it came to pass that night that the angel of the Lord went out and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand." The work of this angel is also mentioned in Isa. xxxvii., 36, and in II Chron. xxxii., 21. When the devil is to be bound and cast into the bottomless pit, it is written that one angel will do it (Rev. xx., 1-3). Consider in each of these cases the power of an angel and then think of the millions upon millions of them mighty in strength, doing His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word (Rev. v., 11; Ps. ciii., 20). Think of the angels dis-egard of and power over soldiers and fast barred gates in the story of Peter's release in Acts xii. Think of the one who carried good tidings to Paul in the storm at sea (Acts xxvii.), remember that they are all ministering spirits sent forth to minister unto the heirs of salvation (Heb. i., 14), and let your heart say, "Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear" (Ps. xxvii., 3). If God be for me, who can be against me? I will trust and not be afraid.

36, 37. "His sons smote him with the sword." Thus he died in his own land according to the word of the Lord (verse 7), and while in the act of worshiping idols, so shall perish all the enemies of the Lord.

Spain Must Submit.

The London Standard says: "We can see no alternative. Spain must accept as inevitable the loss of the Philippines. No doubt the United States will assume a heavy and serious responsibility, but it augurs well for the future that the public men of America appreciate and are ready to meet it. England will watch the experiment with every wish for a favorable issue."

THE Age-Herald, this morning, says: "Congressman-elect Burnett's victory (Seventh District) was won in white counties." But the Age-Herald does not say a word about Mr. Robbins, so we beg to call attention to the fact that Congressman-elect Aldrich's "victory was won in white counties."

SENATOR Morgan's speech at Clanton last Saturday was not up to the usual standard. A good deal of the fire has gone out of the aged Senator, and while his talk was interesting in some particulars, it cannot be said much information or amusement was to be derived from it. Considering his age, (seventy-four) the Senator stands public life well, but it must be confessed the last few years have told upon him. He seems to have a good opinion of President McKinley, but Speaker Reed is apparently his pet abomination. All things considered, the Senator's visit was not a success.

980 VOTERS, out of a total registration of about 2700, were all who considered it worth their while to come out and vote for a congressman. This spirit of apathy and indifference where such an important election is concerned is not promising for any improvement in the laws of the land and a consequent improvement in the condition of the people. Every man should vote on one side or the other. The honest choice of a majority of the people is far preferable to the choice of a limited number. Had every voter in the five white counties of this district voted on Tuesday, it would have left no chance for the usual Dallas Democratic majority to be forthcoming.

REPRESENTATIVE Reynolds can earn for himself the undying gratitude of honest voters of all parties by introducing and getting passed by the Legislature an amendment to the Election Law making it compulsory upon the Probate Judge, Circuit Clerk and the Sheriff of each county to appoint managers of election only from lists furnished by the authorized leaders of each party. Under the present law they exercise their own sweet will in appointing managers of election, ignoring recommendations from chairmen of executive committees or from any other persons except just such as suit their immediate moods and fancies.

THE election law provides that on the morning of an election, before the opening of the polls, the managers shall appoint clerks and markers to represent the opposing candidates. It also provides that lists of names shall be furnished by the friends of opposing candidates, and the clerks and markers be selected from these lists. At Clanton on Tuesday the law was not complied with, two of the managers refusing to appoint a single marker from the two lists furnished by the Populist and Republican parties of the county. No objection was raised by the friends of Mr. Aldrich to the appointment of the gentlemen selected as the Robbins marker, but a protest was entered against the appointment of the gentleman arbitrarily imposed upon as to represent Mr. Aldrich. The protest produced the appointment of a third marker, but he was not selected from either of the lists furnished by the Populist and Republican supporters of Mr. Aldrich. We had hoped this sort of thing was of the past in Chilton county. It is more than time it was

FROM advices we have received this morning we are glad to say Mr. W. F. Aldrich has carried all five of the white counties in this district, which have given him majorities as follows:

Shelby	400
Talladega	520
Calhoun	250
Cleburne	150
	1432

While the official count may vary a trifle from the above figures it is a certain fact that Mr. Aldrich has secured a good majority of the white people of the district, leaving Mr. Robbins entirely dependent upon the one black county of Dallas. At present no figures are obtainable from Dallas. This is the usual thing, however, Dallas always waits to find out what vote is necessary, before any returns are published. Judging from former elections Dallas will again find a majority for Mr. Robbins to more than balance the majority in the five white counties for Mr. Aldrich. If Gov. Johnston issues a certificate to Mr. Robbins based upon a made-up majority in Dallas, then of course a contest will once again be necessary to secure to Mr. Aldrich the seat to which he has been elected by the people.

The Nicaragua Canal and the Gulf States.

Under the existing conditions the Gulf States, like the north Atlantic States, are brought into a direct and uneven competition with Europe in practically all their foreign trade other than that of raw cotton, forest products, and mineral fertilizers. With the exception of their sales of these products, the future commercial relations of the Gulf States will be less with Europe than Mexico, South America, and Pacific countries. Their textile and iron manufactures can hardly hope to find much of a market in Europe. In the South Atlantic also their competition with Europe will be very keen. It is to the Pacific States of South America and to Asia that the people of the Southern States may turn with the best prospect of securing foreign trade. The canal is also requisite for the development of a large trade between the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific slope of the United States. The rail routes from the States of the Gulf and Mississippi Valley to the Pacific Ocean are long and are expensive for traffic because of the heavy mountain grades to be overcome. Without the isthmian waterway the South is practically excluded from the markets which her industries are best fitted to supply. —From "The Nicaragua Canal and Our Commercial Interests," by Emory R. Johnson, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

That the spy sent by the United States government to Spain during the war should have become the guest of Weyler himself, seems incredible. Yet there is nothing more true. The government selected as its agent a man of position who has lived much in Germany. It was necessary for us to have a trained intellect that would make no mistakes. His story is told in the November Cosmopolitan, and the most exciting pages of Dumas's fiction seem tame in comparison with the facts. Crossing the frontier in a first-class carriage, he was by a trifling accident brought into conversation with a young Spanish nobleman; presentry who should come along but the son of General Weyler. This acquaintance led to his receiving many attentions from Weyler when they reached Madrid, and the General actually gave up a day to a trip to the Escurial. Imagine this grim arch-enemy of ours laying himself out to please the secret agent whom the government had sent to find out the weak places of Spain. How trifling and demarcation between the position of honored guest and that of spy who, if discovered, would have been all the more quickly sent to his death! The same issue of the Cosmopolitan contains four pieces of fiction by such famous authors as Frank Stockton, Zangwill, H. G. Wells, and the lamented Harold Frederic, but none of it half so exciting in its interest as this true story.

The sooner a cough or cold is cured without harm to the sufferer the better. Lingering colds are dangerous, Hacking cough is distressing. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures it. Why suffer when such a cough cure is within reach? It is pleasant to the taste. J. M. Sa.fi ll.

QUITE UP TO DATE.

An Illustration of the Artfulness of the Modern Girl.

"The artfulness of the modern girl," remarked a woman who was a girl years ago, "passeth understanding. I have, for example, a young kinswoman of 18, whose mother, knowing that my husband was out of town, invited me to her house to tea one day. The girl was so sweet to me that in the end, though I hadn't the slightest idea of doing it when I set out, I asked her to come home with me and stay the night. She assented—not too eagerly—and as we walked toward the car together—she lives on Capitol Hill—she began to talk of young Mr. So-and-so, Commander So-and-so's son, who was so anxious to meet me. No woman is too old to be proof against flattery, so I expressed an interest in Mr. So-and-so, and told her she might bring him to see me some day.

"'It would be nice if he could come over this evening, wouldn't it?' she said thoughtfully. I agreed that it would.

"'You might have sent him a note if you had known,' I said, for at my age it isn't too often that young men want to make my acquaintance.

"'I tell you what,' she said, quite as if the idea had just occurred to her; 'I'll telephone to him and see if he has any other engagement.'

"We went into the nearest drug store, and idly I followed her to the telephone box, though she called my attention to something at the other end of the store. Central gave her the desired number—the young man's brother is a physician.

"'Is this Mr. So-and-so?' she asked.

"Pause.

"'It's all right about tonight,' she said. 'Goodby.'

"That's all she said. And then, and not till then, I realized how that innocent young thing had played it on me. As I said before, the artfulness of the modern girl passeth understanding."—Washington Post.

A MOST PECULIAR CASE.

Where the Money Came From to Pay the Attorney's Bill.

"Most peculiar case I ever had," mused the attorney who is still a favorite with those requiring a strong defense in the criminal courts. "You never saw a finer looking young fellow. He had a good face and a well shaped head. He was clean and neatly dressed. He talked well and looked you squarely in the eyes. When I went to the jail at his request, I took an immediate liking to him. It had been my business to study human nature and I was satisfied from the first that he had never committed the $10,000 robbery of which he stood accused.

"He told me his story, frankly and without reservation. I was convinced more firmly than ever of his innocence. He outlined his own defense by accounting for every minute of his time on the night of the robbery and informing me just where the witnesses to substantiate his statements could be seen. I found them, and they affirmed everything he had told me. It was as clear a case as I ever saw, and I went into court with the utmost confidence. The prosecution did the best it could under the circumstances, but we swept the board and the young man was acquitted by the jury's first ballot. He was very grateful, shaking hands with the judge, the jurymen and even the prosecuting attorney.

"'Now, sir,' he began, when we had reached the office, 'what do I owe you?'

"'Only what you can afford to pay me. The saving of an innocent man is something of a reward in itself.'

"'Well, I would like to pay you more, but at present I can only afford to give you half of the $10,000. Is that fair?'"—Detroit Free Press.

I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children. E. J. SCANTLEBURY.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Knowledge of Housekeeping Desirable. A Simply Made Bench—Soup Maigre.

There is often considerable discussion as to whether a knowledge of domestic science, or, in plain language, housekeeping, is desirable for all women. Most people, of course, say that every woman should know how to cook, etc., but there are others who bring up the well known story of the two girls. The one devoted herself to domestic affairs, only to marry a rich man and pass the rest of her life exempt from domestic duties, while her sister, whose whole attention had been given to a higher education, married a poor man and gave herself up to the cares of her house and family. There is the general argument, in answer to that, that the educated girl had a well stored mind to draw upon while she was unable to pursue her studies and the domestic girl was given an opportunity to broaden her views. But a word from a woman who knows is worth a dozen general arguments.

One of these is the wife of a scientific man and is herself pursuing a line of scientific study and making original investigations in addition to the aid she gives her husband in his line of work. Of necessity she has not much time to devote to household duties, but for this very reason she continuously feels the need of a special education in domestic science, which she did not receive.

"I would give a great deal," she says, "if I had been educated to be a thorough housekeeper. Of course I keep house, keep my house looking well, and see that a good table is set, but I do not do it easily. I am never absolutely sure what is the right thing to do every time. If I only had that absolute knowledge of housekeeping which would enable me to say, 'This must be done at this time and in this way without hesitation,' I should be infinitely better off, and my house, if not better, would be as well kept and with but little effort on my part."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

A TINY RESERVATION.

William Penn's Indian Tract Still Preserved In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia contains one relic of the days of William Penn which is unknown to most inhabitants of the Quaker City. It is a small portion of ground which still retains by virtue of a provision in the charter its original character. Right in the heart of the business section of the city it lies, the only place for miles around that bears no footprints of the march of progress and commerce, the only building lot in the city which has never been near the hands of a real estate agent.

You have but to go down Walnut street to Second, turn up Second until you come to a little iron gate on the east side of the street, swing it back and enter and you stand within the Indian reservation.

In the days when Philadelphia used to be the metropolis of the red men, and they came by various trails across the country and down the Delaware to hold council there, it grew necessary for them to have some appointed spot for their conclaves. William Penn dedicated this reservation to them as a trysting place and provided that it should be sacred to their use forever.

It is a foreign enough place now, shut in as it is by high buildings on nearly every side. The old Union Telegraph office confronts it on one side, a wholesale liquor dealer's store backs up against it on another, and a high board fence chokes off the last hope of any outlook from the place.

There is no mark to tell of its original use or to stamp it as one of the curiosities of the day. One's only solace for his grievance is to imagine that the stealthy tread of moccasined feet is still echoing there and that the strange words of the redskin's tongue have left some spell upon the place.

In size it is a poor comment upon Penn's generosity, for it scarcely affords room sufficient to turn a wagon and a pair of horses. Perhaps because of its microscopic dimensions there has never been any attempt to encroach upon the rights of the old reservation.

For more than a century it has stood in its native state in the midst of the great city, a relic of a pathetic past, an heirloom for owners who will never reclaim it.—New York Herald.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

The Labor "Skate" in Politics—How He Thrives in Large Cities Around Election Time—The Recent Riots at Virden, Ill.

Pingree the Unchangeable.

The seasons come, the seasons go,
Time's ever on the wing;
The ocean's waters ebb and flow,
Yet Pingree never does a thing
But Ping.

The birds fly southward in the fall,
Returning in the spring,
But Pingree never swerves at all,
Nor does an earthly thing
But Ping.

The scented lilac and the rose
That June's first mornings bring
Go ere the wind of autumn blows,
Still Pingree never does a thing
But Ping.

Old Nature changes day by day,
Men scorn the songs they used to sing;
Time sweeps old loves and hopes away,
Yet Pingree never does a thing
But Ping.

—Detroit Free Press.

The Labor "Skate" in Politics.

From Chicago Federationist: Labor politicians—and their number in this city is legion—are very busy these days. The labor vote means a good deal to the managers of the political parties, and they are doing their level best to draw it in their direction. More than one union officer is in communication with the "right men" to see these days. The conversation between these individuals would be interesting reading matter to the plain working members of the labor organizations.

Of course the chairman of a campaign committee is "out to win," and any man overscrupulous about methods would not be intrusted with the task. The manager of a political campaign is after votes, and anyone, labor-faker or ward heeler, who can influence them is a welcome visitor at headquarters. But these buyers and sellers of the labor vote should remember that "the best laid plans of mice and men" are often knocked in the head. Judging from the pleasant reception certain "labor leaders" have at headquarters it must be a good deal easier to sell the labor vote than it will be to deliver it, for the smooth gentleman who declared he had the state federation fixed will find that the bargain he has made for the coming election will be a costly purchase. In this case the bunkoers are being bunkoed. Dickers are being made with men for whom the trades-unionists will not vote, men who are nothing more than dishonest political tricksters, and who, if given an opportunity, will betray the workingmen of this country. The coming election means a good deal to the union men of Chicago, and before they vote they should make an investigation of the candidates for themselves.

Miners Are Murdered.

From the Chicago Federationist: The expected has happened. The coal operators at Virden, Ill., last Wednesday made good their threat to import negroes to take the places of the white miners who have been trying to compel the operators to live up to a contract they made with the miners' union, and the negroes, though protected by armed "detectives," were driven from the town after a bloody battle between the contending parties. Fifteen lives were lost and many of the combatants were wounded.

It is better that this battle should be fought and that the lives should be sacrificed than that the miners should tamely submit to the demands of the overbearing despots who happen to own the coal mines at Virden. The heroism of the men who shouldered their muskets in defense of their right to unite to secure just compensation for their labor stamps them as being worthy to be called American freemen.

An attempt is being made by daily newspapers in close relations with corporations to befog the subject at issue between the contending parties by lugging in the "color" question. It is not a question of whether negroes have the right to work in this state; the question is, have employers the right to deny employes a voice in the settlement of wage disputes, the right to refuse to permit the state authorities to intervene and arbitrate the differences and then demand military assistance of the state to enforce their despotic, un-American and inhuman demands?

They certainly have not, and they cannot be taught that lesson too soon. The trades-unionists of this country are not revolutionists, they are not anarchists—and they are not fools. Under the constitution of the government of the United States they are guaranteed right which they intend shall not be taken away from them. They have the right to organize for the protection of their means of existence, and they will fight to the death in defense of that right. This fact has been attested on many occasions, notably at Homestead and Virden.

The right to live resolves into a question of might, and if the coal operators and their sympathizers want to make a test of it they may depend upon it they will be accommodated. It is to be hoped, however, that a little common sense will develop among the managers of the coal mines at Virden and Pana, and that the offer of the miners to arbitrate disputed points will be accepted.

Trade Union Federation.

A scheme for the federation of English trade unions has been drawn up by a committee of the London trades council. This committee states that the previous schemes which have been submitted may be excellent, and might possibly achieve what they aim at, but each is such a "bewildering mist of figures that they are doomed to failure." The committee lays down as the essential features of a scheme of federation:

1. That it should be understandable on the face of it by every trade unionist.

2. That it should endeavor to achieve perfection by growth.

In criticising other schemes, the committee says they "court disaster by aiming at completeness." They suggest that a federal council should be formed which should authoritatively represent and promote the general interests of labor. They do not approve of the creation of a "war chest to meet the strike emergencies," but they suggest that the subscriptions to the federation should be for working, organizing, and propaganda purposes, and that emergency calls on behalf of unions engaged in a dispute shall be met by a levy, the amount of which shall be decided upon by the federal council in accordance with the constitution of the federation.

The council, the committee suggests, shall be selected by the members of the various federated unions as grouped in the kindred trades. All federated unions are to agree to pay the levies ordered by the federal council, which shall guarantee to the members of every federated union 15s. per week in case of a strike or lockout. The subscription towards the central fund of the council is fixed at one fathing per member per week. The council is to have the power to adjudicate in case of disputes between unions. In cases of dispute with employers, the matter is to be reported to the federal council, who may, at their discretion or at the request of the union affected, direct what action shall be taken. The committee suggests that the scheme might be tried in London by the trade unions who have branches in the metropolitan area, and that if it is approved by the London trades council the opinion of the provincial trades councils shall also be sought.

Prison-Made Goods.

The courts of this country do their utmost to trammel labor organizations. The unions spend valuable time and large sums of money to secure legislation that they are assured by "the best legal talent" is constitutional, only to have it declared unconstitutional by the court of last resort. Numerous instances have occurred in Illinois. Now comes the Court of Appeals in New York and for the second time refuses to sanction the stamping of convict-made goods so that they may be distinguished from the product of free labor. Seven judges sat in the case, and three dissented from the opinion of the court. So it seems that in the eyes of the New York Court of Appeals the honest, hard-working, tax-paying laborer is deserving of no more consideration at the hands of government than the thugs, thieves and murderers in the penitentiaries. Of course as soon as the trades unionists of the country learn the decision they will exult over the fact that they live in a land where they are placed by the highest court in the state of New York in the same category as the inmates of Sing Sing!

But the object of the contemptible court can be defeated. The trades unionists have a weapon at their command that will, if properly used, leave the prison-made goods to rot where they are made. The courts have gone as far as they can go to help the contractors of convicts; they can't make the workingmen buy the stuff they are so anxious to protect. All that remains for the toilers is when they purchase goods to see to it that they have the union stamp. To drive convict-made goods out of the market it is not necessary to waste money and years of time begging politicians and legislators to pass laws only to have them kicked out of court. Use the union label as it should be used and it won't pay to manufacture the obnoxious goods. And as soon as that time comes there will be no more "prison-made goods." Ask to see the union label.—Federationist.

Blacklisting in England.

The English Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants complained some time ago to the board of trade that several of their members, who acted as spokesmen when the various grades made individual application to the railway companies for improved conditions of service, as recommended by Sir Courtenay Boyle, were afterwards dismissed or "victimized" in other ways for what they had done. The board of trade communicated with the railway companies concerned and copies of the replies have now been forwarded to the men's society. The Great Central company, whose letter is stated to be typical of the others, deny the accusation. The men referred to, they say, were "dealt with" for good and sufficient reasons apart from their connection with any society. The executive of the Amalgamated society is now pressing for an independent inquiry, which the general secretary, Mr. Bell, declares would open the eyes of a great many people, including directors, who are probably not as familiar as they might be with the actions of their subordinates.

STORY OF GREENBACK

WHY THE MONEY LENDING SHARKS HATE IT.

It Saved the Union Against the Conspiracy Hatched in England—How the National Bankers Dishonored It by Replacing It with Interest Bearing Bonds.

When the civil war broke out April 12, 1861, all the specie money in circulation, both gold and silver, fled to the dark recesses of private coffers. The government was confronted with the necessity of putting down the rebellion, and the question was how to raise money to conduct the war. A vast army of men had been called to the field, all of whom had to be clothed, fed and equipped, ready for war. This required a large sum of money. The government did not have it, and the bankers and the monied men of the country asked from 18 to 36 per cent interest for theirs. The loans were refused, so it became necessary for the government to create mony by its own sovereign act. This it did by the acts of July 17 and August 5, 1861. The notes issued were called "demand notes," because they were payable on demand. They were receivable for all public dues, and the secretary of the treasury was authorized to reissue them when received; but the time in which reissues might be made was limited to the 31st day of December, 1862. These acts authorized the issue of $50,000,000. By act of Feb. 12, 1862, $10,000,000 more was issued and there were reissues amounting to $30,000. The "demand notes," by act of March 17, 1862, in addition to being receivable in payment of duties on imports, were made "lawful money," and "a legal tender in like manner, for the same purposes, and the same extent" as in the act of Feb. 25, 1862. Unlike all subsequent issues they did not contain the exception clause. They remained about at par with gold, which established the fact, had it not been for the exception clause on the greenback, that they would have been worth as much as gold. The millionaire, the banker and the bondholder each accepted them in full payment of his obligation against the government. The "demand notes" were paid in gold when presented for redemption. The principal issue of the United States paper money is commonly called "greenbacks." The total amount of such notes authorized, including the temporary issue was $450,000,000, of which there are still outstanding $346,681,016. On April 12, 1866, an act was approved to retire and cancel within six months $10,000,000, and thereafter not more than $4,000,000 in any one month. It should be remembered that the "greenback" bore no interest. It was good money, because the taxing power and the faith of the government was back of it. But greed and avarice, like Argus, never sleep. Those who had failed to lend their specie to the government during its darkest hour at exorbitant rates of interest plainly saw that if the government could issue legal-tender paper it could issue it in sufficient quantities to put down the rebellion, and there would be no demand for their gold and silver; consequently they called a bankers' convention to compass the defeat of further issues of legal-tender paper. History tells how well they succeeded. Congress, on the 25th day of February, 1862, passed a law that the greenback should be a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except duties on imports and interest on the public debt. The government thus bastardized its own issues. It put the stigma of disgrace upon it. The creator denied the creature, and the bondholder, who was not patriotic enough to aid his government in its distress, pointed his finger at it in scorn and cried "bastard." This infamous act created a demand for Shylock's gold and silver for duties on imports and the interest on the public debt must be paid in coin. The greenback was good enough for the soldier who fought that his country might live, but it was not good enough to pay interest on bonds or duties on imports. Human life was less sacred than capital. Gold was above humanity. The soldier was paid in paper, which had been purposely dishonored, for risking his life, and the bondholder in gold for risking his capital. Oh, Greed, where is thy conscience? Oh, Government, where is thy shame? Shylock's next scheme of spoliation and robbery was the passage of the national bank act. After depreciating the greenback through the exception clause this act enabled him to invest the depreciated money in government bonds at their face value, upon which bonds gold interest was paid in advance, and 90 per cent of their value returned to the purchaser in what is known as national bank notes, which could be loaned to A, B and C at excessive rates of interest. The government bonds were purchased at about 50 cents on the dollar. Not content with this advantage congress, on the 12th day of April, 1886, passed a law providing for the retirement of the greenback, which was exchanging the greenback, which bore no interest, for bonds which were untaxed and bore interest. It was a great scheme and one of the many crimes that have been perpetrated on the people. It was a damnable swindle—an outrage against labor, and a congress that was not thoroughly honeycombed by corruption, or densely ignorant, would not have permitted it.

A School House Campaign.

The Democrats are not rich, nor do they seek the patronage of corporations whose wealth is acquired by unfair means. The needs of the party must be met by small contributions. Consequently there will be no money to pay high-priced speakers or to hire large audience rooms. This explains the necessity, and hence the rapid growth of the school house compaign movement, which is spreading rapidly under the leadership of George Burr Smith and other Chicago attorneys who have formerly been country school pedagogues. The speakers need not be great orators. Instead of a set speech which requires considerable preparation, and is often dry and uninteresting, the meeting resolves itself into a class in arithmetic. A bright school boy is called upon to explain the problems by arithmetical rules. Leaflets containing the problems are now being distributed to county and township committees and will be sent to any address on application to headquarters. The list of problems are accompanied by tables of statistics, upon which the caluculations and arithmetical deductions are in all cases founded.

The answers obtained show in irrefutable terms that the depreciation of prices is caused by the demonetization of silver, and, what is most deplorable, that great distress and misery is caused in every debtor nation, amounting to outrageous injustice to a million mortgage-ridden homes and business enterprises in America. Statistics show that prices have not fallen in silver countries. The problems prove to the dullest mind, from the common rules of arithmetic, that the cause lies in the varying rate of exchange between gold and silver countries which has followed the demonetization of silver, also that the party could be restored by remonetization by even one great commercial nation, all of which is convincingly shown by the problems. May free-silver night schools be organized in every school house in the land, and victory crown the efforts of those who are spending time and money in promoting the movement.

Trusts' Millennium.

How nice it will be for you and me when all the mills are huddled together under one big trust; all the coal mines gobbled up by the railroads; all the money piled up in the banks and the price of labor and labor's products measured by a dollar so "good" that you and I will rarely ever see one! Won't that be the millennium? We are drifting that way as rapidly as the cohorts of Mammon and greed can manipulate the wires.—Cortland (Neb.) Herald.

THE REALM OF FASHION

For Cold Mornings.

For cold winter mornings nothing can exceed in comfort a pretty morning jacket of soft wool eiderdown. As here represented, pale blue was the color chosen, the edges being neatly finished with a bias binding of satin in the same shade, which is machine stitched on its inside and upper edges.

The gracefully pointed collar is a picturesque feature of the garment, and is included in the neck seam with a comfortable rolling collar, that completes the neck.

The shaping is very simply accomplished by side seams, that end just below the waist line, underarm gores and shoulder seams, the fronts being closed invisibly in centre, under small decorative bows of satin ribbon.

The sleeves are two-seamed, in regular coat shape, the becoming fulness gathered at the top, and the wrists bound with satin. Although especially designed for eiderdown, any woolen fabric may be chosen to develop this neat and trim house jacket, flannel, camel's hair, ladies' cloth or cashmere being pretty when trimmed with ribbon, lace or insertion.

To make this jacket for a woman of medium size will require three and one-half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide.

A Fetching Suit.

Checked novelty wool suiting in brown and chamois shades showing a silk thread of pale blue woven in with the line of darker brown that forms the check is the material chosen for the fetching suit shown in the large engraving.

Brown ribbon velvet is used for trimming, the revers of piece velvet to match being overlaid with creamy point de Venice lace. Three handsome steal buttons decorate the front, a steel buckle being used to clasp the belt of velvet at the waist line.

Hat of brown felt faced with shirred chamois, colored satin and crushed cream roses under the brim at the left side. Handsome brown shaded tips, roll and loop of satin ribbon.

The yoke and collar are of finely tucked cream colored taffeta that comes already tucked for this purpose.

The yoke may be at both front and back or in front only, and the revers may extend in Bertha fashion on the back or be cut off at the shoulders. The closing may be in front or at centre-back, and the box plait can be omitted as shown in outline sketch. A body lining fitted by single bust darts,

HOW BIG GUNS AAE MADE.

Assembling the Huge Forgings at the Washington Gun Foundry.

The guns are made of what is called forged steel. This steel is made by private firms, principally at the famous Bethlehem works in Pennsylvania, and is sent to the gun-foundry in the shape of large tubes, and in other shapes called jackets and hoops. These steel pieces, after being finished, are put together and made into guns. The jacket of a gun is about half the length of the tube, and itself is really a large tube. The inner tube, when it arrives, is put into a lathe, and has the hole bored out to nearly the size it will be when finished; then it is turned down inside for about half its length from the rear or breech end to its proper size. "Turned down" means that the metal is cut off with a steel cutter. The jacket also is bored out smoothly and the hole carefully measured. The diameter of this hole, or bore, in the jacket is a little smaller (some hundredths of an inch) than the outside of the tube after being turned down. Overhead in the shop are big cranes, which travel back and forth on tracks, and which can easily lift and carry heavy weights. The largest crane is called the 110-ton crane, but it will lift a weight even greater. Near the center of the gun-shop is a large pit in which there are furnaces. After the tube has been bored out and turned down outside, it is carried by a crane and lowered into the pit near the furnaces, so that it stands on its muzzle end, the breech end being up in the air. The jacket is also lifted and lowered into a furnace and heated. This furnace has a top, or cover, which lifts off, and which is put on after the jacket has been lowered into it. Hot air is forced into this furnace, which heats the jacket till it expands so that the size of its bore becomes greater in diameter than the size of the tube it is to inclose. When all is ready, the cover is lifted from the furnace, the crane hooks on to the jacket, lifts it out of the furnace, and swings it over the tube. The jacket is then quickly measured, and carefully lowered over the tube, which is standing on its end. A stream of cold water is then admitted into the lower end of the tube. This water rises nearly to the top of the tube, and helps to cool both tube and jacket, now fitted together. As the jacket cools it shrinks to its proper size, and so squeezes and holds the tube tight within. When both are cold, the partly made gun is lifted out of the pit, put into another lathe, and turned down outside so as to be ready to have the hoops put on. These hoops, which have been bored out to the proper size, are heated and shrunk on over the gun just as the jacket was shrunk on over the tube. The whole gun is made, or built up in this manner. After all the hoops are on, the gun is bored out again to final size, put into a rifling machine, and rifled; that is, it has grooves cut inside of the bore throughout its length. These grooves commence at the muzzle, and gradually curve till they reach the end of the bore. They are cut by what is called a rifling-bar, which is a long shaft with cutters at one end. The gun remains steady, while the bar enters into the gun at the muzzle, and turns at the same time, thus cutting what are called spiral grooves throughout the length of the bore of the gun. This rifling is done so as to give the shot or shell, when the gun is fired, a twirling or rotary motion, which prevents it from tumbling end over end, and causes it to keep pointed in the right direction. The shot or shell (projectile) is long, and has a copper band fitted on its rear end. When the gun is fired, this copper band, being softer than the steel of the gun, enters into the grooves is turned by them, and gives the projectile a spinning motion during its flight.

Slang from the Days of Old Rome.

Passing through a vacant lot the other day where some boys were having a game of ball, I heard one of them who had got a rap on the knuckles from a "foul," exclaim, "Jiminy, that hurts!" and then, after rubbing his fingers a moment, he went back to his place on the field, little dreaming that he had just uttered a solemn invocation to the old Roman demigods Castor and Pollux. For our vulgar "jiminy" is but a corruption of the Latin "gemini," twins, a name applied to Castor and Pollux, the twin sons of Jupiter and Leda. These hero gods were the patrons of games and festivals of all kinds, and the especial friends of travelers; hence, when an old Roman exclaimed, "O Gemini!" it was a devout appeal to the gods for help or protection, very much the same as when a knight of old called on his patron saint. —Miss E. F. Andrews.

A Friendly Ceremony in Old Cuba.

When an acquaintance visits a private residence, cigars are handed round on a silver salver; if the visitor be an intimate friend, one of the young girls of the family, called a "donzalia," lights a cigar and giving it a few draws to get well lighted, gracefully presents it to him. If the guitar is brought in, as usually occurs (for there is one in every house), and the visitor plays, his cigar is kept lighted by the donzalia, and at each pause in the music she politely hands it to the guest. This may occur several times in an evening, and this friendly ceremony is pleasant enough when the cigar comes from the pouting lips of a rich Spanish beauty just ripening into womanhood, but in any case it must be thankfully accepted.

The year 47 B. C. was the longest year on record. By order of Julius Caesar it contained 445 days. The additional days were put in to make the seasons conform as near as possible with the solar year.

A Father's Story.

From the Evening Crescent, Appleton, Wis.

A remarkable cure from a disease which has generally wrecked the lives of children, and left them in a condition to which death itself would be preferred, has attracted a great amount of attention among the residents of the west end of Appleton.

The case is that of little Willard Creech, son of Richard D. Creech, a well known employe of one of the large paper mills in the Fox River Valley. The lad was attacked by spinal disease and his parents had given up all hope of his ever being well again when, as by a miracle, he was healed and is now in school as happy as any of his mates.

Mr. Creech, the father of the boy, who, resides at 1062 Second Street, Appleton, Wisconsin, told the following story:

He Goes to School.

"Our boy was absolutely helpless. His lower limbs were paralyzed, and when we used electricity he could not feel it below his hips. Finally we let the doctor go as he did not seem to help our son and we nearly gave up hope. Finally my mother who lives in Canada wrote advising the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I bought some.

"This was when our boy had been on the stretcher for an entire year and helpless for nine months. In six weeks after taking the pills we noted signs of vitality in his legs, and in four months he was able to go to school.

"It is two years since he took the first of the pills and he is at school now just as happy and well as any of the other children. It was nothing else in the world that saved the boy than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

The Champion Stowaway.

A young Irishman who recently reached Philadelphia on the British steamer Snowflake is a star in his method of obtaining free transportation by stowing away in some recess of ocean liners. This stowaway has hidden away on steamers two hundred times, circumnavigated the globe seventeen times, and has been to every part of the world where steamers are in the habit of trading.

Safety of Railroad Travel.

Last year on American railways one passenger was killed in accidents out of every 2,827,474 passengers carried. That is to say, you can take a train 2,827,474 times before, on the law of averages, your turn comes to be killed. You will have to travel 72,093,962 miles on the cars before that turn comes, and 4,541,945 miles before you are injured. If you travel twenty miles every day for three hundred days in the year you can keep on at it for 758 years before your turn comes to be hurt.

RELICS OF GENERAL WASHINGTON

Articles Now Kept in the National Museum at the Capital.

One of the most interesting relics in the National Museum at Washington is the camp chest used by Washington throughout the revolution. It is a compact affair, about the size of a tourist's wicker chest for cooking of the present day, two and one-half feet long, two feet wide, one foot high, and it contains an outfit consisting of tinder-box, pepper and salt boxes, bottles, knives, forks, gridiron and plates. Every bit of the outfit save one bottle, which is broken at the shoulder, looks strong enough to stand another campaign.

Near-by are the tents used by Washington—three in number. One is a sleeping tent, twenty-eight feet long, with walls six feet high and a roof with a six-foot pitch. It is made of linen. The other two are marquee tents of smaller size, one with walls, the other a shelter tent open on the sides. That the tenting material of revolutionary days was good stuff is proved by the excellent condition of these tents, which sheltered the great commander through all his severe campaigns.

Here also is Washington's uniform, worn by him when he gave up his commission as commander-in-chief of the army, at Annapolis, in 1783. It consists of a big shadbelly coat of blue broadcloth, lined and trimmed with soft buckskin and ornamented with broad, flat brass buttons; buckskin waistcoat and breeches. The size of the garments (which are in a state of excellent preservation) testify to the big statute of the "Father of His Country," and suggest that he had an eye to a fine appearance in his dress. —Washington Post.

A Natural Foghorn.

At the Farallones the erosive agents have worked with queer capride. This rock being granite, has been acted upon by the sea at all levels, and throughout the long period when it has been rising out of the watery depths. Through a long, narrow hole, slanting, and communicating with the ocean, there comes at intervals a terrific stream of air, followed by the spasmodic heaving of the waves against the lower orifice. The government, which uses this island for lighthouse purposes, inclosed the upper end with the nozzle of a foghorn, and every few seconds there was blown an ear-splitting brawl, which was heard far out at sea, and above the din of the breaking rollers. It was allowed to roar only in foggy weather, but it was eccentric in that it would only sound at high tide. When the tide was low, although the weather might be thick, the thing was silent. For lack of its warning, a ship went ashore upon the island rocks, and then it was that the government abandoned its location on the windhole and erected a steam siren, or mechanical foghorn, which has since very faithfully performed the necessary service.—From "Our Seaboard Islands on the Pacific," by John E. Bennett, in Harper's Magazine.

One Bottle Cured Where Physician Failed.

I sold your GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA (G. F. P.) to a young lady customer whom our physician had given up as hopeless, and told her if it did her no good she need not pay for it. After taking one bottle she was entirely cured and has been in good health ever since.

Moore's Bridge, Ala. J. R. GILLILAND.

Health Restored.

I was weak and in very bad health and unable to do my work. I used one bottle of GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA (G. F. P.) and it did me more good than anything I ever used. I am now in good health and can do my work.

Mrs. S. E. CHANDLER.

Suffered from Change of Life.

My wife was sick for seven years, suffering from the Change of Life. We tried everything we could get from the doctors and paid out a considerable sum for treatment without any good result. We then began using GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA (G. F. P.) and it did more good than all else we had used for six years. It is the greatest remedy for suffering females ever placed on the market. J. D. BORDES, Colmesneil, Tex.

If your druggist does not keep it, send us $1.00 and will send you a bottle, all charges paid. L. GERSTLE & CO., Chattanooga, Tenn.

HEALTHY MATERNITY.

Two Grateful Women Tell of the Help They Have Received From Mrs. Pinkham.

The climax of life force in woman is capable motherhood.
The first requisite for a good mother is good health.
Health of body means health of the generative organs.

Read what Mrs. G. A. NONNAMAKER, Bluffton, Ohio, says about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and how well it prepared her for maternity:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must say a word in praise of your Vegetable Compound. I used three bottles of it when I was pregnant, and labor was not nearly as long as it was with my other babies; and my baby is so healthy to what the others were. I think every woman should use your Compound when pregnant, it will save them so much suffering and misery. I cannot say enough in praise of it. If ever I need medicine again, I shall use your Compound."

The most successful tonic known to medicine for women approaching maternity is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a safeguard for every woman who uses it, and the fullest benefit comes from its use with Mrs. Pinkham's advice freely offered to all women. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

Here is a convincing statement, bearing directly on this subject, from Mrs. E. Bisnor, of 1848 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am a great believer in your Compound. I was almost despairing of ever again being well, as I was a great sufferer, and had been for years. I suffered from womb trouble, and had terrible blind fits. After writing to you I tried your Compound. The result was astonishing. I have used it and advocated it ever since. In childbirth it is a perfect boon. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light, so that all women would read, and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings."

A Million Women have been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

It is impossible to promise particular features that will appear in the "AMERICAN MONTHLY" during the coming year, for it is, as Dr. Hoskman says, "a great monthly newspaper." As such, it promises its readers an illustrated account of the notable things which will take place in the month, of the political, economic, and literary movements which are of value to thinking men and women. The "Progress of the World" will be directly an illustrated story of the month. The "Leading Articles" will give the best thought and information of the current magazines on the important events; the contributed articles furnish the character sketches of the men who make the month, and give timely discussions by authorities on any question of importance or serious import.

"We know of no review published, in this country or in Europe, which combines so successfully as the AMERICAN MONTHLY the completeness, and energy of journalism with the sound judgment, carefully weighed opinion, exact knowledge, and well-chosen English of the purely literary periodical."—The Outlook.

The result of this comprehensive effort to edit in one monthly volume the information needed by intelligent people of "live" interests is best given in the opinions which the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY have seen fit to express. These are thinking business men, clergymen, editors, lawyers, professors, engineers, the wide-awake women of America. They write that the AMERICAN MONTHLY "is indispensable"; "is simply invaluable"; "is a generous library in itself"; "a historical cyclopedia of the world"; "the best means of aid for a busy man"; "the best periodical of the kind we have ever had"; "a triumph of genius"; "the world under a field-glass," etc., etc.

Masonic Resolutions.

We, the undersigned, having been appointed a committee to draft and present for your consideration such suitable resolutions in memoriam of our deceased Brother Orman Allen Duke, beg leave to submit the following:

Brother Duke was born in Davidson county, Tennessee, January, 1843, and moved to Alabama about the year 1873, and while engaged in business in Mississippi, died on the 5th day of September, 1898, and was buried at Clanton by our Lodge on the 7th day of September 1898. Bro. Duke was made a Mason in 1877 and his petition was among the first received by Clanton Lodge. With that determination which was so characteristic of him he soon pressed his Masonic career to the door of the 32nd degree and had his life been spared none doubt but what he would have soon attained the z nith of masonic honors. Bro. Duke possessed those special qualities and rare characteristics that made him indeed "A stone fit for the builders use." He was one of the brightest stars in the masonic constellation of our State, and his admiration and love of masonry, his fidelity to our cause, and his devotion and adherence to the tenets of our order made him the recipient of many honors. He has filled with parcoable pride to himself, and credit to masonry the several stations in the Lodges from entered apprentice to 32nd degree, occupied stations in the Grand Lodge of Alabama, and was Grand Representative to the Grand Lodge of Alabama from Oregon for several terms. The highest honor within the gift of this Lodge that of master was conferred upon Brother Duke. He was generous to a fault, and many a weary and despondent brother has had the bright sunlight of masonry cast across his path through his charity. Therefore, be it resolved by Clanton Lodge, 1st. That Brother Orman Allen Duke has lived the life of a true mason, and remembering that to err is human—cast around his faults the mantle of a mason's charity 2nd. That masonry has lost a devoted advocate and Clanton Lodge a consistent brother. 3rd. That to the family of our deceased Brother we extend our heartfelt sympathy, and admonish them to bear with Christian fortitude this their irreparable loss. 4th. That a page be set apart in the minutes of the Lodge to be inscribed with the name and dates of berth and death of Brother Duke, and that a copy of these resolutions under seal of the Lodge, be furnished the family of our deceased Brother.

Respectfully submitted,
J. P. VANDERVEER,

Dead Negro Baby Found in Swamp

On Saterday morning last the dead body of a negro baby, about one year old, was found in the swamp southeast of town. A negro, Red Wright, while out hunting, found the body and at once came and informed the Sheriff. Inquiries were set on foot and it soon developed that a young colored woman rejoicing in the name of "Mint" had disappeared, and that previous to her disappearance the baby was missing. The Sheriff got on her trail and she was captured at Wadsworth Tuesday and brought back and placed in jail. The body of the infant was decomposed and had been partly eaten by hogs. A jury was empanelled on Saturday evening and an inquest held, the verdict returned being in accordance with the evidence.

As a Brother.

A certain curate was of a painfully nervous temperament, and in consequence was constantly making awkward remarks—intended as compliments—to the bishop and others. Having distinguished himself in an unusual degree during a gathering of clergy to an afternoon tea at the bishop's palace, he was taken to task for his failings by a senior curate, who was one of his companions on the way home.

"Look here, Bruce," said the senior decidedly, "you are a donkey. Why cannot you keep quiet instead of making your asinine remarks? I am speaking to you now as a brother"—

Loud laughter interrupted him at this point, and for the moment he wondered why.—Baltimore News.

Great Watch, Great Cow.

Seven years ago a farmer living west of Webster City, Ia., hung his vest on the fence in the barnyard, and as a result of it a wonderful story is told.

A calf chewed up a pocket in the garment in which was a standard gold watch. Last week the animal, a staid old milk cow, was butchered for beef, and the timepiece was found in such a position between the lungs of the cow that the process of respiration, the closing in and filling the lungs, kept the stem winder wound up, and the watch had lost but four minutes in the seven years.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. For sale by J. S. Dr. Lamar's Lecture on the Yosemite

On Tuesday night at the Court House Dr. C. R. Lamar, of the Texas Conference, who formerly resided some time in California, gave an interesting lecture on the wonders and beauties of the Yosemite Valley. The night was wet and unpleasant, but this did not deter a fairly good audience from braving the inclemency of the weather and enjoying the Doctor's graphic description of the world-famed park. He pictured in glowing language the varied wonders he had seen, and as his descriptive powers are of a high order, he carried his audience with him to California and entranced them with the beauties of the Yosemite Valley.

Mistakes In Telegraph Messages.

Two funny telegraph stories are printed by the Pittsburg Dispatch on the authority of a former employee of the Western Union company.

He was receiving a dispatch from Albany, in which the sender was not overcareful in the matter of spacing his letters. Lawton took the address as follows: "Dr. A. Wing, room car agent, Central depot, New York."

The dispatch came back with the marginal report that there was no such person at the address named. The operator at Albany was called up and explanations followed, in consequence of which the address was changed to "drawing room car agent, Central depot."

A still more absurd mistake was once made in the same offices when a telegram was received for "James W. Gilespie clerk, Brooklyn nasty yard." This was afterward amended to read, "James W. Gillespie, clerk, Brooklyn navy yard."

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

In some parts of the Klondike gold is now worth its weight in firewood.

If Spain really wants to raise a navy she ought to send for Hobson. He is a handy man in that line.

Uncle Sam stands at the head of the league this season. He has fielded his position without an error and has made more base hits than anybody. There seems to be a hard tussle between Spain and France for tail-enders.

King Karreh, an African chief, has discovered that for the smooth veldt, or prairie, of South Africa, there is no method of transportation so delightful as that furnished by the bicycle. With spear and shield he leads the way. His followers keep up, if they can.

A report from Georgetown, British Guiana, to the Commercial Museum calls attention to the anomalous fact that while the United States send mules and horses to that country, the harness is still supplied from Glasgow. As our workmen can certainly compete with the Scotch artisans in this branch of industry there is no conceivable reason why British Guiana, which since we have acquired the Antilles is our neighbor, should not turn to this market not only for her harness but for all her industrial supplies.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal says: We are in the habit of thinking of Russia as a compact, powerful nation, able to crash any other single nation on the face of the earth. On paper she has the largest army, and it would seem that just by mere force of numbers she ought to prove irresistible. But when we consider that there are considerably more than 100 nationalities in Russia, and that more than fifty languages are spoken there, the idea of solidarity vanishes and we see the elements of weakness in an overgrown monster.

A large American manufacturing firm making a specialty of bugles and army trumpets has just received an order from the Spanish Government for 2500 such horns, to be constructed exactly like the American army bugles, to be pitched in "G," with a slide to "F." This number is regarded by army men as entirely too large for the equipment of the Spanish cavalry regiments now in existence, but it is thought possible that the Spanish army officers were so charmed by the notes from the Yankee horns that they are going to seek to make the "G" bugle the national instrument and perhaps replace the guitar with it.

With the launching of the battleship Illinois the American navy is increased by the largest and most powerful vessel in all its squadrons. The new ship is larger by 1000 tons than the victorious Oregon; when fully armed she will be a more powerful fighter than the Oregon or the Texas, and with her complete equipment in place she will present to the maritime nations a magnificent example of American genius and skill in naval construction. Here's hoping—and believing, too—that the new battleship may prove worthy of her sponsor State! May she never fire a gun without cause, nor ever cease firing until the enemy signals "Enough!"

Admiral Walker's commission reports that the Nicaragua Canal can be completed for $125,000,000. The canal is to be 170 miles long, of which about 100 is in Lake Nicaragua. The Erie Canal is 325 miles long and cost $52,000,000 only with all improvements. The Suez Canal is ninety-two miles long and cost $102,000,000. But the Nicaragua Canal, 170 miles long, would save 10,000 miles in the route from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It would have saved that to the Oregon on her trip to join the fleet, it would save that to her now on her trip with the Iowa to Manila. It is an important question whether it would not save its cost in a short time by shortening thus the route for ships. We may see the day when it will be supremely important to concentrate our battleships on one sea coast and there will be no time in which to send them 10,000 miles around the Horn, observes the New York Commercial Advertiser.

NEGOTIATIONS MAY FAIL.

Spanish Government Will Stand by Her Commissioners

IN REGARD TO THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Aspect is Growing Serious, and Hostilities May be Renewed at Any Time—Cabinet Members' Anxiety.

PARIS.—The Spaniards declare that their refusal to sign a treaty based on any Philippine terms thus far suggested by the United States is irrevocable. They say that they do not and cannot view the taking of the Philippines as anything else than a wanton ravishment of their possessions unless it is accompanied by a financial consideration of appreciable size.

The turn of events in the peace conference depends upon the purpose or the willingness of the American commissioners to extend them finaficial terms. Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines is now clung to by the Spaniards chiefly as a means to obtain financial relief if possible. It is also purely a matter of money now, if the amount be large enough to absolve the Spanish government from possible charges by their creditors that the collateral has been given away. Persons near to Spain's heaviest creditors believe that should the Americans assume the Philippine debt or pay Spain its face amount in cash the Spaniards would sign.

If they have not already done so, the Spanish commissioners will ultimately advise the Americans that they must not permit any controversy as to the binding character of the mortgage, resting upon the revenues of the Philippines to pay the so-called Cuban debt. Tenacious adherence to this claim would set up on the Spanish side an ultimatum under which no treaty would be signed which did not stipulate that the Philippine revenues should pay the Philippine debt. In such event the Americans would probably claim that the Philippine debt of $40,000,000 amounts to $20,000,000 in gold, of which $11,000,000 has been employed in fighting the United States, leaving less than $10,000,000 chargeable in gold to the Philippines. The United States would doubtless maintain that even the reduced amount was used in fighting the Philipinos, and object to the Spanish conclusion that it is a fair charge against the Americans.

WASHINGTON.—There is evident anxiety in official circles over the prospect of Spain's commissions withdrawing from the peace negotiations. The cabinet has taken a sombre view of the situation, and some of the members do not hesitate to say that they fear a rupture. This is the first time that the administration has been willing to admit such a denouement. The situation is very grave, for as soon as one of the parties concerned withdraws the countries are at once on a war footing again. One member of the cabinet said that there were grave fear of open hostilities being begun again, though it seemed incredible that Spain would enter upon such a suicidal policy.

The government has renewed and strengthened its determination that the Spanish evacuation of Cuba and the American occupation shall not be deferred beyond January 1 next. This conclusion has been communicated to the Spanish government within the last few days, in answer to an urgent request that the date of evacuation be put off because of the large number of Spanish troops remaining on the island, who, it it was represented, could not be moved before January 1. Not being a subject which could be treated by the commission at Paris or at Havana, the request of the Spanish government has been forwarded to Washington through the French embassy, which received also as forwarded by cables the refusal of the government to put off the date of assuming control.

The Daily London Graphic says: "The Spanish Transatlantic fleet has been ordered to be prepared for a renewal of hostilities and the forts in the Canary islands are being rapidly manned."

Killed His Father-in-Law.

Friday evening of last week, at Glasgow, Ky., about 7 o'clock, Robert Brown walked into Louis McClelland's house, in Neil chapel neighborhood, and commenced firing, killing McClelland and wounding his daughter Bertha, who, it is thought will die before morning. An old family feud was the cause of the shooting. Brown, who is McClelland's son-in-law, made his escape. Officers and friends of McClelland are in hot pursuit.

NEW SOUTHERN INDUSTRIES.

Many Important Industries Are Starting Throughout the South.

Among the special reports of new industries made by the Chattanooga, Tenn., Tradesman during the week ended November 12, 1898, the more important are a new by-product plant in the Birmingham district; a $10,000 brick works in Louisiana, recently burned, to be rebuilt; car works and repair shops in Tennessee; a new cotton mill in each of the Carolinas; electric light plants in Alabama, Louisiana and Texas; flouring mills in North Carolina and Virginia; the development of gold mines in Georgia and North Carolina; a handle factory in West Virginia; a hemp factory in Kentucky; a $100,000 hydro-carbon lighting and heating company in Arkansas; an ice factory in Kentucky; five lumber companies: in Alabama a $10,000 investment, in Arkansas $50,000; in Georgia $20,000, in Kentucky $75,000, in Texas $25,000; a large stave factory in Arkansas, owned by a Michigan company; a $250,000 steamboat company, organized by Mississippians; talc mines in North Carolina; telephone companies in Alabama and Kentucky, and tobacco factories in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Received His Sentence.

In the United States court at Birmingham, Ala., Tuesday, William Robert, alias Bob Taylor, who turned state's evidence against his companions in crime, charged with the murder of W. A. Thompson, a government witness, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the United States penitentiary at Raleigh, N. C., and fined $100 and costs.

The murder of Thompson occurred on March 14 last, near his home in Talladega county, Alabama. As he was passing a lonely spot in the mountains he was fired upon by a party of moonshiners who lay in wait for him. He made a desperate struggle for his life. His body was discovered two days afterwards.

Wife Killed and Husband Crippled.

An unfortunate accident, in which Mrs. Dock Holt was instantly killed and her husband severely hurt, occurred a few miles from Stevenson, Ala., the other day. Mr. and Mrs. Holt had gone to a store near by, both riding the same mule. They started home, and while riding under a big tree a large limb became loosened and fell, striking the unfortunate woman on the head, producing instant death. The fall of the limb, which struck her husband as well threw both riders to the ground, where friends found them several hours later, the woman dead and the man badly hurt, having his leg crushed. Mr. Holt had only one leg, the other having been amputated years ago.

Had an Exciting Time With Moonshiners

Deputy Revenue Collector W. C. Haulin returned to Birmingham, Ala., Monday, from Franklin county, near the line of Alabama and Mississippi, where, with Deputy Marshals C. M. Tompkins, J. M. Ezell, and two other men, he had an exciting time and destroyed two large illicit distilling outfits. The stills were located in the neighborhood known as "Freedom's Hill," and is said to be abounding with illicit distillers and highwaymen. The officers destroyed two 75-gallon copper stills and had a lively chase after two men, during which Deputy Tompkins fell down and had his shoulder dislocated. The men escaped.

May Mean More War.

Major-General Merriam is quoted as saying: "It would not surprise me to see that the negotiations between the United States and Spain have been broken off. If the work of the commission proves fruitless, it means a renewal of the war. If Spain refuses to accede to our demands it will show that she has secured substantial hope of assistance or European intervention. Should Germany take a hand in this matter England will follow suit, then I look for France to put her finger in the pie."

AMERICANS ARE ARRAIGNED.

Philippinos Present a Claim to President McKinley.

CLAIM THAT BLOODSHED MAY RESULT

Unless the Americans' Dealings With the Togales are Tempered by Justice and Fairness—Spaniards Shown More Regard.

HONG KONG.—The Filipino junta, representatives of Aguinaldo and the Filipino government have drawn up what they designate as an appeal to President McKinley and the American people, but what is in reality rather in the nature of an arraignment of American actions in the Philippines. John Barrett, former United States minister to Siam, has been asked by the junta to present the memorial to the United States government.

The memorial says: "We, the Hong Kong representatives of our countrymen, appeal to the great and good judgment of President McKinley and to the spirit of fairness of the American people as it is shown in the regard for the petitions of the weak and oppressed.

"While the fate of the islands is still undecided, and we are doing all in our power to prevent a conflict between the Americans and Filipinos—awaiting patiently the conclusion of the Paris conference—we implore the intervention of the president, supported by the will of the people, to end the slights shown our leaders, soldiers and people by some of the American military and naval officers, although we do not wish to wrong Admiral Dewey or General Otis."

The memorial avers that "false reports are spread broadcast alleging that the Filipinos are responsible for all the friction;" points out "that the tension is greater every day, and any moment a shot may be fired by an irresponsible American or Filipino soldier, leading to great bloodshed," and beseeches the United States to "help the junta control our people by directing American officials at Manila to temper their relations with justice and fairness."

"From the commencement of hostilities, the Filipinos acceded to all the American requirements, but after bottling up the Spaniards in Manila, the Filipinos were completely ignored when the Americans arrived and thus deprived of the fruits of victory. Now, after months of campaigning, the Filipino troops have been ordered beyond the suburbs, where they have no quarters and where supplies are difficult to obtain. All our launches have been seized because of foolish rumors that we would attack the Americans. The Spaniards of late, the enemies of the Americans, have been shown every consideration, while the Filipinos, their friends and allies, are often treated as enemies."

After emphasizing the junta's "absolute confidence in President McKinley and the people of the great republic," stating that "our protests are not prompted by animosity, but are directed against conditions existing at Manila and not against the American government, acknowledging our gratitude to American arms," and expressing a hope "that the islands are not to be returned to Spain," the memorial concludes thus:

"We wait the arbitrament of the peace commission with even greater interest than the Americans, because it concerns our land, our happiness and our freedom. In the meantime we shall pray for peace and a perfect understanding with the Americans."

Well-Known Prelate Dies.

William Hickley Gross, archbishop of Oregon, Roman Catholic church, died at St. Joseph's hospital, Baltimore, Md., Monday, of heart disease. Archbishop Gross was in attendance upon a celebration at St. Charles college, Ellicott City, Md., and was taken sick on November 6th, since which time he has been confined in his bed in St. Joseph's hospital. It was thought that his condition was improving and that he would recover, but a sudden change for the worse resulted in his death.

Archbishop Gross was well known throughout Georgia, having been bishop of the Savannah diocese a number of years ago.

SHOT TO DEATH.

Mysterious Murder of Stephen Carter, a Lake Park, Ga.

In Echols county, five miles from Lake Park, Ga., Stephen Carter, a prosperous, widely known and highly respected farmer, was shot to death Friday night while standing upon his own threshhold. Two loads of buck shot and two pistol balls, all in the head, accomplished Carter's instant death. Carter and his 12 year-old son came to Lake Park Friday, where he sold three bales of cotton, receiving pay in a draft, which he carried home with him.

Carter had been home but a short time when he went to the front door to get a drink of water. His wife had retired, and there was no one about the place. He opened the door and stepped out upon the front porch, where it was the custom to keep a bucket of fresh water. Just as he emerged from the door the shots were fired in rapid succession, two from a shotgun and two from a pistol. With the reports he fell back in his doorway stone dead, the blood flowing in torrents from his lacerated head and face. Mrs. Carter sprang from her bed, and was almost instantly joined by her son, who came from his bedroom. With the dinner horn they quickly aroused near-by neighbors.

His tragic death recalls another that happened in the same section two or three years ago when the first husband of Mrs. Carter was shot down in his house as mysteriously as was the tragedy of last night.

The man's name was Frank Colson, and he, too, was a prosperous farmer. For some years he and his wife were separated, the wife living with her son-in-law. One night Colson went out of his house for something, and was shot down on his porch. Some time afterwards Mrs. Colson was married to Carter.

Row Among Soldiers.

Private Jackson, Troop N, was instantly killed and Corporal Garrett, Troop H, mortally wounded Saturday night, at Huntsville, Ala., by "Horse" Douglas, a negro tough of that city. Both men belonged to the Tenth cavalry. No one saw the killing. Douglas was seen with the two soldiers at 10 o'clock in the tough part of the city. Three pistol shots were heard soon after, and in the early morning Jackson was found dead and Garrett mortally wounded, with a bullet in his head. Douglas' pistol had three empty shells. He is in jail, but denies the crime. Some rumor has been circulated all during the day that the Tenth cavalry would lynch the prisoner, but the sheriff fears no such violence.

Death of a Brilliant Officer.

Adjutant-General Corbin received a message Friday last from General Wade, chairman of the Cuban evacuation commission at Havana, reporting the death from yellow fever of Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Williams, colonel. Williams was the youngest officer in his grade. He was a native of Kentucky, and was appointed to the military academy from that state. He was graduated July 1, 1871, and after four year's service as second lieutenant in the Eighteenth infantry was appointed to the quartermaster's department with the rank of captain. In Havana he held the rank of colonel. Mrs. Williams and family are now in Washington. She is a daughter of General John B. Gordon, of Georgia.

Death of a Prominent Jurist.

Judge Martin V. Montgomery, one of the best known members of the Michigan bar, died in Lansing at his residence Saturday night. He was a prominent figure in the Cleveland administration, and in 1885 was appointed United States commissioner of patents. He afterwards served on the supreme court bench of the District of Columbia.

Protection Against Colonies.

Henry T. Oxnard president of the American Beet Sugar Association, has made a statement showing that a concerted action is being planned by the beet sugar and tobacco producers of the United States regarding the colonial policy of the United States. They will ask President McKinley and congress to establish protective rates against the importation of goods from the Philippines and elsewhere, so that home producers will at least have the advantage of being on a par with the cheap labor and climatic conditions of the newly acquired territory.

Survey of Elk River.

Assistant Engineer Hall, of Chattanooga, was in Florence, Ala., Saturday, having just recently completed the survey of Elk river from Fayetteville, Tenn., to the mouth of the river, where it empties into the Tennessee above Shoal creek, fifteen miles above that city. He reports a fall of 133 feet in the ninety-five miles surveyed. Small boats with a very light draft frequently go up Elk river for a distance of a few miles when the river is high.

MARIA TERESA STRANDED

The Dismantled Cruiser Lies on a Coral Reef.

BRITISH NAVY CLAIMS THE VESSEL

American Consul Has Entered Protest—Vessel Rests in an Easy Position, But it is Feared Has Been Badly Damaged.

Wreckers who have arrived at Nassau, N. P., brought with them stories from a stranded vessel off Cat Island, which establishes beyond a doubt that she is the Infanta Maria Teresa. As the vessel is looked upon as being a derelict, the wreckers claim the right to seize the stores which can be saved. They report that the water is up between her decks; that she has a list to the starboard, which side is damaged, and that she is dismasted. The vessel lies between reefs on a smooth bottom and has her anchor out.

The British admiralty authorities are going to take possession of the Maria Teresa as a derelict. The American consul has protested against this course, claiming everything less the salvage.

Opinions differ as to the chance of saving the cruiser. Although she has been aground since Thursday, the Maria Teresa rests in an easy position and the weather is moderate.

The officials at the navy department are interested in the news from Nassau identifying clearly the steamship lying off Cat Island as the Maria Teresa. The legal status of the vessel has been considered cursorily, and it is the opinion of the department the title of the United States to her is unimpaired; notwithstanding the fact that it was necessary to abandon her for the time. There may be a question involved as to the payment of salvage to the Bahama fishermen, but that depends in a large measure on what they have done. If they have simply been looting the vessel, then not only are they not entitled to salvage, but the goods stolen may be recovered. On the other hand, if it was the fishermen who anchored the ship in smooth water, and if they made any endeavor to bring her in, probably they would have a good claim for salvage. The vessel, however, is not subject to detention on this account, international law exempting national vessels from seizure on any score in time of peace. In such case the salvor might, after allowing the vessel to proceed, present their claim to the government of the United States through the diplomatic representatives of the British government.

From the account received it is feared that the damage to the vessel sustained through the storm and the probable pounding on the coral reefs surrounding Cat Island, added to the wounds received by the ship in action when she was sunk originally are sufficient to render her entirely valueless. Nothing but an expert's examination can determine this point, but as the Merritt experts are already on their way to Cat Island, the question will soon be decided. The navy department has decided that a court of inquiry shall be held to determine whether the abandonment of the Teresa at sea was justifiable, and if not, who was responsible. The report that the water in the hull was level between decks, taken in connection with the fact that the vessel was rolling her spoonsons under when abandoned, is believed to make out a very favorable case for the people aboard the Teresa, unless it should be shown that this great volume of water was admitted through injury sustained on the coral reefs at Cat Island after the vessel was abandoned.

...In the hands of a new ... In the after... ...noon the board of aldermen resigned ...ce by vote. As each alderman vacated, the remainder elected a successor named by the citizens' committee, until the entire board was changed legally. They resigned in response to public sentiment. The mayor and chief of police have also resigned, and the new board elected their successors, according to law. Ex-Representative Waddell was elected mayor and E. G. Parmlee, chief of police. The first act of the new government was to swear in 250 special policemen, chosen from the most reputable white citizens. They are vested with all the authority, and will take possession of the city. The white citizens will remain on guard throughout the town to prevent possible attempts at incendiarism. The new government will devote its attention to restraining the feeling among the whites, as well as to keeping down lawlessness among the negroes.

The trouble commenced at 8:30 in the morning, when an armed body of citizens, numbering about 100, and led by ex-Representative Waddell, chairman of a committee of twenty-five, appointed for the purpose, proceeded to the publishing house of a negro newspaper, the Record, to wreck it. The editor of this paper had published an article, defamatory of white women, and a mass meeting of citizens ordered his expulsion from the city within twenty-four hours and the removal of his press. Fifteen leading negroes were called in by the committee of twenty-five last night and ordered to notify the chairman this morning whether they would agree to the removal of the press. They were informed that if no answer was received the press would be demolished. No answer was received by the chairman this morning, and, after waiting an hour, the citizens proceeded in a body and demolished the fixtures of the printing office.

Tolbert, white, wounded; Stuart Miller, white, mortally wounded in head; C. Fleming, white, shot in shoulder; M. J. Younger, shot in foot; Cleve Armstrong, shot in the neck; George Davis; shot in six places; George Miller, shot in two places; John Dow, shot in two places.

The trouble was precipitated on election day, when 200 or 300 negroes at the polls opened a fusilade at the store in which the voting was going on. In this fight Etheridge was killed and Tolbert wounded.

The second occasion for provocation was that a party hunting the slayers of Etheridge was fired into, and Miller fatally wounded, and Fleming badly hurt. The arming of the negroes, the killing of Etheridge, the firing from ambush, all conspired to kindle a flame of passion.

The incident of the day was the killing of Essex Harrison. Down the road came a squad of mounted cavalrymen with Harrison marching ahead with guns and rifles drawn on him. Fifteen men lined up on the roadside. The negro was put out in the road and told to go toward the pile of dead negroes. He started; there was a ring of rifles and Harrison pitched forward dead. Harrison, it is alleged, was a member of the crowd that killed Etheridge.

Parties were out during the day searching for the negroes, who, it is said, were the leaders in the rioting. The whites are particularly incensed against the Tolberts and hold them responsible for the trouble. A party went to kill Tom Tolbert, but some one prevailed on the hot-heads not to kill a wounded and dying man.

John R. Tolbert, collector of the port at Charleston, and Joe Tolbert have left the county and gone to Columbia. Reed Tolbert has gone to Greenville. Ezra Tolbert is quartered with friends. His son was shot and this, with the plea that he is a non-partisan, has nine children and a wife alone has saved him from death. A committee waited on J. W. Tolbert, assistant postmaster at McCormick, and asked him to get out of that town. He left. Several in the mob wanted to burn Tolbert's property, but better advice prevailed.

Fully 300 men scoured the country around Phoenix, where the first trouble occurred, hoping to find the bands of negroes said to be congregated in the neighborhood. The Tolberts are of good family, made fine southern soldiers and have been republicans since the war.

The two negroes who are known to have shot Ethridge have not yet been captured.

POLITICAL PRISONERS

Being Transported From the African Penal Settlement to Havana.

The Spanish steamer Isla De Panay, from Cadiz, arrived at San Juan de Porto Rico, Friday last with 292 Cuban political prisoners on board bound for Havana. The prisoners left the African penal settlement of Ceuta on October 28, and left Cadiz on the 30th. They have served sentences from two to three years' imprisonment, and were given emigrant accommodations on the Isle De Panay. On board that vessel they were constantly kept under the guard of Spanish soldiers. The prisoners are badly off in the way of clothing, none having been supplied by the government. But there were few sick among them. The Isla De Panay is due to arrive at Havana on November 15.

The Spanish government is paying the transportation charges, but the prisoners complain of the presence of the guard of soldiers, declaring they are now free men. They admit, however, that they have not been ill-treated on board the steamer.

The Porto Rican papers have been notified by the authorities of the decision of the authorities at Washington to accord them second-class matter rates, and they are greatly pleased.

Osculatory Girls Greet Him—Presented With a Sword.

A special from Stuart, Ia., says: "Osborn Deignan, one of the men of Merrimac fame, arrived here, was met by 500 people, who escorted him home. Eighteen or twenty club girls surrounded him at the depot and attempted to kiss him, but he pushed all back, saying there were handsomer men in the crowd than he. The municipal authorities presented Deignan with a sword and Governor Shaw and other prominent Iowans made speeches. Deignan ran away from his home here years ago."

FAVOR A NEW CONSTITUTION.

Committee Has Outlined Plan of Action and Will Be Aggressive.

One of the most vital questions to come before the present Alabama assembly which met Tuesday, is that of calling a constitutional convention. The committee which was appointed by the State Commercial and Industrial Association some time ago to take the matter in hand, met in Montgomery Saturday and outlined a plan of action. The committee decided that the time is ripe for an aggressive campaign for a new constitution, and resolutions were adopted advising that the work be pushed forward, taking negro suffrage as the main issue and giving the people a guarantee that the general provision of the present constitution on the subject of taxation shall be preserved and the limitations in their essential features remain unchanged. It was the opinion of all that a reform of the suffrage is the paramount issue, and the wisdom of the convention will insure protection on all secondary issues.

GLASS WORKS RESUME

Window glass factories of Pittsburg, Pa., with a capacity of about 1,100 pots started work Monday and nearly 10,000 men and boys are earning their first money in over half a year. Of the total number about 1,900 pots controlled by the American Glass Company, only 500 were operated before the agreement was reached Monday.

An Alexandria, Ind., dispatch says: "After five months' idleness work has been resumed at the United, DePauw and Alexandria window glass factories. One thousand men will be given employment.

American Citizen Unlawfully Held.

A dispatch from Nogales, Arizona, says that on Sunday last James Temple, a conductor on the New Mexico & Arizona railroad, was attacked by some Mexicans and in defending himself, shot one of them at Juan Arvalis fatally. This occurred about 2,000 feet north of the international boundary line. Later he returned to his hotel, which is south of the line and was arrested by Mexican officers on a charge of murder, the law of the state of Sonora providing for the trial of any person charged with crime against a Mexican citizen, though the crime may have been committed in a foreign country. Friends of Temple engaged an attorney, but the Mexican authorities refused to allow the prisoner to be seen. United States Consul J. F. Darnall then appealed to the state department at Washington. Secretary Hay demanded the immediate release of Temple.

Proposed Meat Inspection.

The Hamburger Nachrichten, of Hamburg, Germany, referring to the projected meat inspection bill says: "The Americans ought to be glad that Germany forces them gradually to adopt her own methods of meat inspection. Hitherto American inspection has been untrustworthy. So far as the threat of American isolation is concerned, America may be able to improve the presence of poisons in German wines, woolens, toys and chemicals, as Germany proves the presence of trichinea in American pork.

Quarantine Raised.

The state of Texas has raised the yellow fever quarantine, and the quarantine inspectors and guards have been withdrawn. All existing quarantines in the south against the fever, as far as it extends to disinfection and detention, have been raised though the usual regular inspection at the ports, will be continued all the year round.

Spanish Troops Refuse to Fire on Mutinous Police Force.

SPAIN MUST CEDE THE PHILIPPINES.

Military Have Control of Havana and Business Resuming Its Normal Condition—Other Pertinent News.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The Orden Publico force, cavalry and infantry regiments, was disbanded last Friday after a part payment of arrears. The Orden Publico organization has ceased to exist. The trouble leading to the disbandment of the force began with the protest of the third company on Thursday morning before the palace. At that time General Solano, chief of staff of General Blanco, addressed the men and led them back to their places, where the men gave cheers for Spain and General Blanco. General Arolas, military Governor of Havana, ordered more than 4,000 troops quartered in the outskirts of Havana to march into the city, where they arrived at nightfall.

At the head of a portion of these troops General Arolas marched toward the Orden Publico quarters, where the protesting third company was drawn up in the street under arms. The regulars refused to charge or fire upon their brother soldiers when ordered to do so, in the hope of intimidating the men, who were finally persuaded to retire to their quarters. Minor uprisings occurred during the night among other regiments. Barring these incidents the military have maintained thorough control of the city. The sum total of the casualties Thursday night was a lieutenant-colonel on General Arolas's staff wounded in the hand and another wounded seriously.

The city has again resumed its normal tranquility, although the regulars are still quartered in the principal streets and parks of the city as a precautionary movement.

Spain Must Cede the Philippines.

The cabinet at Washington held a special session Saturday night last, at which instructions of a positive character, bearing on the Philippine question, were drafted for dispatch to the American commissioners in Paris. These instructions were the outcome of the conference held earlier in the day and instructs the American representatives to admit of no further discussion as to the right to consider the disposition of the islands, and state that on that point the instructions already sent must stand, the only matters for discussion from the American view being the manner of giving over the islands.

COTTON ON VESSEL BURNED.

Fire Discovered on the British Steamship Mic Mac.

Just as the last bale of cotton of the cargo of the British steamship Mic Mac was being put in place Friday afternoon, at Brunswick, Ga., fire was discovered in the afterhold. The department was at once called out and several streams of water turned into the closely packed cotton. The fire had evidently been smoldering for several days. The flames were extinguished after two hours' hard work on the part of the local firemen and the steamer's crew. It is estimated that 150 bales were consumed, the total loss reaching about $4,500. The Mic Mac was consigned to A. F. Churchill. The loss is covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is believed to have been purely accidental.

Surgeon Kernachan's Good Luck.

Dr. W. J. Kernachan, of Florence, Ala., late of the First Alabama Volunteers has been appointed to the position of brigade surgeon in the regular army. The appointment is the result of Dr. Kernachan's admirable work while the First was in camp and the recommendation of General Wheeler that he be retained in the army service. Dr. Kernachan is recovering from a spell of illness at his home in Florence, but as soon as he is well enough he will report for duty to General Wheeler at Huntsville.

Presents for the Soldiers.

The 17th of the present month will be the last date upon which the folks at home may send Christmas presents to the soldiers at Manila through government agency. STRIKERS WHIP THE FIGHT.

Coal Company Agrees to Pay the State Scale at Once.

The differences between the Chicago-Virden Coal company at Virden and Auburn, Ill., and the striking miners, have been settled, and the shafts will soon be in operation. The company agreed to pay the state scale of 40 cents per ton, but did not want to tear down the stockade. Finally the company accepted the offer of the miners that they would take it down and charge the company nothing for the labor.

General Reese, of Springfield, has notified Sheriff Davenport that the remaining troops guarding the Chicago Virden Coal Company's shafts at Virden should be removed. Since the difference between the coal company and the miners have been settled, troops are no longer needed. The grand jury adjourned. General pressure is being brought to bear by influential persons that nothing shall result from its investigations. A prominent member of the jury admitted that such was the case. He had quantly declared that it was the intention of the grand jury not to be affected by any outside pressure.

IS CAPT. DREYFUS ALIVE?

French Government Declines to Allow Officer's Wife to Visit Him.

Madame Dreyfus appeared at the office of the colonial minister in Paris, Friday, for permission to send her husband some warm clothing for his return home. Her sequest was refused on the ground that the government would do whatever was necessary. At the same time the authorities read to her a letter from her husband to the effect that having for five months addressed appeals for a revision to General De Boisdeffre without getting any reply, and being wearied and exhausted by his useless appeals, he would write no more to his family or to anybody. He described himself as ill and dying and "bequeathed to the generosity of my country the care of rehabilitating my memory."

Madame Dreyfus then asked permission to telegraph her husband the decision of the court of cassation. This request was also refused. Then, through a friend, she appealed to President Faure, but with no better results. Her consul will bring the matter before the court of cassation.

PROUD OF HIS DEED.

Luccheni Convicted of Assassinating the Austrian Empress.

At Geneva, Switzerland, the Italian anarchist, Luigi Luccheni, was convicted of killing Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, on September 10th last, in that city, and has been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for life, the full penalty allowed by the Swiss law.

Luccheni admitted that he came to Geneva in order to kill the Duke of Orleans, but he arrived too late. The prisoner then remarked that in spite of this the Duke of Orleans would be killed within a year. The prisoner also said that if he had possessed fifty francs on the morning of the assassination, instead of killing the empress of Austria, he would have started for Italy, with the intention of killing King Humbert.

SLAUGHTER AT PANA IMMINENT

Negro Miners and the Whites Are Almost Certain to Clash.

At Pana, Ill., William Lynch, who was employed by the Pana Coal Company up to the time of the strike, has been shot at by negroes and run into the house. Then they shot through the house of a widow, Mrs. McIntrye, who was taking care of her sick daughter.

The negroes in the Flat Hall district came running out and began to shoot in all directions. They kept shooting until the militia arrived on the scene. When the shooting began many women and children ran to Captain Butler, of company B, for protection. As far as known no person was struck by the bullets. Things are in such a state that it is dangerous for any one to go out in the mining district at night.

The citizens say if something is not done before long there will be an outbreak and every negro and operator will be killed.

WAR ADVENTURES OF A BOY.

Ran Away from Home, Was Wounded in Cuba, and Made Money.

A few days ago Mrs. Dawson, wife of the army hospital steward at Fort Porter, Buffalo, N. Y., was made happy by the receipt of a postal card bearing the brief message: "I will be home in a few days. Don't worry." It was signed just plain "Willie." The card was mailed at New York, and was the first Mrs. Dawson had received from her son in weeks.

Willie is sixteen years old. Until he reached home he was looked upon as only an ordinary boy. Today he struts around the military reservation, the pride of his parents and the envy of his brothers and sisters as well as of the other boys in the neighborhood. He is a veteran traveller and a wealthy boy. Besides, he also already possesses a bank account with $200 cash, which he earned and dressed in new clothes. Besides he was wounded by the Spaniards, escaped from yellow fever and was bitten by a tarantula.

When the Thirteenth Regiment left Fort Porter for the South at the beginning of the war it went by a special train. Among other boys and men going on the train was "Bud," bag gage" was Will Dawson and his older brother, both of whom had run away from home without a word. They managed to exist until the train reached Tampa, after which it was smooth sailing for them, as the soldiers of the regiment found them and saw to it that they had enough to eat. But it was not for this kind of life that Willie left home. He looked the ground over and tried to find something which the soldiers in the big camp wanted and he could supply. In that hot climate he decided it was something cold, and borrowing a quarter from one of his friends, a private in Company C, he started a lemonade stand. The first night he repaid the money he borrowed and a few days later started two more stands, establishing his brother and another boy in the business. When the orders came for the regiment to move to Cuba, Will made up his mind that Cuba was the country for him. At this point his brother went back on him, and the two boys separated, the older one coming home. Will secured a job as a cabinboy on the transport Orizaba, receiving for his services $25 a month and his board. He made himself popular and was allowed to continue the lemonade business. Business prospered, and in a short time he had accumulated more money than he had ever seen before.

On the arrival of the transport off Santiago Will went ashore. When the troops moved he followed, and he was present at the battle of San Juan, and when it was over the surgeons had to remove from his foot a Mauser bullet which he proudly wears as a charm on his watch chain. He saw the destruction of Cervera's squadron and collected souvenirs which he brought home with him. It was while in Cuba that he had his experience with yellow fever and the tarantula, neither of which seemed to do him much injury.

When the transport sailed for Porto Rico Will decided to cast his lot with it rather than with the regiment, and went along. At all times the boy kept business uppermost in his head and tried in every way to increase his wealth. In Porto Rico he made some additions to his wardrobe, paying prices several times more than the goods were worth. From that island the transport went to Montauk, and after staying there for some time Will had a longing for home. New York Sun.

An Elevating Effect.

The regenerating influence of a silk hat is well known. It calls inevitably for a frock coat and an umbrella, which are badges of respectability, and not only lead their possessor to associate with others similarly equipped, but impel him to avoid disreputable folk, who hold such attire in derision. Again, the ownership of a silk hat, a frock coat and an umbrella, all at one and the same time, insensibly promotes habits of neatness and precision, and, in brief, a thorough reformation is eventually effected, from the ground up. All this, as before observed, is well known; but a New Orleans gentleman has discovered that an elevator is an almost equally potent moral agent. "For years," he said, "I never thought of going to bed before 1 o'clock, and the habit of idling away the early night became almost a second nature. Naturally, it led to my squandering a great deal of money and threw me into anything but desirable company. Not long ago I rented a room in a building that has an elevator that stops at 10 P. M. sharp. If I am late I have several flights of very steep stairs to climb, and I gradually found myself dropping around on time. Now I hardly ever miss the elevator. The result is that I get up earlier, do more and better work, and have drifted away from about all of my old nighthawk companions. Nothing like the elevator to renovate one's morals, my boy. It's very uplifting."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MARIA TERESA STRANDED.

The Dismantled Cruiser Lies on a Coral Reef.

BRITISH NAVY CLAIMS THE VESSEL.

American Consul Has Entered Protest—Vessel Rests in an Easy Position, But it is Feared Has Been Badly Damaged.

Wreckers who have arrived at Nassau, N. P., brought with them stories from a stranded vessel off Cat Island, which establishes beyond a doubt that she is the Infanta Maria Teresa. As the vessel is looked upon as being a derelict, the wreckers claim the right to scour the stores which can be saved. They report that the water is up between her decks; that she has a list to the starboard, which side is dismasted, and that she is dismasted. The vessel lies between reefs on a sandy bottom and has her anchor out.

The British admiralty authorities are going to take possession of the Maria Teresa as a derelict. The American consul has protested against this course, claiming everything belongs to the salvage.

Opinions differ as to the chance of saving the cruiser. Although she has been aground since Thursday, the Maria Teresa rests in an easy position and the weather is moderate.

The officials at the navy department are interested in the news from Nassau identifying cleverly the steamship lying off Cat Island as the Maria Teresa. The legal status of the vessel has been considered cursorily, and in the opinion of the department the title of the United States to her is unimpaired; notwithstanding the fact that it was necessary to abandon her for the time. There may be a question involved as to the payment of salvage to the Bahama fishermen, but that depends in a large measure on what they have done. If they have simply been looting the vessel, then not only are they not entitled to salvage, but the goods stolen may be recovered. On the other hand, if it was the fishermen who anchored the ship in smooth water, and if they made any endeavor to bring her in, probably they would have a good claim for salvage. The vessel, however, is not subject to detention on this account, international law exempting national vessels from seizure on any score in time of peace. In such case the salvor might, after allowing the vessel to proceed, present their claim to the government of the United States through the diplomatic representatives of the British government.

From the account received it is feared that the damage to the vessel sustained through the storm and the probable pounding on the coral reefs of Cat Island, added to the wounds received by the ship in action while she was sunk originally are sufficient to render her entirely valueless. Nothing but an expert's examination can decide the point, but as the Marconi experts are already on their way to Cat Island, the question will soon be decided. The navy department has decided that a court of inquiry shall be held to determine whether the abandonment of the Teresa at sea was justifiable, and if not, who was to consure. The report that the water in the hull was up between decks, taken in connection with the fact that the vessel was rolling, neither specimens under which abandonment is believed to make out a very favorable case for the people aboard the Teresa, unless it should be shown that the steamer's hold was not filled with water when she was abandoned, but that she was kept afloat by the buoyancy sustained by the coral reefs at Cat Island after the vessel was aboard.

Later.—The tug Potomac, from Nassau, which has been visiting the stranded vessel since Infanta Maria Teresa went on Cat Island, has arrived here in order to obtain a permit to work on the ship. She will return to Cat Island.

The officials report to the navy department on the finding of the Maria Teresa, was contained in a cable gram, received from Commander Graves, of the wrecking tug Potomac, which had been ordered to Cat Island from Santiago.

Etheridge, white, killed at polls; Thomas Tolbert, white, mortally wounded at the same time; Wade Hampton McKinney, Jesse Williams, Drayton Watts, Lum Jackson, Essex Harrison, Ben Collins, all colored, killed; Sidney Tolbert, white, dangerously wounded; John R. Tolbert, white, wounded; Stuart Miller, white, mortally wounded in head; C. Fleming, white, shot in shoulder; M. J. Younger, shot in foot; Cleve Armstrong, shot in the neck; George Davis; shot in six places; George Miller, shot in two places; John Dow, shot in two places.

The trouble was precipitated on election day, when 200 or 300 negroes at the polls opened a fusilade at the store in which the voting was going on. In this fight Etheridge was killed and Tolbert wounded.

The second occasion for provocation was that a party bearing the slayers of Etheridge was fired into, and Miller fatally wounded, and Fleming badly hurt. The arming of the negroes, the killing of Etheridge, the firing from ambush, all conspired to kindle a flame of passion.

The incident of the day was the killing of Essex Harrison. Down the road came a squad of mounted cavalrymen with Harrison marching ahead with guns and rifles drawn on him. Fifteen men lined up on the roadside. The negro was put out in the road and told to go toward the pile of dead negroes. He started; there was a ring of rifles and Harrison pitched forward dead. Harrison, it is alleged, was a member of the crowd that killed Etheridge.

Parties were out during the day searching for the negroes, who, it is said, were the leaders in the rioting. The whites are particularly incensed against the Tolberts and hold them responsible for the trouble. A party went to kill Tom Tolbert, but some one prevailed on the hot-heads not to kill a wounded and dying man.

John R. Tolbert, collector of the port at Charleston, and Joe Tolbert have left the county and gone to Columbia. Reed Tolbert has gone to Greenville. Ezra Tolbert is quartered with friends. His son was shot and this, with the plea that he is a non-partisan, has nine children and a wife alone has saved him from death. A committee waited on J. W. Tolbert, assistant postmaster at McCormick, and asked him to get out of that town. He left. Several in the mob wanted to burn Tolbert's property, but better advice prevailed.

Fully 300 men scoured the country around Phoenix, where the first trouble occurred, hoping to find the bands of negroes said to be congregated in the neighborhood. The Tolberts are of good family, made fine southern soldiers and have been republicans since the war.

The two negroes who are known to have shot Ethridge have not yet been captured.

POLITICAL PRISONERS

Being Transported From the African Penal Settlement to Havana.

The Spanish steamer Isla De Panay, from Cadiz, arrived at San Juan de Porto Rico, Friday last with 292 Cuban political prisoners on board bound for Havana. The prisoners left the African penal settlement of Ceuta on October 28, and left Cadizon the 30th. They have served sentences from two to three years' imprisonment, and were given emigrant accommodations on the Isle De Panay. On board that vessel they were constantly kept under the guard of Spanish soldiers. The prisoners are badly off in the way of clothing, none having been supplied by the government. But there were a few sick among them. The Isla De Panay is due to arrive at Havana on November 15.

The Spanish government is paying the transportation charges, but the prisoners complain of the presence of the guard of soldiers, declaring they are now free men. They admit, however, that they have not been ill-treated on board the steamer.

The Porto Rican papers have been notified by the authorities of the decision of the authorities at Washington to accord them second-class matter rates, and they are greatly pleased.

FAVOR A NEW CONSTITUTION.

Committee Has Outlined Plan of Action and Will Be Aggressive.

One of the most vital questions to come before the present Alabama assembly which met Tuesday, is that of calling a constitutional convention. The committee which was appointed by the State Commercial and Industrial Association some time ago to take the matter in hand, met in Montgomery Saturday and outlined a plan of action. The committee decided that the time is ripe for an aggressive campaign for a new constitution, and resolutions were adopted advising that the work be pushed forward, taking negro suffrage as the main issue and giving the people a guarantee that the general provision of the present constitution on the subject of taxation shall be preserved and the limitations in their essential features remain unchanged. It was the opinion of all that a reform of the suffrage is the paramount issue, and the wisdom of the convention will insure protection on all secondary issues.

American Citizen Unlawfully Held.

A dispatch from Nogales, Arizona, says that on Sunday last James Temple, a conductor on the New Mexico & Arizona railroad, was attacked by some Mexicans and in defending himself, shot one of them at Juan Arvalle fatally. This occurred about 2,000 feet north of the international boundary line. Later he returned to his hotel, which is south of the line and was arrested by Mexican officers on a charge of murder, the law of the state of Sonora providing for the trial of any person charged with crime against a Mexican citizen, though the crime may have been committed in a foreign country. Friends of Temple engaged an attorney, but the Mexican authorities refused to allow the prisoner to be seen. United States Consul J. F. Darnall then appealed to the state department at Washington. Secretary Hay demanded the immediate release of Temple.

Proposed Meat Inspection.

The Hamburger Nachrichten, of Hamburg, Germany, referring to the projected meat inspection bill says: "The Americans ought to be glad that Germany forces them gradually to adopt her own methods of meat inspection. Hitherto American inspection has been untrustworthy. So far as the threat of American isolation is concerned, America may be able to improve the presence of poisons in German wines, woolens, toys and chemicals, as Germany proves the presence of trichnica in American pork.

Quarantine Raised.

The state of Texas has raised the yellow fever quarantine, and the quarantine inspectors and guards have been withdrawn. All existing quarantines in the south against the fever, as far as it extends to disinfection and detention, have been raised though the usual regular inspection at the ports, will be continued all the year round.

REFUSE TO OBEY ORDERS.

Spanish Troops Refuse to Fire on Mutinous Police Force.

SPAIN MUST CEDE THE PHILIPPINES.

Military Have Control of Havana and Business Resuming Its Normal Condition—Other Pertinent News.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The Orden Publico force, cavalry and infantry regiments, was disbanded last Friday after a part payment of arrears. The Orden Publico organization has ceased to exist. The trouble leading to the disbandment of the force began with the protest of the third company on Thursday morning before the palace. At that time General Solano, chief of staff of General Blanco, addressed the men and led them back to their places, where the men gave cheers for Spain and General Blanco. General Arolas, military Governor of Havana, ordered more than 4,000 troops quartered in the outskirts of Havana to march into the city, where they arrived at nightfall.

At the head of a portion of these troops General Arolas marched toward the Orden Publico quarters, where the protesting third company was drawn up in the street under arms. The regulars refused to charge or fire upon their brother soldiers when ordered to do so, in the hope of intimidating the men, who were finally persuaded to retire to their quarters. Minor uprisings occurred during the night among other regiments. Barring these incidents the military have maintained thorough control of the city. The sum total of the casualties Thursday night was a lieutenant-colonel on General Arolas's staff wounded in the hand and another wounded seriously.

The city has again resumed its normal tranquility, although the regulars are still quartered in the principal streets and parks of the city as a precautionary movement.

Spain Must Cede the Philippines.

The cabinet at Washington held a special session Saturday night last, at which instructions of a positive character, bearing on the Philippine question, were drafted for dispatch to the American commissioners in Paris. These instructions were the outcome of the conference held earlier in the day and instructs the American representatives to admit of no further discussion as to the right to consider the disposition of the islands, and state that on that point the instructions already sent must stand, the only matters for discussion from the American view being the manner of giving over the islands.

COTTON ON VESSEL BURNED.

Fire Discovered on the British Steamship Mic Mac.

Just as the last bale of cotton of the cargo of the British steamship Mic Mac was being put in place Friday afternoon, at Brunswick, Ga., fire was discovered in the afterhold. The department was at once called out and several streams of water turned into the closely packed cotton. The fire had evidently been smoldering for several days. The flames were extinguished after two hours' hard work on the part of the local firemen and the steamer's crew. It is estimated that 150 bales were consumed, the total loss reaching about $4,500. The Mic Mac was consigned to A. F. Churchill. The loss is covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is believed to have been purely accidental.

Dr. W. J. Kernachan, of Florence, Ala., late of the First Alabama Volunteers has been appointed to the position of brigade surgeon in the regular army. STRIKERS WHIP THE FIGHT.

Coal Company Agrees to Pay the State Scale at Once.

The differences between the Chicago-Virden Coal company at Virden and Auburn, Ill., and the striking miners, have been settled, and the shafts will soon be in operation. The company agreed to pay the state scale of 40 cents per ton, but did not want to tear down the stockade. Finally the company accepted the offer of the miners that they would take it down and charge the company nothing for the labor.

General Reese, of Springfield, has notified Sheriff Davenport that the remaining troops guarding the Chicago Virden Coal Company's shafts at Virden should be removed. Since the difference between the coal company and the miners have been settled, troops are no longer needed. The grand jury adjourned. General pressure is being brought to bear by influential persons that nothing shall result from its investigations. A prominent member of the jury admitted that such was the case. He said quantly declared that it was the intention of the grand jury not to be affected by any outside pressure.

IS CAPT. DREYFUS ALIVE?

French Government Declines to Allow Officer's Wife to Visit Him.

Madame Dreyfus appeared at the office of the colonial minister in Paris, Friday, for permission to send her husband some warm clothing for his return home. Her sequest was refused on the ground that the government would do whatever was necessary. At the same time the authorities read to her a letter from her husband to the effect that having for five months addressed appeals for a revision to General De Boisdeffre without getting any reply, and being wearied and exhausted by his useless appeals, he would write no more to his family or to anybody. He described himself as ill and dying and "bequeathed to the generosity of my country the care of rehabilitating my memory."

Madame Dreyfus then asked permission to telegraph her husband the decision of the court of cassation. This request was also refused. Then, through a friend, she appealed to President Faure, but with no better results. Her consul will bring the matter before the court of cassation.

PROUD OF HIS DEED.

Luccheni Convicted of Assassinating the Austrian Empress.

At Geneva, Switzerland, the Italian anarchist, Luigi Luccheni, was convicted of killing Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, on September 10th last, in that city, and has been sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for life, the full penalty allowed by the Swiss law.

Luccheni admitted that he came to Geneva in order to kill the Duke of Orleans, but he arrived too late. The prisoner then remarked that in spite of this the Duke of Orleans would be killed within a year. The prisoner also said that if he had possessed fifty francs on the morning of the assassination, instead of killing the empress of Austria, he would have started for Italy, with the intention of killing King Humbert.

SLAUGHTER AT PANA IMMINENT

Negro Miners and the Whites Are Almost Certain to Clash.

At Pana, Ill., William Lynch, who was employed by the Pana Coal Company up to the time of the strike, has been shot at by negroes and run into the house. Then they shot through the house of a widow, Mrs. McIntyre, who was taking care of her sick daughter.

The negroes in the Flat Hall district came running out and began to shoot in all directions. They kept shooting until the militia arrived on the scene. When the shooting began many women and children ran to Captain Butler, of company B, for protection. As far as known no person was struck by the bullets. Things are in such a state that it is dangerous for any one to go out in the mining district at night.

The citizens say if something is not done before long there will be an outbreak and every negro and operator will be killed.

But it was not for this kind of life that Willie left home. He looked the ground over and tried to find something which the soldiers in the big camp wanted and he could supply. In that hot climate he decided it was something cold, and borrowing a quarter from one of his friends, a private in Company C, he started a lemonade stand. The first night he repaid the money he borrowed and a few days later started two more stands, establishing his brother and another boy in the business. When the orders came for the regiment to move to Cuba, Will made up his mind that Cuba was the country for him. At this point his brother went back on him, and the two boys separated, the older one coming home. Will secured a job as a cabinboy on the transport Orizaba, receiving for his services $25 a month and his board. He made himself popular and was allowed to continue the lemonade business. Business prospered, and in a short time he had accumulated more money than he had ever seen before.

On the arrival of the transport off Santiago Will went ashore. When the troops moved he followed, and he was present at the battle of San Juan, and when it was over the surgeons had to remove from his foot a Mauser bullet which he proudly wears as a charm on his watch chain. He saw the destruction of Cervera's squadron and collected souvenirs which he brought home with him. It was while in Cuba that he had his experience with yellow fever and the tarantula, neither of which seemed to do him much injury.

When the transport sailed for Porto Rico Will decided to cast his lot with it rather than with the regiment, and went along. At all times the boy kept business uppermost in his head and tried in every way to increase his wealth. In Porto Rico he made some additions to his wardrobe, paying prices several times more than the goods were worth. From that island the transport went to Montauk, and after staying there for some time Will had a longing for home. New York Sun.

Osculatory Girls Greet Him—Presented With a Sword.

A special from Stuart, Ia., says: "Osborn Deignan, one of the men of Merrimac fame, arrived here, was met by 500 people, who escorted him home. Eighteen or twenty club girls surrounded him at the depot and attempted to kiss him, but he pushed all back, saying there were handsomer men in the crowd than he. The municipal authorities presented Deignan with a sword and Governor Shaw and other prominent Iowans made speeches. Deignan ran away from his home here years ago."

THE official count of the vote of Chilton County took place at the Court House Saturday, and was exactly the same as published in last week's BANNER.

JUDGE ADAMS has started off in the right direction. THE BANNER is pleased to note that one of the first official acts he performed was to stop a useless waste of the people's money, which should never have been commenced. The U. S. revenue law, which compels private parties to place stamps upon various documents, expressly exempts State and County warrants from such taxation, and why the people of Chilton County should have had their money thrown away in this foolish manner for the last six months is one of those mysteries which ordinary minds cannot fathom. Uncle Sam would have made both ends meet without this uncalled for taxation upon the people of Chilton. Perhaps Judge Honeycutt can explain this reckless expenditure.

THE result of the recent election, while not expected, proves a source of surprise in many sections of the country and will be a subject of discussion for many days yet. It is evident from the returns that the war with Spain did not furnish much of an issue between the two great political parties. The Dingley Tariff law did not prove the drawing card that might have been anticipated, in the East, especially. Neither did the outcry of the gold bugs against the dangers from the free coinage of silver have any appreciable effect. While one or two of the silver states have swung back into the Republican column by a scratch, these looses are more than counterbalanced by the return of states like Kentucky and Virginia to the Democratic or silver column. At the time this is written, the Chairman of the Democratic, as well as the Republican committees, are claiming a majority of the House, but the indications are slightly in favor of the Republicans. Whatever the result it must be apparent even to the gold standard advocates that the contest over the currency question is not settled and will not be until settled right.

IT must be apparent to all, since the recent election, that the People's Party seems hopelessly divided. The intense partisanship of the faction known as the middle-of-the roaders and their rule or ruin policy, has resulted in the defeat of many silver candidates and the election of goldbugs in several western states. This policy, however, if it has not already destroyed the organization, if continued must certainly do so, before the beginning of another campaign. The Republican papers ran riot with large headlines the day after election, telling of Republican victory in Nebraska. Jubilation over such a rebuke to Bryanism and the resulting defeat of Senator Allen was cut short by later returns showing victory for the Fusionists. Throughout the New England and Eastern States the Populist vote was so slight that almost no mention is made of it in the election returns. In many cases it was absorbed by the Socialist Labor or Prohibition parties. A remarkably large "stay at home" vote is reported all over the country. Both Republican and Democratic leaders conceal heavy losses. Thus a spirit of mild defence or disappointment is expressed, as no corresponding gains were made by any other party.

DALLAS came up as usual with an old time majority for Robbins of 2045. This will necessitate another contest by Mr. Aldrich (providing the Governor issues a certificate to Robbins). Mr. Robbins will be able to spend a few weeks in Washington and then come home for good.

THE TARTARIAN LAMB.

A Strange Plant That Closely Resembles a Little Lamb.

Among the strange stories to be found in the narratives of early travelers few are stranger than that of the vegetable lamb of Tartary. This story, as believed by the reading public and even by the naturalists of two centuries ago, is so marvelous and so obviously absurd that we wonder how the most credulous could have believed it to be true.

The story is that, in an elevated and cultivated salt plain of great extent west of the river Volga, there may be found a creature half animal, half plant, to which the natives give the name of barometz, meaning "little lamb." To obtain it the Tartars sow in the ground a seed like that of a melon, from which, in due time, rises the strange plant, having the figure of a lamb, with the feet, the hoofs, the ears and the whole head, except the horns, of that animal, distinctly formed.

It grows on a stalk about three feet in height, being, according to one version, rooted to the ground by its four feet, while another account raises the whole lamb, feet and all, from the ground on a single stem, on which it is able to turn, and also to bow itself downward to the herbs on which it feeds. It lives as long as there is grass or herbage around it, but when it has consumed all within its reach it dies and withers away. Its skin is covered with a very white down, as fine as silk, and is greatly prized by the Tartars, who pull it off and wear it as a cover for the head.

Inside it is composed of flesh and bones, and when wounded it gives out a liquid resembling blood. Wolves are said to be the only animals that will eat it, and they are very fond of it.

Specimens of this remarkable production were looked upon as the rarest treasures in the collections of the curious in days gone by. Two different specimens have been described in the "Philosophical Transactions" and a third has its portrait given in an engraving in Darwin's "Flower Garden" and its history told in the florid verse of that work.

The "lamb" is a natural production, greatly helped in the development of the particulars in which it most resembles that creature by the ingenuity of the natives. The body is a portion of the creeping stem of a species of fern which generally grows as erect as a tree. This stem is densely covered with beautiful, jointed, silky hairs of a rich golden color.

On the surface next to the ground a few roots are given off, while the leaves—or fronds, as they are called in ferns—spring from the upper surface. The fronds reach a height of 12 or 14 feet, and have a long, bare stalk before the leaf is spread out. The Tartar takes a suitable part of this creeping stem for a body, deprives it of the roots and of all the leaf stalks except four, which are intended to be the legs, two short ones for the ears and a stump for the tail, and then, turning it upside down, trims the stem, and so produces this marvel of the early explorers. The fern, known to botanists as the Cibotium barometz, is a native of eastern Asia. It has been introduced into our conservatories, where it flourishes, producing, after a few years' growth, good specimens of the "lamb."

The silky hairs of this fern form a favorite remedy among the Chinese for checking the flow of blood by applying them to a wound in the same way as tetter cobwebs are used by some people in this country. The more fibrous and elastic hairs of several species of the same group natives of the Sandwich Islands, are largely exported from these islands to California and Australia for stuffing cushions and for similar purposes.—Philadelphia Times.

SAMOA, Stevenson's island home and grave, is the only country in the world where its rulers and chief justices vie with each other in the honorable work of the laundry. There is no false pride about a chief of Samoa, who will discuss high politics with you one moment and the next make a tender for your washing. What is more, when he has executed the washing to your satisfaction he will ask you to give him a testimonial to that effect, with which to beat succeeding washers.—New York Journal.

WRECKED THE VESSEL.

A Possible Danger of Steam Jets as Fire Extinguishers.

For many years steam jets have been considered excellent means for extinguishing fires in inclosed spaces, and examples of their good services have been abundant. The theory of their action of course is, like that of the several kinds of fire extinguishing powders which have been proposed at different times, that the steam in the one case and the stifling fumes from the powders in the other displace the air in any particular space under consideration, and with it the oxygen as well, by which alone combustion can be sustained.

In at least one instance, however, the position was taken that if the steam jets did not extinguish a fire promptly they soon became a source of danger, and as such were held accountable for the loss about a year ago of a cargo steamer carrying several hundred tons of coal and as many more of miscellaneous chemicals and old rope. Fire broke out in one of the holds, which were fitted with steam jet fixtures, and the jets were at once turned on. On the day following it was proposed to try a hose in addition to the jets, and one of the upper deck hatches was therefore taken off.

The almost immediate result was a violent explosion, killing one of the officers and seriously injuring another. All the other hatches were blown off at the same time, and the ship began to leak, so that she soon had to be abandoned. One explanation advanced was that the steam from the jets, passing over the incandescent cargo, formed water gas, which, with suitable air admixture, became explosive, with the result noted. The theory is not a comforting one, but whether it portrays a possible condition of things yet remains to be demonstrated.—Cassier's Magazine.

EASY FOR MORPHY.

A Story of the Great Chess Master and a Celebrated Painting.

On reading the notes on Paul Morphy's visit to Philadelphia I am reminded of an incident in connection with his visit to Richmond about the same time, which was related to me some years ago by the Rev. Mr. H. of that city. I do not remember ever to have seen it in print. Mr. Morphy was Mr. H.'s guest while in the city, and on his arrival was first ushered into the library, and his attention was at once attracted upon painting over the mantel, which was a fine copy of a celebrated painting representing a game of chess between a young man and the devil, the stake being the young man's soul.

The artist had most graphically depicted the point in the game where it was apparently the young man's move, and he seemed just to realize the loss that he had lost the game, the agony of despair being shown in every line of his features and attitude, while the devil from the opposite side of the table gloated over him with fiendish delight. The position of the game appeared utterly hopeless for the young man, and Mr. H. said he had often set it up and studied it with his chess friends, and all agreed the young man's game was certainly lost.

Mr. Morphy walked up to the picture and studied it for several minutes, when finally, turning to Mr. H., he said:

"I can win the game for the young man."

Mr. H. was of course astonished and said, "Is it possible?"

Mr. Morphy replied, "Get out the men and board and let us look at it."

The position was set up, and in a few rapid moves he demonstrated a complete win for the young man, and the devil was checkmated.—Robert Munford in American Chess Magazine.

Moody and the Sinless Man.

Some time ago a man who claimed perfection went to Evangelist Moody and commiserated him on his low level of Christian experience. Mr. Moody in a kind manner asked his caller if he never sinned nor did any wrong.

"No; I have not sinned for years; neither have I done anything that was wrong," was the prompt reply.

"Well, I'm glad to know it," said Mr. Moody, "but before I am convinced I would like to ask your wife."—Ladies' Home Journal.

FOR THE DELICATE GIRL

You have tried iron and other tonics. But she keeps pale and thin. Her sallow complexion worries you. Perhaps she has a little hacking cough also. Her head aches; and she cannot study. Give her

Scott's Emulsion

The oil will feed her wasting body; the glycerine will soothe her cough, and the hypophosphites will give new power and vigor to her nerves and brain.

Never say you "cannot take cod-liver oil" until you have tried Scott's Emulsion. You will be obliged to change your opinion at once. Children especially become very fond of it; and infants do not know when it is added to their food.

I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficiency, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children. E. J. SCANTLEBURY.

"FILLED" BEDCLOTHES.

They Are Moisture Attractors, and Dents Lurks in Them.

Science, they name is adulteration! Another terror has been added to existence by the revelations made by a trade paper of the processes by which certain manufacturers "fill" the sheets and blankets with which they flood the market.

We are told that after a piece of waste sheeting has been woven the cloth is passed over a trough containing a solution of zinc, sulphate of magnesia (commonly known as epsom salts) and water. This is called a sprinkler. A revolving brush plays a spray of these noxious ingredients upon the cloth, with the result that a 50 pound piece after the operation weighs 75 pounds more than when it left the loom. As the goods are sold by the pound, the object is evident.

But what about the purchaser? A piece cuts up into ten pairs of sheets. Each pair therefore contains three-quarters of a pound of moisture attracting material. The results are appalling. As soon as a wet day comes the sheets become damp and the luckless wight who sleeps between them is apt to contract a chill that may send him to the bourn whence no traveler returns. Even if his suspicions are aroused and he boldly casts aside the sheets and wraps himself in the blankets it may avail him nothing, for the blanket makers have learned the trick, and the same ill results may ensue.

Next we shall hear that the counterpane makers are equally astute, and the timid sleeper may be driven to provide himself with the woolen sleeping bags that suggest travels in the farthest north. The only advantage of these "filled" or heavily "sized" sheets and blankets is that they are death to insects, but if they kill the sleeper as well as the pulex irritans—to say nothing of the cimex lectularius—what boots it?—London Telegraph.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. G. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. Y. Trial bottles free at Clanton Drug co. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Rotary Wheel Cultivator, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure: "Two years ago an attack of La Grippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh so much that I was sleepless, could not eat for months and palpitation of heart caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to move well and the pulse gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I took in all the doses, have not since taken a powder, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

PEOPLE OF THE DAY.

His friends say that there was more evidence of fear depicted on the countenance of William Anthony when he stood before the parson than when he made that famous salute to Captain Sigsbee of the sinking Maine in Havana harbor. As the ship was going down after the explosion and the excitement was intense Bill Anthony stepped into his captain's cabin, saluted and said, "Sir, I have to inform you that the ship is blown up and is sinking!" This was in February.

On Oct. 15, the brave fellow stood before Rev. E. H. Smith of the Seventh Street Methodist Church, New York, and with knees knocking together said, "I will!" In answer to the clergyman's queries. By his side stood Miss Adele Maude Blanert, and she also said, "I will!" Then the relatives and friends present congratulated Mr. and Mrs. William Anthony and wished them much joy.

The other day Sergeant Bill Anthony wrote a letter to Rev. Mr. Smith in which he said: "I thank God every hour of my life for his goodness to me. He preserved me in all the perils of war, from the fire of the enemy and from disease, that I might enjoy the blessings that are now mine."

Coloring For Candy.

A clever little schoolteacher, who is an adept at the concoction of delicious homemade candies and cakes, has devised a way of obtaining a pretty pink coloring for her candies and frosting that will bear passing on. She buys 5 cents' worth of the bright red cinnamon drops at the nearest reliable confectioner's, puts them in a cup, covers them with water for a few moments, and, hey, presto, a half pint of rosy coloring that lends itself admirably to the semblance of strawberries, watermelons or roses. The little suspicion of cinnamon that clings to the coloring is almost intangible, yet quite delightful, and the beauty of it all is that it is "so easy."

THE WAY THEY DO IT.

GOLD STANDARD RETIRES MUCH PAPER MONEY.

And Replaces It with Interest Bearing Bonds—Gen. Warner Assails the Greater Infamy of the British-American Money System.

How Can It Be Maintained.

The gold standard can be maintained in this country only by limiting the paper currency to an amount less than we would have if there were no paper, to which may be added our distributive share of the gold that would be displaced by the paper, and then making the paper vary as a purely gold currency would vary. In that way the gold standard can be maintained, if a debtor nation can maintain it at all, but in no other way. Such a currency would not be elastic in the sense in which that term is now generally used, but it would be as elastic as a purely gold currency would be, and its action would be practically automatic. I may add here that if an elastic currency, or a paper currency of any kind, will prevent the outflow of gold at such times by keeping up prices, then the standard will go down. It would be at such times, too, when prices are rising and speculation rife that the demand for currency would be greatest, and if currency were supplied in answer to business demands and to sustain rising prices, then payments abroad would have to be made in gold, and sooner or later a collapse would come. In other words, to maintain the gold standard, prices must be allowed to fall, indeed, must be made to fall, when necessary to prevent the outflow of gold, so as to permit the payment of what we owe abroad with commodities, instead of with gold. And if the issue of currency at such times tends, as it would, to prevent a lowering of prices, then it would help on the export of gold and hasten to collapse that must follow any considerable export of gold. An elastic currency, therefore, of the kind proposed is inconsistent with the gold standard. And in this connection it should be remembered that as a debtor nation we are liable to be called on for gold when otherwise we might be secure from such demands, and the lower prices go the more commodities it takes to pay debts abroad. Nevertheless, to maintain the gold standard prices must be kept at the gold level. There is no other way.

A. J. WARNER.

Law of Gresham.

"The Gresham law is that bad money drives out good money, but that good money cannot drive out bad money."

The Gresham law—that "bad money will expel good"—was named after Sir Thomas Gresham, an English merchant who died some three hundred years ago. Of late there has been considerable said about the Gresham law, and as it is not generally understood by the public, I shall offer a few observations explanatory of it. W. Stanley Jevons in his work "Money and the Mechanism of Exchange," says:

"Though the public generally do not discriminate between coins and coins, provided there is an apparent similarity, a small class of money-changers, bullion-dealers, bankers, or goldsmiths make it their business to be acquainted with such differences and know how to derive a profit from them. These are the people who frequently uncoin money, either by melting it, or by exporting it to countries where it is sooner or later melted. Some coins are sunk in the sea or lost, and some are carried abroad by emigrants and travelers who do not look closely to the metallic value of the money. But by far the greatest part of the standard coinage is removed from circulation by people who know that they shall gain by choosing for this purpose the new heavy coins just recently issued from the mint. Hence arises the practice, extensively carried on in the present day in England, of picking and culling, or, as another technical expression is, garbling the coinage, devoting the good, new coins to the melting pot and passing the old, worn coins into circulation again on every suitable opportunity." It will be seen that the Gresham law applies to monies of one kind of metal. There is what is called an extension of Gresham's law that applies to all money. But it was a principle recognized for years before Sir Thomas Gresham was born. It simply means this: that where there are two forms of legal tender money, the one that can be obtained the easiest, if it will perform the same functions as the other, will come into general use, and the dearer money will go out of circulation. To make the Gresham law applicable to the financial question, it is necessary to assume that silver is bad money which is not a fact. If both metals were coined by the government at the legal ratio and given equal opportunities before the law, silver would be as dear as gold. For eighty years in the history of this country gold and silver were practically on a parity at the ratio established by law. During all those years there was no talk of the "cheaper" money driving out the "dearer." The standard was self-adjusting. If either metal went up in price, payment was made in the cheaper which tended to establish the parity. The Gresham law is true but not applicable. It is natural to keep the coins containing the most pure metal, because they are worth more to their possessor. This is true especially if they are going to the melting pot to be converted into jewelry or leaf. The worse money a man can pass upon his neighbor, the greater the profit to himself. The Gresham law is understood by its author, applied to one metal, some of the coins of which were debased by abrasion or clipping and thereby reduced in value. But it has no application to two different metals, one of which has been purposely forced down in price when they are again to be placed on a legal parity by wholesome legislation. It is unfair and unjust to speak of silver as "the cheaper money" compared to gold as long as it is discriminated against. It cannot be regarded as the cheaper metal until an honest effort is made to restore it to its former rank. When this is done, it will be time enough to apply the principle of the Gresham law to our condition.

DAVID PIERCE.

Diamond Standard.

Changing from bimetallic to the single gold standard has affected the "business interests" of the country in the same manner that changing from the single gold to the diamond standard would have, but in a lesser degree. "By taking a one-carat diamond (four grains) as worth fifteen pounds we find it is, weight for weight, 460 times as valuable as gold," according to Jevons. Now suppose congress should pass a law, as it did Feb. 12, 1873, discarding the gold dollar, as it did the silver dollar, and adopting the carat diamond as the standard of value in its place. What would be the effect on the price of gold and diamonds? Gold would go down in price and diamonds rise, because the principal demand would be taken from one and a new demand created for the other. How would it affect labor and debts? Injuriously, because it would require the workingman to work 460 times as long to earn the diamond as it did to earn the dollar. If he owed a dollar, when the change was made, and he afterward paid it, it would be equivalent to paying 460 dollars. If a man were worth $1,000 when the change was made, he would be worth $460,000 after it was made. The demonetization of silver—cutting off over one-half of the money of the world—has had the same effect. Instead of multiplying labor and debts by 460, each should be doubled. The value of money has increased about 100 per cent. This proposition is so plain that it is almost self-evident.

Cat Doctor for Surgeon.

Why should objection be made to the appointment by McKinley of a dog and cat doctor as surgeon in chief of an army corps? Is he not a man who is able to preserve the lives and health of ordinary things like human soldiers? Should not a plain soldier feel honored to die, even under the medical care of one whose life has been spent in caring for aristocratic poodle dogs? Alger probably had in mind the care given to soldiers by this aristocratic poodle and cat doctor when he said that all that ailed our soldiers was that they had been petted too much. If the Popocrats don't stop their growling the soldiers will be turned over to the tender mercies of common doctors.—Atlantic (Ia.) Democrat.

FARMER PROSPERITY

IS COMPARATIVELY SPEAKING VERY SLIM.

A Kansas Farmer Analyzes the Alleged Prosperity as Proven by the Republican Campaign Statistics and Shows Up the Sham.

Last year a Kansas farmer did some dissecting of Republican statistics in a manner that will bear reproducing now. He said:

Some very good people are losing their heads on the prosperity question. This applies to the gold standard people generally and to a few Kansas Republican politicians and newspaper writers in particular. The former class jump about like boys when a circus is announced because, they say, prosperity is here sure, here to stay, and the business of the Populist and mugwump is at an end; while the latter class fly to the house-tops and cry, Kansas! see Kansas! with her enormous crops and high prices, for people out of debt, and her farmers reveling in wealth, 99 per cent of them with big bank accounts and picnics the order of the day. Kansas leads the world, they say, and in this glorious year 1897, with a 54 per cent tariff on foreign goods and a Republican administration to direct the expenditures of expected revenues, Kansas is beating even her own splendid record. And as for the Kansas farmer, these untamed and untamable politicians declare him to be unqualifiedly prosperous.

Let us look this subject full in the face and see it as it really is. The Topeka Capital contains an interesting article prepared by Hon. P. I. Bonebrake, a careful and painstaking man, once auditor of the state and now president of the Central National bank in Topeka. Mr. Bonebrake reviews the material history of Kansas and then shows her present resources in a "recapitulation of one year's productions," referring to the year 1896 as to all products except wheat, as to which he takes the present estimated crop of 1897, valued at 60 cents a bushel on the farm. Here is the showing:

Live stock products	$53,769,191
Corn products	44,388,526
Wheat products	30,000,000
Sundry agricultural products	20,514,040
Cow products	4,972,445
Helpful hen products	3,608,815
Coal products	3,590,141
Salt products	1,225,000
Minerals	8,401,801
Manufacturing products	55,906,751
Total	$216,017,015

Of these items, of course, coal, salt, minerals and manufacturing products cannot be credited to the farmers. Taking the six items of agricultural productions, and the year's output amounts to $157,253,320. To these items, however, must be added garden, orchard, vineyard and other unenumerated products, which Mr. Bonebrake thinks "make up half the living of the farmer and his family." Say we put the value of these items at $10,000,000, which is very liberal. That gives us a total of $167,253,320 as the aggregate or gross value of what was produced in one year by 166,000 farmers, an average of $1,007.55. This is the average value of the whole crop, including everything produced on the farm.

Now, what would be a fair average daily income for an average farmer that he might keep up the farm, repair and purchase tools, implements and machinery, pay hired help, taxes, and other usual and necessary demands, besides maintaining his family of say five persons? Would $5 a day be unreasonable? You say no. Then we put it at that. Omitting Sundays, we have 313 days in the year, which, at $5 a day, amounts to $1,565, or $557.45 more than he gets according to Mr. Bonebrake's showing.

Instead of $5 a day, the actual return shows only $3.21 a day. And this is the wonderful prosperity of Kansas farmers that is going into history.

TEN GOOD REASONS.

A few years after the British government had purchased and operated the telegraph system in that country, the earl of Montrose sent to the house of lords a report, from which the following is a brief extract:

1. It is the government's business to transmit intelligence; and that business includes the use of the telegraph and all other appropriate means of transmission.

2. If rates remained the same, an increase of profit instead of a loss was to be expected by reason of the economies that would result from a united telegraph in combination with the postal service. The people could keep the rates up and realize a large profit, or put rates down, thereby increasing the usefulness of the telegraph and taking their profit in the form of more and better service for the same money. They did the latter, and, as a matter of fact, they have saved at the lowest estimate $150,000,000 in twenty-five years. The telegraphing they have done would have cost them at least $150,000,000 more than it has cost, including expenses of operation, extensions, repairs, interest on the capital, water purchase and all.

3. It stands to reason that a servant appointed and paid by itself, and whose avowed interest and effort are to line his own pocket with the utmost possible "giltiness" consistent with his personal safety, will not conduct your telegraph or any other business of yours as well as you can do it yourself or have it done by your own agent. As a matter of fact, the public telegraph service turned out to be vastly superior to the private telegraph service according to the universal verdict of the English people.

4. It was reasonable to expect that the government rates would be lower, because the government would work at cost and would moreover secure an absolute economy relatively to private corporations in the conduct of the telegraph. In fact, the rates dropped at once one-third to two-thirds, average one-half, and afterward the ordinary inland rate was again reduced almost one-half.

5. The use of the telegraph doubled the first year.

6. The government service has adopted new inventions and shown a progressive spirit in respect to employes as well as the service of the public.

7. There has been no complaint of violation of secrecy.

8. Nor the least suspicion of partisan use.

9. The government can be sued and is sued. Claims against the government are tried judicially, the same as other claims.

10. Interference with private interests to accomplish a private good is not arbitrary and unjust; it is the very essence of justice and good government. The private interests of gamblers, saloonkeepers, opium sellers, ship owners, house builders, power makers, bone grinders, grain elevator men, etc., private interests both good and bad, are interfered with for the sake of public welfare. Telegraph interests form no exception. The companies had already received large returns on their investment, and would receive full compensation for their capital when the public took their plant—more than full compensation, as it turned out.

High and Low Interest.

The farmers in the Missouri valley when they borrowed money, between the years 1854 and 1872, on a farm mortgage paid invariably as much as 12 to 18 per cent interest and sometimes as much as 40 per cent per annum. But in this issue of the Conservative money to loan at 6 per cent per annum on farm mortgages is advertised and anxious to be employed. —Morton's Conservative.

Yes, and from 1854 to 1872 the farmer paid that rate of interest, made money, paid off his mortgage, bought more land and got rich. When the farmers got cheap interest he also had cheap produce to sell and the produce was so much cheaper than the interest that the poor fellow went broke, his mortgage was foreclosed and he and his family were turned out to grass. Twenty thousand mortgages have been foreclosed in Nebraska since the era of so-called cheap interest and hardly a single foreclosure was ever made in the state before 1873. We know many business men in the state that paid 24 per cent interest and still made a great deal of money and when the interest reached 6 per cent those same men became bankrupt. The reason for this is that in the first period everything else was high, business was brisk and profits were secure, but as interest went down the price of commodities went down also, people were doing business on a constantly falling market, the merchants' margins were all gone before they could sell their goods and of course they went broke. If Mr. Morton can show nothing in favor of the gold standard in Nebraska except 20,000 foreclosed mortgages and 10,000 broken merchants, he and his Conservative had better quit business and go goose hunting with Grover the infamous.—Nonconformist.

Rich and Poor Plutocrats.

A distinction which needs to be frequently made and constantly insisted upon is that between millionaires and plutocrats. The millionaire is not necessarily a plutocrat. Look, for example, upon the life history of Peter Cooper. And we are not sure that the plutocrat is necessarily a millionaire, for many of the most sinister and conscienceless defenders of all powers and oppressions of corrupt wealth are cheap fellows, dependents, parasites and paupers.

The plutocrat is a man who holds that wealth, instead of manhood, should govern a land. He is a man who, having wealth, uses it to secure power over the lives and fortunes of his fellows; the man who buys elections and the officers elected; the man who coerces, by his control of sources of employment or the sources of credit, working men and debtors to do his political bidding. The Rockefellers and Pierpont Morgan are typical plutocrats. —New York Journal.

Class Distinctions.

How is it that the "lower classes" so called are always composed of the poor, and the "upper classes" so called are the rich? Are there no low characters among the rich and no higher characters among the poor? Dividing society into strata of upper and lower according to the wealth they possess is the mark of moral degeneration in a nation.—Columbus Post.

Embarrassing to the Trusts.

The fight between the sugar trust and the Arbuckles reduced the price of sugar one week to $4\frac{7}{8}$ cents a pound. This record will be embarrassing when the trusts get together and want to prove that the limitation of competition is solely for the benefit of the dear public.

Fallacious Goldbug Speakers.

The Republican gold-bug speakers have yet to learn that the advocacy of sound money demands sound arguments.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: "The Wrestlers"—The Time is Coming When the Last Mighty Evil of the World Will Be Grappled by Righteousness and Thrown.

[illegible]

In wrestling, the opponents would bow in apparent suavity, advance face to face, put down both feet solidly, take each other by the arms, and push each other backward and forward until the work began in real earnest, and there were contortions and strangulations and violent strokes of the foot of one contestant against the foot of the other, tripping him up, or with struggle that threatened apoplexy or death, the defeated fell, and the shouts of the spectators greeted the victor. I guess Paul had seen some such contest, and it reminded him of the struggle of the soul with temptation, and the struggle of truth with error, and the struggle of heavenly forces against apollyonic powers, and he dictates my text to an amanuensis, for all his letters, save the one to Philemon, seem to have been dictated, and as the amanuensis goes on with his work I hear the groan and laugh and shout of earthly and celestial belligerents: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

I notice that as these wrestlers advanced to throw each other they bowed one to the other. It was a civility, not only in Grecian and Roman games, but in later days, in all the wrestling bouts at Clerkenwell, England, and in the famous wrestling match during the reign of Henry III., in St. Giles' Field, between men of Westminster and people of London. However rough a twist and hard a pull each wrestler contemplated giving his opponent, they approached each other with politeness and suavity. The genuflexions, the affability, the courtesy in no wise hindered the decisiveness of the contest. Well, Paul, I see what you mean. In this awful struggle between right and wrong, we must not forget to be gentlemen and ladies. Affability never hinders, but always helps. You are powerless as soon as you get mad. Do not call rum-sellers murderers. Do not call infidels tools. Do not call higher critics reprobates. Do not call all card-players and theatre-goers children of the devil. Do not say that the dance breaks through into hell. Do not deal in vituperation and billingsgates and contempt and adjectives dynamitic. The other side can beat us at that. Their dictionaries have more objurgation and brimstone.

We are in the strength of God to throw flat on its back every abomination that curses the earth, but let us approach our mighty antagonist with suavity. Hercules, a son of Jupiter and Alcmene, will by a precursor of smiles be helped, rather than damaged for the performance of his "twelve labors." Let us be as wisely strategic in religious circles as attorneys in court-rooms, who are complimentary to each other in the opening remarks, before they come into legal struggle such as that which left Rufus Choate or David Paul Brown triumphant or defeated. People who get into a rage in reformatory work accomplish nothing but the depletion of their own nervous system. There is such a thing as having a gun so hot at the touch-hole that it explodes, killing the one that sets it off. There are some reformatory meetings to which I always decline to go and take part, because they are apt to become demonstrations of bad temper. I never like to hear a man swear, even though he swear on the right side. The very Paul who in my text employed in illustration the wrestling match, behaved on a memorable occasion as we ought to behave. The translators of the Bible made an unintentional mistake when they represented Paul as insulting the people of Athens by speaking of "the unknown god whom ye ignorantly worship." Instead of charging them with ignorance, the original indicates he complimented them by suggesting that they were very religious; but as they confessed that there were some things they did not understand about God, he proposed to say some things concerning Him, beginning where they had left off. The same Paul who said in one place, "Be courteous," and who had noticed the bow preceding the wrestling match, here exercises suavities before he proceeds practically to throw down the rocky side of the Acropolis the whole Parthenon of idolatries, Minerva and Jupiter smashed up with the rest of them. In this holy war polished rifles will do more execution than blunderbusses. Let our wrestlers bow as they go into the struggle which will leave all perdition under and all heaven on top.

Remember also that these wrestlers went through severe and continuous course of preparation for their work. They were put upon such diet as would best develop their muscle. As Paul says, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." The wrestlers were put under complete discipline—bathing, gymnastics, struggle in sport with each other to develop strength and give quickness to dodge of head and trip of foot; stooping to lift each other off the ground; suddenly rushing forward; suddenly pulling backward; putting the left foot behind the other's right foot, and getting his opponent off his balance; hard training for days and weeks and months, so that when they met it was giant clutching giant. And, my friends, if we do not want ourselves to be thrown in this wrestle with the sin and error of the world, we had better get ready by Christian discipline, by holy self-denial, by constant practice, by submitting to divine supervisal and direction. Do not begrudge the time and the money for that young man who is in preparation for the ministry, spending two years in grammar school, and four years in college, and three years in theological seminary. I know that nine years are a big slice to take off of a man's active life, but if you realized the height and strength of the archangels of evil in our time with which that young man is going to wrestle, you would not think nine years of preparation were too much. An uneducated ministry was excusable in other days, but not in this time, loaded with schools and colleges. A man who wrote me the other day a letter asking advice, as he felt called to preach the Gospel, began the word "God" with a small "g." That kind of a man is not called to preach the Gospel. Illiterate men,

DEWEY'S RABBIT FOOT.

He Sent it to T. H. Beam, of New Brunswick, N. J.

T. H. Beam, of New Brunswick, N. J., recently sent to Admiral Dewey a coat-of-arms of the United States, made of bits of postage stamps used during the World's Fair. He asked the admiral to send him the shoes he wore May 1. In reply he received the following letter:

"Flagship Olympia, Manila, Philippine Islands, Sept. 20, 1898.—T. Handy Beam, New Brunswick, N. J.—Dear Sir: I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your note of Aug 10, and also of the coat-of-arms of the United States so ingeniously made by you of postage stamps. I am greatly obliged to you for the great trouble you have taken to give me pleasure, and thank you heartily. I am sorry I cannot send you what you request, for I have a great many pairs of shoes, and never wear the same pair two days in succession, and consequently have not the slightest idea which pair I wore on May 1. I send you a souvenir, however, of that memorable day. It is a rabbit's foot, which I have had for some time, and which brought me luck. May it bring you as much. Very sincerely,

"GEORGE DEWEY."

An Arizona Hair Cut.

"Doesn't it disturb you when they have a shooting scrape next door?" asked the tenderfoot who was undergoing an Arizona hair cut. "Dis turb nothin'," answered the barber. "It gener'lly makes it easier."

At this juncture the shooting began at Red Mike's saloon next door. The tenderfoot's hair rose on end, and the barber trimmed it as expeditiously as if he were shearing a hedgehog.

ADDRESS TO ALABAMA FARMERS.

Commissioner Culver Delivers Wholesome Advice to Planters.

Hon. I. F. Culver, state commissioner of agriculture, has issued the following address to the farmers of the state:

"The time has come when it is an actual necessity for the farmers of Alabama to about face and change their mode of farming. Low price cotton, for a time at least, is here to stay. Texas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma will in the near future gather from five to six million bales of cotton. The older states, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Alabama will have to abandon the all cotton systems and go at something else, for we cannot compete with the rich lands of the west and raise cotton at 3 and 4 cents per pound. Then what shall we do? Turn our attention to the raising of stock, and thereby the building up and improving of our worn out lands; more stock means more manure and the improvement of our soils. We should not plant any land in cotton that will not make from one-half to one and one-half bales per acre, enabling us to raise from fifteen to twenty-five bales to the plow. What kind of stock should we raise? First, plenty of hogs for a bountiful supply of meat. Second, mules and horses for our own use. Third and most important, beef cattle. Now is the time, as nearly all of the scrubs have been shipped from the state to the west to be fattened and returned to us again as Kansas City beef, for us to go to work to improve our breeds of cattle by shipping thoroughbreds of the Red Poll, Poll Augus, Short Horn and other pure breeds, to cross on our best natives. With proper care and management we can raise stock at two years old to weigh from 800 to 1,000 pounds, worth from $25 to $40 per head. I know of one farmer, living near Livingston, who has purchased a Red Poll to improve his stock for raising beef cattle that will at eighteen months old weigh 900 pounds.

"With Bermuda grass for summer and Johnson grass for the winter, cotton seed meal and hulls for fattening, we can put two-year-old steers on the market that will bring us from $25 to $40, then we can make some money, and at the same time build up our worn lands.

"To begin this work we must cooperate by coming together and discussing the best plan and mode of operation, as to the best breeds and how to import them. By co-operation we can ship one carload of calves as an experiment. I think it better to purchase calves for several reasons; they are cheaper, and there will be risk in getting them acclimated.

"Dr. G. A. Curry, our veterinarian at Auburn, will co-operate with us by giving his valuable aid and experience. I am of the opinion that we can interest the railroads so as to get the first carload free of freight charges.

"To test the matter I will call a meeting of all parties interested in the improvement of the breeds of cattle to meet in Montgomery, at the capitol, on the 3d day of December. An address will be made by Dr. Curry, of Auburn, and others, on improvement of cattle breeding in the state."

New Railroad to Be Built.

Much interest is centering in the proposed building of the Florence & Gulf railroad, a line from Florence to Mobile, connecting the Tennessee river and the gulf. The road is fostered by the state, which several years ago made the survey at an expense of $9,000, and appointed the promoters. The line will cross the river at Florence. The proposed line will tap the Warrior coal fields at Tuscaloosa, goes through the long leaf yellow pine regions of the southern portion of Alabama, and connects the Tennessee with the Gulf, thus making an air line to Mobile and giving connection by water with Mexico and Central America. It is the intention of the money'd men behind the scheme to make the line an air route to Chicago.

Highwayman at Birmingham.

Footpads are operating in a daring way in Birmingham. Thursday night last week E. M. Wallace while on his way home from the theater was held up by two white men and relieved of his valuables. Daniel Wheeler, an electrician, was also stopped an hour later and robbed of his watch and money. Louis Brann was grabbed by the highwayman, but succeeded in disengaging himself, and the would-be robbers took to their heels.

Telephone Line Completed.

The new telephone line between Opelika and Lafayette, Ala., was completed Friday afternoon, thus completing the network of wires that run from Opelika in every direction, except to Birmingham.

Alabama Car Service Report.

The report of the Alabama Car Service association for the month of October shows up most excellently. The total number of cars handled was 27,681, which is 2,801 more than were handled during the same month of last year. This increase shows how active the freight shipments are this season.

Cotton pickers are scarce around Gadsden, and many farmers are unable to get their fleecy staple picked, and are compelled to see it rot in the fields. It is impossible to get pickers at 50 cents a hundred.

Fully one-third of the farmers of Etowah county have signified their intention of putting an increased acreage in wheat and oats this fall. Some eight or ten wheat drills have been sold in this county, and the farmers are fast quitting the all cotton crop.

A CHAMPION SNEEZER.

This Kentucky Man Could Break Up a Campmeeting.

"Did you ever know a man who could sneeze loud enough to break up a campmeeting, to stop the taking of testimony in court, and cause a bellowing cow to stop in disgust and wonder what the noise was that was drowning its thunderous voice?" said an old fisherman last night.

On being informed that his sneezer was entitled to the cake and all the accessories necessary to conduct an up-to-date bakery, the gentleman consented to tell more of his sneezing friend. He said:

"While fishing in a mountain town in Eastern Kentucky last fall I went to the village nearby one rainy morning to attend circuit court. The judge was delivering an impressive charge to the grand jury, and every ear was listening to catch each word, when the stillness of the court was broken by an unearthly ker-chew, ker-chew, ker-chew, etc., etc., etc. The judge was thunderstruck and instantly every eye was turned toward the rear of the room, where a little, unobtrusive-looking old farmer sat sneezing as if his head were coming off. The judge ordered the sheriff to bring the intruder before the bench. The offender came forward, and the judge had a fine entered against the innocent cause of the disturbance.

"Two of the sneezer's friends were called, who testified to the man's good character and high standing, but said they could hear him sneeze three miles any day in the year. One said that the sneezer once broke up a campmeeting with a sneezing spell, and that he saw an enraged bovine stop a thunderous bellowing fit to look in wonder at the human who could make more noise than a mad bull. But the old fellow couldn't help it, and the fine was remitted."—Louisville Post.

A Postmistress Aged 93 Years.

The death has just taken place of the oldest postmistress in the United Kingdom. The venerable lady was Mrs. Brown, postmistress of Auchmithie, the Musselcraig of Sir Walter Scott's Antiqurdy, a quiet little village in Forfarshire. She died at the age of 93 years, and as it was her wish that she should be allowed to act as mistress of the postoffice as long as she lived, her desire was respected by the postal "powers that be," and thus the veteran dame performed all the duties till a comparatively few days ago. Soon after the introduction of the penny post Mrs. Brown was appointed the first postmistress at Auchmithie. She was the widow of the village schoolmaster. Her memory went back to the reception of the news of Waterloo, the death of King George, and the coronation of the Queen.

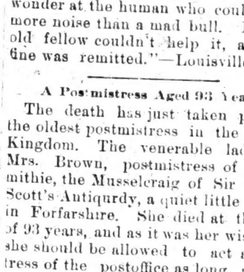
Japanese Tampering With Nature.

The Japanese are ruthless in their tampering with nature. If they decide that they want a bird or an animal of a certain shape or color they set about manufacturing the article, so to sp ak, by the exercise of exceedingly clever ingenuity and untiring patience. Here, for example, is how the white sparrows are produced. They select a pair of grayish birds and keep them in a white cage in a white room, where they are attended by a person dressed in white. The mental effect on a series of generations of birds results in completely white birds.

Hardships of Army Life.

From the Press, Muncie, Ind.

One of the first to offer their services for the country in the Civil War was A. R. Sefton, of Milroy, Rush Co., Ind. He made a good record. The life of every soldier is a hard one, and Mr. Sefton's case was no exception. "We were in Tennessee, penned in on all sides. Our rations were very scarce," said he, "and we had begun to go on quarter allowance, and as the rain was not enough to replenish the wells or streams, our canteens went empty. We were hurried on, and the only way to quench our thirst was to go down on our hands and knees and drink from the hoof tracks made by the horses.



Our Canteens Were Empty.

"Some of us were taken sick from the effects of this. I was laid up several weeks in a field hospital from fever. From that time I was always afflicted more or less.

"About four years ago I became much worse. Our family doctor seemed puzzled over my case, and it began to look as if there was no hope for my recovery, and that the inevitable end was near.

"Last November I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The physicians said they were an excellent medicine, but would do no good in my case. But I tried them, and am glad I did, for I became better at once. Eight boxes taken according to directions cured me. I used the last of the pills about a year ago, and have not been troubled with my ailments since."

The power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the vast number of diseases due to impure or poisoned blood has been demonstrated in thousands of instances as remarkable as the one related above.

Last year the United States exported 366 locomotives, valued at about $3,000,000, sewing machines to the value of $2,500,000, and typewriters worth $1,500,000.

It does not kill or injure; it is perfectly safe to handle; makes no noise or smoke; creates no lasting regrets, as does the bullet pistol. It simply and amply protects, by compelling the foe to give undivided attention to himself for a while instead of to the intended victim.

It is the only real weapon which protects and also makes fun. CIRCUIT COURT.

No Court Next Week.

NOTICE TO JURORS AND WITNESSES.

State of Alabama, } Circuit
Chilton County, } Court.

Notice is hereby given to witnesses and petit jurors summoned to appear at the Circuit Court of Chilton county on Monday, November 28th, 1898, not to appear and there will be no second week of the Fall Term, 1898, of said Court. L. B. DEASON, Clerk.

The Circuit Court convened for the Fall Term at Clanton last Monday, Judge N. D. Denson, presided, this being his first court here since his re-election. He made an unusually lengthy and clear charge to the grand jury, who then retired to their labors.

The petit juries were empanelled and the court proceeded to business. A number of cases of no particular public interest were disposed of, and some were continued. Up to this (Thursday) morning only two cases have gone to the jury, viz.: Merrett vs. Ehrman, in which a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff and damages assessed. The other case was Vandegrift vs. Atchison, and a verdict was given in favor of the defendant.

The civil and criminal dockets were both very light, and it was decided that the whole business of the court would easily be disposed of in a week, and the second week was not held. On the criminal docket there is one capital charge, ... the negro woman, ... Mint, for murder of her infant; this case was set for Friday, ...th inst.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To Hon. N. D. Denson, Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit:

We, the grand jury empaneled by your Honor for the fall term, 1898, of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, beg leave to submit our final report.

We have examined the books and records of the various county offices ... we could in the limited time we were in session, and as far as we could ascertain they are correctly kept.

We find the county buildings in good order and well kept. We would suggest that the court house be put in better repair, and that the jail be cleaned as early as possible.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Kincheon, Nov. 18, 1898.

Editor BANNER—After a few weeks thinking and reading, I have concluded to write one more little piece for the BANNER, provided it does not find its way to the waste basket instead of the press.

I have read several pieces in the BANNER concerning stock law, schools and other things which have caused one to study our condition as a people. I have found that we have plenty of school houses but more mortgaged farms; plenty philanthropists but more absconded bankers; plenty poor houses but more paupers than they can hold; plenty food but no money to buy it with; plenty factories but few of them in operation; plenty tariff but no revenues; plenty poor people here all ready, but that we invite more to cross the ocean to compete at lower wages with our own ill-paid laborers; plenty laws to punish men for snatching a loaf of bread to save their loved ones from starving but no laws that will reach the rich man who steals a railroad or wrecks a bank; plenty of bond issues for the benefit of English money sharks but only one bond issue placed before the people of the United States; plenty silver but no business sense to put it in circulation; plenty taxes but very little value left in the property that is taxed; plenty trusts to kill competition but no patriots in power to kill trusts; plenty schemes to make the rich richer but no endeavors to keep the poor from becoming poorer; plenty cuts in wages but no cuts of beef on the working man's table; plenty Bradley Martins but no more Peter Coopers; plenty talk in the pulpit about rendering unto Ceasar the things which are Ceasar's but little talk of the poor which ye have always with you; plenty ostentation but little charity; plenty money for foreign theatrical stars but no recognition of our own great actors; plenty political jobs but few jobs for humble industrious people; plenty cannon to train on strikers, citizens of our own country, but no courage to train these cannon on the enimies of the nation; plenty cream but its all in the cocoanut, and the rich own all the cocoanuts; plenty sin, sorrow, suffering, suicide, murder and ppverty, and little virtue, joy, peace, health, honor and comfort.

And all this because we have a government of the rich for the rich and by the rich, instead of what it started out to be, a fight be, and finally must be—a government of the people, for the people, and by the people.

Now, Mr. Editor, these are not gleanings of Populist papers—not one of them are taken from a Populist paper—but all are taken from good old-fashioned "in gold we trust" journals. But I have read these papers with an open mind, and not with an intellect clouded with prejudice. In these papers, not in the editorials, but in the local news columns, any man with commonsense can see what I have stated above, and now I ask all the readers of the BANNER not to confine themselves to reading Populist papers alone, but read them all, and digest them a right, and if you don't come to the same conclusion that I have, I will give it up that it is my clouded mind that leads me estray on this subject.

Editor BANNER. Please say to the people of Chilton county to send me petitions for what they want. I have no way of knowing what local legislation is needed unless the people ask for it. My only business here is to represent the will of the people of Chilton, and help look after the interests of the State. I hope when this session is over that our public school laws will be so improved that every child in Alabama will have a good school in reach of him. I am willing to be taxed for public education.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 23, 1898.

Editor BANNER. A number of people have asked me the price of recording land deeds, and I take this method in answering those who wish to know. The law fixes the price of recording land deeds, and all other conveyances to be recorded in the Probate office, and land deeds are 15 cents a hundred words and I am not allowed to charge more, and as the fee is placed on record with the conveyance and the law imposes a penalty for charging more than the fee fixed by the law, no one need have any fear about paying more than the regular price. Respectfully,

S. M. Adams,
Judge of Probate.

Sour Stomach Cure.

A long time I was a great sufferer from Liver and Stomach troubles. I had a dull pain in my left side under my heart. At times my side became swollen and the pain acute. My stomach was always sour and I would vomit every time I eat. My bowels were very irregular, causing me pain and distress. I tried many things without any benefit. I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose. I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—D. W. The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with a pain in the chest or side, or a lame back, give it a trial. You are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm is also a certain cure for rheumatism. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

Hungarian Gypsy Minstrels.

The gypsy minstrels form a caste by themselves. Their appearance is always more swarthy than that of other Hungarian musicians, their dress is sometimes purposely fantastic, and their manner of life is far more Bohemian than the most liberal minded artist would care to own to. Every hotel and restaurant in Budapest possesses its gypsy band, and the method of payment is as free and easy as the music itself and their fare. The hotel keeper is not bound by any contract, but at various intervals throughout the performance one of his gypsies takes a dinner plate and goes round among the various guests in the hall from table to table, receiving in the plate what the latter like to put there. The favorite coin deposited there is the nickel 10 kreutzer piece, answering to our twopence. I have not often seen a florin or a kronen (half a florin). The whole collection is, as a rule, made up of twopences.—Good Words.

"History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money-maker to every intelligent salesman.

FIRST PENSION AWARDED.

Jesse T. Gates Will be Remunerated for Loss of His Lip.

Commissioner Evans of the pension office notified Secretary Alger Friday that Jesse T. Gates, Second United States artillery, who had lost part of his upper lip in the West Indian campaign, has been awarded the first pension on account of the Spanish war. The president and secretary of war each took an interest in this case. Gates called on them in person soon after the close of the campaign and convinced them of the merits of his claim. Gates will receive $17 per month, and this being inadequate, a private pension bill increasing the pension will probably be introduced in congress. Claims on account of the Spanish war are now rapidly coming in. The total on file up to date is 1,947 for war service and 178 for naval service, exclusive of the claims of the battleship Maine victims.

AMERICANS MOBBED AT PEKIN.

Bishop Cranston and Family Attacked by Chinese Mob.

Bishop Earl Cranston, of the Methodist Episcopal church and family, and Rev. Dr. Lowry, missionary, were mobbed at Pekin, China, September 30. The attack was made with mud, sticks and stones by a mob gathered to celebrate the first feast day since the empress had taken the power from the emperor. The families were going to and from the railway station in chairs and carts, and were attacked by the half-frenzied Chinamen. Dr. Lowry made a brave resistance, and succeeded in getting the women and children to a place of safety, though he suffered a broken rib. The same indignities were offered to all other foreigners. Representations have been made to the Chinese government by the American minister at Pekin.

RAISING SPANISH GUNBOATS.

Dewey Has Contracted With a Hong Kong Firm to Put Three in Repair.

The United States navy will soon possess more than a sprinkling of foreign-built vessels. Admiral Dewey has informed the navy department that he has contracted with a Hong Kong firm of wreckers to raise three of the Spanish war vessels, sunk in the battle of Manila last May day. The cost of raising the ships and putting them in repair will be $500,000. The vessels to be raised are gunboats of large type, and in the opinion of Chief Constructor Hichborn, they will be the very best kind of craft for the protection of the United States' interests among the Philippines and along the Asiatic coast. They are the sister ships Isla de Cuba and Isla de Luzon, and the Don Juan de Austria.

Train Wrought Fearful Havoc.

During a dense fog a Pennsylvania train ran upon a gang of workmen on the Hackensack Meadows, near Jersey City. Eleven men were killed and six injured. The train which run down the workmen was a local from Milltown to Jersey City due in Jersey City at 8:20 a. m. The fog delayed the train and Engineer John Van Ostrand was endeavoring to make up time. His train was running at a high rate of speed, he believing there was nothing to obstruct a quick run to Jersey City. The first he knew that his train had run into the men was when his engine jarred. There were twenty men in the gang, and only three escaped injury.

Terrible Fratricide.

A terrible fratricide occurred last Friday in the mountains of Polk county, Tenn., near the North Carolina line. A number of young men became engaged in a drunken row and two brothers, Garrett and Gedding Hadden, took sides one against the other. Garrett shot his brother, killing him instantly, and fled at once into the mountains.

Will Do Police Service in Havana.

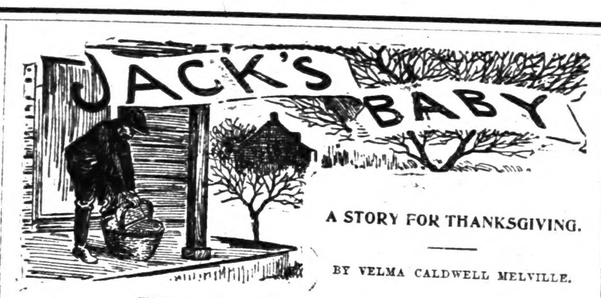
Fourteen well-known Texans, under the lead of Lieut. Gates, of Dallas county, recently members of the First Texas Volunteers, left Friday for Cuba to do police service for the government. There will be twenty-two mounted men stationed between Matanzas and Havana, of which fifteen Texas men will be a part. Each man will be paid $43.50 a month by the government, furnished a horse, board and rations.

Death of a Johnstown Hero.

Joseph Lafrance, a hero at the Johnstown, Pa., flood, dropped dead Friday, while at work, of heart disease, which dated back to the day of the great flood, when he ran at a rapid speed from the Gautier mill warning the people along the way of the coming water and thereby saving many lives. He was a native of Montreal, Canada, and was born in 1847.

John W. Keeley, the inventor of the Keeley motor, died Friday at his home in Philadelphia from pneumonia.

The suggestion that the new America's cup defender be built for crossing the Atlantic that she may take part in races for various international trophies in European waters would be a national expansion policy to which no American could object.



A STORY FOR THANKSGIVING.

BY VELMA CALDWELL MELVILLE.

VER in the village the Kingsleys were called by their neighbors "peculiar" and we are not disposed to contradict them.

There was the father, mother and three sons, the latter all women-haters, or at least woman-shunners, for even when boys at the district school, not one of them would play with or in any way notice a girl. As a family, they were industrious, economical and well-to-do. Work, work, work was the order of the day, and save, save, save, was the key-note of their lives. If there was one among them more of a hustler than the others it was the eldest son, Jack, and if one more than another of the sons was averse to society, it was Jack.

It was on Thanksgiving morning that our story opens, but we doubt if any of the Kingsleys had given a thought to the day. In their busy, unsentimental existence there had been no account made of the days that come like pleasant mile stones along the way. There was no Thanksgiving cheer, or Christmas gifts; New Year meant nothing to them but a change of date, and Easter was only Sunday, the day of rest at the farmhouse.

If any one could be said to rise first in a family where all were up betimes, it was this same Jack, whose heavy footfall ofttimes wakened the house. On this Thanksgiving morning he was out even earlier than usual, for it was corn-husking time and in one way and another they had been hindered this particular fall. Stumbling out into the cold, early light, he was surprised to run against a great willow basket.

"What the nation's this?" he growled.

Now we would not have you understand that Jack was a particularly ill-natured man; but it is usually true that in families where the little refinements and courtesies are omitted, the boys—and sometimes the girls—grow up surly and irritable in manner, even when, in reality, there is no anger in their hearts.

With the half-formed thought in mind that some neighbor had left it after the family had retired, he lifted the lid.

"Jupiter!" was the one word that escaped his lips, and then he simply stared. But it was not Jupiter or any other celestial body that lay there so snugly in the basket, but a very beautiful terrestrial body—in other words, a beautiful babe smiled up into his face.

"Jupiter!" he said again, and let fall the lid, only to lift it again immediately. It would have been a study for an artist—the old brown farmhouse amid the leafless trees for a background, the flurry of snow sifted over the porch, the great willow basket, from which smiled the lovely infant, and the uncouth figure in high boots, overalls, short brown coat and slouch hat bending above it.

How long he might have remained in this pose is uncertain, but the little one's efforts to free her arms aroused him. Once more letting fall the lid he lifted the basket into the kitchen just as his mother emerged from her room.

"What on airth you got?" she questioned.

"Somebody's young 'un left on the door-step."

Mrs. Kingsley wonderingly undid the rich wrappings until the little arms, unpinioned, were held pleadingly up. What woman could refrain from lifting the little creature out and pressing it to her breast? Even Mrs. Kingsley could not, though she made sure first that Jack's back was turned. Soon the remainder of the family were on the scene, surprised and wondering over "Jack's baby," as it was called from the first.

There was nothing by which she could be identified, save a square white card bearing the one word "Fay."

At breakfast Mrs. Kingsley remarked complainingly:

"Now there'll be a trip clean to John Sweet's."

"John Sweet's?" queried Jack, absent-mindedly, as he watched his mother feeding milk to the little stranger.

"Yes, he's the poor commissioner, ain't he?"

"What of that?"

"'What of that;' did I ever! Why, you can't git this young one into the poorhouse without seeing him about it."

A wave of color swept across Jack's sun-burned, unshaved face, but he only replied that he guessed they could board her until Sunday, leastways no one could be spared from the husking now.

"'Nd how d'ye s'pose I'm to do my work 'nd care fer a baby all that time? Here it's only Thursday."

"She don't seem troublesome yit."

"No, of course she'll be good while I'm minding her all the time, but wait till I put her by."

Before Jack had been at work two hours he made an excuse to go to the house. His mother happened to be out of doors when he entered the kitchen, but there sat the lovely child in her basket, gleefully pulling the strands of a skein of scarlet yarn. The moment she caught sight of him she gave a happy, gurgling laugh, dropped the yarn and held out her arms; but he pretended not to see. When next he glanced in her direction, the baby's lip was trembling and tears were welling up into the great dark eyes.

He made a step toward her, then paused, looking from his dirty hands and dusty clothes to the dainty garments she wore.

"I ain't fit," he muttered, but then that look!

Once more the smile came like a burst of sunshine through the clouds and the dimpled hands reached out alluringly.

"Goo goo!" she said, but he thought she meant good, and—well, when his mother entered the room she was simply dumbfounded at the sight that met her gaze.

Jack, who had never even touched a baby before, was marching about, the child on his shoulder, one hand fastened in his rather unkept hair, the other patting his cheek.

"Goo, goo!" she cried louder and louder.

"Jack Kingsley, are you crazy?" she cried. With a shame-faced expression, he turned toward the basket, but paused half way and turned defiantly.

"No, I ain't crazy, but I'm goin' to keep her."

"Goin' to keep her? Mercy on us, you must be out en yer head."

"I tell you I ain't, but I'd be 'shamed to put a purty little critter like her in the poorhouse. Hain't we got enough, I'd like ter know, to feed one sech kid?"

"But who'll take care of her?"

The poor fellow looked perplexed, but Fay, at this moment, nestled her head against his neck, cooing contentedly, "Da, da, da, da!"

"I will, if there's nobody else," he answered defiantly; "leastways I can hire a girl."

"A girl!" Mrs. Kingsley fairly shrieked, for in all her life she had never hired help in the house one day.

And then she poured forth a tirade of abuse that, could little Fay have understood, would have burned into her very soul! Happily she could not understand, but Jack did, after a fashion at least, but the effect was exactly contrary to what his mother desired and his answer showed her her mistake.

"It may all be as you think," he said slowly; "we don't know anything about it, but I do know this innercent babe ain't to blame 'nd I'll be blamed if I don't stand for her 'nd fight the hull world, if need be. I ain't fit fer much! the Kingsleys ain't like other people nohow, 'nd if this here kid ain't respectable it can't make no great odds to us; we ain't s'ciety folks but all these fine fixens she's got on shows she don't b'long to no poor trash round here. There's a mystery about it that I hope we won't never understand."

After this uncommonly long speech, Jack Kingsley put the child in the basket and went out, his mother never saying a word. We are inclined to think she was a little alarmed for his mental condition, though. When she recovered from the shock a little, she remembered a few other times in his life when Jack had unexpectedly flung out in a similar fashion in defense of an abused animal, and once in the case of a sick tramp. She blamed herself severely for not using more strategy at the outset; now the battle was hopelessly lost. Well, he might hire somebody to care for it; she would not and in five minutes after she had settled this point she was holding the object of controversy in her arms and feeding it most tenderly. Then for the first time she remembered that this was Thanksgiving Day. Thanksgiving! And sitting and rocking, her mind traveled back to a time when the day meant much to her; to a time when life was not so narrow, so sordid, when she went to church and enjoyed human companionship. Then she remembered the first Thanksgiving on this farm, when Jack was a sturdy boy of five and the others younger; how she had made a little feast almost out of nothing, but, despite the homesickness and loneliness, they had been far happier than in the years since when love of gain had "eaten them up," spiritually and mentally. With a start she heard the clock strike eleven. The baby was sleeping; could she manage to get up a Thanksgiving feast in an hour? She had intended to have boiled potatoes, fried salt pork, bread, coffee and sorghum molasses.

Ben, her youngest son, was at the barn for something and, yielding to the impulse of the moment, she called to him from the doorway: "Run me down a chicken, Ben, if you men folks can get along till one o'clock without yer dinners."

"Aye, aye!" said Ben heartily, but when he came in with the chicken he looked so inquiring that his mother said: "I plum forgot 'twas Thanksgiving," just as if they ever observed it either inwardly or outwardly. Ben said nothing, but shying a glance at the sleeping babe went out softly, but was whistling gaily when he reached the corn sheds. "Can't have dinner till the horn blows; reckon that'll be about one o'clock."

"What's up?" asked Tom.

The Kingsleys were not humorous, but an idea did occasionally strike Ben and now he answered severely:

"You can't expect mother to take care of a youngun and have meals square up to time."

"Hang the youngun!" was Tom's ungracious reply. "Say, Jack, you better go over to Sweet's this afternoon."

"If you've any business at Sweet's go yourself; I have't any."

Even Mr. Kingsley, who was not at all observing, opened his eyes when he entered the big kitchen, from which most savory odors had already greeted him.

Never had the old room looked so inviting before, and no wonder! A toothsome feast on a table spread with the white cloth and best dishes—only used for company—and a baby form in the old high chair so long relegated to the garret. He smiled and laid his rough hand on the little head covered with golden red curls.

"Whoop-ee!" said Tom, looking approvingly about. "So all this comes of having a girl in the family!"

Jack glanced at his mother and then did what no Kingsley was ever known to do before without being asked—filled the water pails.

Ben looked down at himself; then there was another departure. He put on a clean "wamus" and washed and combed with unusual care. Everyone had a smile or a pat for the bright, fearless babe who, they tacitly understood, was in some way responsible for the good cheer.

When ready to sit down, Jack quietly lifted the high chair to a place besides his own. He meant to take care of her, evidently. And so the new life at the Kingsleys began. Not all in a day did the changes come, but the truth of the words: "And a little child shall lead them," was never more thoroughly verified than in this instance. By another Thanksgiving time a royal feast was spread and the minister and his family invited to partake. The house was brightened; each member of the family dressed, talked and acted more like "other people;" they even sent wood and vegetables to several poor families, and remembered that they themselves had cause to give thanks for many blessings, not least among them Jack's baby.

A SONG OF THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving for the men who braved
The yet scarce furrowed sea,
Rather than cringe, with soul enslaved,
To kingly tyranny;
Who sought upon this virgin sod
"Freedom to worship God!"

Thanksgiving for the men who met
The stormy brunt of war,
Who yielded life without regret
Lest wrong be conqueror;
For those who fought and lived to see
Triumphant liberty!

SUPPLANTS THE EAGLE FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

Thanksgiving that the olden scars
By time are hid and healed;
That now our flag's close-clustering stars
Shine on no gory field,
But year by year a rich increase
Springs from the arts of peace!

Thanksgiving for a past that gleams
With light so fair to see;
Thanksgiving for the glorious dreams
Of triumphs yet to be;
Thanksgiving, all, with one accord,
Unto our father's Lord!

CUSTOMS OF THE FEAST.

Traditions Should Be Observed in Serving the Thanksgiving Dinner.

"Under the circumstances it is advisable that the conventional, every-day order of your table should be set aside for the Thanksgiving feast," writes Ella Morris Kretschmar in the Woman's Home Companion. "In days when servants were rare and untrained, things were not served from the sideboard and side-tables. Besides, how could you picture a board that groans with its wealth of cheer without the good things in evidence?

"The turkey, of course, is placed before the host, also the meat pie; the vegetables, in covered dishes, before the hostess. The cranberries, celery (in low crystal dishes on a napkin), that time-honored abomination, the sour pickles, jellies, etc., may be placed here and there along the board effectively. Sweet pickles may be added; also dishes of fruits and nuts—the two latter to be eaten, of course, with the desert. Hot-house flowers would be an incongruous feature, yet the dainty, tasteful colonial dame doubtless found some decorations for her table. The bright berry-clusters from the box-elder tree would be very effective; also autumn leaves or beautiful dried grasses, or a tiny sheaf of wheat, oats or rye. Something will furnish a proper centerpiece; if nothing better, a high dish or silver basket of handsome apples will answer. All of the above may be on the table when the guests assemble, the soup already served at each place. When the soup-plates have been removed the main course begins, which, when removed, gives place to all the remaining items of the menu.

Turkey Tid-Bits.

It is a wise turkey that knows when to diet.

A turkey on your own table is worth two in your neighbor's coop.

Beauty unadorned—A well-dressed turkey.

At Thanksgiving time the key to the situation is turkey.

The hand that carves the turkey is the one that rules the roast.

Never look a gift turkey in the gizzard.

Degrees of comparison in the life of a turkey—Positive, gobble; comparative, gobbler; superlative, gobble it.

The turkey is a great success as the national bird because it paints itself red simply by gobbling.

Don't ask too long a blessing at the Thanksgiving dinner. Remember that the turkey is not a bird of pray.

Thanksgiving Turkey.

Oh, the turkey's waxing fatter
Than he waxed a moon ago,
And he ripens for the platter
In the dreamy afterglow.
While the piglet
Skips a jiglet
In the bosom of his sty,
Is the turkey
Quite as murky
As the chilly, purple sky;
For he knows that he will very Soon be going on the plate,
With the sauce of the cranberry,
And the stuffing all elate.

Oh, the turkey's full of sorrow,
From his watties to his tail;
When he dreams about the morrow,
Every feature's snowy pale.
Oh, 'tis shaky
As the flaky
Pie that lures us on to kill;
And his talons
Show that gallons
Of good stuff would not unchill
All the thoughts that thrill his wishbone,
When he dreams the carving knife
Soon will pierce him like a fishbone,
And wind up his happy life.

Oh, the turkey now is glowing,
And we watch him in our joy,
For we know we soon are going
With his drumsticks for to toy.
In our rapture,
We will capture
All the dark meat and the white,
And the giblets
Of his niblets
Will suffuse us with delight;
And we'll say in language regal,
As our lines we all up gird,
That the turkey beats the eagle
As old Freedom's mighty bird!

Queen Christina Will Quit Spain—Carlos to Be Proclaimed King.

LONDON.—A curious report in regard to Spain's future government is current in diplomatic circles, which, from its source, is entitled to weight. It is that there will be a change of dynasty, but a peaceful change. The queen regent is said to be convinced of the hopelessness of her son ever reigning, and has, upon the advice of the emperor of Austria, decided, soon after the peace treaty is signed at Paris (which everyone now regards this as only a question of days) to quit Spain with her family, and Don Carlos will be proclaimed king. Everything is reported to be already arranged, and the army and clergy are alleged to be ready for the change. According to the programme, Don Carlos, as soon as things are running smoothly, will abdicate in favor of his son, Don Jaime.

PROTEST AGAINST MERRITT'S STATEMENT

Report That Christina Will Resign the Dynasty and That Don Carlos Will Be Proclaimed King, Who Will Abdicate in Favor of His Son.

LONDON.—There is much agitation among the Filippino representatives in Europe over the Philippine situation. Agoncillo, the representative of Aguinaldo, who was in Paris watching the proceedings of the peace commissions, started for Washington Saturday. It is learned that on Wednesday last he called a meeting of the Filippinos in Paris and London to meet him in Paris, when a committee was formed with the object of doing everything possible to induce France to recognize the so called Philippine republic. A telegram was sent to Aguinaldo asking for instructions, and the following reply is said to have been received:

"Insist upon absolute independence. Otherwise we fight to the death. We are all united, and the government is progressing smoothly. All the independent tribes of the mountains are submitting to Aguinaldo, and the chiefs are bringing in presents of gold."

The statements made by General Wesley Merritt in reply to the appeal of the Philippine junta of Hong Kong to the American people have caused indignation among the Filippinos. They are especially incensed at the suggestion that they would loot, and at the idea of being governed as a colony. NEGOTIATIONS NOT BROKEN OFF BY SPAIN.

Agreed to Pay $20,000,000 for the Philippines—Adjournment Taken Until Wednesday in Order That Communication With Madrid May Be Had.

The afternoon papers, taking the Associated Press Monday printed a dispatch from Paris to the effect that Señor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission, had broken off negotiations. The Associated Press, it is to have been imposed upon. Subsequent investigation proved the story to be baseless, although it had been cabled broadcast over the land and had created something of a sensation among government officials and diplomats. Monday night the Associated Press sent to its morning papers this dispatch and the explanation which follows:

"Please kill the Paris bulletin appearing in day report which says: 'The president of the Spanish peace commission, Senor Montero Rios, has refused to continue the negotiations.' The Paris bulletin sent out shortly after noon on Monday announcing that Senor Montero Rios had refused to continue the peace negotiations was sent from Paris by the correspondent of the Associated Press. It was not sent with his knowledge or by his agent. The message was received over the wires of the French Telegraphic Cables Company, and it was upon inquiry that the cable sheet was found in at the Paris office was indorsed in the name of the Paris correspondent of the Associated Press. The cable company was imposed upon."

Washington.—The Spanish and American peace commissioners met in joint session at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Americans declared the United States must have the entire Philippine archipelago, and for a treaty session of the Philippines the Americans tendered to Spain $20,000,000.

They further declared it is the purpose of the United States to maintain control of the Philippine Islands as an "open door" to the world's commerce.

Finally the terms named the United States proposes a mutual relinquishment of all claims for indemnity, national or personal, subsequent to the outbreak of the Cuban insurrection.

November 28 is fixed as the date on which the American peace commission will make a definite response to today's propositions and all other subjects in dispute.

It is also declared that the United States desires to treat on the religious affairs of the Caroline Islands as they were upon between the United States and Spain in 1886, and also the question of one of the Caroline Islands for an American naval station, cable landing rights at other points in the Spanish possessions, and the question of certain Spanish-American claims for indemnity.

The commissioners refuse to arbitrate any of the peace protocol, the future disposition and sovereignty of the Philippine Islands.

The meeting was then adjourned until Wednesday.

The memorandum of the American commission embodying the above propositions is long, and was not read in full. The vital portions, however, were communicated verbally to the Spanish commissioners in practically these terms:

"The fact was cited that the proposal presented by the American commissioners in behalf of their government for the cession of the Philippine Islands to the United States having been rejected by the Spanish commissioners and the counter proposal of the latter for the withdrawal of the American forces from the islands and the payment of an indemnity by the United States to Spain having been rejected by the American commissioners, the latter, deeming it essential that the present negotiations, already greatly protracted, should be brought to an early and definite conclusion, now beg to present a new proposition embodying the concessions which, for the sake of peace, their government under the circumstances be willing to tender.

"The government of the United States is unable to modify the proposal heretofore made for the cession of the entire archipelago of the Philippines, but the American commissioners are authorized to offer to Spain, in case the cession would be agreed to, the sum of $20,000,000 to be paid in accordance with the terms to be fixed in the treaty of peace.

"It being the policy of the United States to maintain in the Philippines an open door to the the world's commerce, the American commissioners are prepared to insert in the treaty now in contemplation a stipulation in effect, that for a term of years, Spanish ships and merchandise shall be admitted into the Philippine ports on the same terms as American ships and merchandise."

The other stipulations were practically as given in the beginning of this dispatch.

McKinley's Significant Action.

The committee in charge of the Atlanta Peace Jubilee, for which December 14 and 15 have been set, has received a telegram from the president requesting them to change the name of the celebration from peace jubilee to a demonstration over "our victorious arms." The telegram gives as the reason for the change the "uncertain outcome of the Paris conference and the exigencies which may arise."

The executive committee of the celebration held a special meeting on receipt of the president's telegram and decided to designate the demonstration as "the Atlanta jubilee." The dates will remain as at first announced.

English Press Opinions.

LONDON.—The morning papers concede the generosity of the offer of the United States peace commissioners and express the opinion that Spain would be foolish to reject them. The express universal gratification at the announcement of "an open door" policy in the Philippines.

The Daily Mail calls the offer of $20,000,000 indemnity, "a surprising act of generosity."

The Daily News says: "The United States have now become an Asiatic power, and Lord Salisbury clearly had reason to predict that the expansion of the United States would give Great Britain a valuable ally in the China seas."

WANTS A FORCE BILL.

A St. Louis Club Urges Federal Action in Dealing With Race Troubles.

The Forum club of St. Louis, at a meeting Sunday compiled an address to President McKinley relative to the recent shooting of negroes in North and South Carolina. The document points out that such outrages are condoned and excused by the local authorities, who are either unable or unwilling to prevent them.

"We do not invoke war in our behalf. We believe that there can be placed in the hands of the president by the Fourteenth amendment of the constitution full power to correct these evils, and we respectfully urge that you recommend to congress such legislation.

GEN. GARCIA IN NEW YORK.

Given an Enthusiastic Reception by the Cubans of the Metropolis.

Gen. Calixto Garcia and the other Cuban commissioners from the Cuban military assembly at Santa Cruz del Sur, who are en route to Washington for the purpose of laying before President McKinley a resolution recently adopted by the assembly as to the future of the island of Cuba, arrived in New York Monday, on the Ward Line steamer Segurancia. General Garcia and the commissioners were given an enthusiastic welcome by the members of the local branch of Cubans and many prominent Cubans. He will go to Washington in a day or two to see the president.

Senator Quay Is Indicted.

The grand jury at Philadelphia, Monday, presented to the county court true bills of indictments against United States Senator M. S. Quay, his son, Richard R. Quay, and ex-State Treasurer Benjamin J. Haywood, charged with conspiracy to unlawfully use public moneys deposited in the People's National bank of that city, for the purchase and sale of stocks and for other purposes not authorized by law. John S. Hopkins, former cashier of the People's bank, now dead, is named as a party of the conspiracy.

HE FEELS IT COMING.

The Republican press may say what it will to the contrary, the fact remains that the Silver Sentiment is stronger than ever. Had it not been for this sentiment the Republicans would have made a clean sweep November 8th on account of a successful war. Astute men in politics feel that a Silver cyclone will come within the next two years. The plutocrat, with his ill-gotten gains, may put on all the false bravery that he can but inwardly he knows that he is soon to be struck by the only kind of legislation (Free Silver) that can drive him from his position.

DEMOCRACY'S GAINS.

GOV. ALTGELD SUMS UP THE RECENT ELECTION.

Viewed as a Whole, the Republicans Are Welcome to All the Comfort They Can Extract from the Present Situation—The Battle of 1900.

When viewed as a whole, the 1898 election was favorable to the Democrats. While the Democrats in Congress and out of Congress forced the administration into the war, they knew that it would give it a tremendous political advantage, for they knew the war must be successful, and a successful war always strengthens the party in power. The Republicans should have received much larger majorities than two years ago. Instead of that they have lost forty Congressmen and a large number of others had their majorities almost wiped out. One more such a Republican victory will destroy that party and forever end the hypocrisy and false pretense now reigning in Washington. The Democrats have not lost a single state that they carried two years ago, but, on the contrary, have elected a governor in Minnesota, which is equal to a miracle. That element of the Democratic party which has favored the abandonment of all principle and has urged harmony for the sake of spoils has had a chance to try its scheme and has utterly failed. In Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and one or two other states where they had refused to indorse the national platform they have suffered humiliating defeat, although in some of these states the conditions favored Democratic victory. I understand that nearly every Democratic Congressman elected in these states was successful because he told his constituents, if elected, he would support the national platform. That fraudulent side-show called the gold Democracy will now pass out of existence and the Democratic party from the Atlantic to the Pacific will line up on higher ground. It will assume the aggressive, and not only fight for the mighty principles enunciated in 1896, but it will make itself the champion of struggling humanity. It will pull this country out of the pool of corruption into which the Republicans have dragged it, and it will lead our people toward a higher civilization. Tuesday's election will make Mr. Bryan more formidable than he ever was, because it is going to bring to the front the great principles which he has advocated.

All About the Seigniorage.

Webster defines seigniorage as "a charge or toll deducted from bullion brought to a mint to be coined." But the word as used in the United States means the profit arising from the coinage of bullion. By act of July 14, 1890, the secretary of the treasury was directed to purchase each month 4,500,000 ounces of fine silver at the market price and to pay for the same with treasury notes. The difference between the cost price of the silver so purchased, and its coinage value at the rate of $1.2929 an ounce is the seigniorage or profit to the government. There is no seigniorage from the coinage of gold bullion because the value of the bullion and the coins made from it are of equal value. It will thus be seen that the amount of seigniorage depends upon the price paid for the bullion. An ounce of fine silver contains 480 grains. The dollar contains 371.25 grains of pure silver. If an ounce of fine silver can be purchased for seventy cents, the seigniorage, therefore, arising from its coinage is about $0.5929. This would make the actual worth of the silver dollar $0.5414. This explains why some people talk of a fifty-cent dollar. By act of November 1, 1893, the purchase of silver bullion, under act of July 14, 1890, was repealed. The total amount of silver bullion purchased under the said act was 131,838,-199.46 fine ounces at a cost of $118,903,-909.23. When coined at the rate of $1.2929 an ounce it will be worth $170,-457,470, and the profit or seigniorage to the government will be $51,553,-560.77. Under free coinage of silver, as under free coinage of gold, there would be no profit or seigniorage, because the face value of the coins and their bullion value would be the same. During the administration of Grover Cleveland congress passed a law authorizing the coinage of the seigniorage, but it was vetoed by the president. He preferred Wall street to the people.

Suspension of the Coinage of the Silver Dollar.

President Jefferson suspended the coinage of the silver dollar because they were purchased for export. None were coined at the United States mint from 1805 to 1836 because their bullion value was greater than their face value. The order of suspension was written by James Madison, secretary of state, and is as follows, viz.:

Department of State, May 1, 1806.

Sir:—In consequence of a representation from the director of the Bank of the United States that considerable purchases have been made of dollars coined at the mint for the purpose of exporting them, and as it is probable further purchases and exportations will be made the president directs that all the silver to be coined at the mint shall be of small denominations, so that the value of the largest pieces shall not exceed half a dollar.

I am, etc.,
JAMES MADISON.

ROBERT PATTERSON, Esq.,
Director of the Mint.

Do Not Like It

Of all the contemptible gold-bug lies that have been started lately the meanest is the etatement that the appointment of W. H. Harvey to collect funds for the Democratic educational campaign fund of 1900 had caused trouble in the ways and means committee, and that he had been asked to resign. There was no truth whatever in the story and there was not the slightest excuse for its publication. It was promptly denied and indignantly denounced by Mr. Harvey and by National Chairman Jones. The work of the committee is progressing very satisfactorily and with perfect harmony. Contributions should be sent to the Union Trust Company, Chicago, and requests for any information regarding the movement should be addressed to the general manager of the ways and means committee, Mr. W. H. Harvey, Unity building, Chicago.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Depression in Wool.

Is it not a little strange to have the wool exchange closing on account of "depression in the wool business" during a McKinley administration and under a Dingley tariff? Can it be possible that this is the result of free silver agitation?—Freeport (Ill.) Bulletin.

She—You know it is a woman's privilege to change her mind. He—I know it is; but when a man changes his he has to pay damages.

THEY CANNOT DODGE.

REPUBLICANS MUST SHOULDER THE RESPONSIBILITY.

Since They Control All Branches of the Government the Goldbugs Cannot Claim That Anybody Else Is Responsible for Hard Times.

Had the allied free-silver forces controlled the next congress all of the plutocratic daily papers would have discovered that wheat, cotton and other farm products were never so low in price, that wages are tending downward and that business conditions are bad. This state of things they would repeat in every form that they could twist language into was owing to the fear capital had of silver sentiment as shown in the control of congress by the free-silver men.

Now, the goldbugs have everything they could ask for. They have both houses of congress to pass their laws, a president to sign them and a supreme court to construe them.

Times must be hard while the gold standard is adhered to. The people will not stand hard times without registering a protest at the ballot box, and the Republicans cannot shift the responsibility.

Senator Hanna, in expending a large fund in doubtful congressional districts this year, made it impossible for his party to re-elect McKinley in 1900.

In the assurance of complete political success in the near future the allied silver forces should push the work of education and organization within the next two years. Every man who suffers from the gold standard policy should be told just why he suffers, and within a year the people will be glad enough to study the financial question.

A PALACE AND ITS USES.

A press dispatch thus described Sherry's new hotel for plutocrats, recently opened in New York:

"Sherry's great new palace on Fifth avenue was thrown open for private view Saturday. Rome in its most regally magnificent days never saw anything like it. Neither has New York. The new hotel, designed especially for the functions of society, has eleven stories, and takes up 125 feet on the avenue and 225 feet on the side street. Right off the street are the offices and the restaurant, a room of baronial proportions, opulently finished in oak, with gold trimmings, after the manner of Louis Quantorze. The cafe is carpeted in red and hung with green draperies. The main cafe, another huge room, is done in green. To the side, without any street front, is the palm garden, a lofty room roofed with glass and trimmed with white marble and greened iron. These are all public rooms. Up stairs are three ball rooms. The main one, forty feet high, is on the third floor. It is an immense place, done in cream and gold, with a delicately frescoed ceiling. Attached to the room is a regal suit of reception rooms and coat rooms. Down another flight and you walk into another ball room, just as perfectly appointed and just as richly decorated. And yet it is absolutely apart from the other. Go to the front and there is a third ball room. The first ball will be given December 2. The cost of the hotel was $3,500,000."

It may interest you, too, to know something about those who will enjoy all this magnificence. Please note that this great hotel has been "designed especially for the functions of society."

The first ball will be given December 2, says the Topeka Advocate, and it has been decided that the printers of New York shall give it. They have had more time to prepare than most other classes, for the introduction of the typesetting machines has made them a leisurely class for some time. The large number of unemployed printers in New York city makes it doubly certain that the opening ball will be worthy of the palace beholding it.

The sweatshop cigarmakers were formerly compelled to work from 6 in the morning until 9 and 11 at night, but fortunately the machines have displaced them, and they are preparing to celebrate their freedom with fitting festivities. Inasmuch as two persons working together making sweatshop cigars used to be able to make a total of $7 to $11 a week they have ample means to draw on. Music for the cigarmakers and their friends to dance to will be furnished by Oscar Hammerstein and other inventors of cigar manufacturing machines.

The section men of the principal railroads of New York are planning a ball for the holidays that they intend shall eclipse anything of the sort ever seen in New York city. They will run special trains from all over the state. Later on the magnificent hotel will be thrown open throughout to many miners of Pennsylvania, who, with their families, will make a visit to New York the special celebration of the return of prosperity.

This hearty reception of the new Sherry's by the "plain people" of the vicinity of New York is extremely gratifying. It was not so many years ago that the great palace would have been given over entirely to those whom we were once accustomed to call "the rich"—rich because they were possessed of considerable money. Secretly as the time of the war for Cuba was it impossible for the producers of this country to reap anything from the erection of a palace like Sherry's other than the mere pittance of wages for the few employed in the building. But now the toil and the reward are both theirs—a true prosperity has come, and they have good reason for rejoicing.

Ex-Senator Ingalls on the Gold Standard.

In the House of Representatives, in January last, in a speech upon the deficiency appropriation for the fiscal year, Hon. William L. Greene of Nebraska, in a telling arraignment of the operation of the gold standard, quoted a speech of Senator Ingalls, which the speaker quoted from the Congressional Record of the Forty-fifth Congress, vol. 7, page 1052, as follows:

If we are to have a monometallic standard, I believe silver to be immeasurably preferable to gold. It is less subject to fluctuation; its production is more steady, its cost more uniform.

No enduring fabric of national prosperity can be builded on gold. Gold is the money of monarchs; kings covet it; the exchanges of nations are effected by it. Its tendency is to accumulate in vast masses in the commercial centers and to move from kingdom to kingdom in such volumes as to unsettle values and disturb the finances of the world. It is the instrument of gamblers and speculators, and the idol of the miser and the thief. Being the object of so much adoration, it becomes haughty and sensitive and shrinks at the approach of danger, and whenever it is most needed it always disappears. At the slightest alarm it begins to look for a refuge. It goes from the nation at war to the nation at peace. War makes it a fugitive. No people in a great emergency ever found a faithful ally in gold. It is the most cowardly and treacherous of all metals. It makes no treaty that it does not break.

It has no friend whom it does not sooner or later betray. Armies and navies are not maintained by gold. In times of panic and calamity, shipwreck and disaster, it becomes the chief agent and minister of ruin. No nation ever fought a great war by the aid of gold. On the contrary, in the crisis of greatest peril it becomes an enemy more potent than the foe in the field; but when the battle is won and peace has been secured, gold reappears and claims the fruits of victory. In our own civil war it is doubtful if the gold of New York and London did not work us greater injury than the powder and lead and iron of the rebels. It was the most invincible enemy of the public credit. Gold paid no soldier or sailor. It refused the national obligations. It was worth most when our fortunes were lowest. Every defeat gave it increased value. It was in open alliance with our enemies the world over, and all of its energies were evoked for our destruction. But as usual, when danger has been averted and the victory secured, gold swaggers to the front and asserts the supremacy. But silver is the money of the people. It is the money of wages and retail. Its tendency is toward diffusion and dissemination. It enters into the minute concerns of traffic and is exchanged day by day for daily bread.

It penetrates the remotest channels of commerce, and its abundance, bulk, and small subdivision prevent its deportation in sufficient amounts to disturb or unsettle values. If it retires at the approach of danger, or from the presence of an inferior currency, it still remains at home ready to respond to the first summons for its return. During a late visit to a remote portion of Arkansas I was surprised by the amount of old silver in circulation, including Mexican and pillar dollars and American halves and quarters coined half a century ago. Seeking an explanation, I was told by the merchants that upon the withdrawal and retirement of the fractional paper currency these old coins immediately appeared in sufficient quantities to supply all needs of trade, conclusively showing that when silver vanished at the beginning of the legal-tender-paper period it had been carefully hoarded among the people and had promptly returned to circulation when its presence was required. I have no doubt that two hundred and fifty millions of silver would be thus readily absorbed among the people of the United States, forming a vast, permanent, stable accumulation which would be an enduring basis of prosperity, less liable than any other currency to the mutations and vicissitudes of financial panics and disasters.

Farmers' Compensation.

The last census report places the value of the agricultural products of the United States for the census year at $2,460,107,454, and the number engaged in agricultural pursuits at 8,565,-926. This would give the average per capita product of those engaged in this industry at $286.02. The value of investment, land improvements, live stock and implements is given at $15,-982,267,689.

Interest on this amount at 5 per cent and an allowance of 10 per cent on machinery, repairs, etc., and deducting the amount from the product, $1,611,569,324, shows the earnings of 8,565,324 of the workers in this industry, or an average wage per capita of $188. Computations of the statistician of the department shows this amount to be too high. This is the remuneration received by the men who work the longest hours and upon whose industry rests the whole fabric of our system of business and commerce. Wonder how many bank clerks would like such a salary?—Cleveland Recorder.

THANKSGIVING DAY. Let us all be thankful for the benefits a kind Providence has favored us with the past year.

Dr. W. E. STEWART has been reappointed Register in Chancery. The genial doctor has made a good official in the past, and his friends are glad to see him retained in the same office in which he has given such general satisfaction.

IN answer to numerous enquiries concerning the recent Congressional election, we beg to say we are satisfied Mr. Aldrich will contest, if Mr. Robbins is given a certiacate. There is not a white man in the five white counties in this district who is satisfied with a made-up majority in Dallas. Mr. Aldrich has a good majority in the five white counties, and this majority ought not to suffer disfranchisement at the hands of the ballot-box manipulators of the black-belt county of Dallas.

IT appears some few of our people have got the idea that the fees for recording deeds and conveyances are so high that it is economy to refrain from having them recorded. This is a mistake both ways. In the first place the many advantages of having a deed officially on record is obvious. Deeds sometimes get lost, stolen or destroyed, and when there is no official record of them it leaves a way wide open for disputes and litigation. Again, the official records show the various transfers, so that it is always easy to prove a title. When no record is made it leaves a gap in the title which may result in endless annoyance and expense. The fees for recording are regulated by law, and are so moderate there is no excuse for running any risks by not having every deed properly recorded when a transfer is made.

CLANTON gets to be quite metropolitan, and among other things will soon need an opera house For the first time in the history of the town a travelling company, Richardson Brothers, has given three consecutive performances. It speaks well for their entertainment that they had good audiences on each of the three nights. It would be a good idea for the young people of Clanton to get up some amateur performances for the winter nights There are good musicians amongst them, and no doubt there is considerable histrionic talent and ability if only it is developed. Why not organize a local company and give us some amusement these long nights?

REPRESENTATINE L. H. Reynolds again requests the people of Chilton to let him know of any legislation they may require. It certainly will not be the fault of our Representative if our people go short of legislation. If any improvement in local conditions can be effected by the passage of an act in the General Assembly, by all means make Mr. Reynolds acquainted with what you want. Prepare a petition to the General Assembly, forward it to Mr. Reynolds, and you can depend upon his pushing it for all it is worth On the other hand, if you hear of any legislation adverse to your interests, then embody your objections in a petition and send it to our Representative, who will fight your battles for you. We congratulate Mr. Reynolds upon the efforts he is making to represent all the people, and wish him success in his undertakings.

CIRCUIT COURT.

thanking your Honor for the charge given us. and our Solicitor for the kind manner in which he has given us counsel, we now beg to de discharged.

After the grand jury had presented their report on Wednesday evening, Judge Denson congratulated them and Chilton county upon the absence of crime and the satisfactory condition of the county generally. Only six true bills were returned.

The local bar was fully represented, and the following visiting attorneys were in attendance: Felix Blackburn, S. W. John, Birmingham; Charley Jones, Montgomery; F. L. Pettus, Selma; J. H. Savage, — Blackwell, Anniston; Walter Carey, Montevallo; W. W. Lavender, Centreville; W. R. Oliver, Calera; D. K. Middleton, Hayneville.

The newspapers of the State can afford to turn their attention away from politics for the next few weeks and give advice to the legislature. The members always understand and appreciate the wisdom of newspapers. But while newspapers have been giving good advice to the legislators, legislators have never appreciated the fact that editors have to eat and wear clothes, and occasionally have wives and children to feed, and clothe and be shod. This has been the mistake of the legislators for about twenty-five years, having at every session been engaged in the effort to reduce the legal printing fees of newspapers while increasing the fees of every other character. If an editor could live without eating, could go shoeless and clothless, and his children didn't cry for bread when they got hungry and could go barefooted all winter as in the summer, the newspapers would hardly have made a kick. But it is a fact that they have to eat and drink and wear clothes, and their children have to eat and wear clothes, just like other people's children, and they are crying out to the legislature to call a halt, if it does not make full restitution of the wrongs of the past. —Montgomery Journal.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. For sale by J S. Much interest has been excited in America by the telegraphic accounts of Hooley's apparently wholesale purchase of British noblemen for use as decoy ducks to his various stock schemes; and his connection with the highest political officials of the Empire. Theron C. Crawford, who has been in England for the Cosmopolitan, takes up the subject in the November issue of that magazine, and under the title of "Hooley and His Guinea Pigs," gives a connected story of the derivation of Hooley and his rise to the control of millions through unlimited check and the opportune willingness of distinguished British aristocrats to lend their names for a financial consideration to any sort of a shady transaction.

Recent reports from "Equality Colony," established last year, in Skaget county, Washington, near Puget Sound, indicate a very satisfactory condition of affairs. This colony was the first of a series of colonies, projected by the "brotherhood of the co-operative commonwealth." It is being operated on advanced socialistic lines and the result is watched with great interest. The colony has over 600 acres of land, clear of all incumbrance, the deed of which, is held in trust for the brotherhood by a board of trustees. The latest addition to the colony is a saw mill, having a capacity of 20,000 to 30,000 feet per day; Many other lines of trade and industry are in operation while others are assured in the near future. With the proper amount of selfishness eliminated from human nature, the day of co operative commonwealths and even the millennium will be ushered in. It is doubtful, however, whether we are ready for them yet.

"The Wall street market grows more buoyant" was a favorite headline in republican newspapers, for many days after the election. It may not have occured to the penny a-liners of the plutocratic press, that there is a very wide gulf between the bondholders of wall-street and plow-holders of the prairies, but such is a fact and whatever is "fun," for the former is "death" to the latter class. Wall street stocks may have advanced, but there has been no shrinkage in the farmer's mortgage or increase in the price of his products, as a result of the election.

One of the results in the recent election in Idaho, was the election of a great many women, especially to the position of superintendent of schools. Two women were elected to the state legislature and the state superintendent of public instruction is a woman. It is to be hoped that this protends a purification of politics in Idaho.

Gen. Grosvenor, of Ohio, contradicts the statement that Thos. Brackett Reed will have a race for the speakership of the next House. He says the "Czar of all the Republicans" will have no opposition, but that he will be nominated unanimously and elected enthusiasticly.

An effort is being made in the southeastern states to unite the Tobacco dealers, growers and users, in a fight against the plug tobacco trust. A general boycott is to be instituted against all the companies in the continental combine.

—The Treasury bureau of statistics has issued a statement announcing the prosperous condition of the farmers because exports of bread stuffs last year largely exceeded those of the previous year. If the smart statisticians at Washington would only keep in mind that the farmers had to dispose of their crops early and at a reduced rate, as a rule, to pay interest on the mortgage while the great milling trust and transportation companies reaped the profit, they would be given credit for a grains of common sense.

—The Republican leaders announce for the nineteen hundredth time that the late election settles the silver question. Strange that these wiseacres can't keep it settled for a while and not let it keep blobbing up periodically to disturb the "confidence" of the people in "sound money."

—The regular annual convention of the Farmers' National Congress will convene at Fort Worth, Texas, December 6, and remain in session two days. Agricultural colleges, experiment stations, National and State, are each entitled to representation, and the meeting promises to be well attended.

—That the Grange is still in existence will be news to many. It is a fact, nevertheless. The national organization of that body recently met at Concord, New Hampshire. The master, in his address, made the following recommendations: That the order continue their effort to have enacted the postal savings bank law, the national pure food amendment to the anti trust law, prevent gambling in margins and futures and to prevent the owners, lessees and managers of public warehouses from buying grain on their own account and storing the same in warehouses controlled by them; prevent the mixing of lower with higher grade grain for the election of United States Senators and for the appropriation of $1,000,000 per year to further extend the free delivery of mail in the rural districts.

—The revised returns from South Dakota confirm the election of Lee fusionist, for governor, by a majority of 412. The balance of the State ticket and legislature is Republican.

—The annual convention of the Knight of Labor, in session at Chicago last week, passed resolutions of censure against the courts who, with a few exceptions, were characterized as hirelings of labor's oppressors. Grand Master Hicks, in his annual report, strongly opposed the anti-expansion policy of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. He said we had nothing to fear from the importation of cheap labor. That we should educate that class to the American standard.

—The Republican majority in Kansas on the State ticket was 15,739 at last report. The Populists made gains in the cities and lost heavily in the country. Indifference is what defeated the silverites of Kansas and they have no one to blame for it but themselves. A. R.

I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children. E. J. SCANTLEBURY. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

THE CUMBERLAND.

At anchor in Hampton Roads we lay
On board of the Cumberland, sloop-of-war,
And at times from the fortress across the bay
The alarum of drums swept past
Or a bugle blast
From the camp on the shore.

Then far away to the south up rose
A little feather of snow white smoke,
And we knew that the iron ship of our foes
Was steadily steering its course
To try the force
Of our ribs of oak.

Down upon us heavily runs,
Silent and sullen, the floating fort:
Then comes a puff of smoke from her guns
And leaps the terrible death,
With fiery breath,
From each open port.

We are not idle, but send her straight
Defiance back in a full broadside!
As hail rebounds from a roof of slate
Rebounds our heavier hail
From each iron scale
Of the monster's hide.

"Strike your flag!" the rebel cries
In his arrogant old plantation strain.
"Never!" our gallant Morris replies.
"It is better to sink than to yield!"
And the whole air pealed
With the cheers of our men.

Then like a kraken huge and black
She crushed our ribs in her iron grasp.
Down went the Cumberland all a wrack,
With a sudden shudder of death
And the cannon's breath
For her dying gasp.

Next morn, as the sun rose over the bay,
Still floated our flag at the mainmast head.
Lord, how beautiful was thy day!
Every waft of the air
Was a whisper of prayer
Or a dirge for the dead.

Ho, brave hearts that went down in the seas!
Ye are at peace in the troubled stream.
Ho, brave land, with hearts like these,
Thy flag, that is rent in twain,
Shall be one again
And without a seam!

—Longfellow.

Dr. Miles' Nervine
A REMEDY FOR THE Effects of Tobacco.

THE excessive use of tobacco, especially by young men is always injurious and undoubtedly shortens life materially. Mr. Ed. C. Elsen, compositor on the Contra-Costa News, Martinez, Cal., writes; "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and received much benefit from it. I was troubled with nervousness, dizzy spells and sleeplessness, caused by the use of tobacco and stimulants. I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with marvelously good results, allaying the dizziness, quieting the nerves, and enabling me to sleep and rest, proving in my case a very beneficial remedy." Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is especially adapted to restoring the nervous system to its normal condition under such circumstances. It soothes, heals and strengthens.

THE SPORTING WORLD.

A new helmet for football players has been placed upon the market, and is pronounced complete by experts. Hitherto players have had their ears protected by leather muffs padded with felt, held in place by leather straps which have fitted over the top of the head. While it was impossible to injure the ears or temples, the head could be kicked, and in some instances last year men were severely hurt in this way. The new helmet, however, completely protects the head and ears. The crown of it is made of tough sole leather, filled with air holes and lined with soft felt. It has stout earlaps of leather, with holes in them so that the wearer can hear the signals, and a strong elastic band, which buckles under the chin and keeps the new headgear firmly in place. It is believed that the helmet will be generally worn by members of all the big teams this year. Another new fangled device is a pneumatic leg guard called by football players a "cholly horse." It is made of canvas covered rubber and is inflated like a football, its shape being oblong and flat, possibly a half inch thick. It is placed inside the trousers on the front of the thigh, and is intended to prevent sprains.—New York Sun.

NEW HELMET FOR FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

Bicycle Legislation.

The anti-bicycle legislator is ingenious in his devices to harass and annoy wheelmen. He not only wants to discriminate against them by imposing fines for failure to "keep to the right," but proposes to levy a special tax upon every wheel. A special tax can properly be levied only upon the theory that the article or person taxed enjoys peculiar privileges denied to others or that such article or person is a special burden and expense upon the public. Neither of these things is true as to either the wheelman or his wheel. The bicycle has no greater road rights than any other vehicle. It causes far less wear upon the public streets and roads than any other vehicle. Bicycles do not wear and injure the streets as much as carriages and heavy wagons. Why shall the owner of a wheel be singled out for this special tax? The injustice of the proposition is apparent to every fair mind.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

ALABAMA'S EXECUTIVE DELIVERS HIS MESSAGE

Urges Greater Economy in Conduct of State's Business.

FAVORS EXAMINATION OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

Advocates Larger Expenditures for Public Schools—Believes Revision of Alabama's Constitution Imperative.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Both houses of the general assembly met in joint session at noon, Wednesday, to receive the message of Governor Johnston. It is as follows:

Since your last session material progress has been made in the development of the resources of our state; many miles of railroad have been constructed, tens of thousands of spindles added to our cotton manufactories, one of the largest steel mills in the United States is under construction, and a large amount of money is finding profitable employment in our varied industries.

The fertility of our soil, the salubrity of our climate and the splendid mineral and timber resources of our state, are attracting more and more attention, and drawing to our borders many industrious and worthy citizens of other states. Peace and good order prevail, and the reproach of mob violence is passing away at the demand of an enlightened public sentiment, that stands for the orderly administration of justice as the only security to every citizen in his personal and property rights. But little general legislation, in my judgment, is needed, and I trust that our statute books shall not be encumbered with many local laws.

The Finances.

I congratulate you heartily on the improved condition of your finances. The credit of the state was never higher; your bonds are commanding now a premium of about 10 per cent against 2 per cent two years ago. Money was borrowed a year ago for a short temporary loan at 4 per cent, the lowest rate ever attained by the state; claims against the treasury are being promptly met and the teachers of the public schools received their pay when due this fall for the first time in many years.

The treasurer's report shows that at the close of business, September 30, 1898, a deficit of $241,755.90; but $85,680.13 of this was due the penitentiary fund, and can and should be covered into the state treasury, leaving the actual deficit that day at $156,075.77, a net gain of about $225,000 during the past two years, although during this time the interest charge on our public debt increased about $75,000 per annum. But for this increase of interest under the debt settlement act, there would be no deficit whatever now.

The reports of the auditor and the state tax commissioner show that up to October 1, 1898, the money actually paid into the state treasury under the operation of the tax commission law amounted to $131,704.44, the actual cost of its collection being $6,293.97. Almost as much has probably been paid into the various county treasuries.

The decline in the valuation of real and personal property has been arrested, and the tendency is now upward. In three years we have made a net gain in valuation of nearly $15,000,000, while some of our sister states have been suffering a steady shrinkage and confront increasing deficits.

I earnestly invite your attention to the inequality of taxation existing between the various counties. Owing to the arbitrary action of a number of commissioners' courts, or their failure to observe the plain mandates of the law, the valuation of property ranges in different counties from 33 per cent to 100 per cent of its fair cash market value. Such inequality should not be tolerated, and legislation should be had to correct it. I am inclined to agree with my predecessor that the establishment of a state board of equalization is the best remedy.

Reduction of Expenses.

With cotton at less than 5 cents a pound, I am sure that the honorable members of the general assembly agree with me that rigid economy should prevail in the administration of the people's affairs and that every unnecessary expense should be eliminated.

I advise that the appropriation of $15,000 per annum for expenses of temporary loans be reduced to $1,000, that the contingent fund of the governor be reduced from $6,000 to $5,500, and of the superintendent of education from $1,000 to $100, and that the salaries of clerks to state officers and the state commissions be reduced.

I suggest also that no solicitor be permitted to draw any money from the treasury in excess of the fees actually paid in from his circuit.

I trust that you will remember that your highest duty is to see that not a dollar of the peoples' money is uselessly expended. The reduction named will not prevent hundreds of competent men from seeking with avidity the places to be filled. I think the salaries of the auditor and of members of the convict board should be increased.

I invite your careful attention to the very great expense heretofore incurred by the general assemblies for clerical assistance, doorkeepers and other incidents. At the last session the total expense for this purpose was $11,383.50. This sum would have commanded the services of fifty skilled clerks at $100 per month for the entire session. I know it is only necessary to call your attention to this to prevent any unnessary expense at this session.

Education.

I am glad to say that there is a very general and growing interest manifested in the state in behalf of education, and that substantial progress is being made. The most important legislation needed at your hands is in regard to public schools. We may boast of our splendid resources, surpassing those of all other states in variety and abundance; of the glorious record of men in war and in peace, and of the purity and loveliness of our daughters, of the fertility of our soil and the salubrity of our climate, but the glory of a state proceeds from the intelligence and virtue of its people. Every dollar given to the cause of education becomes invested capital that cannot be lost or destroyed, but will continue to pay dividends from one generation to another. Uniform examinations for licenses to teach should be had. County superintendents should be competent and efficient, the poll tax should apply to every voter, and its collection should be placed in the hands of the school authorities. We have in Alabama approximately 350,000 men of the voting age. If all were required to pay the poll tax of $1.50, devoted by our constitution to the common schools, it would more than double our present appropriation from that source. The report of the auditor shows that for the past two years the sum actually received from polls averaged about $150,000. Certainly efficient legislation and administration, and the extension of the poll age, will more than double the receipts from that source.

All sums, over and above those needed for the economical administration of our government, the preservation of peace and good order, and the maintenance of the public credit, should be devoted to the cause of education.

Our present appropriations for the common schools are: General appropriation, $350,000; poll tax, $150,000; sixteenth section fund, $145,000.

I am strongly inclined to think it wiser policy after this fiscal year to supersede our general appropriation of $350,000 by legislative provision devoting one-third of all the money received into the treasury from the tax on real and personal property to the cause of education. This would make an increase of nearly $100,000 in the appropriation and at the same time assure the friends of education that, as our values increase, as property is more fairly assessed, and as those escaping and evading are compelled to contribute their share, one dollar in every three that may be thus added to our income will go to our schools, and the progress of the schools at least keep pace with the growth and development of our state. If these recommendations are adopted, our appropriations for common schools, instead of aggregating some $645,000, ought to show a total of $880,000, a gain of nearly $250,000 annually.

The Agricultural and Mechanical college continues to do good work, our State university is making gratifying progress, and the Girls' Industrial school has been marvelous in its growth. The Normal schools, both white and colored, and the District Agricultural schools, with one or two exceptions, are doing better work, and are better managed and taught than at any previous time.

It is interesting to know that nearly one-half of all the receipts of our treasury are annually disbursed for education and benevolent purposes, and these disbursements are annually growing. The expenditures for the year 1897-98 have been $1,018,086.98, or nearly $200,000 more than two years ago.

Solicitors.

I invite your consideration to the method of electing solicitors. Our constitution places the election of judges in the hands of the people, and it is a gratifying fact that the decisions of our highest court commands universal respect and ranks among the ablest and most learned in the entire Union; our judiciary is without reproach. If the people can be trusted to elect judges, I fail to see why they cannot be trusted to elect solicitors.

The Military.

The report of the adjutant-general shows the number, equipment and efficiency of our organized state troops, and the services they have rendered the state. Whenever called into service to maintain the laws and protect prisoners from mob violence, they have responded with alacrity, performed every duty with uncomplaining fidelity, and in every instance their conduct has been admirable. Nearly all our troops promptly volunteered their services when war was declared against Spain, were anxious to go to the front, and, had an opportunity presented itself, I am sure their conduct upon the field of battle would have sustained the glorious record of their fathers. Wherever stationed they have won commendation for their good conduct and soldierly bearing, and I am sure were not surpassed by the troops of any other state in the Union. One regiment yet remains in the service, composed of colored citizens, efficiently officered by white men, and this regiment will give a good account of itself wherever and whenever called.

Amending Constitution.

The fact that our constitution needs some revision is conceded by almost every intelligent and patriotic citizen. There are many who would like to see some parts revised and yet have grave apprehensions as to the work of a convention having no restrictions upon its powers. Our state is now enjoying a political repose, most grateful, after years of bitter division and strife, and if possible we should wisely avoid any issue that would disturb this condition. Looking at the result on the amendment submitted at the last election it may be well for you to consider whether such revision as may be necessary cannot be had with more certainty and less expense, apprehension and discord than by a general convention. I submit to your patriotic consideration the selection of the wisest course to pursue, but I must insist that we shall be recreant to our duty if we temporize with conditions that are pregnant with evil.

Roads.

Except education no more important subject can engage your careful consideration than the improvement of our public roads. The tendency of our people to leave the rural districts and gather in the towns and cities is alarming to thoughtful men all over the country. Unless arrested fruitful fields will be abandoned, population congested in the cities and towns and the very spirit of independence be impaired. It is hardly surprising that the citizens who are denied church, school and social privileges by the miserable condition of their roads, should seek these elsewhere. Some wise and efficient plan should be adopted permitting counties to levy special taxes or to borrow money, that permanent betterments of our roads may be accomplished in place of the shiftless pretense of work now done.

Citizens might be allowed to contribute labor instead of paying money, but the main thing is to have the roads and grades established by competent persons, and the work so done that it will be of lasting value.

Examinations.

The examination of the accounts of officials handling the public revenues has not only brought money into the state and county treasuries largely beyond the expense, but has been most productive in informing officials of their duties, securing uniformity of administration, and making all officials more careful and accurate in their dealings with the state. I advise the passage of an act that will remove any doubt whatever that official copies of these sworn reports shall be received by all courts as prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein, and permitting all officials receiving the state's money to be sued at the capital. I recommend that authority be given the governor to appoint special or temporary examiners. I have had many requests to have the books of county officials examined, but the pressure of the work necessary to be done for the state has prevented me from complying with these requets. The counties should pay their fair share of all the expense of this work.

The Public Health.

Our people have enjoyed good health. An epidemic of smallpox has prevailed in some parts of the state and during the year 1897 we had some yellow fever in a few localities. The death rate, from both causes, has been quite insignificant, so little as to be scarcely perceptible in our mortality statistics. This year a rigid quarantine by the state under our own laws and administered br our own officials, and at comparatively small expense, has kept out any yellow fever infection although we were more or less in contact with the disease along the western border of the state, and had no assistance whatever from any foreign source. Our health organization is admirable, entirely removed from political influence and under control of those most capable of dealing with such matters.

There should be a revision of our quarantine laws so as to make them more efficient, increase the penalties for violation and prevent improper restrictions upon trade and travel by local communities.

Primary Law.

I earnestly urge the passage of a primary election law under which each voter can express his choice and have it honestly declared and each candidate secure fair and impartial treatment. When nominations are practically equivalent to an election the real contest takes place over them, and the necessity of guarding them from fraud, trades, bribery or other corrupt practices becomes more imperative. A man who sells his vote, and the purchaser, and all who engage in any fraudulent conduct should not only be severely punished but be forever disfranchised. Party primaries under our form of government are the sources of administration, and if these sources are polluted, the poison will flow down the stream, spreading corruption and disaster.

Pensions.

I beg to call your attention to the auditor's report showing the constantly growing number of pensions. I am satisfied that no proper care is had to prevent these rolls from being encumbered with unworthy persons, and when it is considered that every improper claimant reduces the amount coming to those whose gallant conduct and needy condition appeal most strongly to our consideration, it shows the necessity for an efficient revision of this law. It seems to me that when an applicant, after careful examination, has been found worthy to be enrolled, that the expense of further application and examination should be dispensed with.

The Geological Survey.

The Geological Survey has continued its valuable work. The state geologist will shortly issue a map of the Warrior coal fields, based upon the latest and best information concerning this great storehouse of wealth, and will also publish reports on the valuable clay resources and on the flora of the state. These will add much to our knowledge regarding these resources of our state, and be of general interest to all the people. The survey has given much attention to our gold deposits, and I trust we shall soon see good results. It has also made valuable observations, and investigations regarding the water powers and supplies of the state.

Railroads.

The state has made gratifying progress in the construction of railroads. Within the past two years nearly 300 miles, the largest of any state, I believe, in the union, certainly in the south, have been completed; thirty additional miles are now under construction, and information in my possession gives assurance that next year considerable and valuable construction will be done.

Miscellaneous.

Several surety companies have made deposits and are doing business in the state under recent legislation and have proven useful. I think they should be prohibited from removing any suit from the state to federal courts, and legislation should be had making all sureties going on bonds of public officials liable for the entire default of the official, whether existing at the time the bond is given or precedent thereto. Controversies as to liability as between different sets of sureties should be adjusted by the sureties and not the obligee of the bond.

I am inclined to recommend that provision be made that no bill, other than those general in their operation, shall be reported to either house from any committee unless an amount at least sufficient to cover the expense of printing and publishing shall be paid into the treasury. I recommend that the fees paid for commissions be raised to $2.50, and that no official be authorized to act until a commission has been issued him.

I regret greatly the sudden and untimely death of Hon. B. L. Dean, a member of the house from Tallapoosa county, and a citizen of the highest character and standing, whose counsel will be greatly missed. I trust that the Father of all mercies will preserve you all in good health, and so direct your deliberations in the consideration of every measure that the wisest conclusions shall be reached, and I beg to assure you of my earnest and hearty co-operation in every effort to better the condition of our state and to give to our people just, fair and equal laws.

NEW STAR IN MUSICAL WORLD

Lorenzo Perosi, the rising star in the Italian firmament of music, has already done sufficiently well to fix him in his seat of fame forever. Perosi is musical director of the famed Cathedral of St. Mark in Venice, and his compositions have made him the ideal of Italy, especially of the Venetian public. He has written a trilogy of oratories called the "Sacred Trilogy." They are "The Passion of Christ," "The Transfiguration of Jesus Christ" and "The Resurrection of Lazarus." Each oratorio is in two parts, so arranged that the parts may be sung separately. Recordi, the great musical publisher of Italy, has purchased these compositions and has commissioned the composer to write a fourth, to be entitled "The Holy Sepulchre." Perosi's first teacher was his father, Guiseppe Perosi, a choirmaster in Tortona, Piedmont, where Lorenzo was born. He was afterward sent by the patronage of a wealthy Milanese to the conservatory at Milan. He also studied and traveled in Germany. He filled various posts as director in churches until he received his commission at St. Mark's. Although he is but 27 years old, and did so much good work as a musician, he found time to study theology for the priesthood and was ordained in 1893. He has written, besides his grand composition, no less than twelve masses. It is said his recent work has shown the influence of Bach strongly, but does not follow any master.

CRITICAL SITUATION IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Americans Can Do Nothing Under the Rules of War—Verbal Representations Have Been Made to Aguinaldo. Friendly Course Urged.

WASHINGTON.—News of a mixed character came to the navy department Friday from Admiral Dewey touching the situation in the Philippines. The admiral sent two of his warships, the Charleston and Concord, some time ago to the southward from Manila to ascertain whether there was any truth in reports that the insurgents had extended their activities in that direction. He cabled as follows:

"Manila.—Secretary Navy, Washington: Charleston and Concord arrived Friday from Iloilo. Glass reports that the entirety of Panay is in possession of insurgents except Iloilo, which is defended by 800 Spanish troops. All foreign citizens there beg for American protection. The Island of Negros has declared independence and desires American protectorate.

"Dewey."

Glass is the commander of the Charleston. So far nothing has been done by the administration toward curbing the insurgents in their operations, save verbal representations from the American commanders to Aguinaldo, in which it has been pointed out to him that it would be good policy, in view of the probability of the annexation of the islands by the United States to pursue a course that would not be obnoxious to the United States. But the situation is now realized to be critical. So far as the Spaniards are concerned, perhaps they can be left to take care of themselves, but the foreign residents at Iloilo are differently regarded.

The difficulty in the situation is that with the best intention to intervene to protect the Europeans and other foreigners, and to save the city of Iloilo, the second in importance in the Philippine group from looting, the United States forces appear to be estopped under the rules of war from moving from their posities. Such is the construction placed upon the clause in the protocol relating to a supension of hostilities.

BRITISH SHIP LOST.

The Atlanta Goes Down Off the Coast of Oregon—Twenty-seven Lives Lost.

The British ship Atlanta was lost off the coast of Oregon Friday. The vessel left Tacoma, Wash., last Saturday with $65,000 worth of wheat for Delagoa Bay, South Africa. She was in command of Captain Charles McBride, of Moorneck, Scotland. The ship had twenty-seven men, the only names of those on record here being those of the captain and those who joined the vessel at Tacoma as seamen, all of whom were lost but three.

The Atlanta was of only 1,639 tons register. She was built in 1885, owned by N. Hill, of Scotland, and was worth probably $50,000. She was fleet and was built for a troop or passenger vessel, to ply between Great Britain and the British colonies.

LIVE WIRE'S WORK.

A Lodge Initiation May Cost the Candidate His Life.

Dr. William H. Sensabangh, a dentist of Port Byron, a small town just east of Moline, Ill., is in a serious condition as a result of pranks played upon him while being initiated in a fraternal insurance lodge in that village. During the initiatory ceremonies he was blindfolded and given several slight shocks from a live wire. The bandage over his eyes having become loosened he sought to outwit those who were having fun at his expense by locating the wire and attempting to avoid it. One of the initiating team seeing the candidate was about to evade the wire gave him a little shove, which unfortunately proved sufficient to throw him off his balance, and he fell hands down upon the battery itself, receiving a shock which rendered him unconscious.

THE ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Contemplated in a Bill Introduced in the Alabama Legislature.

Senator Abercrombie introduced in the senate Saturday morning the bill recommended by the State Teachers' association. They are to establish a state board of education to consist of five members, to be appointed by the governor, the state superintendent, he to be an ex officio member, with full power to regulate all school; to increase the annual revenue of the public schools of the state, to assess 25 cents on each $100 for school purposes; to make optional the increase of the revenue for public schools, giving counties the power to levy a minimum of 5 cents and a maximum to be fixed by the county commissioners for school purposes; to provide separate school money from all other funds; determining the public school year; organization of the state, the same to be divided into municipal, special and county school districts; regulating the election of county superintendent of education, who is to be selected for four years, and all to be appointed by the county superintendent, regulating the county board of examiners of teachers in each county.

The joint session of the two houses assembled at 12 m. Saturday to count and announce the vote cast for state officers in August, 1898, and the result was proclaimed, all the democratic candidates having a majority.

The vote gave the following totals:

For Governor—Johnson, 113,1

Monday's Session

The general assembly is at last get ting down to business. Today has witnessed more real legislative work than any previous two days. The standing committees of both the sen ate and house have held sessions and a large batch of bills have been pre pared for the second reading when the batch reported favorably today will come up for final passage.

In the house the Mobile bills to permit the city to build new water works and construct sewerage hold the first place on the calendar.

The sessions in both houses today have been very dull. There was no occasion for debate in either house, but some resolutions were presented which will bring forth a display of ora tory at tomorrow's session, if the reso lutions be promptly reported back.
One of these is Mr. Wallace's resolu tion against acquisition of territory by the United States.

There is another resolution of ge neral importance, which is threatened with a stormy reception. This is the Wiley resolution inviting President
McKinley to be the state's guest next month on the occasion of his trip South. The objectionable feature in the resolution, to some of the mem bers, are the high eulogies in the pre amble, which many members think is giving the president undue praise on the conflict of the war with Spain, and more especially the reference made to his part in wiping out all sectional feeling.

The house was opened with eighty-nine members in their seats. A joint resolution from the senate inviting President McKinley to be the state's guest on December 17 was presented.
The resolution was referred to the rules committee. The journal was read and approved. A resolution from the senate was received providing for a joint committee to adopt rules to govern the two bodies. On motion of Mr. Tunstall the rules were suspended, and the resolution was concurred in.

LAWLESS ELEMENT AT WORK.

Bandits Holding Full Sway in Porto Rico.

WASHINGTON.—The cabinet session Friday was devoted to a leading extent to consideration of complaints that have reached the war department alleging that a state of practical anarchy prevails in Porto Rico. These complaints asserted that the lawless element in Porto Rico are committing depredations of the gravest character, and that the seriousness of the situation is increased by reason of the fact that United States troops stationed in the island are likely to have been guilty of gross misconduct.

The most serious allegations are against brigand and lawless elements in the smaller towns away from the coast. It is said that, taking advantage of the unsettled state of the country due to the transfer of the government from Spain to the United States, bands of men have organized for robbery and rapine, burning houses and plantations and levying tribute upon the people wherever possible. In one case it is said that they made a raid on a small town of about 15,000 inhabitants fifteen miles from the nearest troops, and burned and destroyed property to a considerable value.

General Brooke, at San Juan, has been instructed to use the full strength of the military forces at his command for the suppression of the rioting and the restoration of peace and order in the land.

RESCUED AT SEA.

Shipwrecked Mariners at Sea in an Open Boat Two Days.

The British steamer Beconic, which arrived at New York Friday, brought into port eighteen shipwrecked marines, who were taken from the Dutch bark Johanna, which was found in a sinking condition. The Beconic sighted the Johanna flying signals of distress on November 11. On November 9 the Johanna encountered a terrible gale which set in from the northwest, accompanied by enormous seas. The bulwarks and main hatches, and mainmasts were broken and stove in. Captain Mears ordered out the boats and intended to steer for Bermuda. The first boat was dashed to pieces against the side of the vessel. The second boat was successfully launched with the entire crew. The wind in the meantime had increased, the fury of the terrible seas. The small boat had been damaged in the effort to launch it from the wreck, and constant bailing was required to keep it afloat. Under these circumstances eighteen unfortunate seamen spent two days in the vicinity of the Johanna, determined to return to the derelict when the weather subsided. Finally on November 11 the wind and sea went down, and the men clambered on board of the wreck and set distress signals.

ULTIMATUM TO SPANIARDS.

Is Being Prepared With Great Care by the American Commissioners.

PARIS.—The American peace commissioners are engaged in formulating the terms of an important communication to be made to the Spanish commissioners this week.

While the Americans fully appreciate the necessity of making progress, they are also under the necessity of taking great acre in the preparation of what may possibly be the conclusive record of these negotiations. The Spanish commissioners consumed a week in the preparation of the last memorandum, but the Americans will not require so long a time to complete the work in hand, and any delay will ultimately prove to have been advantageous.

Pana in State of Terror.

A Friday's special from Pana, Ill., says: The town has been kept in a state of terror all the afternoon by numerous encounters between negroes and striking miners. Both are heavily armed and use their ammunition freely. Sheriff Sid Watts, who was returning from the Springside mine, where he had been on duty, was shot from ambush. The bullet took effect in his right arm, which had to be amputated. A number of residences have been pierced by bullets, and those who are able to do so have sent their families to the country. The principal streets are patrolled by soldiers. Captain Butler had a long conversation by telephone with Governor Tanner and it is said more troops will be sent here immediately.

OPPOSE ANNEXATION.

Movement at Boston for a Mighty Protest Against the President's Course.

The organizers of the movement against the annexation of the Philippines met in Boston, Mass., Saturday. A constitution was adopted, officers elected, and an address was issued to the people of the United States, urging prompt co-operation in getting signatures to a protest against the annexation of the Philippines. Edward Atkinson presided. Andrew Carnegie sent a check for $1,000 for the use of the movement. Funds have already been subscribed liberally.

Captain-General Blanco received from Paris Sunday a cable authorizing him to draw on Paris for $2,00,0000 gold to be applied in the payment of Spanish troops in Cuba. This amount is in addition to the draft for $250,000 by the Madrid government on London which was sold in Havana last week.

The Spanish authorities are making strenuous efforts to complete the evacuation by the end of the year.

Perry, Ia., sustained a fire loss Sunday night aggregating $250,000. A large portion of the business part of the town is a total loss.

Electrically Charged Body.

Benjamin Berdell, a wandering clock repairer, is death on flies. Three years ago, when at Rahway, N. J., during a storm he was picking cherries, when the tree was struck by lightning. Berdell received a severe shock. It transformed him into an electric man. Anyone who shakes hands with him now receives a severe shock. By pressing the blades of a knife between his thumb and finger during a storm he charges the metal so thoroughly that heavy weights can be lifted. When flies alight upon him they drop dead. When he is in a dark room sparks flash from his flesh and his eyes shine like incandescent lamps. Whenever a storm approaches Berdell becomes highly charged with electricity and it is dangerous to touch him. He says that he feels no inconvenience except that he will not go near a moving locomotive for fear of being drawn against it and killed.—New York Press.

The Reason Why.

A good story is told of an English naval officer, whose ship was stationed off the coast of Ceylon, and who went off for a day's shooting along the coast, accompanied by a native attendant well acquainted with the country. Coming to a particularly inviting river, the officer resolved to have a bath, and asked the native to show him a place where there were no alligators. The native took him to a pool close to the estuary. The officer thoroughly enjoyed his dip, and, while drying himself, he asked his guide why there was never any alligators in that pool. "Because, sar," promptly replied the Cingalese, "they plenty 'fraid of shark."

Creeping Consumption

Do not think for a single moment that consumption will ever strike you a sudden blow. It does not come that way.

It creeps its way along.

First, you think it is a little cold; nothing but a little hacking cough; then a little loss in weight; then a harder cough; then the fever and the night sweats.

The suddenness comes when you have a hemorrhage.

Largest Battleship in the World.

The ram battleship Formidable was launched Friday at Portsmouth, England. She is said to be the largest warship in the world, being of 15,000 tons displacement. She is 400 feet long, has 75 feet beam, and draws 26 feet, 9 inches of water. She cost over £1,000,000 and is estimated to steam eighteen knots.

Eating Snails.

The stories about Frenchmen eating snails are believed by many people to have no foundation in fact, but snails are eaten, and to a very considerable extent, in France. Nearly 100,000 pounds weight of snails are sold daily in the Paris markets to be eaten by dwellers in that city. They are carefully reared for the purpose in extensive snail gardens in the provinces, and fed on aromatic herbs to give them a fine flavor. One such garden in Dijon is said to bring in to its proprietor several thousand francs a year.

Many Swiss cantons also contain large snail gardens, where they are reared with great pains. They are not only regarded as a great delicacy, but are considered very nutritious. Hygienists state that they contain seventeen per cent of nitrogenous matter, and that they are equal to oysters in nutritive properties.

Snails are also extensively used as an article of food in Austria, Spain, Italy and Egypt, and the countries on the African side of the Mediterranean. Indeed, the habit of eating snails as food has existed in various parts of Europe for many centuries.

Protection for Railway.

On the new Russian military railway from Europe to Andijan, on the borders of the Chinese empire, a tree-like shrub called the sasaoul had to be planted all along the line through the desert to prevent the rails being covered by sand. How to Get Strong

A system which has become run down by the trying weather of the past summer is not in a condition to meet the severe winter of this climate and will easily fall a prey to disease unless a proper tonic is used.

Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best medicine in the world for building up and strengthening an enervated system.

Do not confuse these pills with ordinary purgative pills. They do NOT act on the bowels, thereby further weakening the body. They build up the blood and strengthen the nerves.

Major A. C. Bishop, of 215 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich., is a well known civil engineer. He says: "When I had my last spell of sickness and come out of the hospital, was a sorry sight. I could not regain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks. I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I felt better, and knew they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution."—Detroit Free Press.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

It is impossible to promise particular features that will appear in THE AMERICAN MONTHLY during the coming year, for it is, as its name says, "a great monthly newspaper." As such, it publishes an illustrated account of the notable things which make the history of the month, of the political, economic, and literary happenings which are of value to thinking men and women. The department "Progress of the World" is concisely an illustrated story of the month. The "Leading Articles" and information of the current magazines in five languages, the contributed articles furnish the character sketches of the men and women, and give timely discussions by authorities on any question of interest.

The result of this comprehensive effort to edit in one monthly volume all that is needed by intelligent people of "live" interests is best given in the words which the readers of THE AMERICAN MONTHLY use when they write that the REVIEW OF REVIEWS "is indispensable"; "is simply invaluable"; "is a generous library in itself"; "is the best magazine of the world"; "the best means of aid for a busy man"; "the best periodical of the kind we have ever had"; "a triumph of editorial skill"; "the world under a field-glass," etc., etc.

Harry White, grand larceny, case prossed.

Henry Dupree, carrying concealed weapons nolle prossed.

Sam Burrows, burglary, acquitted.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Spain's Only Prize Ship Open Air Spring Horse Show—A New Electrical Grill.

[Special Correspondence.]

Spain captured one American vessel during the war—the bark Saranac. She arrived in New York the other day from Iloilo with a cargo of sugar.

The vessel was seized by the Spanish authorities at that port on April 26, a few days after the declaration of war. The Saranac arrived at Iloilo from Newcastle, N. S. W., with a cargo of coal consigned to British merchants at that port. The Saranac flew the stars and stripes on entering the harbor and was boarded promptly by the Spanish authorities.

When he entered the harbor, Captain Bailey had no idea that there was war between the United States and Spain, and his surprise was extreme. The captain and crew were treated in the most uncivil manner.

As the ship was not anchored properly and drifted, the captain appealed to the officers to anchor her securely. He was told to "shut up his mouth." At another time when he spoke to the authorities of his treatment he was told to shut up. This angered the captain and he answered back. The officer in charge of the gunboats threatened to run a broadside into the bark. The captain, however, had the last word when he yelled over the side of the ship: "You'll have to get my mouth before you can shut it!"

The guard placed on board did much damage to the vessel, cutting away her spars, sails and rigging, damaging the woodwork and tearing up sections of the deck. The Saranac was held for 30 days and then released.

A Spring Horse Show.

Plans for a novel spring horse show, another expression of New York's desire to get out of doors more than it has been able to within recent years, despite the beauties of the spring weather as it appear easy enough to accomplish. With the fairs and tournaments which society is able to enjoy in the autumn during the fall the necessity for out-of-door sports is less urgent then. In the open air games this may be played until late in the season. But there are none of these chances. Horse shows can never be made distinctly popular events, and they are the only ones that can be held out of doors in the spring. The details selected for the new show seem readily accessible, and might gain in attractiveness if held in the spring, when there is less rivalry and the chance to see horses after a winter of inactivity would be appreciated. From a spectacular point of view the show would doubtless be equally advantageous. In the Madison Square Garden fall fashions are for the first time revealed, and the effect of that sight has long been recognized as a factor in the success of the horse show. A spring exhibit of the same character would certainly possess at least the same charm to the public and have the additional merit of being new.

A New Electrical Grill.

There was an electrical beefsteak broiler in a down town restaurant the other day. Professor G. B. Cary, a well known scientist with a gastronomical bent, had invented an electrical grill and brought it to the place to be tested. Several experts in electricity were bidden to be present. These included editors of electrical publications, electrical engineers and ordinary consumers of electricity. The wire and similar circuits. Two metal plates were put between the broiling surfaces, and the guests were told that eight minutes for the steaks and 18 minutes for the chickens, unless the health of the inventor should fail. The new device did its work so far as the cooking was concerned, but the meats appeared as if they had been baked instead of broiled and the tempting brown exterior lacked by coal or gas heat.

Briarfield, Nov. 28, 1898

Editor Banner.—Please allow me space to say a few words in regard to our school at this town. We have a very young but excellent school. Last Friday closed the first term of the second annual session very successfully. The students were thoroughly examined in the studies they had previously gone over, and mane a very good per centage. The faculty consists of a board of well educated and competent teachers who spare no pains in doing all they can to advance their pupils.

Briarfield is a small but picturesque town, being noted for its beautiful natural scenery, fine water and hospitable inhabitants. There are four churches here, so that anyone can visit the church of his choice. Board can be obtained anywhere for seven dollars per month. Everything makes this a very desirable place to live in and a good place for a school.

Jemison.

Wednesday morning, 23 inst., about 3 o'clock, the residence occupied by Mr. Powell, opposite the depot, was discovered to be on fire, and in a short space of time the dwelling house was destroyed. The fire spread to the adjoining storehouse, which was partially occupied by Dr. McNeil with a stock of drugs, and this also succumbed to the devouring element. Another storehouse, recently occupied by Mr. C. W. Reynolds, was involved in the conflagration and was totally destroyed. The amount of damage done was not ascertained, and whether any insurance was carried we have been unable to find out.

Our representative, Mr. L. H. Reynolds, became the happy father of a bouncing boy, recently and is as proud as the people's representative can well be.

Sour Stomach Cure.

A long time I was a great sufferer from Liver and Stomach troubles. I had a dull pain in my left side under my heart. At times my side became swollen and the pain acute. My stomach was always sour and I would vomit every time I eat. My bowels were very irregular, causing me pain and distress. I tried many things without any benefit. I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—D. W. Two Pointed Questions Answered.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it?

Ans.—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best?

If both articles are brought prominently before the public both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and use only the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty put forth with exaggerated claims, but are certain to return to the one remedy that they know to be reliable, and for coughs, colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. An Accomplished Woman.

A London correspondent speaks in high terms of the accomplishments of Mrs. George N. Curzon, wife of the new governor general of India. Mrs. Curzon was before her marriage Miss Mary Leiter of Chicago. When Mr. Bayard was secretary of state under the first Cleveland administration, Miss Bayard gave Sunday evening parties, which were no mean approach to a salon.

Miss Leiter, who in those days was called "the belle of three cities"—

MRS. GEORGE N. CURZON.

New York, Newport and Washington—was usually at these parties, and always had a circle of admirers about her. At one of these parties there were gathered about her four representatives at the capital of four different countries, the subject of conversation being literature. She drifted from one to the other of the four languages—French, Spanish, Italian and German—quoting authors of each nationality with as much facility as if she were speaking her own language all the time.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow. Eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides. No appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying "Electric Bitters" and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them." Only 50 cents per bottle at J. S. Johnson's Drug Store.

Gov. Pingree of Michigan, is quoted as saying that "before engaging in foreign missionary work this government should break up its monopolies at home." The governor's would have more force if he would quit training with the political party that fosters and protects the home monopolies.

"History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authentic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish-American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in tri-colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

SCIENTIFIC SCRAPS.

Fish, as a rule, increase in weight and length every year up to their death.

Silver chloride, as regards its silver value, corresponds to an alloy of 75 per cent. of silver and 25 per cent. of copper.

If the earth were not enveloped with atmosphere, the temperature on the surface would be about 330 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

In building nests birds usually avoid the use of bright-colored materials, which would add to the chances of the enemy in locating them.

By mixing a harmless powder, subnitrate of bismuth, with the food the movements of the stomach can be seen by means of the Roentgen rays.

A French scientist says a caterpillar cannot see more than two-fifths of an inch ahead. The hairs on its body are said to be of as much use as its eyes in letting it know what is going on around.

At Nedunkeni, in the northern province of Ceylon, the abnormal rainfall of 31.72 inches in twenty-four hours was experienced. Nedunkeni, eleven miles down the southern road to Mullaittivu, and 122 feet above sea level, is a small village a little to the east of the dividing ridge of north Central Ceylon.

How Looking Glasses Are Made.

"How is a looking glass made?" was the question recently put to a large manufacturer of mirrors in New York.

"Well" replied the manufacturer, "most of the glass used in this trade is prepared for us at a molding factory, and we merely cut, bevel and silver it in our works. All the bevels are cut in the same way, first with sand and water, then on an emery wheel and afterward put through several processes to bring back the polish.

"Great improvements have been made in this line of business in the past sixteen years. Formerly it took two or three days from the time the work was begun on a mirror before it could be finished. Nowadays we can get the glass in the morning and make it into a looking glass perfectly finished and ready for sale before night. We make all sizes, from the smallest hand glass of 2x4 inches to a mirror 10x20 feet or even larger, and we have a capacity of turning out 3000 feet per day.

"Not many years ago the backs of mirrors were coated with mercury, now sheets of pure silver are used instead. The old looking glass reflected 60 or 65 per cent. of the light that fell upon it, the modern mirror reflects nearly 95 per cent. The mercury looking glass was very liable to rub off; heat and cold also affected it; the quick silver would crack or melt and thus the beauty of the glass would be spoilt. None of these dangers threaten the silvered mirror. Besides mirrors, those engaged in this line of business cut a great deal of beveled glass for doors and windows. In fine buildings this is largely taking the place of stained glass."—Washington Star.

The Western Pistol.

One of the big frontier six-shooters used by the Rough Riders at the charge of San Juan Hill attracts a good deal of attention in the window of an up-town store. It is a type of weapon almost peculiar to the West—single action, 45-calibre, with a barrel eight inches long and a wooden handle. The real cowboy and veteran miner will carry nothing else. Both despise a double-action, self-cocking pistol, and in the "cow country" it is a common thing for ranchmen to take out the triggers of their six shooters and fire them by manipulating the hammer with the thumb. To see an expert do this is to witness a pretty piece of juggling. Another oddity of frontier revolver etiquette is the way the weapon is carried. Many cowboys swing it in a holster on the right hip with the handle pointing outward. It is drawn with a curious circular sweep and comes up cocked and ready for business. More than one "tenderfoot" has bored a hole through himself in attempting to acquire this particular bit of legerdemain.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

American Gold Good Enough.

The effect of the war with Spain is felt in unexpected ways. The other week when the Italian bark New York, laden with stocks, cleared for Sicily at Bangor, Me., the agent spent half a day in going from bank to bank trying to obtain English sovereigns enough to supply the wants of the captain. Having failed to get as many as he desired he went to the captain and began to make an apology, but was cut short by the skipper who said:

"Me no want da Eenglish gold. Da American gold iss good enough, iss much good enough for me. Da war make da American gold much as good as da Eenglish gold."

The agent at once converted the captain's order into United States eagles and half eagles and the captain sailed away happy. Until this season no ship master of any foreign vessel that went to Bangor would accept anything but English money.—New York Sun.

MARINES LANDED IN CHINA.

Captain Wildes of Cruiser Berlin Sends Detachment Ashore.

REQUEST OF THE CHINESE IS UNHEEDED.

If One of the Powers Attempts a Coup Uncle Sam Will Be in the Game.

No Rioting is Yet Reported.

Will Protect Legation.

WASHINGTON.—The United States navy has landed marines in China. A dispatch was received at the navy department Saturday stating that the captain of the Boston had landed his marine guard at Tien Tsin.

It seems that the marines were landed not because of any information of riots or attacks upon American missionaries, but solely to act as a guard for the United States legation at Pekin.

The Boston was dispatched to the mouth of the Pell Ho river several weeks ago at the instance of the United States minister to provide a guard, as the other powers had adopted the same method, and he did not care to be exceptional, without one. The steamer worked her way up the river to her present position. It is believed at the navy department that marines will be sent forward from that point in launches or small river boats.

Capt. Frank Wildes, the commander of the Boston, who reported the landing to the navy department by cable, did not state how many men were in the guard, but the force is not believed to exceed two dozen men.

The presence of these foreign guards is not welcome to the Chinese government. When the landing was first proposed its representative sought to dissuade the United States government from inflicting this humiliation upon it.

The effect was to cause a suspension of the execution of the purpose, but as has been already stated, most of the European legations have provided themselves with guards, and the Chinese having become reconciled to their presence, no longer object in our case.

Advices that reached the state department do not indicate any immediate outbreak in China. But the reactionary policy of the Empress Dowager has caused a very uneasy feeling, and may afford one or more of the European powers, who have been active in eastern affairs, a pretext for making a coup with results affecting the interests of the United States.

6,000 WORKERS OUT.

Cotton Mill Strikers at Augusta Are Beginning to Yield.

The strike among cotton operatives at Augusta, Ga., now affects 6,000 workers. The new scale which the owners seek to enforce and to which the strikers object is based, so the owners say, on the rate of wages paid in South Carolina and North Carolina. This the strikers deny by claiming that the conditions there and in the Carolinas are different. The mill owners are firm in their determination to enforce the cut and declare the old scale will not be paid again. The strikers are beginning to yield. They recognize their situation and know that they have no weapon to fight with. If this is successful it is believed similar reductions will be made in cotton mills in other parts of the south.

OWES OVER A MILLION.

Failure Involving Cattle Interests of the Southwest.

ABILENE, KAN.—A failure involving cattle interests throughout the southwest was precipitated at Abilene, Kan., Friday when an attachment suit for $40,000 was filed against Grant C. Gillet, of Woodbine, by the Gillespie Commission company, of Kansas City. Gillet controls thousands of cattle on the southwestern ranges and his liabilities are believed to be over a million.

A very perceptible earthquake shock was felt at Roanoke, Va., Friday afternoon, lasting about thirty seconds. No serious damage was done. Reports from various parts of southwest Virginia show the tremor to have been very general throughout that region.

A LONG CONFERENCE.

President McKinley and Costa Rica's Chief Executive Closed.

WASHINGTON.—President McKinley had an extended conference with President Iglesias, of Costa Rica Saturday. President Iglesias was accompanied to the White House by Minister Calvo, of Costa Rica, and several of his staff. They were the only ones present at the conference, which lasted two hours, a much longer time than President McKinley usually devotes to a single visitor and was evidently more of a business meeting than a social one.

THE NEWS IN OUR OWN STATE.

ALDRICH WILL CONTEST.

He Will Put Up His Plea As to Dallas County.

Congressman W. F. Aldrich, republican, will contest the seat of Hon. Gaston A. Robbins, democrat, in the Fifty-fifth congress. In an interview Mr. Aldrich said: "I shall contest the election in the Fourth district. Frauds in Dallas county will be the basis. I went to Dallas with a majority of 816. In that county I only received 392 votes, while Robbins is given 2,438. I shall undertake to prove that less votes were counted for me than I received, and that more votes were counted for Robbins than were cast for him. And then I didn't have proper representation at the polls."

Fatal Stabbing Affray.

Robert and Taylor Russell, brothers and prominent and wealthy farmers of Limestone county, became involved in a difficulty at the supper table over the eldest brother's slapping the little child of Robert Russell. From words they came to blows, when Taylor Russell got out his dirk and stabbed his brother several times under the shoulder blade, penetrating and slashing the left lung almost in two. Taylor Russell also received a wound from which he cannot recover.

Large Mortgage Filed.

Perhaps the largest mortgage ever filed in the probate office was recorded at Tuscumbia last week. It was executed by the Northern Alabama railroad, whose line extends from Sheffield to Jasper, to the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York, and attached to the instrument was $849.50 worth of revenue stamps. The mortgage was for $3,000,000, to satisfy the payment of that amount of bonds issued by the Northern Alabama railroad, which mature in 1926.

A horrible murder occurred in Uniontown last week. The covering of an old well was found disturbed. Investigation developed the body of Ed Flanagan in a pool of blood on the dry bottom of the well. Further search developed an ax clotted with blood lying near by and a wheelbarrow on which the body was rolled to within a short distance of the well. A man named Wyly was seen the night before with blood stain on his clothes and is now under surveillance.

Result of an Accident.

The coroner's jury in the case of C. M. Lighter, the railroad man who was found dead in his room in Birmingham, with bruises on his face and body, has decided that Lighter's death was an accident, having been caused by him falling on the stairway while he was going to his room in a drunken state.

Man Found Dead.

G. W. Sutler, aged about 35, who has been employed at the cotton mills, Alabama City, for a brief period, was found dead last Friday near the track of the Attalla & Gadsden dummy line. No marks of violence were discovered on his body, but two empty whisky bottles lying near pointed to the cause of death.

WANT PART OF PHILIPPINES

German Press Charge Americans With Excessive Greed.

THE GOVERNMENT WILL NOT INTERFERE

Without Joint Action by the Powers Quite Antagonistic Towards Control of the Archipelago by the United States.

BERLIN.—The German press this week has busied itself a great deal about the Philippine question and the peace negotiations in Paris, and nearly all the comment has been uncomplimentary to the United States, which is charged with "excessive greed and political indecency in formulating new demands," President McKinley being also accused of "inconsistency" and "lack of backbone," in notwithstanding "the increasing demands of the imperialist party."

A number of the German newspapers have now adopted a strain indicating a desire to obtain a portion of the Spanish Asiatic possessions for Germany.

The Kreuz Zeitung, which has much influence at court and in army circles, says:

"Germany is materially interested in the outcome of the peace negotiations, more particularly with respect to the Sulu archipelago, where Germany and Great Britain possess the same kind of commercial privileges, granted to them by Spain in 1887, in which Bremen and Hamburg are largely interested.

"American annexation of this group, besides being a matter of stratgetic importance, would mean, in view of America's prohibitive tariff policy, the destruction of both the German and British trade there. In short, an understanding with Great Britain for joint action and intervention is absolutely indispensible. The theory of 'an American sea' cannot be accepted by any of the European nations. Mr. Kasson has, therefore, been indulging in day-dreams."

The Deutsch Zeitung, organ of the pan-German party, says:

"It is particularly painful that with the Caroline Islands, to which will probably be added the rest of the islands, a piece of Spanish goods is disposed of to which he had a historical pre-emption claim."

The Deutsch Zeitung concludes with urging the government to seize the occasion to acquire a portion of the Carolines, or at least secure compensation in Samoa, and also obtain guarantees for the future of Germany's commercial interests in the Philippine and Sulu archipelagos. "Guarantees," it says, spitefully, "which will hold water even against American interpretation."

In spite of the newspaper comment, the correspondent of the Associated Press is informed on good authority that Germany still does not contemplate interference, active or otherwise, with the American claims, at least so long as no concerted action is proposed or carried out, jointly, by the European powers.

IN A FEW DAYS

Order Removing Offices From Civil Service Rules Will Be Issued.

The exact date of the issuance of the civil service order of the president has not been fixed, though the president has asked to have the final departmental recommendations submitted at the earliest moment. The indications are that it will be out in a few days. The president has discussed the general scope of the forthcoming exemption with members of the cabinet and others and there have been several consultations of late among departmental officials. The exemptions, it is now understood, in addition to those already mentioned, will include members of the board of pension appeals, to which appeals from the action of the pension bureau first go; law clerks in the general land office, and among other per diem employes in the offices of surveyor-generals. Some officials in the Indian service are said to be slated for exemption and a few officers in the postal service, including cashiers and others in postoffices for whose duties the postmasters are held personally responsible, will be included.

TRAGEDY IN BIRMINGHAM

Robert Warnock, chief deputy under Sheriff Frank P. O'Brien, of Jefferson county, Alabama, was shot and killed by William Golson, a negro, at the latter's wife's house, in Birmingham Sunday afternoon. Warnock had gone to the house to effect the arrest of the murderer, who is wanted in Autauga county on the charge of burglary and grand larceny. Warnock went up to the front door of the house and his deputies went to the rear and when the officer stepped in the door the shooting commenced instantly. The negro fired two shots both of them taking effect one in the arm and the other in the right breast. When the fatal shot was fired Warnock fell backward to the ground and expired in a few minutes. The murderer escaped and at last accounts was still at large.

MANY VESSELS WRECKED.

More Than Seventy Lives Known to Have Been Lost.

A special from Boston says: It is known definitely that more than seventy lives have been lost in the wrecks of tugs, schooners and coal barges during the storm of Saturday night and Sunday morning and if the steamer Portland has also gone down, as now seems possible the list of casualties will rise to 140 with over 100 vessels of all descriptions ashore, two score of them total wrecks and an unknown number probably beneath the waves of Massachusetts bay. There is scarcely a bay, harbor or inlet, from the Penobscot to New London that has not on its shores the bones of some staunch craft, while along Massachusetts bay and especially Boston harbor the beaches are piled high with the wreckage of schooners and coal barges. The record, although hourly lengthened is still incomplete for that ocean graveyard of Cape Cod is still to be heard from.

SENTENCED TO BE SHOT.

Private Lindsey W. Holt, Colored, Will Be Executed.

The First cavalry brigade courtmartial at Huntsville, Monday, for the first time since the war with Spain began, imposed the first death sentence upon a soldier, when Private Lindsey W. Holt, Troop F, Tenth cavalry, was sentenced to death for murder of Private Twisby of the same regiment. The crime was committed one Sunday morning at Montauk Point shortly after the regiment returned from Cuba. The courtmartial directs that Holt shall be shot by the provost guard at such time and place as may be designated hereafter by the commanding general of the cavalry division. Execution of the sentence will be suspended to await the approval of President McKinley.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Walinski, of Henry Ellen, Ala., Stood Too Near a Grate.

Mrs. John W. Waliuski, wife of Mine Foreman Waliuski, was burned to death Sunday at Henry Ellen, Ala. She was standing in front of the grate with her babe in her arms when her clothing caught fire. With rare presence of mind she rushed to the bed and, with a true mother's instinct, laid her helpless babe upon it out of harm's way. She then tried to smother the flames, but failing to do so, attempted to raise the window to call to her husband to come to her assistance. It was at this juncture that Mr. Waliuski, who was near by, chanced to look up, when he rushed to her assistance, but too late to save the unfortunate woman.

NO PROTEST FROM GERMANY.

Official Desire to Counteract Report That They Want the Sulu Islands.

Baron Speck von Sternberg, charge d'affaires of Germany, called at the state department Monday and had a conference with Secretary Hay on current topics, particularly those growing out of the late war, in the course of which Baron Speck took occasion to express the most friendly sentiments on the part of Germany concerning the present status of affairs. The call was chiefly significant as an evidence that German officials desire to counteract the reports that Germany is about to assume an attitude of protest and to lay claim to the Sulu archipelago, which is to be included in the peace negotiations at Paris.

Bill for Constitutional Convention.

Senator Jenkins Monday introduced in the senate a bill providing for a vote in the state at the election in August, 1899, to determine whether the state shall hold a constitutional convention. Secretary Jenkins hopes to be successful in passing the bill through the senate. He has polled that body and claims the chances are in his favor, though the vote will be close. Should the bill first pass the senate it will be sure of a majority vote in the house, unless the present sentiment is changed. The Jenkins bill provides for the holding of the convention in September, 1899, and for the election of members of the convention at the election in August, when voting on the question of convention or no convention.

In the senate the Phœnix club bill was reported back with amendment favorably and placed on the calendar. The amendment makes the club not liable for license when drinks are served with meals. A number of local bills were passed. The inaugural programme was reported and adopted for December 1. The joint committee on recess reported that a recess be taken on December 13 and the Assembly meet again on January 24, which was adopted.

In the house the bill was passed to incorporate Decatur. Bills were introduced: To elect solicitors by people by Mr. Reynolds; for dog tax by Mr. Henry; to increase the Confederate pension tax to ¾ of a mill by Mr. Houston; to amend section 4583 of code to pay state witnesses $1.50 and 5 cents a mile. The bill to have the Mobile liquor license paid in state treasury is being discussed.

THE BATTLESHIP WISCONSIN.

A Sister Ship of the Alabama Is Launched on the Pacific Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Saturday morning at the Union Iron Works another great marine fighting machine was added to the already large fleet of Pacific war vessels. The vessel which slid from the ways was the battleship Wisconsin, the largest of the vessels built for the United States government by the Union Iron Works. The launching of the big vessel was effected without a hitch, and she now rests calmly on the waters of the bay.

For hours the street cars let down their loads of people at the ship yards, and all the available boats on the bay were pressed into service by people anxious to see the baptism of the great vessel. Thousands of people saw the plunge from different points of vantage, and the platform especially set aside for the guests of the Union Iron Works was crowded to its full capacity.

The battleship Wisconsin, designed in the bureau of construction and repair of the navy department, is a sister ship of the Alabama, building at the Cramp's yard in Philadelphia, and also of the Illinois, building at Newport News.

The dimensions of the Wisconsin are as follows: Length of load water line, 368 feet; beam extreme, 72 feet 2½ inches; draft on normal displacement of 11,525 tons, 23 feet 6 inches, maximum displacement, all ammunition and stores on board, 12,325 tons; maximum indicated horse-power (estimated), 10,000; probable speed, 16½ knots. Complement of officers, 40; seamen, marines, etc., 449.

The main battery will consist of four 13-inch breech-loading rifles in Hichborn balanced turrets, oval in shape, and placed in the centre line of the vessel; and fourteen 6-inch rapid-fire guns. The secondary battery will consist of sixteen 6-pounder rapid-fire guns, two Colt guns and two field guns. She will carry four torpedo tubes.

EVACUATION OF CUBA.

Marshal Blanco is No Longer in Command.

HAVANA, Cuba.—Marshal Blanco, at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, formally resigned the office of governor and captain-general of the island of Cuba in favor of Gen. Jiminez Castellanos. The ceremony took place in the throne room of the palace without any further solemnity than the secretary of the government reading the royal decrees on the subject in the presence of the colonial government and Generals Parado, Solano, Ruis and Tejeda.

Preparations for the rapid evacuation of the provinces of Pinar del Rio and Havana are progressing actively.

RACE RIOT AT ANNISTON.

Without Warning a Mob of Black Soldiers Fired On a Provost Guard.

Members of the Third Alabama, the negro regiment, stationed at Anniston, caused the greatest excitement Thursday night that the town has ever known. Shortly after dark Private Gildhart, of Company B, Second Arkansas, while going towards his regimental camp from town, was shot in the head by a negro soldier, who also stabbed him in the back. A little later a member of the Fourth Kentucky was reported to have been shot on Walnut street by negro soldiers, who lay in a gully shooting at the white men who passed. Firing was heard in Liberia, the negro quarter of the city, and a squad of the provost guard went to investigate.

As it turned the corner of Fifteenth and Pine streets a large crowd of negro soldiers without warning opened fire upon the guards with Springfields, the guns in use in the regiment. The guard returned the fire, but had few cartridges and soon had to retreat. Reinforcements and more ammunition were sent for, but when they arrived the negroes had disappeared. The number of negroes in the mob were variously estimated from fifty to two hundred.

The list of casualties resulting from the rioting is as follows: Dead—Corporal James Capeton, colored, Third Alabama. Dangerously wounded—Corporal Smith, colored, Third Alabama; shot through the abdomen. Private Gildhart, Second Arkansas; stabbed in the back with a knife or bayonet, and severely cut in the head. Slightly wounded—Private Echols, colored, Third Alabama; flesh wound in the left shoulder. Sergeant Frank Dodson, Third Tennessee; right arm shattered. Private J. E. Graham, Third Tennessee; flesh wound in the abdomen. Two negro civilians were shot and will probably die.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

Minister Attempts Suicide—Given Up for Dead, but Recovers.

Thursday afternoon Rev. J. H. St. Clair went into a beer garden at Decatur and called for a glass of beer. After drinking it he informed a court bailiff standing by that he was tired of life and that he was going to commit suicide. The men in the garden paid no attention to him, as they knew he had been drinking. About an hour afterward St. Clair was noticed sitting behind the stove gurgling and gasping for breath, by his side being a large pill box labeled "morphine." Physicians were hastily summoned, arriving in a half hour, but when they came they pronounced St. Clair's condition beyond help. In about an hour he was apparently dead, his breathing having ceased and body becoming rigid. A sheet was placed over the body and the coroner ordered a coffin from the county undertaker. Now comes the strange part. About 9 at night St. Clair's wife, to whom he had been married just a week, went to the beer garden and had the body removed. While being taken to her house, St. Clair rose from the shutter on which he was stretched and asked what they were doing for him. This frightened the stretcher carriers, who dropped the stretcher and ran. St. Clair got up and walked to the house. St. Clair is a preacher-railroader, hailing from Fulton or Salem, Mo., having been for some time in the employ of the Louisville & Nashville. The doctors are mystified over St. Clair's strange recovery.

Received a Death Sentence.

At Birmingham the case of Frank Cook, colored, charged with murdering Conductor John Blackburn, went to the jury Wednesday afternoon. The verdict read "guilty," and the penalty imposed was death. John Blackburn, the deceased, was killed at Cain Station, Avondale, by being stabbed through the heart while endeavoring to effect the capture of a negro who was found robbing a store.

Heavy Iron Exportations.

A well-known iron man of Birmingham said Saturday that the sale of Alabama iron in large quanties to foreign countries had become so heavy that it was an old tale. Every day Birmingham iron is being forwarded to New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah and other ports for shipment to Europe and Asia, and despite the interruption from the Spanish war during the summer months the total export movement for the year promises to surpass that of last year. During the past few days three large shipments of export iron have been made through New Orleans to Antwerp and Rotterdam.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: "God's Second Gift"—The World is Too Much With Us—The Better Life and the Advantages of Religion—The Story of Caleb and Othniel.

TEXT: "Thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."—Joshua xv., 19.

The city of Debir was the Boston of antiquity—a great place for brain and books. Caleb wanted it, and he offered his daughter Achsah as a prize to any one who would capture that city. It was a strange thing for Caleb to do, and yet the man who could take the city would have, at any rate, two elements of manhood—bravery and patriotism. Besides, I do not think that Caleb was as foolish in offering his daughter to the conqueror of Debir as thousands in this day who seek alliances for their children with those who have large means without any reference to moral or mental acquirements. Of two evil I would rather measure happiness by the length of the sword than by the length of the pocketbook. In one case there is sure to be one good element of character; in the other there may be none at all. With Caleb's daughter as a prize to fight for, General Othniel rode into the battle. The gates of Debir were thundered into the dust, and the city of books lay at the feet of the conquerors. The work done, Othniel comes back to claim his bride. Having conquered the city, it is no great job for him to conquer the girl's heart, for however faint-hearted a woman herself may be she always loves courage in a man. I never saw an exception to that.

The wedding festivity having gone by, Othniel and Achsah are about to go to their own home. However loudly the cymbals may clash and the laughter ring, parents are always sad when a fondly cherished daughter goes off to stay, and Achsah, the daughter of Caleb, knows that now is the time to ask almost anything she wants of her father. It seems that Caleb, the good old man, had given as a wedding present a piece of land that was mountainous, and, sloping southward toward the deserts of Arabia, swept with some very hot winds. It was called "a south land." But Achsah wants an addition of property; she want a piece of land that is well watered and fertile. Now it is no wonder that Caleb, standing amid the bridal party, his eyes so full of tears because she was going away that that he could hardly see her at all, gives her more than she asks. She said to him: "Thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

The fact is that as Caleb, the father, gave Achsah, the daughter, a south land, so God gives to us His world. I am very thankful He has given it to us. But I am like Achsah in the fact that I am not satisfied with the portion. Trees and flowers and grass and blue skies are very well in their places, but he who has nothing but this world for a portion has no portion at all. It is a mountainous land, sloping off toward the desert of sorrow, swept by fiery siroccos; it is "a south land," a poor portion for any man that tries to put his trust in it. What has been your experience? What has been the experience of every man, of every woman, that has tried this world for a portion? Queen Elizabeth, amid the surroundings of pomp, is unhappy because the painter sketches too minutely the wrinkles on her face, and she indignantly cries out, "You must strike off my likeness without any shadows!" Hogarth, at the very height of his artistic triumph, is stung almost to death with chagrin because the painting he had dedicated to the king does not seem to be acceptable, for George II. cries out: "Who is this Hogarth? Take his trumpery out of my presence."

Brinsley Sheridan thrilled the earth with his eloquence, but had for his last words, "I am absolutely undone." Walter Scott, fumbling around the inkstand, trying to write, says to his daughter: "Oh, take me back to my room! There is no rest for Sir Walter but in the grave!" Stephen Girard, the wealthiest man in his day, or at any rate only second in wealth, says: "I live the life of a galley slave. When I arise in the morning, my one effort is to work so hard that I can sleep when it gets to be night." Charles Lamb, applauded of all the world, in the very midst of his literary triumph says: "Do you remember, Bridget, when we used to laugh from the shilling gallery at the play? There are now no good plays to laugh at from the boxes." But why go so far as that? I need to go no farther than your street to find an illustration of what I am saying.

Pick me out ten successful worldlings—and you know what I mean by thoroughly successful worldlings—pick me out ten successful worldlings and you cannot find more than one that looks happy. Care drags him to business; care drags him back. Take your stand at 2 o'clock at the corner of the streets and see the agonized physiognomies. Your high officials, your bankers, your insurance men, your importers, your wholesalers and your retailers as a class—as a class, are they happy? No. Care dogs their steps, and making no appeal to God for help or comfort many of them are tossed every whither. How has it been with you, my hearer? Are you more contented in the house of fourteen rooms than you were in the two rooms you had in a house when you started? Have you not had more care and worriment since you won that $50,000 than you did before? Some of the poorest men I have ever known have been those of great fortune. A man of small means may be put in great business straits, but the ghastliest of all embarrassments is that of the man who has large estates. The men who commit suicide because of monetary losses are those who cannot bear the burden any more because they have only $50,000 left.

On Bowling Green, New York, there is a house where Talleyrand used to go. He was a favored man. All the world knew him, and he had wealth almost unlimited. Yet at the close of his life he says: "Behold, eighty-three years have passed without any practical result, save fatigue of body and fatigue of mind, great discouragement for the future and great disgust for the past." Oh, my friends, this is a "south land," and it slopes off toward deserts of sorrows, and the prayer which Achsah made to her father Caleb we make this day to our Father God: "Thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

Blessed be God, we have more advantages given us than we can really appreciate! We have spiritual blessings offered us in this world which I shall call the nether springs and glories in the world to come which I shall call the upper springs.

Where shall I find words enough threaded with light to set forth the pleasure of religion. David, unable to describe it in words, played it on a harp. Mrs. Hemans, not finding enough power in prose, sings that praise in a canto. Christopher Wren, unable to describe it in language, sprung it into the arches of St. Paul's. John Bunyan, unable to present it in ordinary phraseology, takes all the fascination of allegory. Handel, with ordinary music unable to reach the height of the theme, rouses it up to an oratorio. Oh, there is no life on earth so happy as a really Christian life! I do not mean a sham Christian life, but a real Christian life. Where there is a thorn there is a whole garland of roses. Where there is one groan there are three doxologies. Where there is one day of cloud there is a whole season of sunshine. Take the humblest Christian man that you know—angels of God canopy him with their white wings; the lightnings of heaven are his armed allies; the Lord is his Shepherd, picking out for him green pastures by still waters. If he walk forth, heaven is his bodyguard. If he lie down to sleep, ladders of light, angel blossoming, are let into his dreams. If he be thirsty, the potentates of heaven are his cupbearers. If he sit down to food, his plain table blooms into the King's banquet. Men say: "Look at that odd fellow with the wornout coat." The angels of God cry "Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates, and let him come in!" Fastidious people cry, "Get off my front steps!" The doorkeepers of heaven cry, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom!" When he comes to die, though he may be carried out in a pine box to that potter's field, to that potter's field the chariots of Christ will come down, and the cavalcade will crowd all the boulevards of heaven.

I bless Christ for the present satisfaction of religion. It makes a man all right with reference to the past; it makes a man all right with reference to the future. Oh, these nether springs of comfort! They are perennial. The foundation of God standeth sure having this seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are His." "The mountains shall depart and the hills be removed, but My kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed, saith the Lord, who hath mercy upon thee." Oh, cluster of diamonds set in burnished gold! Oh, nether springs of comfort bursting through all the valleys of trial and tribulation! When you see, you of the world, what satisfaction there is on earth in religion, do you not thirst after it as the daughter of Caleb thirsted after the water springs? It is no stagnant pond, scummed over with malaria, but springs of water leaping from the Rock of Ages! Take up one cup of that spring water and across the top of the chalice will float the delicate shadows of the heavenly wall, the yellow of jasper; the green of emerald, the blue of sardonyx, the fire of jacinth.

I wish I could make you understand the joy religion is to some of us. It makes a man happy while he lives and glad when he dies. With two feet upon a chair and bursting with dropsies, I heard an old man in the poorhouse cry out, "Bless the Lord, oh, my soul!" I looked around and said, "What has this man got to thank God for?" It makes the lame man leap as a hart, and the dumb sing. They say that the old Puritan religion is a juiceless and joyless religion, but I remember reading of Dr. Goodwin, the celebrated Puritan, who in his last moment said: "Is this dying? Why, my bow abides in strength! I am swallowed up in God!" "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Oh, you who have been trying to satisfy yourselves with the "south land" of this world, do you not feel that you would, this morning, like to have access to the nether springs of spiritual comfort? Would you not like to have Jesus Christ bend over your cradle and bless your table and heal your wounds and strew flowers of consolation all up and down the graves of your dead?

'Tis religion that can give Sweetest pleasures while we live,
'Tis religion can supply
Sweetest comfort when we die.

But I have something better to tell you, suggested by this text. It seems that old Father Caleb on the wedding day of his daughter wanted to make her just as happy as possible. Though Othniel was taking her away and his heart was almost broken because she was going, yet he gives her a "south land;" not only that, but the nether springs; not only that, but the upper springs. O God, my Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast given me a "south land" in this world and the nether springs of spiritual comfort in this world; but, more than all, I thank Thee for the upper springs in heaven!

It is very fortunate that we cannot see heaven until we get into it. O Christian man, if you could see what a place it is we would never get you back again to the office, or store, or shop and the duties you ought to perform would go neglected! I am glad I shall not see that world until I enter it. Suppose we were allowed to go on an excursion into that good land with the idea of returning. When we got there and heard the song and looked at their raptured faces and mingled in the supernal society, we would cry out; "Let us stay! We are coming here anyhow. Why take the trouble of going back again to that old world? We are here now. Let us stay!" And it would take angelic violence to put us out of that world if once we got there, but as people who cannot afford to pay for an entertainment sometimes come around it and look through the door ajar, or through the openings in the fence, so we come and look through the crevices into that good land which God has provided for us. We can just catch a glimpse of it. We come near enough to hear the rumbling of the eternal orchestra, though not near enough to know who blows the cornet or who fingers the harp. My soul spreads out both wings and claps them in triumph at the thought of those upper springs. One of them breaks from beneath the throne. Another breaks forth from beneath the altar of the temple. Another at the door of "the house of many mansions." Upper springs of gladness! Upper springs of light! Upper springs of love! It is no fancy of mine. "The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water."

O Saviour divine, roll in upon our souls one of those anticipated raptures! Pour around the roots of the parched tongue one drop of that liquid life! Toss before our vision those fountains of God, rainbowed with eternal victory! Hear it! They are never sick there; not so much as a headache or twinge rheumatic or thrust neuralgic. The inhabitant never says, "I am sick." They are never tired there. Flight to farthest world is only the play of a holiday. They never sin there. It is as easy for them to be holy as it is for us to sin. They never die there. You might go through all the outskirts of this great city and find not one place where the ground was broken for a grave. The eyesight of the redeemed is never blurred with tears. There is health in every cheek. There is spring in every foot. There is majesty on every brow. There is joy in every heart. There is hosanna on every lip. How they must pity us as they look over and look down and see us and say: "Poor things away down in that world!" And when some Christian is hurled into a fatal accident, they cry: "Good!" He is coming!" And when we stand around the couch of some loved one whose strength is going away and we shake our heads forebodingly they cry: "I'm glad he is worse. He has been down there long enough. There, he is dead! Come home! Come home!" Oh, if we could only get our ideas about that future world untwisted, our thought of transfer from here to there would be as pleasant to us as it was to a little child that was dying. She said: "Papa, when will I go home?" And he said: "To-day, Florence." "To-day? So soon? I am so glad!"

I wish I could stimulate you with these thoughts, O Christian man, to the highest possible exhilaration! The day of your deliverance is coming—is coming, rolling on with the shining wheels of the day, and the jet wheels of the night. Every thump of the heart is only a hammer stroke striking off another chain of clay. Better scour the deck and coil the rope, for harbor is only six miles away. Jesus will come down the Narrows to meet you. "Now is your salvation nearer than when you believed."

Man of the world, will you not to-day make a choice between these two portions, between the "south land" of this world which slopes to the desert, and this glorious land which thy Father offers thee, running with eternal watercourses? Why let your tongue be consumed of thirst when there are the nether springs and the upper springs—comfort here and glory here after?

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 4.

Lesson Text: "The Book of the Law," II Kings xxii., 8-20—Golden Text: Psalms cxix., 2—Commentary on the Lesson by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

8. "I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord." By comparing II Chron. xxxiv., 14, it looks as if it might have been an original copy of the law. Josiah was the last good king of Judah; and he reigned thirty-one years. In the thirteenth year of his reign Jeremiah began to prophesy and continued a prophet of the Lord for forty years (Jer. i., 2, 3). It is written of Josiah in II Kings xxiii., 25, that there was no king either before or after him who like him turned to the Lord with all his heart and soul and might; Hezekiah excelled all others in his trust in the Lord (II Kings xviii., 5). Josiah began to reign at the age of eight years. When he was sixteen, he began to seek God. When he was twenty, he began to cleanse the land of idols. When he was twenty-six, he repaired and cleansed the temple, and kept the greatest passover that had been kept since the days of Samuel (II Chron. xxxiv., 3, 8; xxxv., 18, 19). It was while they were working at the temple that they found this book of the law.

9. Shaphan the scribe reported to the king that the money which had been gathered in the house of the Lord had been delivered to the overseers of the work, and it is said that they were so faithful that no reckoning was made with them of the money (verses 4-7). We do not read of any lack of funds for the work, for the blessing of Elshaddai (the mighty God who is all sufficient) was upon His faithful people.

10, 11. Shaphan told the king of the book that had been found, and read it to him, and when he heard it he rent his clothes. Josiah was possessed of a poor and contrite spirit and trembled at God's word (Isa. lxvi., 2; lvii., 15). It is written in Ex. ix., 4, "Then were assembled every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel because of the transgression." Many are indifferent to the word of God and never read it or hear it read. Many who read it do not give heed to it. Many, even of those who are supposed to be preachers of the word, dishonor it by doubting it and questioning it, while but few comparatively tremble at it like Josiah.

12, 13. "Go ye, inquire of the Lord for me and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found." The priest and scribe and others were thus commissioned by the king. It may have been such passages as Deut. xxviii., 15-37; Lev. xxvi., 14-46, that so stirred Josiah, but whatever portions specially effected him he evidently believed what many professing Christians do not today believe, that there is such a thing as the wrath of God and that it is a very serious matter not to believe and obey the words of the Lord. To set one's heart upon and observe to do the words of the law was said to be their life, but if one would not hearken God had said that He would require it of him (Deut. xxxii., 46, 47; xviii., 19). A common form of unbelief now is that God is too good to punish anyone and that there is no place of fire and brimstone either for the devil or his followers.

14. "They went to Huldah the prophetess who dwelt in Jerusalem, and they communed with her." So there were at other times a Deborah and an Anna who knew the Lord better than others (Judg. iv., 4; Luke ii., 36). God has His hidden ones to whom He reveals Himself and whom He uses to instruct others when His time comes. It may be a Joseph in a prison, or a Daniel who has been crowded out by a younger and more progressive party, an Elijah at some cherith, or a Stephen or a Philip ready for any manner of service. Wherever you are be sure that you are learning to know God, for in due time He will call you.

15. "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me." She had no words of her own for them, no opinions or suggessions, no words of peaceful flattery, but only a faithful message from the Lord, regardless of what they might think of it or of her. When God has a messenger whom He can use, He always gives a message. He said to Moses, "I will be with thy mouth and teach thee what thou shalt say."

16. "Behold I will bring evil upon this place—all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read." Every purpose of the Lord shall be performed, for hath He said and shall He not do it? Or hath He spoken and shall He not make it good? (Jer. li., 29; Num. xxiii., 19). All that God purposes to do is as good as done, for He is able to carry out all His plans; there is nothing too hard or wonderful for Him. He cannot err, neither can He fail nor be discouraged. He did not fail to lay upon His dear Son all our sins. He will not fail to let His wrath fall upon all who despise His Son and His love.

17. "My wrath shall be kindled against this place and shall not be quenched." This because they forsook God and worshiped the works of their own hands. They forsook the fountain of living water and made themselves cisterns which could hold no water (Jer. ii., 13). We think it strange that Israel could possibly turn from the living God to worship idols of wood and stone. Yet in the so-called service of God among us there is a great turning from the simple worship of God in spirit and truth to that which is possibly worse than the idols of Israel.

18, 19. "Because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the Lord, when thou heardest what I spake." Although wrath would surely fall upon the nation, yet upon Josiah and such as humbled themselves before God there would be mercy. At one time the Lord said that though Noah, Daniel and Job were in the city, they would deliver but their own souls by their righteousness. Again He said that, though Moses and Samuel stood before Him, His mind could not be toward Israel (Ezek. xiv., 14; Jer. xv., 1). There came a time when all that certain righteous ones could do was to sigh and cry because of the sins which they loathed, but could not prevent. On them God set His mark of approval (Ezek. ix., 4). We cannot rectify the wrong things that are all about us, we cannot bring righteousness everywhere to be manifested, but we can, each one for himself and herself, be right with God through Jesus Christ our Lord, and He will then use us to bless others as far as He can, and it shall be well with us.

20. "Thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place." When the time comes for us to be called out of these mortal bodies, we ourselves are instantly in glory (Phil. i., 21, 23; II Cor. v., 8), but our bodies rest in peace and under His care whose temples they were until the resurrection.—Lesson Helper.

Temperance Notes.

Gov. St. John has announced that he will support Peffer, the prohibition candidate for governor of Kansas.

Edwin C. Woolley, son of John G. Woolley, has been nominated for representative in the legislature, by the Christian Endeavor Union.

During the last week before the vote on the Canadian plebiscite, at least 2,000 prohibition meetings were held every night throughout the Dominion.

The temperance women of Anderson, Ind., are credited with having completely demolished a saloon which was kept open on Sundays and after hours in defiance of the law.

THE BANNER,
Clanton, Ala.

VERY seldom THE BANNER calls upon its subscribers to come forward and pay up, and we should not be doing so now unless it were for the calling off of the second week of court. It is not the business of a newspaper to be dunning its subscribers week after week through its columns; when a subscriber is over-due we privately notify him, and unless he pays up we are reluctantly compelled to drop him from our list. This is business. But the calling off of the second week of court places us in an embarrissing position. Nearly all jurors, and a great number of others who would have attended the second week of court, would have called in at THE BANNER office and settled up their subscription for another year. We must appeal to them not to allow their time to pass by, but to forward their subscription at the earliest opportunity, and in order to meet them half way we authorize our subscribers to deduct the amount of a post-office money order or an express order from the amount due us and send us the balance. If you are due THE BANNER one dollar, a money order will not cost you but five cents; send us an order for ninety-five cents and we will credit you for a year's subscription. Please remember you are getting an eight page paper with all the news every week in the year. It costs cash, and a good deal of it too, to get this paper to you every week, and it needs every subscription as it falls due to enable us to send it to you. Our friends will kindly make a note of this and forward their subscriptions at the earliest opportunity.

CHILTON county is to be congratulated upon its record for freedom from crime and litigation. It speaks well for a community of 20,000 persons when its semi-annual circuit court has so little civil and criminal business to attend to that it can be easily accomplished in five days. Such a record as this shows the people are contented with their neighbors; they are not falling out one with the other; they do not get to shooting or stabbing each other on account of some difference of opinion; each one recognizes the other's right to differ with him religiously and politically. There is no wrangling among neighbors leading to costly litigation. In politics, where the elections are honest and fair, as they are in Chilton county, the best man wins, and it is the choice of a majority of the people who fills the offices to which they are elected. It is this very fact, last mentioned, that tells the whole tale. Get the people satified politically and they are easily contented. Let the majority elect any man to office, and the minority acquiesces with a good grace, and are thoroughly content. This is what accounts for our Circuit Court being able to get through with all its work in five days instead of two weeks. This is what accounts for our people having no costly litigation. This is what accounts for our county being free from crime. This is what accounts for our rapid increas of population. This is what accounts for our prosperity, espicially 4 cents cotton. So long as we keep our politics free from the dirt which besmirches our sister county of Dallas, just so long will our circuit court have little or no business to attend to, and our county treasury will be in a flourishing condition. Chilton county leads the whole State, and sets an example which other counties should profit by.

THE official figures of the State election in August are particularly interesting to Chilton county from the fact that our county representative on the State ticket, Alex G. Dake, for the office of State Auditor, received a greater majority of votes over his Democratic opponent, W. S. White, than did any other of the Populist candidates. The official returns give Johnston a majority of 61,269 over Deans, McDavid a majority of 60,956 over Maxwell; Ellis a majority of 61,000 over Killebrew; Brown a majority 60,435 over Whitehead; and White a majority of 58,500 over Dake. Although Brother Dake, like the rest of his Populist nominess didn't get "thar," he has the satisfaction of knowing that it took harder work on the part of his Democratic opponent to beat him than was required of any other candidate before the people. To put it in another way, Dake received 2769 more votes that Deans, 2456 more votes than Maxwell, 1500 more votes than Killebrew, and 1935 more votes than Whitehead.

ALABAMA is popularly supposed to be a Democratic State, and the people rule. Possibly it is so. But every time the Legislature meets some unfortunate county or another is discovered to be by some smart Aleck incapable of attending to its own affairs and that it becomes necessary for the Governor to exercise his vast intellect and appoint a board of revenue to supercede the county commissioners elected by the people. This is too great a strain upon the Governor. There is a limit to even a governor's powers of endurance, and it is too much to expect of him that he can appoint for any county a board of revenue, when it is beyond the capabilities and intelligence of the voters of that county to elect a board of county commissioners. It is not that we doubt the ability of the Governor to appoint even a peace commission, but with all due deference we believe in the ability of a county to elect its own officers without the aid of the Governor or any other individual. Two years ago a board of revenue was mooted for Chilton county, but it fell flat, now a board of revenue appointed by the Governor is attempted for Jefferson county. We have no especial call to look after Jefferson, but we do believe in the democratic principle of the people electing their own officials without the aid of the Governor.

Pains in the chest when a person has a cold indicate a tendency toward pneumonia. A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the chest over the seat of pain will promptly relieve the pain and prevent the threatened attack of pneumonia. This same treatment will cure a lame back in a few hours. Sold by J. S. Jonnson jr.

A Doctor Gives What He Calls Cold Facts About Smoking.

"I don't like to upset a cherished tradition," said a doctor who is himself a devotee of the weed, "but the talk one hears of nicotine saturating the systems of smokers is mostly rot. Nicotine is a deadly poison. One drop of it will make a good sized mastiff turn up his toes if injected subcutaneously, and it would take precious little of it to kill a man. The truth is that very little is absorbed, even by the most confirmed smokers. Now and then you read of men who die from excessive tobacco using and are found on autopsy to be literally reeking with nicotine. All rubbish. Nothing of the kind ever happened.

"Again, it's a favorite experiment to blow smoke through a handkerchief, and the stain that is produced is popularly supposed to be made by nicotine. It is really oil of tobacco, which is a horse of quite a different color. No, the chief harm done by smoking is the stimulus which it gives to the heart. This is particularly true of cigarette smoking, where 'inhaling' is nearly always practiced.

"Each time the smoke is inhaled it acts as a slight spur to the heart, and, needless to say, there is sure to be a reaction. If the smoker is in good general health, he will probably never feel it, but if he isn't there will be periods of profound depression, and, not knowing the cause, he is apt to try to brace up on a drink, which makes matters just that much worse. If he has organic heart trouble—valvular weakness, I mean—it's quite possible that he will tumble over some day and put his angel plumage on. Those are the cold facts about smoking—none other are genuine."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Political Pointers.

Peoples Party Press Bureau
St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 30, 1898

The most surprising news of the season is the report that Andrew Carnegie, the steel Baron and one of the high priests of protection, is opposed to the expansion policy of the McKinley administration. Following a recent visit to the White House Mr. Carnegie said: "No nation is good enough to govern another nation and no man is good enough to govern another man. If the United States sends soldiers to shoot down the natives of the Philippine Islands, I trust the natives will shoot them." Ardrew must have changed his opinions since the massacre of workingmen at his Homestead Works, by hired Pinkertons, several years ago.

General Longstreet, United States Commissioner of Railroads, in his annual report to the President and Congress, recently issued, recommends the building of a double track railroad from St. Louis or Kansas City to San Diego, Cal., if some independent line now in operation cannot be purchased. This report so closely following the sale of the Union Pacific system to a syndicate of eastern capitalists, has a strong sound; however, it is significant of a growing public sentiment in favor of government ownership.

Samuel Gompers, President of the National Federation of Labor, held a conference with President McKinley recently, for the purpose of trying to interest the President in the eight-hour labor law; the Lodge Bill, preventing the immigration of foreigners unable to read and write, and the Convict Labor bill prohibiting the transportation of convict labor from one state to another. It is improbable that Mr. Gompers induced the President to refer to these matters in the forthcoming message to congress.

Wharton Barker of Philadelphia, Ignatius Donnelly's running mate for the presidency on the "sooner" ticket, devotes several pages in his newspaper—the American—to election lessons. His elucidations of the "whyness of the wherefores" is about as clear as mud. What Mr. Barker doesn't know about political reform movements would make a fair-sized book, but then he has only been out of Mark Hanna's party a few months.

Ignatius Donnelly, the mid-road candidate for Vice-President, is rejoicing over the Republican victory in the late election and devoting much space in his newspaper to abuse of Senators Allen and Butler, Jerry Simpson, General Weaver and others who were doing valiant service in the reform cause, while Mr. Donnelly was wallowing in Republican mire, to which he seems to have returned.

John D. Rockefeller, President of the Standard Oil Company, against whom suit was begun at Tarrytown, N. Y., over two years ago, to enforce the collection of taxes levied on his palatial home, has defeated the collectors in the courts and succeeded in having his tax reduced nearly two thirds. It will now be in order for "honest John" to endow another college or found a new library.

The organization of new Trusts and consolidation of old ones continues so rapidly that even the daily press can hardly find space to chronicle all of them. It must be evident to the most indifferent that the present so-called anti-trust laws should be enforced or repealed altogether. The trust question promises to figure very largely in future campaigns.

The discovery of another mountain of gold in British Columbia, by the wife of a Wall street operator, has just been reported. It sounds too much like a "pipe dream" to cause much excitement in the financial world; however, it is noticeable that the money changers are pinning their faith to National Bank notes more and more each day.

John W. Parsons, the new Grand Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, is a native of New York. He has been quite active in the interest of labor for many years and was at one time editor of the Journal of the Knights of Labor, published in the interest of the organization, at Washington, D. C.

The Republican press is already beginning to prepare the minds of the people for the huge appropriations that will be made by the next congress. By raising the cry of patriotism, the G. O. P. leaders are going to try and delude the voters into the belief that Uncle Sam has "money to burn."

The ship builder's trust is one of the latest to organize, with a view of putting up price on the government. The Secretary of the Navy has served notice on the builders that contracts will be annulled unless they come to terms.

One of the first announcements made by Governor-elect Roosevelt of New York, is that the labor laws of that state will be faithfully executed during his term of office. This is very important if true. A. R.

Remarkable Recene.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption, and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr, King's New Discovery for Consumption, she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Dr. Johnson's Drug Store. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00, Danger In Coasting.

Ordinarily there is no more danger in coasting on a well groomed bicycle than in pedaling along a piece of smooth, level road, provided always that the bicycle is equipped with a brake. But occasionally even the most circumspect rider is confronted with an unexpected condition while coasting, which puts his neck in jeopardy. An unobserved stone in the road, for instance, is apt to upset his best calculations. Such an obstacle came near to finishing an expert rider and his wheel on a coast down one of the popular Long Island roads. He was talking with a companion, when his front wheel was twisted suddenly almost to right angles by a piece of rock projecting from the roadbed. As the wheel swung over his right foot, which was placed carelessly on the coaster, became involved with the spokes, and instantly machine and rider lay in a confused heap on the ground.—New York Press.

The sooner a cough or cold is cured without harm to the sufferer the better. Lingering colds are dangerous. Hacking cough is distressing. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures it. Why suffer when such a cough cure is within reach? It is pleasant to the taste. J. M. Stanfield.

says the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture in an editorial about No-To-Bac, the famous tobacco-habit cure. "Saved Her Life."

MRS. JOHN WALLET, of Jefferson, Wis., than whom none is more highly esteemed or widely known, writes. "In 1890 I had a severe attack of LaGrippe and at the end of four months, in spite of all physicians, friends and good nursing could do, my lungs heart and nervous system were so completely wrecked, my life was despaired of, my friends giving me up. I could only sleep by the use of opiates. My lungs and heart pained me terribly and my cough was most aggravating. I could not lie in one position but a short time and not on my left side at all. My husband brought me Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure and I began taking them. When I had taken a half bottle of each I was much better and continuing persistently I took about a dozen bottles and was completely restored to health to the surprise of all."

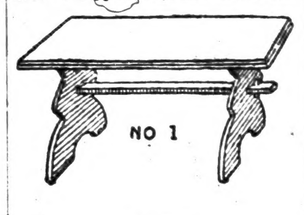
For an Amateur Carpenter.

The honesty of handmade furniture is always attractive, particularly if it is made without glue in the good, old fashioned style, with wooden bolts to hold the supports together. The accompanying design for a bench is artistic in its simplicity and might easily be copied by any amateur carpenter. The ends are cut in a pattern out of a thick board, as in Fig. 2, and are held together by a beveled bar, which, passing through the supports, is firmly held in place by wooden pins, as shown in Fig. 1. A simple contrivance, but nothing could be stronger.—New York Tribune.



A SIMPLY MADE BENCH.

Soup Maigre.

The expression "soup maigre" means a soup with meat stock, the basis being milk, or, better still, cream and butter, and this basis being built upon by vegetables or fish. These "soups without stock" are the favorite Lenten soups, and they are also used in the summer, because they are not heating to the blood, like the soups made with a heavy beef or mutton stock, and which for that very reason are needful in the winter, and yet are very nourishing. These soups are easily made, some of them very quickly, and are what I have heard housekeepers call "emergency soups"—that is, soups that can be made in from ten minutes to half an hour if one has sudden company arrive and needs something to piece out the family dinner. Soups maigre are made savory by the judicious addition of seasonings. If any of you were to ask me what I considered the secret of good cooking, I should say, "Seasoning first, seasoning last and seasoning all the time."—Sallie Joy White in Woman's Home Companion.

"Scot Free."

Scot is the equivalent of the Anglo-Saxon word "sceat," meaning taxation, therefore "scot free" originally meant "free from the payment of taxes," and now it has become a general expression for freedom from anything.

It is only imperfection that complains of what is imperfect. The more perfect we are the more gentle and quiet we become toward the defects of others.—Fenelon.

WAR RESOURCES OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

A Struggle Between Them Would Be a Titanic Affair.

It looks very much as if the war cloud which has hung over Europe for years is about to burst.

France and England are old enemies.

And while the English affect to believe that the French are afraid of them, there is nothing in the French character or in history to substantiate the delusion.

The truth is few Englishmen understand the French.

The French have great vanity. They think that they can whip anybody, and VICE-ADMIRAL SIR HENRY F. STEPHENSON, K. C. B., COMMANDER OF BRITISH CHANNEL SQUADRON.

(On this fleet, the most powerful ever organized under one command, will devolve the duty of bearing the brunt of any fighting.)

their record shows that they have never been afraid to try it.

This idea that France is afraid of England or any other nation is tommy-rot.

In the many conflicts between France and England history shows that success has not always rested with the British army. True, Marlborough and Wellington were successful, but on many occasions the British lion has gone down before the eagles of France.

England had her Wellington, but France produced a Napoleon. Wellington had all Europe at his back, while Napoleon had only the French. Still history does not record that Wellington had a very easy time.

The fighting force of the two nations is of prime interest just now.

They are not so unevenly matched, after all.

France has the stronger army—England the stronger navy. One month ago the English Weekly said, "The army of France is to-day among the most magnificent the world has ever known," and the Weekly added, "The nation that underrates her in time of war will as certainly rue it, for whenever her strength has had occasion to go forth, nothing appeared that might tend to show a shadow weaker than her fellow Powers."

These remarks were made by the British paper before there was a probability of war between the two nations.

On a peace footing the army of France is more than twice as great as that of Great Britain.

On a war footing France would have just 7½ times as many soldiers as England.

Now, on a war footing France would have the advantage, because practically all of her citizens are soldiers. England has nothing of this and would have to go to work to make soldiers out of raw recruits.

On the sea, however, Great Britain shows to much better advantage.

The United Kingdom is the first naval Power of the world.

But France is the second.

And a good second at that.

They are not so wide apart on the water as people might imagine. Great Britain has 587 ships and France has 437.

But the French do not fight as well on the sea as the English. England has always defeated France on the ocean, and the victories of Nelson were not exceptional. Even Napoleon could do nothing with his navy. True, there are no Napoleons these days, but the superiority of the Anglo-Saxon has been shown on the sea. Great Britain has always won her naval wars—except when tackling the United States.

After all this has been said it remains to be noted that England's navy is needed to protect her extensive coast line and her vast commerce.

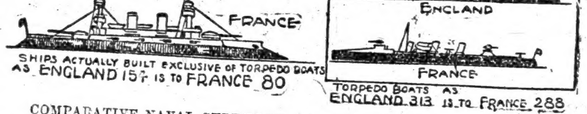
The French ships would destroy whole hecatombs of English property and capture a large number of prizes. They would ruin, for the time, England's immense carrying trade.

Now as for the sinews of war. Both nations are enormously wealthy. Mulhall gives estimates of the wealth of the nations for 1895. He puts the wealth of Great Britain at $59,020,000,000 and that of France at $48,450,000,000, the former nation being about twenty-five per cent. richer.

In all his statistical comparisons Mulhall makes much of what he calls energy—which means the horse, steam, and man power of nations. In this great Britain leads with 61,410,000,000 of foot tons daily, against 32,460,000,000 foot tons for France.

An important point in a war between the two countries would be the question of food supply. In this France is at a great advantage. Great Britain produces $1,215,000,000 worth of food a year and consumes $1,905,000,000. France produces $1,590,000,000 worth of food and consumes $1,700,000,000. From this it is evident that France is able to feed itself, while more than one-third of the food eaten by the British must come from abroad. The question of food supply in England would be important in time of war. It is one that has caused much worriment to British statesmen who have not solved the problem. In a war with a nation with such a navy as France has it would be difficult to import food. The prices would advance enormously, and there would be much suffering among those at home.

These discussions are problematical. Yet in the tables Great Britain is shown to better prepared for war, and no American can doubt that ultimately Great Britain would win. The friendly neutrality of Great Britain during our war with Spain might be followed by some such policy on our part, while France's unfriendliness would prevent sympathy with her. Yet it is certain that the fear of war would not influence France much except as it might give Germany a chance. And if war should come, it would be long and bloody, and it might be years before the issue will be decided. France and England fought one war that lasted more than one hundred years.



COMPARATIVE NAVAL STRENGTH OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

Here's a New Slang Word.

Only the native Kanaka speaks Hawaiian, and from the little I heard of it it is remarkably sweet, but there is no doubt that it will add one word to our slang vocabulary. Every soldier who leaves the port carries it away, and somehow it sticks to one's mind. It is "welakahoa" (pronounced willy-ka-how-a).

It means, in Hawaiian, "Strike while the iron is hot." It took the fancy of the people who came to Honolulu long ago to grow up with the country, and is now a regular term, meaning "That's all right," or, if in speaking of some work being accomplished, "That's done," until now it has become the expression among the people for anything they enjoy.

The nearest thing in American slang that I can thing of is: "That's out of sight," or "That's bully." Anyhow, whenever we want to express delight or appreciation of anything we simply say, "welakahoa." I predict for it a vogue in America. —Captain P. B. Strong, in Leslie's Weekly.

Chinese Ethics.

A Chinese phrase, for which we shall hardly find an exact equivalent in the English language, will help us to separate truth from error—or at least the probable from the unlikely—when we read such despatches as those recently published in regard to the flight, assassination, or suicide of the Chinese Emperor. The phrase may be literally translated, "to save his face." Any high official of the Empire may apply it to himself in certain contingences, and may think that he defends his personal credit and that of his office by committing suicide when threatened with removal. In the case of the Emperor his sense of propriety and the rule of etiquette would leave him no choice. If his successor has been chosen, or it becomes quite certain that a successor is to be appointed immediately, he must "save his imperial face." It will not be necessary to murder him. —Harper's Weekly.

JAMESTOWN'S HISTORIC TOWER.

A Shrine For Churchmen.

On a lonely little island in one of the broad stretches of water where the James River, sweeping through the tidewater region of Virginia reaches out for the sea, a crumbling tower of brick stands as a monument to the establishment of the Protestant religion in America. It marks the spot also where the first English settlement was located and where thousands of men, women and children, pioneers in the cause of religion and humanity, found untimely deaths from famine, disease and massacre.

RUINS OF THE FIRST ENGLISH CHURCH IN AMERICA, JAMESTOWN, VA.

The tower is all that is left of the first English church, erected in 1610 by Lord Delaware, "wherein should be conducted Christian worship in accordance with the rites of the Church of England." To-day the Episcopal Church of the United States, once the humble offshoot, but now the august sister of that powerful ecclesiastical body, holds the ivy clad ruin in affectionate regard as the cradle of its infancy, and during the recent triennial convention of that body in Washington three hundred dignitaries of the church made a pilgrimage of two hundred miles to visit it.

Almost as desolate as when the first Englishmen set foot upon it is the little island to-day and its surroundings. Its surface is grown up in trees and underbrush, with only a cleared field in the centre, while one little cottage nestling behind an ancient earthwork is the only habitation of man upon it. Shoreward, in every direction, it is girt with forests, for civilization retreated from that neighborhood years ago, and the rank vegetation of the alluvial soil has made haste to cover the retreat.

Those who have taken the trouble to investigate the records of the early days find a great deal of material dealing with the Jamestown colony and the religious feature of its establishment. There is even a description of the church, of which this tower now alone remains intact.

The first Protestant divine to preach on American soil was the Rev. Robert Hunt. He accompanied Captain Newport on a voyage of the colonists in the three ships, the Susan Constant, the Godspeed, and the Discovery. They landed at Jamestown about the middle of May, 1607, and their first act upon going ashore was to hold religious services. They hung an old sail from the branches, and with a pulpit formed of a bar of wood nailed to two trees the services proceeded. Dr. Hunt was described by John Smith as a wise man in council, of great courage and high character, and Smith gave him credit for many benefits of harmony enjoyed by the colonists during his life.

In the church erected upon the island Pocahontas, the Indian maiden who saved John Smith's life, was baptized, and there she was married to Rolfe, the Englishman. Their descendants are found in Virginia to this day. The first legislative body of Englishmen which ever met in America assembled in the church to legislate for the little colony, and this was a year and a half before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth.

Jamestown settlement has long ago disappeared, and nothing else thereabouts shows the hand of man except the cottage, the field of the tower's keeper and the wave-washed steamboat wharf putting out into the James. On a table by the tower the recent pilgrims from Washington spread the ancient silver cup and plate from which the first communion service was served in America according to Protestant rites. Bishop Randolph of Southern Virginia lead the service, and Dr. McKim of Washington, D. C., made the historical address.

"This spot ought to be to every American holy ground," said Dr. McKim, "for here, 291 years ago, was planted by the right hand of the Lord our God a vine of civilization, liberty and religion which has spread over this whole land.

"If you seek the beginnings of Anglo-Saxon dominion on this Western continent they are here. If you would seek the seed plot of representative free government in America it is here. If you would discover the earliest spring and source of American Christianity it is here."

Pyramid Built by a Blind Man.

A great curiosity and something of great interest to veterans is the historical pyramid owned and built by W. H. Sallada, of Los Angeles, Cal., who lost both eyes in the late war. The pyramid is about seven feet high and two feet wide at the base. Each side of the exterior is completely covered with relics of all kinds, such as swords, pistols, cannon balls, pieces of famous war vessels, flags, and each relic has a history of its own, which is willingly told to you by Mr. Sallada, who, though unable to see, knows instantly by touch which article you desire information about. The interior is composed of six revolving shelves containing miniature ships, forts and soldiers. —San Francisco Chronicle.

A Novelty in Polar Exploration.

One of the most striking innovations that have been made by Walter Wellman in preparing for his trip to the North Pole is his unique dog sleigh. Dogs are the motive power always used in arctic expeditions. When eight or ten dogs were hitched to one sledge some of the dogs would shirk their work. Wellman has built a number of small sledges. Each is of tube-like construction of tinned copper, with runners on its two sides, and so shapped that if it turns over it always comes down on one or the other pair of runners. Mr. Wellman will have fifty of these sledges to each of which a dog will be attached. He will take advantage of that trait of dog nature which makes him reluctant to be left behind. He wants to keep up with the procession, but to do so he must work hard. When the food stored in one of the sledges is needed it is ripped open like a tin can and thrown away. The dog which has drawn it, being no longer needed, is at once converted into food for his fellows.

ing out at the bottom. The pointed flounce, as shown in the accompanying design, is very popular, but the dressmakers advise flat trimmings that do not destroy the contour of the figure. Embroideries and novel braidings will be much used. The panel skirt will be chosen by those who wish something distinctive. The panel is usually the front breadth, narrow at the top and widening out toward the hem.

Among the new methods for achieving the flare at the bottom is plaiting the lower fulness separately around the bottom of the upper skirt. The effect of one skirt draped above another so as to show the under one only in part by raising it an inch or two all round, and at one side raising the drapery after the Greek manner, or opening the sides, to show the under petticoat, are all charming models, which show off two distinct shades of one fabric admirably, the under petticoat always being of the lighter shade.

Polonaise motifs will abound in trimmings, and enter into separate parts of a skirt by the addition of a contrasting material to the polonaise forming the length and fulness of the drapery. There is no good reason why the old style of double skirt should not appear later, since the way has been so well paved by it, unless the slenderness now required for the upper part of the figure remains as fixed as it now is.

A Charming Waist.

Fancy ribbed poplin in willow green and gray is the material chosen for the charming waist that matches the skirt, shown by May Manton in the large engraving. The full front, yoke, collar and revers are of silver-gray satin, the trimming being of open bands of insertion, under which willow-green ribbon is placed. Silver passementerie studded with small mock emeralds is used to decorate the low-cut neck extending to the revers in front, the wrists and lower edge of basque waists. The waist is arranged over fitted linings that close in centre front. The yoke with full vest attached closes at the left shoulder, or the fulness may be sewed to the left front and close invisibly in centre, while the yoke closes over the gathers at top edge. The fronts, shaped with single bust darts, are laid in small side and box pleats at the shoulders that taper to the lower edge, the prettily pointed revers being joined to the front edges from the yoke down. Single bust darts cause a smooth adjustment at the sides and a very slight pouch effect is caused by the fulness in front.

The seamless back is arranged over regular back and side back forms, small overlapping pleats in centre adjusting the fulness at the lower edge. Smooth under-arm gores join fronts to back, and the lower edge is finished in gracefully rounded outline. The close-fitting sleeves are topped with puffs of fashionable fulness, the wrists being finished with chiffon plisse to match that at neck.

Separate waists may be made in this style in charming combinations of velvet and silk, plain and embroidered taffeta or satin, figured and plain satin or silk with lace, net or mousseline over satin for yoke and vest. Plain woolens, such as cashmere or cloth, may have silk or velvet collar, revers and vest, or the entire waist may be of silk or velvet, with vest of lace, net or mousseline. To make the waist for reception or dinner wear, the material may be of satin, brocade or figured silk, with vest of lace, net or mousseline over satin, and the sleeves may be of the material or of lace, net or mousseline.

A Color Scheme for a Wedding.

One of the prettiest weddings recently occurred at the church of the Heavenly Rest. It was fascinating to the spectators because of the exquisite color scheme which prevailed. The bride, very naturally, wore white, the maid of honor a pale pink, and the seven bridesmaids shimmered in pale green satin. They carried bouquets of flowers—a white rose and a pink one with shining green leaves—and the effect was wonderfully beautiful as they passed down the aisle between tall standards filled with sprays of pink and of white roses.—Harper's Bazar.

Gems to Match Costumes.

Women now spend much thought in arranging their gems to match their costumes. Amethysts and all shades of violet and purple stones are fashionable. Green is a color much worn, and women who do not possess emeralds indulge in the inexpensive olivine. The imitation stones are now manufactured in such perfection and they are arranged in such fine settings that it is often difficult to distinguish them from the genuine gems. They can be obtained in every shade to match various frocks.

The Girls' Smart Frocks.

Many smart frocks for little girls are braided in straight and zigzag lines around the skirt above the hem. The majority of the bodices end at the waist in a band, and jacket bodices usually are held in places by a belt. Yokes are frequently elaborately braided and supplemented by cape-like trimmings on the shoulders, ending in the epaulette, with a point falling on the fore part of the arm.

FIRST AMERICAN CAMP.

Uncle Sam's Troopers Now in Havana—Passports for Blanco's Aides.

HAVANA.—All four companies of the Second regiment volunteer engineers, which arrived off Marianao Beach Friday morning on board the United States transport Florida, landed at the Marianao wharf with colors flying. They formed at the landing place and marched to their camp two miles away, filing past General Greene and his staff, who, on horseback, reviewed the men. One hundred and fifty Cubans of General Menocal's division were employed in clearing the camp site and by noon the tents were being pitched for the first American camp at Havana.

The Spanish evacuation commissioners Friday announced the complete evacuation of the Holguin division. The United States commissioners informed the Spaniards that the following troops were expected about November 30: The Fifteenth Pennsylvania, which will be stationed at Pin del Rio; the Third New Jersey, at Mariel, and the Two Hundred and Second New York at Guanajay, all in the province of Pinar del Rio.

Passports were delivered to the aides-de-camp of General Blanco's staff, who will sail for Spain on the steamer Juan Forgas, December 3. On the same steamer, it is announced, will embark Marshal Blanco, General Solano and his staff and the officials employed at Blanco's headquarters.

MYSTERIOUS DISEASE IN 'FRISCO.

A Chinese Died in Chinatown With Symptoms Resembling the Bubonic Plague.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The board of health has been taking vigorous precautions to prevent the spread of a mysterious disease in Chinatown. A few days ago a Chinese died of a disease which was said to resemble the Bubonic plague. The matter was reported to the board of health, and Chinatown was searched for further cases. None were found. Dr. Roseau, quarantine officer at this port, and who is familiar with the Bubonic plague, has investigated the case, and says that in his opinion it is not the Bubonic plague. Other members of the board, however, were of a different opinion, and, while unwilling to say that there was any serious cause for alarm, insisted that all necessary precautions be taken.

At the health office Saturday it was stated that the suspicious case had turned out to be one of death from nephritis and there are no reasons for believing that the Bubonic plague has not entered the city.

HOBSON GIVES IT UP.

He Found the Wreck of the Maria Teresa Hopeless and Has Returned.

Constructor Hobson arrived in Washington Saturday from Norfolk, and came directly to the navy department. He has just returned from his trip on the Vulcan to Cat island, the scene of the casting away of the Maria Teresa. He brought with him the report of Captain McCalla, who was in charge of the expedition on the Vulcan to endeavor to save the vessel. The report is merely an elaboration of the history of the journey and its results, already contained in the telegraph report to the department, and where it touches upon the present condition of the Teresa it makes the wreck appear even more hopeless than Captain McCalla's telegram. And this statement was strongly reinforced by Constructor Hobson's verbal report to Acting Secretary Allen.

New Mayor Appointed for Santiago.

Some time ago Major McLeary, whom General Leonard Wood had appointed mayor of Santiago, Cuba, requested to be relieved of his mayoralty duties and to return to his military post. This request has been granted. General Wood appointed Senor Bacardi, an old resident, to succeed him. He is as anxious to give the mayor as much authority as is compatible with military jurisdiction. The new mayor will conform to General Wood's ideas, which are to give the Cubans every opportunity to show themselves capable of self-government.

Certainly nobility is of blood and birth, and he who would be immortal must have care for his posterity. Nothing can be more absurd than the fuss our gentry make concerning titles and places of precedence. They are of a mind with those foolish old courtiers of Louis XIV, and think that nobility consists in "Le droit du monter dans le carosse du roi." They forget that what is called blue blood is often very bad blood. I know a family of long descent and high communion which has been "decorated" in almost all possible ways. Nothing can ennoble it. Nearly every member of it is marked by some coarseness of physique—some lewduess of conduct; and this notwithstanding inter-marriages and the introduction of new blood. This stock may safely be backed to produce in every generation one or more profligates of dishonorable life. Every member of it has a certain liability of shame. The poison in the blood has had its inlet through vice, and must have its outlet in suffering. Ultimately it will bring about the extinction of the race. The wicked, Plato has truly said, are wicked because of their organization—their parents, and not they, should be punished.—The Humanitarian.

The World's Biggest Silver Mine.

The biggest silver producer in the world at present is the Broken Hill Proprietary Company, in New South Wales. The output of that company's mines for the fiscal year ended on May 31, 1898, was 6,122,270 fine ounces of silver. The Anaconda Copper Mining Company, in Montana, came second, with a production of 5,074,036 ounces of silver. It is worth noting that in both of these mines the silver is produced in connection with other metals —at Broken Hill with lead and at Anaconda with copper. The latter is principally a copper mine, since the metal forms the greater part of the value of its ores.

The Compania Huanchaca de Bolivia has had the operation of its mines seriously interfered with for the last two years by water and other mishaps. Its production in 1897 was 151,995 kilograms, or 4,886,673 ounces of silver. This is not much more than one-half of the maximum output, which was reached in 1893, and was 281,007 kilograms, or 9,034,385 ounces.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Beauty is Blood Deep.

Clean blood means a clean skin. No beauty without it. Cascarets, Candy Cathartic clean your blood and keep it clean, by stirring up the lazy liver and driving all impurities from the body. Begin today to banish pimples, boils, blotches, blackheads, and that sickly bilious complexion by taking Cascarets, beauty for ten cents. All druggists, satisfaction guaranteed. 10c, 25c, 50c.

Two towns in Kansas—Dost Springs and Romana—have not an idle man or box, or an unoccupied house, or a dog. Each town has a population of about 200.

Practical Education.

The tendency of the times is towards that which is practical, and it is well that it is so. Many a person, upon whose education hundreds of dollars have been spent, has discovered in the time of need that what has been learned is of little value. Why? Simply because time and attention have been devoted to the ornamental, rather than to the practical. How much better it would have been if at least a portion of the time had been employed in securing a business education in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting and the allied branches. A business education is of inestimable value to every young man and young woman. One of the best places we know of to secure a practical business education is at the Birmingham Business College, of Birmingham, Ala. This college was established nearly eleven years ago, and is one of the best known and most popular institutions of its kind in the south. The policy of the college is "the very best of everything;" best equipments, best methods, best location and best teachers. We are informed by President Willard J. Wheeler that every desk in the study hall is taken at the present time, thus showing the popularity of the college. The graduates of the Birmingham Business College are always in demand, and the college, by means of its Position Bureau, is enabled to place all students in good positions as soon as competent. All who expect to patronize a business college will do well to correspond with the president.

Oddest House on Earth.

The oddest domicile on earth is that recently erected in Yokohoma by an eminent German bacteriologist. It is a microbe proof house, built of glass blocks. There are no window sashes, and the doors, when closed, are air tight. The air supply is forced into the room through a pipe and filtered through cotton wool to cleanse it of bacteria. To insure further sterilization the air is driven against a glycerine-coated plate glass, which captures all the microbes the wool spares. The few microbes brought into the house in the clothes of visitors soon die in the warm sunlight with which the house is flooded.

Mrs. Tiptop—I am sorry you were not at my reception last evening. Mrs. Highup (coldly)—I received no invitation. Mrs. Hightop (with affected surprise)—Indeed? It must have miscarried. I had among my guests three foreign counts. Mrs. Highup—So that is where they were? I desired to engage them last evening to wait on the table at our theater party supper, but the employment agent told me they were out.—New York Weekly.

A Spring Chicken.

"Madam, what was the name of this spring chicken?"

Mr. Golightly stared hard at the landlady as he spoke. The bird in question, skillfully eluding the fork with which he supposed he had impaled it, had leaped from under the carving knife and struck him squarely in the shirt front.

"Name, Mr. Golightly," said the landlady; "I don't think it had a name."

"You should have called it Hope, ma'am," said the unhappy carver.

"And why Hope?"

"Because," he bitterly answered, as he scraped the gravy from his necktie, "because the poet says that 'Hope springs eternal in the human breast.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Half Sick Half Well

Many persons have their good day and their bad day. Others are about half sick all the time. They have headache, backache, and are restless and nervous. Food does not taste good, and the digestion is poor; the skin is dry and sallow and disfigured with pimples or eruptions; sleep brings no rest and work is a burden.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

And the remedy?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It clears out the channels through which poisons are carried from the body. When all impurities are removed from the blood nature takes right hold and completes the cure.

If there is constipation, take Ayer's Pills. They awaken the drowsy action of the liver; they cure biliousness.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

It is impossible to promise particular features that will appear in THE AMERICAN MONTHLY during the coming year, for it is, as the publishers say, "a great monthly newspaper." As such, it prints for readers an illustrated account of the notable things which make the history of the month, of the political, economic, and literary happenings which are of value to intelligent men and women. The Editorial "Progress of the World" tells succinctly an illustrated story of the month. The result of this comprehensive effort to edit in one monthly volume the information needed by intelligent people of "live" instincts is best gauged by the opinions which the readers of THE AMERICAN MONTHLY have seen fit to express. UNDER THE DEEP SEA

HOW THE HEAVILY LADEN DIVER GOES ABOUT HIS WORK.

His Dress Weighs Nearly Two Hundred Pounds and Is a Very Complicated Affair—The Signalman Holds the Diver's Life In His Hands.

The dress of a fully equipped diver weighs, in round numbers, 170 pounds. Taking off his everyday garb, the diver pulls on his thick underclothing—a white knitted sweater and trousers and pair of ribbed stockings, also white. Should he intend to work in unusually deep water, he puts on two, sometimes three, sets of underclothing, to relieve the pressure of the water.

The woolen clothing donned, the next garment is the diving dress, measuring for a man of average height 5 feet 5 inches from the collar to the sole of the foot. This dress is made of solid sheet india rubber, covered on both sides with canvas twill. It has a double collar, the inner one to pull up round the neck, and the outer one, of red india rubber, to go over the breastplate and form a water tight joint. The cuffs also are of red india rubber and fit tightly round the wrists, making, when secured by the vulcanized india rubber rings, water tight joints, at the same time leaving the diver's hands free. In the outer collar 12 holes are bored for securing the breastplate. This is made of tinned copper. The outer edge is of brass and the 12 screws firmly fitted to it at intervals and projecting upward. These projections pass through the corresponding holes in the outer collar of the dress. The band of the breastplate is in four sections, and the holes in the sections pass over the protecting screws and are secured in place by wing nuts or thumbscrews. A little careful consideration will make it clear that the dress is held in position by its rubber collar, with the aid of the breastplate flange and wing nuts.

The upper edge of the breastplate is fitted with a neck ring and a segmental screw. The use of this we shall presently explain.

The boots are of stout leather, with thick soles, and are secured over the instep by buckles and straps. The pair weigh 32 pounds—four pounds over a quarter of a hundredweight. The heel soles are firmly attached by copper screws. The extremities of the boots are made wide. Boots intended for rough work are fitted with metal toe caps. The suit of underclothing, dress, breastplate and boots—is our diver arrayed. He has now to be weighted. Lead weights of 40 pounds each, shield or heart shaped, are suspended back and front by means of gun metal clips and hooks or tabs and lashings. He has now only to put on his helmet and to affix his air pipe.

The helmet, like the breastplate, is of tinned copper and is fitted with a screw at the neck, corresponding to that mentioned as belonging to the breastplate. The eighth of a turn, and the helmet is firmly secured, water both air and water tight. It has three strong plate glasses in brass frames, protected by guards, two oval at the sides and a round one in front. The front glass is unscrewed to enable the diver to receive orders without removing any other portion of the dress. An outlet valve is provided at the side or back of the helmet, which the diver can close should he wish to rise to the surface. This valve allows the breathed air to escape, yet prevents the entrance of water.

At the side of the front glass is a simple arrangement for getting rid of the moisture of expiration, and it also assists the working of the outlet valve is closed in raising the expansion of the dress by raising the surface. There is also an inlet valve, and this is constructed so as to allow the air to enter, but not to escape. In case of a break in the air pipe is made in lengths of about 30 feet, fitted together by means of gun metal joints. Securely fixed to the helmet by means of a bayonet joint and an elbow tube, the end of the air pipe is fitted on to the nozzle of the air delivering diving pump.

The diver's belt is buckled on, his knife is secured and of strong make, with a metal case to keep it dry. A drinking flask, or a little light refreshment, is slung upon it, and when all is ready the word is given, "All right." The glass screwed on, and the helmet is hung on the helmet as a sign that he is down he goes by rope or ladder, which must be weighted for the purpose.

Each diver while under water requires a signalman to hold his life line (a rope fastened round his body by which he is hauled up) and the air pipe, the motion of which should be kept constant, so that any movements of the diver may be felt. The signalman is therefore of the utmost importance to the diver. He must, to use the words of a diver to whom we recently talked, be his life. He must exercise the utmost vigilance all the time that the diver is under water. Should the attendant give one pull on the life line it signifies, "How are you getting on?" If all is well, the

Editor BANNER—Alone in my room at night I have just been reading an Age-Herald report of Senator Morgan's speech at Clanton, Nov. 5, 1898. I have heard a good many speeches in my time but that was the lamest thing I ever saw in print. He begins by appealing to the district for unity, and said the circumstances were such as to justify his appeal. Turning to the ladies present, he said protection to these ladies is the highest duty the white man owes to his country. So far, so good. But Mr. editor, in the name of common sense, how would a vote cast for the man he represented be of any protection to the ladies or any one else in this country? He says, again, that the white man of this district must stand together. Well, right here let me say that the white men have stood pretty close together in five of the counties in the district, but when it comes to Dallas county the negroes all vote the Democratic ticket. The Democratic party he says is too honorable to take any advantage of the colored man, that they never had done it and never will do it, now that is all to thin it won't stick. The Democratic party has always taken advantage of every one that they could negroes and whites alike. The Senator ought to consider the present election law. Mr. editor, did Mr. Robbins ever deny the fact that the negro graveyards in Dallas county were robbed that he might occupy a seat in Congress? I think not. I do not think that the People's Party wants to make that kind of a record. It is too dishonorable. He says he honors Mr. Aldrich for what he has done in developing the resources of this district. What has Mr. Morgan or Mr. Robbins ever done? They have never developed anything. X. Y. Z.

Lomax.

United States Judge Toulmin has signed an order transferring the office of United States Commissioner H. A. Wilson from Birmingham to Lomax, and Judge Bruce has appointed Mr. Wilson to be a commissioner for the middle district of Alabama in addition to the commissionership he holds for the Northern. Lomax is the place of Mr. Wilson's residence. His office furniture was shipped from Birmingham last week.

The Age-Herald thus speaks of Mr. Wilson: "Wilson has been prominent in Republican politics in this state for nearly thirty years," said a Democratic politician last night, "and personally he has always enjoyed the good will of most Democrats who knew him. Of late years he has taken little part in active politics, but has devoted his attention to his own affairs. He is a conscientious man, and is liked everywhere for his good qualities of heart and head. In the troublous days of radicalism down at Montgomery he was the stormy petrel of his party, and he held on his way with a courage and tenacity that won respect from his opponents."

A HAPPY MARRIAGE.

ADAMS-ROBINSON

When on Tuesday evening Mr. E. H. Adams left the office of his father, Probate Judge Adams, and stepping into his buggy quietly drove off, few of those who saw him go had any idea that he was on the way to meet his partner for life. No wonder he looked so happy, and as if he thought this was a good world to live in. The evening was chilly, but the warmth of his affection prevented him from noticing the temperature.

At the home of her parents at Jemison, Miss Eva Robinson, one of the most charming of the belles of Jemison, awaited his coming. The days of courting were now to culminate in the fulfillment of the hopes and wishes of two young people devotedly attached to each other. As young maidens are, she was both to leave the home of her childhood, but with perfect love and confidence was quite willing to enter the home of the man to whom she had given her young affections.

Judge Adams went up to Jemison on the accomodation, and proceeding to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Robinson, parents of the bride, gained another loving daughter by uniting in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Enoch H. Adams and Miss Eva Robinson. Both of the young couple are popular members of society and THE BANNER joins their host of friends in wishing them many years of happy life together.

Sour Stomach Cure.

A long time I was a great sufferer from Liver and Stomach troubles. I had a dull pain in my left side under my heart. At times my side became swollen and the pain acute. My stomach was always sour and I would vomit every time I eat. My bowels were very irregular, causing me pain and distress. I tried many things without any benefit. I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose. I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—D. W. Two Pointed Questions Answered.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it?

Ans.—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best?

If both articles are brought prominently before the public both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and use only the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty but they are certain to return to the one remedy that they know to be reliable, and for coughs, colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For sale by J. S. Johnson jr.

A Lawyer In the Wrong Place.

Mrs. Helen Wilson keeps a fashionable boarding house at 61 West Thirty-sixth street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, where only women are received as guests. One day this week a well dressed, gentlemanly man walked calmly up to the front room on the top floor, stretched himself out on a fine couch, lighted a cigarette and seemingly counted upon spending a pleasant Sunday evening. When arrested, he gave his name as Charles C. Tyler, a lawyer of "17 New York." Later Alfred I. Brown, a lawyer living at 32 West Seventeenth street, rushed into the station, saying that he wanted to bail his friend, Mr. Tyler, out. Sergeant Jessop said that owing to the peculiar circumstances he would not accept bail.

The Show of Portraits.

The portrait show is neither dead nor sleeping. The gentlemen chosen to arrange the details have begun active work. Some of the best known portrait painters have received requests during the past month to send in some of their recent work, and it is safe to say that the exhibition, which is to be composed of portraits of men and children, as well as of women, will be the most interesting and instructive of its kind ever held here. Out of town owners of good portraits are asked to contribute to the display. It will cost $5 to size up this exhibition on the opening day, which is Dec. 14. The portrait show is quite a society function, and, naturally, comes high.

"History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full-page half-tones, together with many splendid double-page illustrations in the colors. It is sold by subscription and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

AMERICA'S HIGHEST MOUNTAIN.

Peak in Alaska That is More Than 20,000 Feet Above Sea Level.

A mountain peak 20,000 and more feet in height has just been discovered on the Alaskan coast, inland from Kanai Peninsula, and has been named Mount Bullshae, by the United States geological party that first set eyes on it.

This discovery, the most important that has yet been made by the many exploring parties sent into Alaska, early this year, falls to the honor of the party led by George H. Eldridge. They returned to Seattle on the steamer Alki, and there seems to be absolutely no doubt that the mountain discovered is the highest in North America.

After following the course of the Sushitna a long distance it was decided to go into one of the valleys emptying into the Sushitna River from the right. The party followed this valley some distance, when suddenly they came in sight of a big, broad peak. "Bullshae," was the expression of the Indian guide when he first saw the natural monster that loomed up even among the huge peaks that surrounded them on every side. "Bullshae" the peak was named after the most thorough possible investigation.

It was evident that Mount Bullshae would not allow the party to mount its crest with ease, if at all, so no attempt was made to climb it. In fact, the members of the party expressed the opinion that it never will be climbed. Great precipices present an almost impassable front on every hand as far as the members of the party could see.

Unless the atmosphere is perfectly clear the clouds enfold it on the slightest provocation.

Golden Rose of Virtue Given by the Pope

The Golden Rose which the Pope is to confer upon the Archduchess Gisela, Princess of Bavaria, is the highest honor which his holiness can bestow upon any woman. It was said the Pope would give the Golden Rose to the young Queen of Holland, but of course that report was all nonsense, for Wilhelmina, although a most adorable young person, is a Protestant, and this special honor is reserved for members of the Roman Catholic Church only. The gorgeous thing that is called the Golden Rose is made of pure gold, and its value, so far as the mere market is concerned, is about $10,000. In the great rose in the middle of the group the Pope pours rose balsam. This flower is framed with a number of subordinate roses and rosebuds. The metal plant stands in a pot of pure gold and on the side of this pot are engraved the arms and the seal of Leo. Two officers of the Vatican are chosen yearly to present this magnificent gift to the lady selected by the Pope. That lady is always royal, a queen, an empress or a princess of royal blood.

Six of the foremost colleges report that their freshmen classes this term are the largest they have ever received. There is undoubtedly a boom in education as well as in business.

GEN. AGUINALDO IS PACIFIC.

But a Manila Paper Contends for Recognition of Independence.

NO SURPRISE AT COMMISSION'S ACTION.

Harmony Existing Will Only Be Broken by "Priests or Traitors Inducing the American to Attack Us"—Paris Sympathizers' Opinion

MANILA—Owing to the fact that the result of the Paris conference has long been anticipated here, the agreement of Spain to cede the Philippine islands to the United States created no excitement or surprise.

Aguinaldo is certain to assume a conciliatory attitude, because his position is daily becoming more untenable.

A local paper says: "The Filipinos will shed their blood in torrents again before submitting to foreign domination. America brought Aguinaldo from Japan and recognized our nationality by allowing our flag to be raised at Corregidor island and to sail the bay in full sight of all the foreign fleets. None dared to interfere. If America now declines to openly acknowledge our independence, a great injustice will be committed. Had Spain asked $40,000,000 for the island, the Filippinos would have gladly given twice that amount, or more, to preserve their rights ruthlessly set aside by the enemy."

In conclusion the article affirms the friendship of the Filippinos for Americans, insists that the insurgents will never fire the first shot, and adds that the harmony existing will only be broken by "priests or traitors inducing the Americans to attack us."

PARIS.—Paris sympathizers having a quasi connection with the Spanish commission are making much over the reported attitude of the Filippinos towards the United States. These sympathizers profess to have information that Aguinaldo means to fight, and that he now has 60,000 soldiers armed with Mauser rifles, and eighteen quick-firing guns, and it is asserted that he will be satisfied with nothing but independence.

THE CRISIS IN SPAIN.

Don Carlos Preparing for a Bold Stroke—Carlism Gaining Strength.

LONDON.—The crisis in Spain is followed with the most keen interest. Don Carlos is undoubtedly preparing for a bold stroke. His emissaries are sent to suborn the Spanish army, a large portion of it being disaffected, partly on account of the arrears of pay, but chiefly owing to the condition of the army, it was prevented from earning distinction during the late war, on account of the incapability and corruption of the political administration. These new factors have given Don Carlos a much better chance of success than he had when he made his former attempts to gain the throne of Spain. The part of the Spanish kingdom which is causing the most anxiety on account of the Carlist intrigues is the provinces of Lerada, Gerone, Teruel, Cuonca, Castillon and Valencia. The detailed watch in the disaffected districts has hitherto failed to produce any important discoveries or to check the agitation.

Don Jaimie, the son of Don Carlos, is reported to be moving from place to place on the French side of the Pyrenes, from whence he is pulling Carlist wires.

The Count de Maaile, a leading Carlist, now in Paris, is quoted in an interview as expressing himself as saying he is sure of success. He claims that Carlism has made strong headway among the repatriated soldiers, while the people, clergy and some of the bishops, he alleges, are longing to return to the old regime. The count added:

"As for the pope; he is always on the side of the party in power and will send his blessing to Don Carlos as soon as he sits on the throne. General Weyler is ready to give his sword to the highest bidder and Don Carlos, his wife (the Princess Derohan) and her family are ready to advance funds and the French legitimatists will also aid financially and provide volunteers."

New York Ordered to Havana.

Commodore Philip, at Norfolk, has been ordered to send his flagship, the New York, to Havana immediately. It is not known whether any other ships will be sent to Cuba Upon the arrival of the New York at Havana, Admiral Sampson will resume his duties as commander of the North Atlantic squadron and again will hoist his flag on the New York.

Thirty-Seven Drowned.

Thirty-seven people were drowned who were on the British steamer Clandrummond, from the Clyde via Liverpool for Cape Good Hope, wrecked in the Bay of Biscay.

Long and Bliss May Retire Soon.

It is not unlikely that two cabinet members, Secretaries Long and Bliss, will retire soon. They are in perfect accord with the President, but desire, it is said, to return to the management of their extensive affairs.

Spanish Government is Prepared.

The premier, Senor Sagasta, at the cabinet Friday, described the Carlist movements in a number of the provinces and said the government was prepared to energetically repress all attempts to disturb public order.

WITH THE COMMISSIONERS.

Judge Day Believes the Treaty Will Be Signed This Week—Germany Negotiating for the Carolines.

PARIS.—The report from Berlin that Germany is negotiating for the purchase of the Caroline Islands is confirmed from several quarters, although Count Von Munster-Ledenburg, the German ambassador at Paris, informed a correspondent of the Associated Press that he knew nothing at all about the matter. The American commissioners are inclined to believe the report, and it is looked upon as explaining the reluctance of the Spaniards to give the Americans an answer in regard to the Caroline Islands, as well as on the question of religious liberty there, and the latest developments confirm the report that the Spaniards have been instructed not to yield on these points until they have made a good bargain.

The position of the commissions, says an American commissioner, is that of two card players, each studying his own hand and waiting for his opponent's lead. In spite of this temporary halt in the negotiations and contrary to general impression, Judge Day believes the treaty will be signed next week. But a great deal of work must be done before the treaty is ready for the signatures, as after ten weeks of negotiation the only articles accepted by both commissions are the three leading ones, providing for the cession of the Spanish colonies, and these only in principle, and not in language.

EIGHTY MEN PROBABLY LOST.

British Steamer Londonian Sighted With Decks Submerged.

The British steamer King Arthur, from Demarra, arrived at Liverpool and reported she sighted the Londonian on Nov. 26, in latitude 45 north, longitude 16 west, on her beam ends on the starboard side with decks and hatches submerged. All her boats were gone except a small boat, and there was no sign of life about her. The Londonian sailed from Boston Nov. 15 for London in command of Captain Lee. The Londonian was a steel vessel, built in Glasgow in 1896, and registered 5,592 tons. She measured 350 feet in length, and 59.5 feet beam, and 30.9 feet in depth.

The Londonian was exclusively a cargo steamer, and her complement of officers and crew numbered about 80 men.

EIGHT THOUSAND MEN

Will Be Put to Work on a New Railroad in Arkansas.

As a result of the temporary injunction granted to the Choctaw & Memphis Railway company restraining the Iron Mountain from interfering with the construction of the former's new line between Little Rock and Wister Junction, an order came from Philadelphia Friday urging contractors to cover their work and push it with all possible expedition. Within ten days 8,000 men will be employed on the gap of 164 miles of new road.

Garcia Received as a Citizen.

The members of the Cuban commission, headed by Gen. Garcia, called at the white house Friday and were soon ushered into the cabinet room, where they were received by the president. The meeting, however, was entirely informal and unofficial in character. It lasted an hour and a half. The meeting of the president was very cordial, but the distinguished Cubans were received as citizens of Cuba and not as having an official status.

An Aged Lady Killed.

Mrs. Abbie L. Marble, the aged sister-in-law of the late James G. Blaine, met with a tragic death Friday at San Leand, Cal.

She was out driving in a light buggy when the horse took fright and ran away, going through an open gate into an orchard. A low-hanging limb struck Mrs. Marble in the breast, throwing her from the buggy and killing her instantly. She was seventy years old.

Isle of Pines Ours.

Some questions having risen as to the ownership of the Isle of Pines, south of Cuba, it is stated the agreement with the Spaniards expressly provided that the islands immediately adjacent to Cuba and Porto Rico should be ceded to the United States.

MILES PREPARES A BILL.

Provides for a Regular Standing Army of 100,000 Men.

General Miles, commanding the army, has prepared the draft of a bill providing for a regular standing army of 100,000 men. The bill, it is said, will provide for an organization of twelve companies to the regiment, with an arrangement for a third lieutenant for each company in case of need for that officer. It will contain a provision for a staff corps, largely in accordance with the recommendations of the heads of the various bureaus, as recommended by them in their annual reports.

Suit Instituted for $1,000,000.

Thurlow Weed Barnes has brought suit in the supreme court against the American-China Development Company for $1,000,000 for services in obtaining railroad concessions from the imperial Chinese government through the Chinese minister at Washington. The concessions are worth in net profits at least $12,000,000 to the company and they may be worth $24,000,000. They are the most valuable grants ever made by the Chinese government to foreign capitalists.

PROGRESS OF EVACUATION.

Old Glory Hoisted Over Public Buildings in Sancti Spiritus and Trinidad.

THE AMERICANS CALL ON CASTELLANOS.

Cordially Received by the New Captain-General—Work of Cleaning Havana Begun—Americans Buy a Theater.

HAVANA—At noon Saturday, the American forces having previously taken charge of Sancti Spiritus and Trinidad, in Santa Clara provinces, the Stars and Stripes were officially and with impressive ceremonies, hoisted over the city halls and the military and other public buildings in those cities. When the flags were unfurled the band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and the soldiers including the Fourth Tennessee, and large crowds of citizens cheered enthusiastically.

General Wade, president of the United States evacuation commission, accompanied by Colonel Clous, judge advocate; Captain Hart, the official interpreter, and Majors Almy, Allison, Butler and Brooke, called upon Captain-General Castellanos at the palace Saturday. They were received by the president of the Spanish evacuation commission, who introduced them to General Castellanos. The meeting was of a most cordial nature.

San Antonio de Dos Barnes, province of Havana, and Jaguey Le Grande, province of Matanzas, were evacuated by the Spanish troops.

The work of cleaning the streets of Havana under American auspices began Saturday. Over 100 men were engaged in sweeping the main thoroughfares. The refuse was taken to Paula wharf, where it was towed out to sea in scows and dumped ten miles from land.

A deed of sale of the Tacon theater to an American syndicate for $350,000 has been signed, the property passing into the hands of the Tacon Realty Company. The Tacon, which is the eighth largest opera house in the world, occupies an entire block.

PREPARING TO MOVE TO CUBA.

General Lee Has Been Given Orders to Embark Within Five Days.

General Fitzhugh Lee, in accordance with his instructions from Washington, issued a general order Friday directing that the Second division of his corps prepare to move to Cuba at once. Regimental commanders in that division are putting their forces in shape to move within five days' time. The division is composed of the Second Illinois, Sixty-first Indiana, First North Carolina, Fourth Virginia, Forty-ninth Iowa and Sixth Missouri. It is in command of General F. V. Greene, who is now in Cuba, having been sent there for the purpose of selecting camp sites.

The Second division hospital, Major Russell B. Harrison, post marshal, and six companies of the provost guard are ordered to prepare to move at the same time.

There are three transports now in Savannah harbor—the Minnewaska, the Michigan and the Panama. These can carry about three regiment, and it may be that they will be used to convey part of General Lee's Second division to Havana. It is feared this movement will carry half the Seventh army corps away before the president comes to review it.

GOV. TANNER INDICTED.

Fifty-Four Others Are Included on Account of Virden Trouble.

The Virden riot grand jury at Carlinville, Ill., has made its formal report to Judge Shirley. The grand jury dealt pertinently with the affair, and, as far as it was able to ascertain, returned true bills against the principal participants in the tragedy of October 12 at Virden. Ten indictments, involving fifty-four persons, were returned. Against John R. Tanner, governor of Illinois, there are three counts for palpable omission of duty and malfeasance in office. Fred W. Lukins, general manager of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company, is charged with manslaughter.

AUSTRIA MAD WITH GERMANY.

Alliance Between Two Countries May Be Broken Off.

The Vienna correspondent of The London Observer asserts that the relations between Austria and Germany are very much strained and that the speech of Count Thun Hohenstein, Austrian premier, in the reichsrath, threatening reprisals against Germany for the expulsion of Austrians from that country, was only palatable on account of the outspoken hostility for Germany and as the first practical step toward the dissolution of the Austrian-German alliance.

Civil Service Order Nearly Ready.

President McKinley's civil service order, so long expected, is now ready for promulgation. It may be given out any day. It is expected to remove from the classified service 957 deputy collectors of internal revenue stationed in the sixty-three collection districts throughout the union, 606 examining surgeons attached to the pension bureau and a number of minor places, such as counsel to the board of general appraisers in New York, second assistant cashier in the New York custom house and several others.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: "The Coming Century"—What the New Cycle Will Usher In—Needs of the New Age—The End of the Century Watch Night.

TEXT: "The children of Issachar, which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do." Chronicles xii., 32.

Great tribe, that tribe of Issachar! When Joab took the census there were 87,000 of them. Before the almanac was made through astrological study, they knew certain stellar conjunctions all about the seasons of the year. Before agriculture became an art they were skilled in the raising of crops. Before politics became a science they knew the temper of nations, and wherever they marched, either for peace or war, they marched under a three-colored flag—topaz, sardine and carbuncle. But the chief characteristic of that tribe of Issachar was that they understood the times. They were not like the idiotic and moral incompetents of our day who are trying to guide Israel by the chart of 1828. They looked at the divine indications in their own particular century. So we ought to understand the times, the times when America was thirteen colonies huddled together along the Atlantic coast, but the times when the nation dips one hand in the ocean on one side the continent and the other hand in the ocean on the other side the continent; times which put New York Narrows and the Golden Horn of the Pacific within one flash of electro-telegraphy; times when God is as directly, as positively, as solemnly, as tremendously addressing us through the daily newspaper and the quick revolution of events as He ever addressed the ancients or addresses us through the Holy Scriptures. The voice of God in Providence is as important as the voice of God in typology, for in our own day we have had our Sinais with thunders of the Almighty, and Calvaries of sacrifice, and Gethsemanes that sweat great drops of blood, and Olivets of ascension, and Mount Pisgahs of farreaching vision. The Lord who rounded this world 6000 years ago and sent His Son to redeem it near 1900 years ago has yet much to do with this radiant but agonized planet. May God make us like the children of Issachar, "which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do."

The grave of this century will soon be dug. The cradle of another century will soon be rocked. There is something moving this way out of the eternities, something that thrills me, blanches me, appalls me, exhilarates me, enraptures me. It will wreathe the orange blossoms for millions of weddings. It will bear the dirge for millions of obsequies. It will carry the gilded banners of brightest mornings and the black flags of darkest midnights. The world will play the grand march of its heroes and sound the rogues' march of its cowards. Other processions may halt or break down or fall back, but the procession led by that leader moves steadily on and will soon be here. It will preside over coronations and dethronements. I hail it. I bless it. I welcome it, the twentieth century of the Christian era.

What may we expect of it, and how shall we prepare for it, are the momentous questions I propose now to discuss. As in families, human nativity is anticipated by all sanctity and kindliness and solemnity and care and hopefulness, so ought we prayerfully, hopefully, industriously, confidently prepare for the advent of a new century. The nineteenth century must not treat the twentieth century on its arrival as the eighteenth century treated the nineteenth. Our century inherited the wreck of revolutions and the superstitions of ages. Around its cradle stood the armed assassins of Old World tyrannies; the "reign of terror," bequeathing its horrors; Robespierre, plotting his diabolism; the Jacobin club, with its wholesale massacre; the guillotine, chopping its beheadments. The ground quaking with the great guns of Marengo, Wagram and Badajos. All Europe in convulsion. Asia in comparative quiet, but the quietness of death. Africa in the clutches of the slave trade. American savages in full cry, their scalping knives lifted. The exhausted and poverty struck people of America sweating under the debt of $300,000,000, which the Revolutionary War had left them. Washington just gone into the long sleep at Mount Vernon, and the nation in bereavement; Aaron Burr, the champion libertine, becoming soon after the Vice-President. The Government of the United States only an experiment, most of the philosophers and statesmen and governments of the earth prophesying it would be a disgraceful failure. No poor foundling laid at night on the cold steps of a mansion, to be picked up in the morning, was poorer off than this century at its nativity. The United States Government had taken only twelve steps on its journey, its Constitution having been formed in 1789, and most of the nations of the earth laughed at our Government in its first attempts to walk alone.

The birthday of our nineteenth century occurred in the time of war. Our small United States Navy, under Captain Truxton, commanding the frigate Constitution, was in collision with the French frigates La Vengeance and L'Insurgente, and the first infant cries of this century were drowned in the roar of naval battle, and political strife on this continent was the hottest, the parties rending each other with pantherine rage. The birthday present of this nineteenth century was vituperation, public unrest, threat of national demolition, and horrors national and international. I adjure you, let not the twentieth century be met in that awful way, but with all brightness of temporal and religious prospects.

First, let us put upon the cradle of the new century a new map of the world. The old map was black with too many barbarisms and red with too many slaughters and pale with too many sufferings. Let us see to it that on that map so far as possible our country from ocean to ocean is a Christianized continent—schools, colleges, churches and good homes in long line from ocean beach to ocean beach. On that map Cuba must be free. Porto Rico must be free. The archipelago of the Philippines must be free. If cruel Spain expects by procrastination and intrigue to get back what she has surrendered, then the warships Iowa and Indiana and Brooklyn and Texas and Vesuvius and Oregon must be sent back to Southern waters or across to the coast of Spain to silence the insolence as decidedly as last summer they silenced the Cristobal Colon and Oquendo and Maria Teresa and Vizcaya. When we get those islands thoroughly under our protectorate, for the first time our missionaries in China will be safe. The atrocities imposed on those good men and women in the so-called Flowery Kingdom will never be resumed, for our guns will be too near Hong Hong to allow the massacre of missionary settlements.

On that map must be put the isthmian canal, begun if not completed. No long voyages around Cape Horn for the world's merchandise, but short and cheap communication by water instead of expensive communication by rail train, and more millions will be added to our national wealth and the world's betterment than I have capacity to calculate.

On the map it must be made evident that America is to be the world's civilizer and evangelizer. Free from the national religions of Europe on the one side and from the superstitions of Asia on the other side, it will have facilities for the work that no other continent can possibly possess. As near as I can tell by the laying on of the hands of the Lord Almighty, this continent has been ordained for that work. This is the only country in the world where all religions are on the same platform, and the people have free selection for themselves without any detriment. When we [illegible] present to the ment of relig dered chan selecting the ness and g this world [illegible] Alexander banquet at Babylon, been drinking night and all next day, he had twenty gues health of each for the cup of Hercules to give cue, he filled show his endurance last draft from the giant, he dropped never recovered. The work of this century has been to ... ready. All the earth is now free to ... Gospel except two little spots, one in ... and one in Africa, while at the ... of the century there stood the Chinese ... and there flanged the fires and there ... lered the swords that forbade entrance ... many islands and large reaches of ... ent. Polynesian cruelties and Fiji ... cannibalism have given way, and all ... gates of all the continents are swung ... with a clang that has been a positive ... glorious invitation for Christianity to ... ter. Telegraph, telephone and phono... are to be consecrated to Gospel dissem... tion, and instead of the voice that ... the attention of a few hundred or a ... thousand people within the church ... the telegraph will thrill the glad tidings ... and the telephone will utter them to ... millions. Oh, the infinite advantage that ... the twentieth century has over what the ... nineteenth century had at the starting!

In preparation for this coming century ... we have time in the intervening years to ... give some decisive strokes at the seven ... eight great evils that curse this world. ... would be an assault and battery upon the ... coming century by this century if ... allowed the full blow of present evils to ... fall upon the future. We ought somehow ... to cripple or mollify some of these afflictions. Alcoholism is to-day triumphant, ... and are we to let the all-devouring monster ... that has throttled this century seize upon ... the next without first having filled his ... cursed hide with stinging arrows sure ... to weaken and stagger him? We have ... wasted about twenty-five years. How ... While we have been waiting for the law ... the land to prohibit intoxicants we have ... done little to quench the thirst of appetite ... in the palate and tongue of a whole ... eration. Where are the public and earnest ... missionary meetings that used to be held ... years ago for the one purpose of persuading the young and middle aged and old ... that strong drink is poisonous and damning? When will we learn that we cannot ... educate public opinion up to a prohibitory ... law, or such a law will not be passed or ... passed will not be executed?

Seven or eight years ago on the anniversary platform of the National Temperance Society in New York I deplored the ... fact that we had left politics to do that ... which moral suasion only could do. ... said on that occasion, "If some poor ... drunkard wandering along this street ... night should see the lights kindled by the ... brilliant assemblage and should come in ... and finding the character of the meeting ... should ask for a temperance pledge, ... he might sign it and begin a new career. ... do not believe there is in all this house ... a temperance pledge, and you would have ... to take out a torn letter envelope or a ... scrap of paper for the inebriate's signature." I found out afterward that there ... was one such temperance pledge in the ... audience, but only one that I could use. ... Do not leave to politics that which ... can be done now in 10,000 reformatory ... meetings all over the country.

Oh, save the young man of to-day and ... greet the coming century with a tidal wave ... of national redemption! Do not put upon ... the cradle of the twentieth century a mon... strosity of demijohns and beer barrels and ... jugs, and put to its infant lips wretched... ness, disease, murder and abandonment ... solution. Ave, reform that army of inebriates. "Ah," you say, "it cannot be done!" That shows that you will be of no ... use in the work. "O ye of little faith!" ... Away back in early times President Davies ... of Princeton College, one day found a man ... in utter despair because of the thrall of ... strong drink. The president said to him, ... "Sir, be of good cheer. You can be saved. ... Sign the pledge." "Ah," said the despairing victim, "I have often signed the pledge, ... but I have always broken my pledge." ... "But," said the president, "I will be your ... strength to keep the pledge. I will be your ... friend, and with a loving arm around you ... will hold you up. When your appetite ... burns, and you feel that you must get ... it; come to my house, sit down with me ... the study or with the family in the parlor, ... and I will be a shield to you. All that I ... can do for you with my books, my sympathy, my experience, my society, my ... my money, I will do. You shall force your ... appetite and master it." A look of gratitude glowed on the poor man's face, and he replied, "Sir, will you do all that?" "Sure ... I will." "Then I will overcome." He ... signed the pledge and kept it. That pledge ... of President Davies which saved one man ... tried on a large scale, will save a million ... men.

Alexander the Great made an impe... banquet at Babylon, and, though he ... been drinking the health of guests all ... night and all next day, the second night ... he had twenty guests, and he drank the ... health of each separately. Then came ... for the cup of Hercules the giant, a mon... strous cup, he filled and drained it twice to ... show his endurance; but, as he finished the ... last draft from the cup of Hercules the ... giant, he dropped in a fit, from which he ... never recovered. Alexander, who had conquered Sardis and conquered Halicarnassus ... and conquered Asia and conquered the ... world, could not conquer himself, and he ... is a threatening peril that this good ... century, having conquered all with which ... it has ever gone into battle, may yet be ... overthrown by the cup of the giant evil of ... the land that Hercules of infamy, strong ... drink. Do not let the staggering ... and enfeebled host of drunkards go into the next century looking for ... asylums and almshouses and delirium tremens and dishonored graves.

It has been a custom in all Christian ... lands for people to keep watch night ... an old year goes out and a new year ... comes in. People assemble in churches ... about 10 o'clock of that last night of the ... old year, and they have prayers and songs ... and sermons and congratulations until the ... hands of the church clock almost meet at ... the figure 12, and then all bow in silent ... prayer, and the scene is mightily impressive until the clock in the tower of the ... church or the clock in the tower of the ... city hall strikes 12, and then all rise and ... sing with smiling face and jubilant tone ... the grand doxology, and there is a shaking ... of hands all around.

But what a tremendous watch night the ... world is soon to celebrate! This century ... will depart at 12 o'clock of the 31st of December, of the year 1900. What a night ... that will be, whether starlight or moonlight ... or dark with tempest! It will be a night as you and I never saw. Those who ... watched the coming in of the nineteenth ... century long ago went to their pillows of ... dust. May we all be living on earth by ... the solemnities and join in the songs and ... shake hands in the congratulations of the ... watch night; or, if between this and then ... any of us should be off and away, may the ... inhabitants of that land where "there ... shall be no night there" and where "a thousand years are as one day," and in the ... presence of that angel spoken of in the ... PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

"The People Rejoice in a Very Satisfactory and Increasing Degree of Prosperity by the Largest Volume of Business Ever Recorded."

EXCERPTS FROM IMPORTANT FEATURES OF DOCUMENT.

Military Service Under a Common Flag and for a Righteous Cause Has Strengthened the National Spirit and Cements the Fraternal Bonds Between Every Section of the Country---The Controversy Which Led Up to the War with Spain Reviewed---Larger Standing Army and Stronger Navy Recommended---Not Yet Ready to Discuss the Future Government of Our New Possessions.

Washington President McKinley's second annual message submitted to congress Monday, contains about 20,000 words. Following is a brief synopsis, including some direct excerpts from the more important features of the message:

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"Notwithstanding the added burdens rendered necessary by the war our people rejoice in a very satisfactory and increasing degree of prosperity evidenced by the largest volume of business ever recorded. Manufacture has been productive, agricultural pursuits have yielded abundant returns, labor in all fields of industry is better rewarded, revenue legislation passed by the present congress has increased the treasury's receipts to the amount estimated by its authors, the finances of the government have been successfully administered, and its credit advanced to the first rank, while its currency has been maintained at the world's highest standard. Military service under a common flag and for a righteous cause has strengthened the national spirit and served to cement more closely than ever the fraternal bonds between every section of the country."

In reviewing the controversy which led up to the war with Spain, the president takes up the thread of narrative where it terminated in his last annual message. He concluded: "It was honestly due to our friendly relations with Spain that she could be given a reasonable chance to realize her expectation of reforms to which she had become irrevocably committed. It become evident, however, that the proposed plans were barren of good results. No tangible relief was afforded the reconcentrados, among whom the rate of mortality was frightfully increased; the proffered expedient of cones of cultivation proved illusory, and it was apparent that nothing save the physical exhaustion of Spain or the Cubans and the practical ruin of the island of Cuba could result from the struggle then in progress."

At this critical juncture, the destruction of the battleship Maine occurred. Concerning it the president says: "It is a striking evidence of the self-poise and sturdy good sense distinguishing our national character that this shock, falling upon a generous people already touched by preceding events in Cuba, did not move them to any instant desperate resolve to tolerate no longer the existence of a condition of lawlessness and disorder at our doors that made possible such a deed, or to redress any wrought."

Resuming the narrative, the first step noted is the measure including a large appropriation for national defense, taken to place the country on a war footing, and adds: "It is sufficient to say that the outbreak of war, which did come, found our nation not unprepared to meet the conflict."

Reference is made to the apprehension of coming strife felt by the continental powers, voiced in the address of the president, through their ambassadors and envoys, and to the presidential reply thereto. Still animated, however, by the hope of a peaceful solution, difficulty and obeying the dictates of duty, the president felt constrained to bring about a speedy end to the Cuban struggle. Negotiations with the Madrid government, so far as practical and effective, and then it presented the question, saying: "In the name, in the name of civilization, in behalf of endangered interests, which gives us the right to speak and act, the war must stop."

Upon this statement of the case the adoption of the memorable resolution by congress, declaring the purpose of the United States to intervene between the Spanish government and the people of Cuba. Following quickly upon the enactment of the resolution was the severance of diplomatic relations between the two countries, the withdrawal of the Cuban ports, the call for volunteers and the formal declaration of the existence of a state of war. All other governments were immediately notified of the existence of war and each proclaimed its neutrality. It is not among the least significant incident of the time that the obligations of neutrality were scrupulously discharged by all, a delicate and difficult circumstance.

The president reviews at length the preparation for war, referring to the enlistment of volunteers, the material increase of the army and ships, and the precautionary measures taken for the defense of the seaboard coast and cities. "The aggregate number of mines placed was 1,535, at the principal harbors from Maine to California."

Referring to the "difficult and important character" of the work performed by the signal corps, the President says: "This service was invaluable to the executive in directing the operations of the army and navy. With a total force of over 1,300 the loss was by disease, in camp and field, officers and men included, only five." As to the authorized loan of $200,000,000 which was taken entirely by small bidders, the president says: "This was a most encouraging and significant result, showing the vast resources of the nation and the determination of the people to uphold their country's honor."

Taking up chronologically the events of the war, the president reviews them carefully. The first encounter was the shelling of Matanzas on April 27. This was followed by an engagement which was "destined to mark a memorable epoch in maritime warfare." This was Commodore Dewey's wonderful victory at Manila on May 1. The effect of this remarkable victory," says the president, "Upon the spirit of our people and upon the fortunes of the war was instant. A prestige of invincibility attached to our arms which continued throughout the struggle." The president says that "only reluctance to cause needless loss of life and property prevented the early storming and capture of the city (Manila), and therewith the absolute military occupancy of the whole group." Following the memorable trip of the battleship Oregon from San Francisco to Key West and the bombardment of San Juan and the forts of Santiago, to which special reference is made, the president says: "The next act in the war thrilled not only the hearts of our countrymen, but the world by its exceptional heroism. On the night of June 3d, Lieutenant Hobson, aided by seven devoted volunteers, blocked the narrow outlet from Santiago harbor by sinking the collier Merrimac in the channel, under a fierce fire from the shore batteries, escaping with their lives as by a miracle, and falling into the hands of the Spaniards. It is a most gratifying incident of the war that the bravery of this little band of heroes was cordially appreciated by the Spanish admiral."

The campaign of Santiago, resulting in the investment and capture of that city, is referred to as a brilliant naval achievement. A brief review is then presented of the decisive naval combat on July 3, resulting in the complete destruction of Admiral Cevera's fleet.

Concerning it the president says: "Where all conspicuously distinguished themselves, from the commanders to the gunners, and the unnamed heroes in the boiler room, each and all contributed to the achievement of this astounding victory, for which neither ancient or modern history affords a parallel in the completeness of the event and the marvelous disproportion of casualties, it would be invidious to single out any for special honor."

In this connection the president says: "Nor can we be unmindful of the achievement of our builders, mechanics and artists for their skill in the construction of our war ships."

As to the success gained by the arms of the United States in Cuba, the president says that the earnest, lasting gratitude of the nation is unsparingly due. "Nor should we alone remember the gallantry of the living, as the dead claim our tears, and our losses by battles and by disease must cloud any exultation as to the result, and teach us the awful cost of war, however rightful the cause or signal the victory.

"The total casualties in killed and wounded in the army during the war with Spain were: Officers killed, 38; enlisted men killed, 257; total, 280. Officers wounded, 113; enlisted men wounded, 1,464; total, 1,577. Of the navy: Killed, 17; wounded, 67; died as result of wounds, 1; invalided from service, 6; total, 91.

"It will be observed that while our navy was engaged in two great battles and in numerous perilous undertakings, blockade and bombardment, and more than fifty thousand of our troops were transported to distant lands and were engaged in assault and seige and battle and many skirmishes in unfamiliar territory, we lost in both arms of the service a total of 1,668 killed and wounded; and in this entire campaign by land and sea we did not lose a gun or flag, or a transport, or a ship, and with the exception of the crew of the Merrimac, not a soldier or sailor was taken prisoner."

The president bears testimony and he pays fitting tribute: "To the patriotism and devotion of that large portion of our army which, although eager to be ordered to the post of greatest exposure, fortunately was not required outside of the United States." They did their whole duty and earned the gratitude of the nation. The president says: "In tracing these events we are constantly reminded of our obligations to the Divine Master for His watchful care over us, and His safe guidance, for which the nation makes reverent acknowledgment, and offers humble prayer for the continuance of His favors." The peace negotiations which followed soon after the capitulation of Santiago, and the preparation and signing of the protocol are discussed at length. Referring to the work of the peace commissioners in Paris, the president says: "Their negotiations have made hopeful progress, so that I trust soon to be able to lay a definitive treaty of peace before the senate with a review of the steps leading to its signature.

"I do not discuss at this time the government or the future of the new possessions which will come to us as the result of the war with Spain. Such discussion will be appropriate after the treaty of peace shall be ratified. In the meantime and until the congress has legislated otherwise, it will be my duty to continue the military governments which have existed since our occupation, and to give to the people security in life and property and encouragement under a just and beneficial rule.

"As soon as we are in possession of Cuba and have pacified the island, it will be necessary to give aid and direction to its people to form a government for themselves. This should be undertaken at the earliest moment consistent with assurance and success.

"It is important that our relations with these people should be of the most friendly character and our commercial relations close and reciprocal. It should be our duty to assist in every proper way to build up the waste places of the islands, encourage the industry of the people and assist them to form a government which shall be free and independent, thus realizing the best aspirations of the Cuban people.

"Spanish rule must be replaced by a just, benevolent and humane government, created by the people of Cuba, capable of performing all international obligations, and which shall encourage thrift, industry and prosperity and promote peace and good will among all of the inhabitants, whatever may have been their relations in the past. Neither revenge or passion shall have a place in the new government. Until there is complete tranquility in the island, and a stable government inaugurated, military occupation will be continued.

The president says that with the one exception of the rupture with Spain, the intercourse of the United States with the great family of nations during the past year has been marked with cordiality. Concerning negotiations with the Argentine government, initiated with a view to removing differences in cable charges imposed against messages passing from and to the United States, the president expresses his sense of the fitness of an international agreement whereby the interchange of connecting cables may be regulated on a fair basis of uniformity and adds: "It would be strange were the nations not in time brought to realize that modern civilization, which owes so much of its progress to the annihilation of space by the electrical force, demands that this all important means of communication be a heritage of all people, to be administered and regulated in their common behalf."

As to the killing and wounding of striking miners in Luzerne county, Pa., which aroused the solicitude of Austro-Hungarian government, many of the miners being subjects of that government, the president expects to reach a harmonious understanding on the subject with Austria-Hungary.

The hope is expressed that the restrictions imposed by Belgium on the importation of American cattle will at an early day be relaxed, so as to admit live American cattle under proper regulations.

The president expects that the Nicaragua canal commission will shortly be able to report finally. "I have not hesitated to express my convictions," says the president. "That considerations of expediency and international policy as between the several governments interested in the construction and control of an inter-oceanic canal by this route require the maintenance of the statu quo until the canal commission shall have reported and the United States congress shall have had the opportunity to pass finally upon the whole matter."

The president regards, in view of our newly acquired interests in the Pacific ocean, the construction of such maritime highway is now more than ever indispensable.

Concerning the extraordinary events transpiring in the Chinese Empire, the president says that our position among nations gives the equitable claim to consideration and friendly treatment in this regard; and that it will be his aim to subserve our large interest in the orient by all means appropriate to the constant policy of our government.

Reference is made to several claims of citizens of the United States pending against other nations and to the settlement of other claims during the past year.

After reviewing the work of the Paris exposition commission, the president recommends that the appropriation of the exhibit of the United States at the Paris exposition be increased to $1,000,000.

Our relations with Great Britain have continued on the most friendly feeling and the president says it would give him especial satisfaction if he should be authorized to communicate to congress a favorable conclusion of the pending negotiations with Great Britain in respect of the domain of Canada.

The president reports that the Hawaiian commission has fulfilled its mission and that its report will be laid before congress at an early day. "It is believed that their recommendations will have the earnest consideration due to the magnitude of the responsibility resting upon you to give such shape to the relationship to those mid-Pacific lands to our home union as will benefit both in the highest degree."

Referring to the proposal of the czar of Russia for a general reduction of the military establishments, the president says: "His majesty was at once informed of the cordial sympathy of this government with the principle involved in his exalted proposal, and of the readiness of the United States to take part in the conference."

The president says that the newly-accredited envoy of the United States to the Ottoman porte carries instructions looking to the disposal of matters in controversy with Turkey for a number of years.

Alluding to the financial affairs of the country the president says in part: "The secretary of the treasury reports that the receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1898, including $64,751,223 received from sale of Pacific railroads, amounted to $405,321,335, and its expenditures to $443,368,582.

"It is estimated upon the basis of present revenue laws that the receipts of the government for the year ending June 30, 1899, will be $577,874,647, and its expenditures $689,874,647, resulting in a deficiency of $112,000,000.

"In my judgment the present condition of the treasury amply justifies the immediate enactment of legislation recommended one year ago under which a portion of the holdings should be placed in a trust fund from which greenbacks should be redeemed upon presentation, but when once redeemed should not thereafter be paid out except for gold. It is not to be inferred that other legislation relating to our currency is not required; on the contrary, there is an obvious demand for it."

The president says that in view of the recent acquisition of territory by the United States there should be established regular and frequent steamship communication under the American flag with the newly acquired islands.

In view also of the increased importance of the proposed formation of a commission of sanitary experts to investigate the yellow fever problem, owing to the military occupation of Cuba, the president recommends that congress provide for such a commission. The recommendation made by the secretary of war for the increase of the regular military establishment has the president's unqualified approval. He says that it is his purpose to muster out the entire volunteer army as soon as congress shall provide for the increase of the regular establishment. He recommends the erection for the department of justice and suggests also the advisability of making proper provision for the supreme court. He earnestly approves of the recommendation of Secretary Long as to the increase of the navy and recommends also that the grades of admiral and vice admiral be temporarily revived to be filled by officers who have specially distinguished themselves in the war with Spain. The president earnestly urges early legislation for the taking of the twelfth census, and legislation providing for the education of the 30,000 white children in the Indian territory.

IN FAVOR OF EXPRESS COMPANIES

Decisions Rendered Up to the Present in the Suits Over War Revenue Stamps.

In denying the motion of the Merchant's Association of New York in its case against the Adams Express Company for a preliminary injunction in the suit brought to compel the express companies to pay for express revenue stamps on receipts, the judge of the United States circuit court for the Southern district of New York said:

"I start with the proposition that as between individual citizens, whether they be natural individuals or corporations, common carriers or what not, originally there is the right to agree as to who should bear the burden of the service rendered, and of all the incidents of the rendition of that service. That a common carrier is subject to regulations by congress as to limitations upon his power to make such agreement with the individual citizen is not disputed. The proposition, however, is this: congress prohibited in this particular case the carrier from requiring the shipper to pay the increased expense of performing the act of transportation which the purchase, affixing and cancellation of this stamp imposes upon the carrier. There is no express language in the act, that I can find, laying the burden of that prohibition upon the carrier, and inasmuch as restrictions of the right to contract, which is a right of a great deal of importance and value to the citizen, whether he be an individual or a corporation, should not be spelled out of any uncertain language, or found to exist unless the case is abundantly clear. I am indisposed in the absence of express language, to reach the conclusion, upon this mere cursory hearing of the oral argument, and without the careful analysis and examination of the cases which might, perhaps, lead me to a different conclusion, I am constrained, I say, to reach the conclusion that the act has not prohibited the carrier from requiring the party tendering the goods to pay to the carrier the increased cost which the act of congress has made the particular act of transportation cost of the carrier. I shall therefore deny the motion for a preliminary injunction."

A similar decision was rendered in the case of the United States against the Southern Express company, decided in the United States District Court for the Western district of North Carolina, October 27, 1898. In that case the action was brought by certain fish shippers for a supposed violation of the war revenue act, on the ground that the express company had required them to pay for the revenue stamp to be affixed to each receipt when issued as a condition of accepting their goods for transportation. United States Judge Purnell dismissed the complaint, holding that while the war revenue act required that the tax should be paid, it did not provide who should make the payment, but left that question to be settled between the express companies and the shipper.

A decision to the same effect has just been rendered in the District Court of the United States for the Southern district of California, in the case of the United States against Wells, Farco & Co.'s Express. The complainant tendered a package to the express company and insisted that it should accept the same for transportation and issue therefor a receip having a 1-cent revenue stamp attached and cancelled. The express company refused to issue the receipt unless the shipper would pay the stamp and suit was brought to subject the express company to the penalty of $50, provided in the war revenue act.—Commercial-Appeal.

THE REALM OF FASHION.

Ladies' Military Jacket.

This natty jacket, while illustrating the trend of national affairs to influence women's dress this season, at the same time affords the protection requisite for a comfortable top-coat. The style is unobtrusive, but may be still less marked by the omission of the nautical looking shoulder straps. While navy blue is the favored coloring for such jackets, they may be made en costume with any seasonable woolen fabrics in black, brown, green, gray, red, or mixed colors—tweed, serge, cheviot, covert, or broadcloth being fashionable.

The close-fitting back is arranged below the waist with coat-laps and plaits that give the scant but fashionable flare. The side-back gores are shaped high in correct military outline.

The loose-fitting fronts lap in double-breasted fashion, the neck being closely fitted by short darts taken up in each front. Brass military buttons are used in closing, and the shoulder seams covered with pointed shoulder straps are held in position by buttons to match, but of smaller size. The neck is completed with a standing collar of true military cut, and a smart finish is given by the stylish application of black braid on the collar, straps, fronts, wrists and pocket laps. The plain two-seamed coat sleeves are military in cut and finish, the moderate fulness being disposed in gathers at the top.

To make this jacket for a lady of medium size will require one and three-quarter yards of material fifty-four inches wide.

Stylish Black and White Costume.

A stylish black and white combination is shown in the large engraving in black peau de soie and guipure lace over white satin, the full chemisette of white mousseline over satin imparting a soft and dainty finish. A narrow quilling of peau de soie, applied with a corded heading, trims the broad collar, revers and epaulets on the free edges. The stylish waist, equally suited for informal dress or ordinary wear, is smartly adjusted over correctly fitted linings that close in centre-front. The full fronts and seamless back are laid in overlapping pleats at the loose edge, and between the front edges is disclosed a smooth vest portion that ends under the bust in pointed outline. The full chemisette puffs out slightly, and the neck is completed by a high standing collar of white satin, covered with black guipure.

WOMAN'S AFTERNOON TOILET.

The broad collar forms a round yoke outline in black and meets the uniquely shaped lapels that roll back from the fronts. Stylish sleeves are arranged with downward turning pleats at the sides and gathers at the top over linings that are closely adjusted to the arm. The wrists flare in rounded bell shape over the hand, showing a lining of white satin and ruching of mousseline de soie under the satin quilling that finishes the edges. The graceful skirt is of circular shaping, the graduated flounce being joined to its lower edge under bias folds of cordings of satin. While desirable for silk, satin, poplin and other dress fabrics, the mode will develop equally well in any of the seasonable wool or mixed fabrics now fashionable. Braid, passementerie, insertion or applique will provide suitable decoration, while a combination of velvet, silk or satin with woolen material will produce happy results.

To make this waist for a woman of medium size will require three and one-quarter yards of material forty-four inches wide. To make the skirt will require four and one-half yards of material forty-four inches wide.

Hints on Remodeling Sleeves.

Some of the coats worn two or three winters ago can be made in style this winter if only the sleeves are cut over, and large sleeves may easily be remodeled by either of the styles which are here given. No. 1, represented in fine covert cloth, is what is called the box sleeve. Instead of the usual pleats or gathers at the top, it is shaped by short darts that are taken up at regular intervals and finished with straps applied by machine stitching. The straps may be omitted and the dart seams simply stitched and pressed flat. A shapely under-arm portion fits the sleeve comfortably, and the wrists are finished with a double row of stitching at round cuff depth. No. 2, in rough woolen cloaking, is shaped with upper and under portions, the fulness at the top being laid in two downward-turning pleats at each side of the shoulder. The wrists are completed with a cuff, simulated by two rows of machine stitching.

WOMAN'S COAT SLEEVE.

To make these sleeves for a woman of medium size will require seven eighths of a yard of material fifty-four inches wide.

The Silk Petticoat.

The new silk petticoat which can have any place among the new fashions must be fitted as carefully as the skirt which covers it, made almost as long and quite plain about the hips.

CONGRESS convened on Monday, and will now get down to work. The President sent a lengthy message reviewing the war and the present situation.

THE Peace Commission at Paris is approaching the end of its labors. As was expected Spain had to waive all the objections she raised, and we get all we asked for.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN stopped over in Montgomery last Saturday, and made an address to the General Assembly. The gallant colonel has lost none of his old time vigor, and promises to be a lively factor in the next national campaign.

THE House of Representatives, by an almost unanimous vote, passed the bill exempting for ten years all factories or manufactories established in Alabama during the ensuing five years. It is believed the bill will direct the attention of capital to Alabama.

THE General Assembly of Alabama will attend Atlanta's Peace Jubilee as a body. The joint resolution to that effect was adopted Tuesday. The assembly will recess from the evening of December 14, to the morning of December 17. It will reach Atlanta at noon December 15, and remain there a day and escort the President to Tuskegee, where he will visit Booker Washington's school. Upon its return to Montgomery the assembly will recess until January 24.

THE Montgomery Advertiser says that most of the merchants of that city write their own advertisements. A glance through the columns of the capital city papers shows one merchant who advertises an automatic oil heater as "valueless. It may be the advertiser is a truthful man and does not wish to sell his goods under false pretenses. Anyway, he is the only advertiser we ever heard of to decry his own wares. Another advertiser offers country merchants "oak and pollard beds." We perfer something warmer and softer than oak and pollard beds these winter nights. We don't know whether the Advertisor is correct or not, but someone is surely writing some funny advs. in the gay and festive capital.

In the House of Representatives Mr. Reynolds offered a resolution of thanks to Colonel Bryan for his address Saturday. The resolution tends to pledge Alabama to the support of Mr. Bryan for the presidency in 1900. The matter was referred to the rules committee, who reported favorably; and it was passed.

"Resolved, That the thanks of the House of Representatives be and are hereby tendered that great apostle of bimetallism, earnest champion of down-trodden humanity and logical leader of the friends of free silver in 1896, Colonel Wm. J. Bryan, for his wise and patriotic speech before the General Assembly of Alabama on Saturday last.

"Be it further resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that he is the logical leader of the reform forces of today as he was in 1896."

THE LOCAL PAPER.

Speaking of what a newspaper does for its community, the late U. S. Senator David Davis, of Illinois, made an address that remains ever green in the memory of newspaper men:

"Every year," he said, "your local paper gives from $500 to 1,000 in free lines for the benefit of the community in which it is located. No other agency can do or will do this. The editor, in proportion to his means, does more for the town than any other man; and in all fairness, man with man, he ought to be patronized not perhaps because you like him or admire his writings, but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be crowded with great thoughts, but financially it is more of a benefit than both preacher and teacher. To-day editors of local papers do more for less pay than any other men on earth. Patronize your home paper, not as a charity, but as an investment.

Spain Cannot Hold the Phillippines.

All intelligent opinions during the past month have been in confirmation of the view that the only salvation for the Phillippine archipelago lies in the full establishment there of American authority. The Spanish forces would be wholly unable to quell the rebels under Aguinaldo and other leaders. But, on the other hand, the rebels themselves are not sufficiently unified in leadership and propose to establish peace and order. If left to themselves they would break into warring factions at once, Manila would be looted, all foreign and commercial interests would be sacrificed, and the anarchy would prevail. Already they are acting independently in different islands. Spain would, of course, endeavor to sell the islands to European powers. But here, again, all sorts of trouble would instantly arise. French influence predominates in Spain; and France and Russia would by no means be willing to see Germany installed at Manila. Germany and England, on the other hand, would assuredly not be willing to see France or Russia fall heir to the islands. The continental powers in a group, would protest against an English solution of the Phillippine question. The Japanese, undoubtedly, would be glad to take the islands, but neither Europe, on the one hand, nor the Filipinos, on the other, would tolerate that. The loss of the Phillippines by Spain has really been enevitable for a long time. Spanish unfitness for colonial administration had become too glaringly apparent in the light of nineteenth-century civilization to survive far into the twentieth. Even if we had not taken Manila, the destruction of Cervera's fleet and Spain's loss of the West Indies would have fanned the spirit of Phillippine revolution into a great flame, which Spain's diminished resources would have been unable to quench. It is only when one gives careful consideration to the possible alternatives that the necessity for the further presence of American power in the Phillippines seems clear.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for December.

diver gives [illegible] pull to release those above. Two pulls on the air pipe give the diver down "more air" again "faster," and so on throughout the code of signals.

In addition to the signal code modern invention has supplied and utilized the telephone, and a speaking apparatus for men working at a depth of 60 feet or more is frequently used. The electric light also is now employed by divers working at a depth beyond 20 feet.—James Cassidy in St. Nicholas.

The Berbers of Morocco are an interesting blond race dispersed along the Atlas range. In the central Atlas they still call themselves "Berber" (plural Berebber), but the meaning of the word is uncertain. Perhaps it is the source of our word "barbarian."

Political Pointers.

Peoples Party Press Bureau
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 7, 1898

It will doubtless be a keen disappointment to the friends of the Woman Suffrage to learn that the final returns from the election in South Dakota show that measure defeated.

Estimates as to the "stay-at-home" vote in the last election show a surprising amount of political indifference. In Missouri alone over a hundred thousand voters remained away from the pols.

The Prohibition party claims some gains in the central west, in the recent election.

The middle-of-the-road Populists (?) in Missouri cast less than 10,000 votes in the last election. Since the election law in that state requires 18,000 votes to maintain party standing they can have nominees on the official ballot, in future, only by petition.

"Joe" Leiter, of recent wheat fame is now engaged in trying to get up a milk trust. Next!

The split in the Republican party on the question of expansion grows apace. Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, on his return to Washington asserted openly that his party in the west stood solidly for extension of territory; Eastern Republicans led by Carnegie take the opposite grounds.

The newspapers are ringing the changes on the names of Roosevelt and Pingree as the leaders of the Republican ticket in 1900.

Articles of incorporation of the Silverware trust were recently filed in New Jersey. The authorized capital stock is $20,000,000 held exclusively by New York capitalists.

Richmond Pearson Hobson, who is claimed by southern papers to be a Populist, has won new laurels by refusing a $50,000 offer from a New York lecture bureau.

Dispatches from Topeka, Kansas, report a sensational discovery of the robbery of strong boxes in the state Treasury Department at that place. The boxes were used by state officials and clerks in the various departments. Governor Leedy was named among the losers.

At a convention of miners to be held at Massillon, Ohio, Dec. 12, it is believed the feasibility and necessity of a widespread strike among coal-miners will be decided.

All high administration supporters are declaring unequivocally in favor of a heavy increase of the standing army and 100,000 is the lowest figure favorably mentioned.

Mark Hanna has announced that he favors the bringing up of the Nicaragua canal question at the present session of congress. It goes without saying that he decries government ownership or operation as "impracticle and visionary" and asserts that a heavy subsidy is the correct thing.

The Union Reform party executive committee held a meeting at Columbus, O., November 26, and steps were taken to form a new organization. Delegates from Illinois, New York and Indiana met with the Ohio men. A national meeting for next March is to be called and it is hoped that the Populist, Silver Republican and Liberty parties can be consolidated. Ohio Populists who have been loud in denunciation of fusion or co-operation in the recent past are identified with this plan which is undoubtedly a move in the right direction. The Union Reformers cast 11,500 votes in Ohio at the election, so they will be entitled, in 1900 to a place on the official ballot.

Figures issued by the comptroller of the currency and director of the mint for the fiscal year claim an influx of gold into this country of $267,000,000, making the present gold fund $925,000,000. These figures are of course more or less "juggled" but as remote as may have been the intention of the official who issued them from establishing such a fact, they only go to show that the Populistic clamor for more money was and is well founded. Of course added prosperity is claimed by the same report.

Complete election returns from Kansas show the vote to be as follows. Republican, 149,443; Populist, 133,908; Prohibition, 4,066.

Among the other measures to be recommended to congress by the Hawaiian commission is a bill prohibiting the importation of contract labor.

The Story Grandma Told.

Mollie's father was a shipbuilder, and the next day one of the largest ships ever built in his yards was to be launched. The wonderful thing about the event, in Mollie's eyes, was the fact that she was to launch in the Ariadne and christen the great ship as it plunged into the water.

The little girl had seen many a vessel sent down the long "ways" to take its magnificent plunge into the water, but there's lots of difference, so Mollie thought, between seeing a thing and "being right into it!"

"Did you ever launch in a vessel, grandma?" she said that evening. She was up in Grandma Pingree's room, talking over her coming experience.

"Why, yes, dear," said grandma. "I launched in a vessel all alone once when I was a little girl."

"Why-e-e, Grandma Pingree!" gasped Mollie.

Grandma smiled. "Yes," she said, "and the queer thing about it was that I didn't know it until the launching was all over!"

Mollie was too much astonished now even to say "Why-e-e!"

Then grandma went on. "My father built ships down on the banks of the river where we lived. In those days they built vessels in the late fall and winter and worked at farming in the summer. When I was 7 years old, father had a vessel ready to launch the 1st of April. I used to go down every day and play in the cabin in the shavings the carpenters had made.

"The day before the vessel was to launch I was playing in the cabin all alone, the workmen being employed in the yard outside. An unusually big tide came in that day, and father decided that as everything was so nearly ready they would better take advantage of the tide and launch at once. So the workmen began to wedge up the blocks, forgetting all about me, and pretty soon the vessel slid gently off into the river.

"Just as the big ropes began to tighten and hold it I went up on deck for something or other, and a more surprised little girl I guess never lived. Father came off in a boat to get me, and he called me 'cap'n' and asked where I was 'bound.' When we got ashore, he said they would name the vessel the Elsie, after me."

"Well," said Mollie with conviction in her tone, "if I had been having such a good time as that I should want to have known it."—Webb Donnell in Youth's Companion.

The sooner a cough or cold is cured without harm to the sufferer the better. Lingering colds are dangerous. Hacking cough is distressing. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures it. Why suffer when such a cough cure is within reach? It is pleasant to the taste. J. M. Stanfield.

UNCLE EZEKIEL GREAR, assessor and tax collector, Berkley, Mass., who has passed the 80th mile stone, says: "Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has done a great deal of good. I suffered for years from sleeplessness and nervous heart trouble. Would feel weary and used up in the morning, had no ambition and my work seemed a burden. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I purchased a bottle under protest as I had tried so many remedies unsuccessfully, I thought it was use. But it gave me restful sleep a good appetite and restored me to energetic health. It is a grand good medicine and I will gladly write anyone inquiring, for more particulars of my satisfactory experience."

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

Negro Education—Why the Training Should Be Industrial and Not Literary Georgia and the Currency Question—The Textile Workers.

The Man Who Is Ready Now.

I want to join the army
And wear a uniform;
I want to be a soldier, since
There are no forts to storm.
I want to have brass buttons,
I'd like some shoulder-straps,
So that I might look down upon
All ordinary chaps.

I want to be a soldier,
I want a sword to wear;
I want to ride a horse and smash
The hearts of maidens fair;
I'd like to join the army
At the present moment, for I'll be a long, long time before
We have another war.

—Cleveland Leader.

Negro Education.

"One of the most serious mistakes that have been made all over this country in the treatment of the negro," the principal of one of the colored schools said to a Baltimore Sun man, "has been the establishing of schools in every way like the schools for white children. The white children have the inheritance which have descended to them through generations of cultivated and intelligent ancestors. The negroes have no such inheritance. The education that is adapted to the higher intelligence of the whites is too high for the negro in his present state. Three or four generations hence he will be ready for the kind of education that is offered him now. What he needs now is industrial training, combined with some literary training.

"The present system of training has a tendency to qualify them for clerical positions, but nine-tenths of the colored people earn their living by manual labor, and for many years to come will have to do so. It is true that we have a polytechnic institute for colored boys here in Baltimore, but more attention is given to the grammar grades to preparation for the high school course than for the polytechnic course.

"I don't want to give the impression that I think they get too much literary training in the primary and grammar schools. What they do get is too much in a certain space of time. They can not accomplish the grade work as readily as the white children can and the two schools ought to be graded differently. Longer time ought to be allowed for the accomplishing of the grade work, and the ccurse, by all means, ought to include manual training.

After nearly twenty years' experience as a teacher in colored schools it seems to me that it would be wiser to recgonize the existing conditions—to recognize the dense ignorance which prevails among the majority of the colored people; to recognize the fact that the standard of living is not the same among the colored people as among the whites, and to make allowance for it in our school system. Neither the income nor the intelligence of the colored people enables them to live as the majority of the white people live. Why not recognize the fact? Some of the colored children must add to the family income. Instead of making rules which refuse to recognize this, why not rearrange the system so that they can have the advantage of the very necessary training?"

Consul Stowe's Advice.

From Chicago News: In his report to a Chicago export association Consul General Stowe confirms what has been said in these columns about the necessity of American manufacturers' studying the requirements of foreign trade. On the subject of fly screen Mr. Stowe's expresses volumes in a single paragraph:

"I received a bid recently," he says, "for four cheap screen doors and seven windows (lower sash only), the wire on the windows to be simply tacked on, and the price was $27.50. The people here know nothing of fly screens, though they are as necessary as in America."

Mr. Stowe emphasizes the fact that the best plan would be for some one posted on the manufacturing of doors, windows and similar parts of a house to go to South Africa and see how the houses are built, as they differ from those in this country. Lumber is scarce and very high in that part of the world and the Americans could monopolize the market if they wanted to.

That there is money in the project is evident by the price Mr. Stowe paid for his window screens. In Chicago the order would be filled for $5 or $6 at the outside and probably for less. Mr. Stowe says the wire was cheap and had large meshes and the lumber was poor.

"One of the lessons," Mr. Stowe suggests, "to be learned by the American manufacturer is that he must adapt his products to the wants and needs of the foreign buyer. You cannot force upon the foreign buyer what you may honestly believe is the article he ought to buy, but after willingly supplying him with what he wants you can gain his good-will and cofidence and finally convince him that you are right and he is wrong."

If American manufacturers hope to keep pace with the American expansion policy they must study the foreign trade. When they do that they will control it.

Georgia Currency Reformers.

Evidently the Georgia house of representatives is composed of advanced scientific currency reformers of the Carlisle-Gage-Etcetera school. The difference between the Georgia legislators and the reformers who have had their theories promulgated from the treasury department is that the Georgians are the more logical and candid of the two. The Georgia house has re-enacted a law permitting any bank in the state to issue circulating notes to the extent of 75 per cent of its paid-in capital and inviting would-be beneficiaries of the law to test the constitutionality of that clause of the federal bank law which imposes a tax of 10 per cent on state bank notes. The Carlisle currency bill and, to a less extent, the Gage bill, aimed precisely in the direction of a condition which would follow upon the Georgia law if it were carried into effect. Both the Carlisle and the Gage bill proposed that banks should be permitted to issue circulating notes based solely upon their credit; and the proviso that the federal government should guarantee the payment of such notes served only to emphasize the weakness of the proposition. If we are to have a currency which is based simply on the credit of the issuing banks and which will become worthless when the banks fail, save as the national government gratuitously steps in and pays the insolvent bankers' debt, why not go the whole logical length and invite all and sundry to hang out a bank sign and start their printing presses? The Georgians head the procession of this style of currency reform. Both plans will do more to educate the people on the financial question than was accomplished in 1896.

Electric Wire in Africa.

According to advices from South Africa, no sooner was the British flag floating over its ancient dervish capital than Mr. Cecil Rhodes at once took steps for expediting his scheme for a transafrican line of telegraph from Cape Town to Cairo. Mr. Rhodes' lieutenant, R. D. Mohun, has already left Bombay with an expedition, bound either for Zanzibar or Mombasa. The party will take advantage of the agreement lately come to between the promoters and the Congo Free State, and will construct a telegraph line from Lake Tanganyika to Stanley Falls, on the upper Congo, the work being carried out under the commission of the state. W. Cavendish, the well known explorer, is already carrying the line northward through the extreme northern territory of the Chartered company, and it is confidently expected that he will form a connection with the Mohun line within the next two years. By that time the Tanganyika line will have reached Stanley Falls, and Cape Town will be in telegraphic communication with the chief town on the upper Congo, or, in other words, half the length of the line which is to connect Cape Town with Cairo will be complete. On the other hand, advices from Alexandria are that the line is being pushed southward as fast as possible. The Sirdar kept up complete communication between the front and Cairo, and now the news comes that the line is being carried toward Fashoda from Khartum at the rate of four miles a day. Among the members of Mr. Mohun's party is Dr. Castalotti, who went out from Europe two years ago for plague duty in India. He subsequently returned home, but has since returned to Bombay to join Mr. Mohun's party, for which he acts as medical officer.—New York Times.

Textile Workers.

The general executive council of the National Union of Textile-Workers of America met in the Hotel Cadillac, New York, the other day, and discussed the advisability of making a demand for fewer hours of work and higher wages all over the country. The union, it was said, may soon have a fight upon its hands in the South, where the wages of employes have already been reduced. A member of the executive committee was directed to confer with the local leaders in Augusta, Ga., where trouble is expected in the King & Sibley mills.

Local Union No. 120, Wool-Pullers, of this city, was pledged to the financial and moral support of the National Union in its endeavors to obtain shorter hours and better wages.

The council issued a statement, calling the attention of manufacturers to probable danger to the cotton industry of this country, in the event of the annexation of the Philippines. The council said that if foreign capital were to build factories there the southern manufacturers will suffer greatly.

Labor Notes.

Cleveland (O.) bakers use 400,000 union labels weekly.

There are 12,000 women trades unionists in Great Britain.

Chattanooga stonecutters secured the eight-hour day without trouble.

Philadelphia bricklayers get 45 cents an hour, eight hours a day and have a half-holiday Saturday.

The street car strike at Chippewa Falls, Wis., is off. The men work sixteen hours a day and get $8.10 a week.

Four-fifths of the iron and steel works now have the eight-hour day. The change has been gradual since 1885.

The Hod-carriers' Union of Bloomington, Ill., asked for an increase of 2½ cents an hour, and were successful after a strike of a day and a half.

An agitation is going on in New York city to enforce the ten-hour law for railway employes, some of whom have been compelled to work as high as twenty-two hours continuously.

The secretary of the Retail Clerks' National Protective Association reports eight new locals organized since the adjournment of the convention a few weeks ago. This association is also meeting with fair success in its attempts to establish the early closing custom and the six-day week. The national organization is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and in nearly all cases the locals are connected with the central labor bodies.

FINANCIAL CATECHISM

CHAPTER ON INDEPENDENT ACTION—PLAIN FACTS.

Under the Safeguards of the Democratic Platform the United States Can Coin Silver Free Without Fear of Foreign Conspirators.

II.

Q. But if we adopt free silver will not our foreign securities be thrown upon the markets and how are we to pay our foreign obligations?

A. All foreign obligations falling due must be paid, no matter whether we have free silver or a gold standard, unless they be extended. If foreign securities, which are foreign debts, be thrown upon our markets they will be eagerly taken by our own people, and no patriotic citizen will regret very deeply such a change. From conditions brought about by "foreign investments" so ardently loved by advocates of the gold standard, by which 30,000,000 acres of our domain—a territory greater than New York or Pennsylvania, belongs to foreigners, such as the British Lord Scully, who owns 3,000,000 acres in Illinois, and applies to it the pernicious system of British landlordism; the legislature of Illinois has thought it necessary to protect us by prohibiting the ownership of lands in Illinois by foreigners. And I am one of those who would rather use home capital and home products for the development of home lands and industries. We will pay our foreign obligations as we have always done, in our own products, which consist of gold, silver, wheat, cotton, corn and manufactured articles, just as we paid them from 1860 to 1880, when we had nothing but paper money. And because the burden will fall upon our wheat and cotton and corn it is important that the price of these articles shall be kept up in order that we may be enabled to pay our debts.

Q. Does the disuse of silver as standard money affect the price of these commodities?

A. It does. With 60 cents in gold the English merchant can buy from us one ounce of silver. He can take his ounce of silver to India, Russia or the Argentine Republic, all silver countries, and exchange it for a bushel of wheat. By selling a bushel of wheat for an ounce of silver the wheat-raiser of Russia, Argentina or India is getting as much for his wheat as he ever got, and his ounce of silver will exchange in his own country for as much as it ever would. Because he is competing with us for the wheat market of the world we must sell our wheat for the same price, 60 cents in gold, or one ounce of silver. But an ounce of silver will only pay 60 cents' worth of debts or buy 60 cents' worth of supplies for us, where formerly it paid $1.29 worth of debts and bought $1.29 worth of supplies. So if we must compete for the market of our most important products with silver countries we must use the kind of money they use or get worsted. What is true of wheat is true of all our products so far as they compete for the markets of the world. One result of this decrease of prices is shown in the following statement: To pay the national debt at the close of the year 1895 would require

646,778,584 bushels of wheat,
90,780,731 barrels more flour,
8,673,406,863 pounds more cotton,
51,339,540 barrels more mess pork

than it would have in 1866.

Q. But why do you take wheat, etc., for illustration? Has not the cost of raising wheat and other agricultural products been greatly reduced of late by the invention of labor-saving machinery, and are not the low prices due to overproduction?

A. We take wheat and other agricultural products for example because, as has already been said, they are important in that we must rely upon them in trade with foreign nations and in paying foreign debts. They constitute 95 per cent of our exports. We are very much interested in them. The period of great labor-saving inventions came before 1873. Prior to 1873 steam was being utilized, the cotton gin, the grain drill, the reaper and the thresher had taken the place of hand work, the cradle and the flail, yet prices had not fallen as they have done since 1873. Nor is the cost of production of wheat being greatly reduced. According to the report of the Illinois state board of agriculture for 1895, the average cost of production of wheat from

1873 to 1895 was 72 cents per bushel;
1881 to 1895 was 75 cents per bushel;
1893 to 1895 was 69.4 cents per bushel.

Nor is over-production the cause. From 1860 to 1873 the production of wheat in the world increased annually at the rate of 2.8 per cent; at the same time prices advanced 20 per cent. From 1873 to 1885 the world's production only increased 1.6 per cent annually, a decrease of almost one-half, but prices fell nearly 32 per cent. Under present conditions, however, there seems to be an under-consumption. In 1877 we consumped per capita 5.01 bushels of wheat when it was $1.17 per bushel. In 1894 we consumed but 3.41 bushels per capita, though it was worth but 67 cents per bushel. The conclusion is inevitable that neither tthe reduction of the cost of production or an over-production has caused the decrease in price, and it is also shown that a great deal more would be consumed if the people had the means with which it could be secured.

Q. Is there not a possibility that some one or some "business interests" may be injured to some extent, i. e., may not persons or corporations who receive fixed incomes, salaries or wages be compelled to pay higher prices for what they buy and receive no more than they now do for their services or any increase of income?

A. The class receiving fixed incomes incapable of being advanced is alone the beneficiary of a single gold standard. Blaine put the case very clearly in 1880 when he said: "The destruction of silver as money and establishing of gold as the sole unit of value must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property except those investments which yield a fixed return in money. Those would be enormously enhanced in value and would give a disproportionate and unfair advantage over every other species of property. Few incomes, however, are absolutely fixed. Almost every line of business and every product of human endeavor must be affected advantageously by the general prosperity of the masses. If it be insisted that some will suffer at least some inconvenience if not slight actual loss, I can reply in no better way than by using the language of an old soldier of my acquaintance: 'When the war broke out I was leading a pleasant, prosperous life. My country called me to face the dangers of flying shot and shell and whistling bullets. Did I heed her call I must give up my peaceful, pleasant career and risk my life. I must give up my $40 per month to receive $13. But the welfare of my countrymen, the fate of a nation hung in the balance, and I shouldered my gun.' Almost the same condition confronts me today. Ten million ill-paid or unemployed laborers, my countrymen, are appealing to me. I hear the complaints of fifty millions of homeless men, women and children. I know that tens of thousands in this land of abundance are in want. The future welfare of my country is at stake. My duty is clear, and though I and some with me be reduced to bread and water, I will vote for bimetallism and a return of prosperity to my country." Because a man has a fixed salary or income today is no indicattion that his condition will be the same next week or next year. At the caprice of an employer he may be dismissed at any moment and be supplanted by one of the dozen or more who are waiting for such a place. Nor is a present fixed income an assurance to any man that his good fortune will descend to his children and possess them of a like advantage.

Q. Do not the Republicans favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver?

A. They say so in their platform, but affirm that we should wait for international agreement.

Q. Well, if it be a condition to be desired at all, why not have it at once?

A. ——

Q. And if it be not desirable, why attempt to promote it by international agreement?

A. ——

Q. Or, if it be in any measure necessary, what are we to do while waiting for international agreement or in case of failure to secure it?

A. ——

The platform does not answer these questions and I leave them to the reader.—J. J. Thompson's Financial Catechism.

The Bryan Dollar.

The "Bryan dollar," to which our New York contemporary alludes with undisguised contempt, was not invented by Bryan, but was created by the people of the United States acting through their congress. We make the statement not in the way of news, but because of the confirmed habit among a great many newspapers of sneering at "the Bryan dollar." We have some 440,000,000 of standard silver dollars in circulation, largely by paper proxies. All told, we have silver to the amount of $550,000,000, reckoned at its coined value. Every penny that has gone out of the bullion value of silver since the decline began has caused a loss of millions to the people of the United States—a loss that can only be made good by a rise in the price of silver. But each of the despised "Bryan dollars," although containing less than 41 cents' worth of silver, is still good for 100 cents; still as good as gold, for each has the faith of the United States pledge to keep it a parity with gold, and the world believes that the pledge will be kept. In other words, each of these silver dollars requires about 59 cents in fiat to keep it afloat at par. Considering the immensity of the stake this nation has in silver, is it patriotic, is it wise, to do or say anything calculated to cheapen that metal? Is it fitting that officials of the United States treasury and the "sound money" papers should join in a chorus of sneers at the "Bryan dollar" and chuckle with glee whenever values go out of and fiat goes into our $550,000,000 of silver.—Washington Post (Rep.)

New Use for Oilcloth.

Oilcloth is the new material for papering ceilings, the term "paper" being used at present in a very elastic sense, signifying anything that can be put on walls or ceiling. The advantage of an oilcloth ceiling is readily discernible, as dust, like good actions, is sure to rise, and if one's home is illuminated by gas or lamps there is only the recourse to the unsightly chandelier protectors to keep the ceiling from getting smudged. The oilcloth can be washed frequently and be kept, by the aid of a damp cloth, as good as new for infinite spaces of time or until one moves to a newer apartment. The task of putting on the oilcloth requires an expert, as the joining is not the easiest thing to do. If you think so, try it. The patterns of oilcloths seem particularly well adapted for ceilings, with their scroll and line effects, which do not conflict with the patterns of the wall paper or its monochromatic effect.

ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

Thursday—Gov. Johnston Inaugurated.

Hon. Joseph Forney Johnston was today inaugurated governor of the state of Alabama, to serve a second term. There was no especial demonstration. It was purely a formal matter, and the time consumed in the ceremonies was only six and three-quarter minutes. There was no procession of carriages from the hotels down town up Dexter avenue to the capitol. Nor was there any military display. Around the capital an outsider would not have recognized that an event of great state importance was transpiring within.

"This morning's session of the senate was devoted exclusively to routine business. The standing committees reported many bills favorably.

A message was received from the governor transmitting to the senate a list of pardons made by him during his two years in office. The message was referred to the committee on penitentiary and criminal administration, without reading. A message from the senate was received transmitting to the house a number of bills. The speaker signed several bills, and at 11:45 o'clock the house took an informal recess to await the arrival of the senate for the inauguration.

Bills were passed by the house as follows:

To make the fees of constables the the same as sheriff's when they perform the same or similar services, the counties of Lee, Walker, Tallapoosa, Limestone, Barbour, Marshall and Lawrence excluded; to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act to prescribe the duties and qualifications of attorneys and councellors at law, and to regulate their admission to practice in the courts of the state."

In the senate a joint resolution was received from the house asking the superintendent of education to furnish the general assembly with a list of teachers employed in the state.... The joint resolution appointing two servants to serve in the senate was read and passed.... The following bills were read a third time and passed: To authorize Jackson county to build macadamized roads and bridges and to issue bonds of the county to aid in the construction and building thereof with amendment; to prevent hunting on land in Jefferson county without written consent of the owner; to establish a county court for the county of Clay.

A message was received from the governor embodying a list of pardons granted and reasons therefor, which was referred to committees on penitentiary, prisons and punishment. On motion of Mr. Caffee the senate adjourned for thirty minutes to attend the inauguration of Governor Johnston. Upon reconvening after attending the inauguration exercises in the hall of the house, the senate took up the reports of the committees. Several bills were favorably reported and ordered on the calendar.

Bill 135, to regulate the working of children under the age of 12 years in mines and factories in the state of Alabama, but not to apply to prisoners serving sentences for violation of the laws, was then taken up and created much discussion. The bill passed by a vote of 20 to 6. The senate then adjourned.

Saturday—Bryan at Montgomery.

The visit of Col. William J. Bryan to the capitol today was the event of the session of the legislature. A telegram was sent the Nebraskan yesterday, and on his arrival here he was met by a committee from both houses. He agreed to stop and spend the day, provided he was not to make a speech. He was escorted to the capitol, where he held an informal reception in the hall of the house of representatives.

The conference committee having in charge the Birmingham police commission bills today agreed upon the senate bill, with a few alterations. This measure retains the police commission and makes the members elective, the present board to hold until their successors are elected by the people at the municipal election next May. As amended and accepted the senate bill makes the number of commissioners seven instead of five, and gives the mayor charge of the city prison.

In the senate Mr. Moody introduced a bill to regulate the capital stock of the Tuscaloosa Coal and Iron Company. Mr. Thompson introduced a bill to provide for compulsory vaccination in public schools and generally for the protection of the public against all the royal family of Hawaii, the days of the missionaries Princess Ruth was a nominal an, or at least a church member. But about thirty years ago there lava flow from Mauna Loa threatened to engulf and destroy Hilo. Continuous prayer meetings were held in the foreign church to avert the threatened destruction. But steadily nearer the hot stream of melted lava came. At last Princess Ruth, throwing all her pretensions of Christianity aside a pilgrimage to Hawaii, her way to the very edge of the's burning lake, and there sacrifice and prayers to Pele, the goddess of fire. At the very hour of the act of devotion the lava flow ceased and Hilo was saved. This had the effect of securing great popularity for Princess Ruth among the people, and very near the effect of the fifty years' work of the missionaries.—Chicago Record.

BILL ARP'S WEEKLY LETTER

A DISCOURSE ON OBSERVANCE OF THANKSGIVING DAY.

PHILOSOPHER SAYS HE'S GRATEFUL

Gathers At the Festal Board, Laden With Good Things, With Fifteen Members of His Immediate Family.

If I was a preacher and believed like General Breckinridge that this was God's war and that God gave us the victory, I would preach a sermon today on Thanksgiving, and would read David's song that he sang after his great victory over the Philistines, for it was the first thanksgiving of that kind on record, and seems to fit our case. "Thou hast given me the necks of mine enemies. I did beat them as small as the dust of the earth. Thou hast kept me to be the head of the heathen, and a people that I knew not shall serve me. Strangers shall submit themselves unto me and shall be obedient unto me. Thou hast lifted me up high above them that rose against me. Therefore, I will give thanks unto Thee, O Lord."

The observance of Thanksgiving Day was a very ancient custom among the Jews. Moses ordained that all the tribes should gather three times a year and bring offerings and give thanks to God for his goodness. The word thanks means grateful thought, an expression of gratitude and the scriptures from Genesis to Revelation give it the highest importance as an acceptable sacrifice. David's Psalms are pregnant with gratitude and he urges it upon all people in the most impressive language. In the days of the apostles the giving of thanks was a daily offering, not only in the temple service, but at home and at their meals. Even the Savior would not distribute the loaves and fishes until He had given thanks; nor did He pass the cup at the last supper until he had given thanks to the Father. Our custom of saying grace at the table is as old as history. It should be said seriously, devoutly and from the heart as well as the tongue. Why not? What good thing have we got that was not given us by our heavenly Father? What are we, anyhow? We don't know where we came from, nor whither we are going, nor what shall be our future state.

We cannot add a year or a day to our existence. We cannot foresee or prevent the accidents of life. We cannot make a single article of food or clothing. We don't know the process by which the grain germinates and grows or the sheep takes on wool or how the silkworm weaves his cocoon. In fact we are utterly helpless and dependent on our Creator and should give thanks every day and every hour, for ingratitude is the basest of all sins. Milton says: "A glutton ne'er looks to heaven during his feast, but with base ingratitud crams himself and blasphemes his feeder." Shakespeare says that "ingratitude is a marble-hearted fiend" and "Blow, blow, thou winter wind. Thou are not so cutting or unkind as man's ingratitude." What a fool is the man who is proud of his money or the woman who is vain of her beauty, for neither was the author of it and neither gave any thanks to God for it. Humility to God is the fittest garment for us all, and gratitude its best ornament. "Humble yourselves under His mighty hand," says St. Paul.

A quaint old poet, who died 250 years ago, said of the Savior: "He was the best of men—a soft, meek, patient, humble spirit—the first true gentleman that ever breathed."

But this is sermon enough for a layman to preach. Turkey time is near at hand and all the et ceteras that surround the feast—we are to dine out today with fifteen of my family. I am thankful that they are all well enough to eat turkey, and the et ceteras, and are all fairly good-looking, except me, and all are loving and kind. I am thankful that we live in this goodly land and that no affliction or calamity has befallen us. I am thankful for the abundant crops, including the 4-cent cotton, for it was Him who sent the sunshine and the rain that made it. 'Twas not Him who fixed the price. I'm thankful for the fruits that feasted us and the children and the flowers that gladden our eyes, and the birds that sing to us. And now how beautiful are the fading leaves that mingle their bright colors with the green pines upon the distant hills. As the poet says:

"The world is very lovely; oh, my God,
I thank Thee that I live."

But amidst all our comforts and luxuries and pleasing emotions, the essence of Thanksgiving will be lost unless we remember the poor and the distressed, not only in our prayers, but in our deeds. Our preacher has invited us all to bring an offering to the church—an offering for the orphans at Clinton, where we have two that our Sabbath school maintains. That is practical thanksgiving, for Solomon saith, "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," and an old Scotch preacher added, "Now if you like the security, down with the dust."

I'm thankful that this unhappy war is over, if it is over, and I grieve for all those who have suffered from it, whether they be friends or foes.

But the turkey bell calls and I am wanted to preside and say grace. I wish that everybody had a turkey and et ceteras.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

Curb and Snaffle Combined.

A Canadian has designed a single rein for use on bridles which has all the advantages both of curb and snaffle reins. The single straps are attached to the bit by springs, with chains running to the ends of the curbs, which will not operate until the pull on the springs becomes strong enough to stretch them. The springs are stiff enough to withstand any ordinary pull, preventing the use of the curb until it becomes absolutely necessary.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

AN AFFAIR OF THE NATION

It has been said of Americans that they are "a nation of dyspeptics" and it is true that few are entirely free from disorders of the digestive tract, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Stomach and Bowel trouble, or Constipation. The treatment of these diseases with cathartic medicines too often aggravates the trouble.

THE LOGICAL TREATMENT is the use of a remedy that will build up the system, thereby enabling the various organs to act as Nature intended they should. Such a remedy is found in Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Here is the proof.

In Detroit there are few soldiers more popular and efficient than Max R. Davies, first sergeant of Co. B. His home is at 415 Third Avenue. For four years he was a bookkeeper with the wholesale drug house of Farrand, Williams & Clark, and he says: "I have charged up many thousand orders for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, but never knew their worth until I used them for the cure of chronic dyspepsia. For two years I suffered and doctored for that aggravating trouble but could only be helped temporarily.

"I think dyspepsia is one of the most stubborn of ailments, and there is scarcely a clerk or office man but what is more or less a victim. Some days I could eat anything, while at other times I would be starving. Those distressed pains would force me to quit work. I have tried many treatments and remedies but they would help only for a time. A friend induced me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and after taking a few doses I found much relief and after using several boxes I was cured. I know these pills will cure dyspepsia of its worst form and I am pleased to recommend them."—Detroit (Mich.) Journal.

Motherhood

THIS event in the life of a woman is looked forward to with a feeling akin to horror—not because the little one is not welcome, but because the mother dreads the direful consequences to herself. Those long hours of agonizing labor stand out before her like a hideous nightmare. An improper delivery, followed by child-bed fever, may end the scene in a few short days, leaving the little one motherless. But there is another side to the picture. If women who are expecting to become mothers will commence the use of the great female tonic,

GERSTLE'S FEMALE PANACEA,
TRADE (G. F. P.) MARK.

regularly as directed a few weeks before confinement, and continue its use until the organs are restored to their normal condition, the hours of labor will be shortened, the pain lessened, and recovery complete. If there is any costiveness, move the bowels gently with mild doses of St. Joseph's Liver Regulator.

WINE OF CARDUI

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. ROZENA LEWIS, of Genaville, Texas, says: "I was troubled at monthly intervals with terrible pains in my head and back but Cardui has been entirely relieved by Wine of Cardui."

Sour Stomach Cure.

A long time I was a great sufferer from Liver and Stomach troubles. I had a dull pain in my left side under my heart. At times my side became swollen and the pain acute. My stomach was always sour and I would vomit every time I eat. My bowels were very irregular, causing me pain and distress. I tried many things without any benefit. I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose. I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—D. W. Two Pointed Questions Answered.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it?

Ans.—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best?

If both articles are brought prominently before the public both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and use only the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. "History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full-page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in te colors. It is sold by subscription, and will undoubtedly prove a money-maker to every intelligent salesman.

A Swiss anthropologist, on his return from Patagonia, brought home with him a complete collection of Patagonian skulls, and when the custom-house proposed to tax them on the basis of animals' bones imported as manure, he protested that this was an insult to humanity. To his surprise his objection was listened to, and he received a receipt for the duty charged upon a higher scale, with the skulls entered as "returned emigrants' worn effects."

The act requiring the navy department to build four more monitors was passed before the lessons of the war had shown the defects of this class, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Since the craft must be built it is well that they be the best of their kind. Thus it is gratifying that the plans are to be changed, and the new monitors made much larger and better than the old. They are valuable only for harbor defense, but they can go to sea at a pinch, and can make a long voyage if they do not have to encounter rough weather ships on the way. However, the country is not likely to build any more, as we are not likely to have any more scares about attacks on the coast. The Spanish war has shown that the place to defend our coasts is out at sea, wherever an enemy's fleet can be found.

The development of mines of ore and sulphur in Sicily has always been the cause of many strikes, on account of the low prices paid to the laborers. The government of Rome obtained recently from the Chambers a law guaranteeing financial support to sick or wounded and lame miners. The proprietors of the mines announced that they would decrease the wages of the workmen in a sufficient proportion to meet the extra expenses imposed upon them by the operation of the new law taxing property for the support of invalid laborers. The miners in the Province of Girgenti to the number of about a thousand have struck work, and, at last reports, the strike was still in progress; fortunately this time it was not accompanied by the violence and bloodshed which too often marked the labor troubles of Sicily.

The history of the last few years shows a succession of hostilities against England from all sides and in all quarters, none the less aggressive, none the less dangerous, than if they had been conducted in actual warfare, says the Sydney (New South Wales) Bulletin. Look at the intrigues of France in Egypt, in Siam, in Niagara, in Madagascar, or the Nile; look at the encroachments of Russia in Persia Afghanistan, the Pamirs; look at the characteristically prudent and cautious, but none the less real hostility of Germany in the Transvaal, in Zanzibar, in Samoa; look today at the unanimous exultation of the continent at the blows which are being struck at the prestige and commercial interests of England in the East. Everything seems to show that England must either make ignoble submission to a European aggressiveness which seeks to bleed her by fair means or foul, or take the risk of financial ruin, of possible effacement as a first-class power, in a desperate contest with the monster armies of her neighbors, to whom she appears as the one great obstacle to their designs.

A NEW REPUBLIC TAKES HER PLACE AMONG THE WORLD'S NATIONS.

The United States of Central America, a Probable Power in the Politics of This Continent.

Now comes the United States of Central America, a nation which has arisen out of much revolution. It is composed of Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras, which have at various times done a little fighting together and against each other. The seat of government has just been moved from Amapala, the temporary capital, to Chinandega, in Nicaragua. A constitution, which is practically that of our own country, has been adopted. So the new nation, pocketed between Guatemala and Costa Rica, two States not particularly friendly to it, has begun its existence.

Enthusiasts have been singing of the blessings of a union of the five States of Central America for many years—ever since the federation made in 1823 was destroyed by strife and jealousies. Central American politics is an intricate game. In view of history there have been doubts expressed as to the permanence of the present union. Yet if the Nicaragua Canal is built there may be a development and a building up of these Central American States which will give their institutions stability.

There is no limit to the effects which may follow the formation of this new unification of the Latin republics. The three States which are enclosed in the middle of Central America are keeping at arms' length two nations with whom their relations are constantly disturbed. There is Guatemala on the north and Costa Rica on the south. Between these two republics stretch the mahogany forests of Honduras, Salvador and Nicaragua. Salvador has had several encounters with Guatemala, and Nicaragua and Costa Rica are not on especially good terms.

Theoretically, the five States are supposed to have a community of interests; to be a greater republic, the members of which are bound together by indissoluble ties. Revolution seems inborn in the body politic of these countries.

The wars and internal disorders have undoubtedly interfered with the prosperity and progress of the republics. While the United States of

A TYPICAL HOME OF THE FIRST-CLASS.

American was building railroads, reclaiming the wilderness and improving harbors, Central America was pursuing the game of revolution.

Stability of government, the completion of a ship canal, the exchange of products with the United States, may work wonders in this land of change and shift.

Here is the oldest community on the American continent and yet the last to take to itself a government which gives some sign of being an abiding one. Years before Jamestown was founded Spain had planted her colonies here and had ground the natives under her heel. The ruins of once wealthy and influential cities still attest the story of wealth and grandeur. Structures over the roofs of which centuries have passed remain to tell of the civilization which came to the land of republics and revolutions.

It was on this neck of land which Columbus set foot when he first reached this continent. That was in 1502. Twenty years passed by and then the conquerer of Mexico—Hernando Cortes—hearing stories of the fabulous wealth of the countries which lay below, started south with an army of seasoned, mailclad veterans.

He reached his destination after two years of almost incredible hardship. He conquered Guatemala. The natives were slaughtered by the thousand. The conqueror or his lieutenants possessed the land. Granada, in Nicaragua, was founded and a civilization was built on this continent which the Spaniards had largely learned from the Moors. In Granada many of the old buildings still stand.

All the countries of Central America were united under the name of Guatemala and a captain-general presided over them. Those who have followed the history of Spain know how the proud old land ruled her Central American possessions.

Then Mexico gained her freedom. Then the Cenral American provinces of Spain demanded independence, and in 1821 they received it. The Federal Union of Central America was founded in 1832, and until the close of 1839 it held the five States together. The States withdrew one by one.

With this period the name of General Marazon will always be associated. He was one of the founders of the Union. Even after it had gone to pieces he tried to join together the fragments—to get the blocks which formed this puzzle of five into regular order again. He was shot at San Jose, in Costa Rica, in 1842, whither he had gone to attempt a coup in the interests of a united Central America.

Several efforts have been made since that. Unrest was the leading trait in the political character of these republics. Revolutions sprang up from time to time in all of them. It was charged by each republic that its neighbor or neighbors were giving aid to the revolutionists which she had expelled from her borders. Less than a year ago Nicaragua came very near going to war with Costa Rica on account of such a charge. Her President imprisoned a Costa Rican Consul at Managua. Troops were marched to the frontiers and a treaty of peace was finally signed.

An unsuccessful effort was made by Guatemala in 1872 to effect a union of the States. General Justo Rufus Barrios came very near forming an organization in 1887. He discovered that Salvador was treacherous and marched against it. He conquered the Salvadoreans, but fell a victim to sharpshooters. By a treaty concluded at Analapa in 1896 all five of the republics formed a federation, which was called the Greater Republic of Central America. It amounted to little more than an agreement to leave questions in dispute to a diet of deputies appointed from the various republics. It will, of course, be superseded by the formation of the United States of Central America.

Diplomacy has sought to do everything possible to restrain jealousy and dissatisfaction in this new nation. The Presidents of the States become Governors. It has been agreed that none of them shall become a candidate for President of the new Republic, who will be chosen on December 13. The successful candidate will be inaugurated next March. The new capital, Chinandega, is in Nicaragua, on the Pacific side. The temporary capital, Amapala, was in Honduras, on an island in the Bay of Fonseca.

If the resources of this new nation were properly developed it would become a rich and peaceful nation. The forests of all three of the countries are rich in mahogany and dye-woods; gold and silver have been found, there is an abundance of coal, and there are fortunes in coffee and tropical fruits. The future of this trio of republics depends in a large measure as to what policy may be pursued with regard to the Nicaraguan Canal. The present concession expires next year. The United States of America, it will be remembered, sent a delegation of officers and engineers under Admiral Walker to make an examination of canal routes. It is proposed to use the San Juan River, the boundary between Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and Lake Nicaragua as a part of the proposed waterway across Central America.

Nicaragua is as large as the group of States including Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Honduras is about the size of Ohio. Salvador is one hundred and forty miles long and sixty miles in breadth.

Nicaragua has been the scene of many conflicts. The old cities of Granada and Leon warred for fifty years as to which should be the capital of the State. Leon, which is now partially in ruins, represented the liberal party, and Granada the conservative. General Walker, a New Orleans editor, and a distinguished scholar, was invited to the country in 1855. He seized the supreme power, partly destroyed the city of Granada, and ruled with a high hand. The neighboring States aided his enemies against him, and expelled him from the country. He returned to Truxillo in 1860, where he was shot.

Salvador, the smallest of the three, has always been an aggressive State, and has not been behind her neighbors in wars and revolutions. The capital is San Salvador.

At one time the Rev. Henry Varley was a butcher. He is a noted English evangelist, who recently came on a second visit to this country. The way he entered upon an evangelistic career was by addressing his fellow workmen. Gradually he became known as a good speaker, and went traveling over England addressing the people. He has since earned the title of "The English Moody," which is a great compliment, for Evangelist Moody is as much thought of by the religious people of the British Isles as he is in his own country. The Rev. Mr. Varley has addressed large crowds in New York and elsewhere. He is a powerful and eloquent speaker and has a charming personality. It is by the sheer force of ability that he has risen to his high position in the evangelistic world.

Among the assets on which Spain will have trouble in realizing is a great deal of shop-worn diplomacy.

AUSTRALIAN DIAMONDS.

It Is Supposed That Great Wealth Will Some Day Be Unearthed.

Although considerable numbers of diamonds are continually being found in Australia, chiefly in New South Wales, the true matrix has never been discovered. In that colony there is evidence in every case to show that the stones were drifted from their original matrix to the places where they were found, but up to the present its locale and nature remain unknown, says Public Opinion. When both have been ascertained it is probable that New South Wales will become one of the leading diamond producing countries of the world, but the work of prospecting is difficult, tedious and costly, by reason of the mountainous character of the country in which gems are principally found. The finest stones yet known were obtained several years ago from the Cudgegong river, rising in the Australian Alps and running through auriferous country in the northwestern portion of the colony. No regular search is being made at the present time for the stones, the gold mining industries being found of a more certain and remunerative character, but at Bingera and other portions of New England district, in the northern portion of the colony, diamond mining is actively carried on, the stones generally being small and many "off color." Others of the same kind are found at Inverell, in the same country. Not a few of the stones obtained at either place would be classed as first water by the expert, being white, clear, bright and free from speck or flaw, but their extreme hardness makes the cost of cutting expensive in proportion to their size. Considerable numbers of diamonds from Bingera, Inverell and other places are annually sold in Europe, the larger stones bringing good prices. Thus, a Bingera diamond which, when cut, weighed slightly under a carat, was disposed of in London for $75, another, with a greenish tinge, weighing over half a carat, when cut, bringing $50. The stones average about four to the carat in the rough stote. For diamond drills and similar industrial purposes, the New South Wales stones are simply invaluable, and are preferred to those of other diamond producing countries. At Mittagong, between seventy and eighty miles south of Sydney, diamonds are found in a drift, associated with other gems. Some of the stones are of a much deeper tinge than the straw color which makes them "off," and are regarded as having a peculiar beauty of their own as yellow diamonds. In 1895 some good diamonds were found in one of the western gold districts, where some alluvial mining was being carried on at a depth of from twenty to fifty feet. One of the stones, capable of being cut into a first-class brilliant of four carats, was sold for $375. Although diamonds are met with in numerous places in New South Wales, often many miles apart from each other, their sources remain undiscovered to this day. The abraded appearance of the stones generally shows that they must have traveled a considerable distance, although their extreme hardness has caused the signs of abrasion to be less conspicuous than in Brazilian and other diamonds. It is believed that the matrix of the Bingera and Inverell diamonds will be found somewhere near the great dividing range, and that as it is approached the stones obtained will increase in size. The ancient river bed down which they were carried has yet to be discovered.

Natural Mistake.

According to a story told on a certain Mr. Swadleigh, by his neighbors, he had a mortifying adventure. He has a phenomenally large neck, and lately had occasion to change his laundryman. On the Sunday morning following this action on his part, it was noticed that he was an unusually long time making his toilet. He called his wife, and she went upstairs. "Maria," he said, "I wish you would see what is the matter with this shirt. The sleeves are all wrong, and I can't find any holes for the collar buttons." Mrs. Swadleigh gave one look at it, and went into a paroxysm of laughter. He waited till she had partially recovered, and then said: "Perhaps you will be good enough to tell me what you are laughing at!" "George," she replied, faintly, "you are trying to put that shirt on wrong side up! The laundryman starched the wrong end of it!"

Schopenhauer's Disappointment.

The story is told that a friend, invited to dine with Schopenhauer at his favorite restaurant, where a number of officers were in the habit of meeting, noticed that Schopenhauer took a gold coin from his pocket before eating and laid it on the table beside him. When the meal was over the philosopher replaced the coin in his purse. Upon a question from his friend, Schopenhauer explained: "I have been dining with these officers for some time," he said, "and about two months ago I registered a silent vow to give the gold coin, of considerable value, to some worthy charity on the very first occasion upon which I should hear these gentlemen talk of anything but women, horses and the chances of promotion. You see I still have my money."

Looking Some Distance Ahead.

At Columbia, Mo., Miss Lucile Johnson surreptitiously secured a marriage license issued to Miss Fannie Reed and Downy Buckner. When threatened with prosecution if she did not return it she gave it up on condition that she should be Buckner's second wife in the event he ever became a widower. Upon that understanding Buckner and Miss Reed were married.

Dewey Reports That the Attitude Filippinos Is Pacific.

GROWTH OF BETTER SPIRIT NOTICED

The Navy Will Be Called Into Service Release Spanish Prisoners—Japan Wants the Philippines, Offering $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON.—The navy depart has received a cablegram from Admi Dewey, summarizing the existing conditions at Manila and such points the Philippines as have been visited by his officers. Advices also have been received from Gen. Otis, commandant of the United States forces in the islands, and both go to show a notable improvement in conditions and the growth of a better spirit among those factions of the natives which promised to give trouble. This fact is particularly gratifying, as the United States government is in reality giving consideration to the best means at hand to redeem the pledge that has been placed under by the treaty of Paris, to secure the release of the Spanish prisoners held by the Philippine natives.

There are about 500 clerical prisoners, and the government is confident that their captors will release them upon proper representations from Gen. Otis and Admiral Dewey. It may be necessary to call the navy into service in this matter, for the reason that some of the prisoners are held in captivity on other islands than Luzon, which can be reached best and most effectively by Admiral Dewey's ships. Besides the clerical prisoners, the Americans themselves hold nearly 15,000 Spanish soldiers as prisoners. The men captured at the fall of Manila. These are actually on parole about the city, and the question is, how are they to be returned to Spain? This must be settled by the peace commission at Paris.

PEACE ASSURED

Treaty is Signed and Delivered.

ACT ENDS THE WAR

Document Contains Seventeen Articles—Closing Scene Was of an Interesting and Momentous Nature.

A Paris special says. The treaty of peace was signed at 8:15 Saturday evening, and the signing would have recorded a subject for a great historical painting.

The group, gathered about the table in the chamber of the foreign office, was impressive in itself, while the fact that the sense of the momentousness of the issue which the act decided was deeply felt by the participants, gave an impressive and solemn tone to the scene.

Around the great mahogany table sat the ten arbiters of the destinies of old and a young nation. Ranged, standing behind them, were numerous attaches of the American commission.

To the Americans it was a happy ending of the epilogue of war; for the Spaniards it was plainly a bitter tragedy, none the less painful because long foreseen. They sat silently as though almost crushed, and none could withhold sympathy from Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish commission, who, coming from his bed, was bundled in a great overcoat, though logs were burning in the fireplace nearby.

Parchment Work Was Slow.

Although the commissions met at 2:30 o'clock, expecting to finish their work in half an hour, the engrossing of the treaty on parchment was found to be so troublesome that it delayed the signing of the document until 8:20. Clerk Martin, of the American commission, worked all day without even stopping to eat. When he came into the chamber at 7:30 with the document he found the commissioners waiting. The Spanish copy had arrived half hour earlier. Mr. Arthur Jefferson then proceeded to read first the English and after that the Spanish version of the treaty. This finished, two copies were passed around the table, the commissioners signing them in the order of their rank, as follows: William R. Day, Senator Cushman K. Davis, Senator William P. Frye, Whitelaw Reid and Senator George Gray; Senor Montero Rios, Senor Garnica, Senor Villarutia and General Genero y Saens, each commission signing his opponent's treaty.

Both were tied with the Spanish and American colors.

When the seals were prepared to be affixed attendants were sent scurrying for ribbons of the French tri-color with which the documents were sealed as a compliment to the French hosts of the commissions.

Many officials interestedly watched every detail of the proceedings.

The last seal being impressed, the commissioners retired without formality. Each member shook the hands of all his antagonists and exchanged assurance of sincere personal esteem.

The signing was finished at 8:45 o'clock. At that time the door of the chamber opened and Senor Villarutia appeared and exclaimed to a group of correspondents who were waiting in the corridor:

"C'est fini."

The other members of the Spanish commission followed Senor Villarutia and passed silently through the vestibule to their waiting carriages. The American commission strolled out chatting complacently and as they ascended the steps the lights in the chamber were darkened.

There was a great contest among the families and friends of the American commissioners for possession of the pens with which the signatures to the treaty were written.

The treaty as signed consists of seventeen articles, it having been found desirable to subdivide two or three of the articles in the draft agreed upon at the last meeting.

The commissioners of the two nations wrote their signatures on two copies of the treaty, one copy being for the archives. The document was prepared by Secretary Moore in behalf of the United States commission and by Senor Villarutia for Spain on account of the continued illness of Secretary Ojeda, of the Spanish commission.

Each copy contained the English and Spanish texts of the treaty in parallel columns. The wording had been agreed previously by the commissioners without a joint meeting, so there was no controversy on this subject.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

NICARAGUA CANAL.

Senator Morgan Makes a Three Hours' Appeal for Action.

Discussion of two questions each of interest and importance at this time, was begun by the senate at its session Monday. Territorial expansion and the construction of the Nicaragua canal occupied the attention of the body during the greater part of the afternoon.

As soon as the routine morning business had been disposed of, Mr. Vest, democrat, of Missouri, called up his resolution, offered last week, declaring it to be unconstitutional for this government to secure foreign territory except for coaling stations or some like purpose unless its intention was to confer statehood upon the territory and citizenship upon its inhabitants.

Mr. Morgan opened the debate on the Nicaraguan canal bill with a three-hour appeal for action at this session. The whole country, he said, would be disappointed if Congress did not act. He was willing to take any measure which would result in the building of the canal. In the course of his remarks he agreed to accept an amendment specifically excepting the canal from neutrality with regard to any country with which the United States might be at war.

At the conclusion of Mr. Morgan's speech the senate adjourned.

CURRENT EVENTS IN ALABAMA.

CONFEDERACY'S MONUMENT.

Beautiful Work Accomplished by the Ladies of This State.

In the dedication and formal presentation to the state Thursday of the handsome Confederate monument on Capitol hill, the ladies of the Alabama Memorial association completed a noble work. The shaft stands less than 100 yards from where Jefferson Davis stood when he took the oath of office as president of the Southern Confederacy, and just outside of the window of the chamber in which the first Confederate congress met.

In 1886 Jefferson Davis came to Montgomery and laid the corner-stone of the monument with elaborate ceremonies. Since then the shaft has approached completion as the available funds justified.

It is a magnificent monument, costing some $70,000. Its base is thirty-four feet square and consists of four layers of stone, making as many steps. These steps lead up to four pedestals, on each of which is a statue—one of an infantryman, one of an artilleryman, one of a cavalryman and the other of a sailor.

From out of the common center rises a seventy-foot circular shaft four or five feet in diameter. A circular bas-relief around the shaft represents troops on the march. A Corinthian cap surmounts the top of the shaft, and upon this is a magnificent ten-foot statue in bronze, representing a female figure and typifying patriotism and the women of the South. The figure upholds in one hand a broken flag and with the other tenders to he sons a sword.

The fund for the building of this monument was started by the women of Montgomery immediately upon the close of the civil war. The state was impoverished and their progress was slow at first.

GENERAL GARCIA IS DEAD

The Distinguished Cuban Patriot Succumbs to Pneumonia.

HEADED A COMMISSION TO THIS COUNTRY

In His Delirium the Noted Warrior Gave Orders for a Battle and Then Passed Into the Great Beyond.

Gen. Calixto Garcia, the distinguished Cuban warrior and leader, and the head of the commission elected by the Cuban assembly to visit this country, died Sunday at the Hotel Raleigh, in Washington, where the commission has its headquarters. The sudden change from the warm climate of Cuba, with the hardships he had endured, to the wintry weather of New York and Washington is responsible for the pneumonia which resulted in his demise. He contracted a slight cold in New York, which did not assume an alarming stage until the early part of last week. On Tuesday night Gen. Garcia, accompanied by the other members of the commission, attended dinner given in his honor by Gen. Miles, and it was the result of the exposure that night which culminated in his death. During the twelve hours or more preceding dissolution Gen. Garcia was unconscious most of the time. At intervals he recognized one or more of those around him.

In his dying moments, as all through his busy and active life, his thoughts were for his beloved country and its people, and among his last words were irrational mutterings in which he gave orders to his son, who is on his staff, for the battle which he supposed was to occur tomorrow, and in which he understood there were only 400 Spaniards to combat. Just before he died he embraced his son. Rev. Father MaGee of St. Patrick's church, was called in during the day and was with Gen. Garcia until the end, administering the last rites of the Catholic church.

The remains were immediately prepared for burial, and were placed on a bier in the room in which he died. A large Cuban flag served as a covering, and the head rested on one of smaller dimensions.

By direction of Major-General Miles a detachment of soldiers from battery E, Sixth artillery, at the barracks under command of Lieutenant Cox, was detailed as a bodyguard for the remains. After General Garcia's death steps were taken to notify the government officials and also the executive committee of the Cuban assembly, which has its headquarters at Mariannao, Cuba.

GEN. LEE SAILS FOR CUBA.

General Lee will remain outside of Havana until January 1, when he will enter the city.

The Panama will land at Marianao, where General Lee will establish his headquarters on the camp site selected by Colonel Hecker for the Seventh corps, and will remain there till he enters Havana.

NEW YORK TROOPS

Marched Through Havana Streets With Flags Flying.

HAVANA.—The Two Hundred and Second New York regiment began to land early Monday morning, and at 10 o'clock a column about 1,000 strong marched from the San Jose wharf to the Christina railroad station. The troops were led by Colonel Zeyburn and Major Abbot, the regimental band playing simple marching airs. The color sergeants bore the stars and stripes and the blue and gold banner of the state of New York. The route was a mile and a half long. There were only the ordinary number of people in the streets and it was only occasionally that cries of "Viva Espana," "Viva Americanos" "Viva Cuba Libre" were heard.

Baby Surprises the Family.

Mrs. Oscar Stanley of Anderson, Ind., gave birth to a baby boy nine days ago. When placed in care of the nurse she found a rather peculiar pimple on the inside of the thigh. She thought nothing of it at first, but it began to get very sore and also became very large. The other day when she was bathing the child her hand came in contact with a sharp projection. She called a physician, and he found that there was a needle in the child. It was finally extracted and proved to be two inches in length. It was in the child when it was born. He thinks the mother swallowed it probably many years ago. The child is sound as a dollar today and will never be bothered because of the fact that he was born with a needle in him.—Louisville (Ky.) Post.

It is estimated that the revenues for 1900 will be: From customs, $205,000,000; from internal revenue, $285,000,000; from miscellaneous sources, $20,000,000; from postal service, $100,958,112; total, $610,958,112.

The estimates of appropriations for the same period are $641,106,490.64, giving a deficit of $30,048,378.64.

The net increase in circulation was $159,-812,878, giving an amount per capita of $24.87, as against $23.23 a year ago.

The Secretary says that the year's exports were the greatest ever recorded, averaging more than $100,000,000 a month, the total being $1,231,482,330. Of this the exports of agriculture were $853,683,570, and of manufactures, $290,697,354, both being the highest in history.

For the first time the exports of domestic manufactures were greater than the imports of foreign manufactures, while the exports were twice as great as the imports—a condition heretofore unknown, the trade balances in our favor being more than twice as great as that of any former year.

The value of foreign imports was less than in any previous year except 1880, though the population has increased fifty per cent. since that time. The total imports were but $616,049,651 against $764,-730,412 the preceding year, and $779,724,-674 a year earlier.

The Secretary discusses at length the currency problem in Porto Rico, and suggests that action be taken to assimilate the money of the island to that of the United States "by making customs dues in the island payable in American money, yet receiving the silver pesos and centavas at a fixed relation to our dollar."

A policy to build up our merchant marine is favored by the Secretary.

A SUBMARINE MINE EXPLODES.

A Peculiar Accident That Resulted in the Killing of Four Men.

Boston (Special).—Four men were killed and several seriously injured at Fort Independence, in Castle Island, in Boston Harbor, a few days ago, by the explosion of a mine which had been removed from the channel. Those killed were Sergeant Morris McGrath, Hiram Vaughn, Private Brennan (a diver), and a man named Ryan.

The accident occurred about 2 o'clock. Vaughn, Brennan and Ryan had placed the mine on a cart, and started to take it to the place where the other ammunition was stored, when from no apparent cause the mine burst. The horse and cart and the three men were blown to fragments. Sergeant McGrath was standing fully twenty feet away. He was instantly killed by the concussion. His body did not bear a mark of any sort. As soon as possible after the explosion a careful search was begun by Lieutenant Raymond, who had charge of removing the mines, but not a fragment of the three men or their clothing could be found. Ryan was a civilian assisting in the work. Vaughn was a member of the Engineer Corps. Sergeant McGrath was the keeper of the Island, and was well known throughout Boston and its vicinity.

THE BANNER,
Clanton, Ala.

OUR Alabama naval hero, Richmond P. Hobson, has been meeting with most enthusiastic receptions in this State, especially at Birmingham and Montgomery. Alabamians, like the rest of the world, delight to do him honor.

ONE day this week a gentleman called in THE BANNER office and said he had found a blue mark on his paper and did not know what it meant. We explained to him that it was a gentle reminder it was time he renewed his subscription. He did so at once, like a gentleman, and went his way rejoicing, and left us also rejoicing. Have YOU paid your subscription, making yourself feel good and THE BANNER happy? If not, why not do so now?

IN about three weeks time Clanton will be holding an election for Mayor and Councillors for the ensuing year. So far as THE BANNER is aware the citizens are fairly well satisfied with the present administration, and will probably re-elect the same members. During the two years the corporation has been in existence a number of improvements have been made. The only complaint we know of is that the streets might have been put in somewhat better shape. Main Street, in particular, should receive attention and the sidewalks fixed. It is to be hoped that the new administration will see that this is done.

As was anticipated, the bill providing for the holding of a constitutional convention has passed both branches of the General Assembly, and as soon as the Govornor has affixed his signature will become law. We regret to note that the Representative from Chilton was not at his post to vote against the bill. The act provides for holding an election in July next when the people are to vote for or against holding a constitutional convention and at the same time are to elect delegates to the convention which is to convene at Montgomery in August. The bill has been hastily rushed through the Legislature, no proper time was allowed for debate and it rather looks as if those back of the measure were afraid to allow time for consideration or they might not carry the bill through.

There should be no haste in a constitutional convention or in any of the preliminary arrangements. Of all things in the world, a constitutional convention needs to be deliberate and dignified. The members should be calmly and deliberately selected. Nothing should be done in a hurry, but the earnest and best judgment of all the people should be devoted to the consideration of this all-important matter.

We hope the people of Chilton county will fully and freely discuss the convention, and right now begin to think of the very best man in the county for our delegate. He should be a man of good common sense, sound judgment, firm and unyielding unless convinced he is in error, a man capable of having opinions of his own and able to express them. He should be a man in whom the people can have the utmost confidence, and should be the united choice of the whole people. Party politics should be left on one side in the election of this delegate. Populists, Democrats and Republicans are alike interested in the result of this convention and should send to its deliberations the best man we have.

A Quarter of a Century.

Few of us stop to think of the past. Most of us can readily go back in memory beyond the quarter century limit, yet few of us realize what those few years have done. This country twenty-five years ago had but one rail line across our continent. Now we have six. That original line had a little over twenty years ago gross earnings of about twenty-five millions. Now the combined gross earnings of the six lines amount to over one hundred and eighty-five millions, and the line showing the greatest earnings is essentially a southern one—Southern Pacific. These figures, this actual advance in about two score years, almost stagger belief, yet these figures are facts. Passenger and freight rates have been enormously reduced, and yet the increased tonnage of these six transcontinental roads has more than compensated nearly eightfold. Wonderful, isn't it? But it is only the beginning Before another quarter century passes, our trade with our new possessions, Hawaii, and the Phillippines, will more than quadruple these earnings. to say nothing of the immense trade naturally aud inevitably ours, just opening with Asiatic countries. This increased demand will increase the line, lower the rates and enhance the earnings. This will, as it always does, reclaim the wilderness, build cities, redeem deserts, establish industries and increase the property of the richest nation of the world. A quarter of a century ago a steel rail was a rarety We brought them from England. Now England is buying steel rails from us. Recently over a half million tons of steel rails were ordered, three railroads taking nearly two hundred thousand tons. The south has naturally increased in prosperity more rapidly than any other section; being naturally richer, she naturally ought to. This is evidenced by the percentage of gain in the southern railroads, being double the average of the combined roads of our country. Look back a quarter of a century and you could almost count our cotton mills on your fingers. Try it now. Compare prices of necessities and luxuries twenty-five years ago, and see if your pocket wants the "good old times." A revolution has occured. We are living a new life. We are only on the threshold of prosperity such as we have never known, and the south, with Cuba, Porto Rico and the Nicaragua canal will realize its full share.—Constitution.

Pains in the chest when a person has a cold indicate a tendency toward pneumonia. on his character and without their seat and it was all due to your Spanish. Why didn't you wait? You're the hero of the whole population."

"That's just the trouble," rejoined Colonel Tayler. "I knew they'd acquit that rascal and then they'd fall all over me with their Spanish. I just naturally had to hide. Those three words that Judge Hallett choked me off on, that's all the Spanish I ever knew in my life. I couldn't afford to be congratulated."—New York Sun.

Fanny Crosby at Work.

When Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writer, composes her hymns, she withdraws into a room, where, sitting alone with a little hymnbook pressed to her brow, she allows her thoughts full play. She never writes her hymns out, but composes the stanzas one by one until the whole hymn is completed; then she dictates it to an amanuensis. Her memory is remarkable. As an instance of this she states that Philip Phillips had once asked her to write the words of 40 hymns, the titles of which he read to her.

These titles she retained in her memory, and one by one she composed the hymns. When the 40 were finished, she dictated them, titles and all, to an amanuensis. She has written over 8,000 hymns.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Congress and the Army.

The whole problem is complicated by the fact that action by Congress is necessary in any case. The administration of the army is completely hampered by cast-iron laws that no radical nor extensive reforms can be made except by legislation. The hands of the President are tied as completely as are those of the general commanding. The root of the whole difficulty is in the penurious spirit which has been shown toward the army in legislation. No effective remedy can be applied unless this evil be first overcome. Back of all this, and the primary cause of the whole trouble, is the attitude of the people themselves toward the army. Their representatives in Congress do but effectuate the will of the people. They have always regarded the army with distrust and have looked with disfavor upon all recommendations for the improvement of the service made by army officers. They get exactly the kind of an army they pay for; they get precisely the degree of efficiency to be expected under the circumstances. No legislation can destroy the indomitabe spirit of the American soldier. The soldier of the line fights, equally regardless of legal injustice and of physical hardships, because it is in the Anglo-Saxon blood to fight. The same spirit led the staff officers to work day and night, to wear out their health and to bring themselves to the point of entire exhaustion in order to supply the necessites of the fighting line. Like the soldiers of the line, they took the means at hand, and amid a thousand discouragements did the best that could be done with them.

The most urgently needed reform is the absolute divorcement of the army in all of its departments from politics It is absurd to expect the same thorough efficiency and preparation found in other departments of the public service unless the same methods are used. Military service is certainly as important as civil service—more so in time of emergency. Its administration ought to be conducted with the same single eye to efficiency, and no department of the army should be more exempt from political influence than the staff. This points at once to the most urgent reform, viz., make the commanding general the real working head of the army, instead of the Secretary of War. No good results have come to the service by the extension of the Secretary's powers in Grant's first administration. Most of the evils of the service can be traced to the fact that the general commanding has since that time been practically deprived of his proper functions, and the real head of the army has been a politician, usually not versed in military science. Promotions in the service should never depend upon political influence in any department, nor should the recommendations of a politician carry any weight in the military service more than they would in those offices filled through the civil service examinations alone. The restoration of its proper functions to the office of the general commanding, as Grant exercised them when he was commander-in-chief, would be a long step in the right direction. It would put the administration of the army in the hands of a soldier, and that would be an origin of all other necessary administrative reforms.—From "Our Army Supply Departments and the Need of a General Staff," by Lieut. John H. Parker, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for December.

Advice to Consumptives

There are three great remedies that every person with weak lungs, or with consumption itself, should understand.

These remedies will cure about every case in its first stages; and many of those more advanced. It is only the most advanced that are hopeless. Even these are wonderfully relieved and life itself greatly prolonged.

What are these remedies? Fresh air, proper food and

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Be afraid of draughts but not of fresh air. Eat nutritious food and drink plenty of milk. Do not forget that Scott's Emulsion is the oldest, the most thoroughly tested and the highest endorsed of all remedies for weak throats, weak lungs and consumption in all its stages.

Captain Sigsbee's Dog—The Story Grandma Told—Mistakes In Telegraph Messages.

Mrs. Charles D. Sigsbee, wife of the captain of the battleship Maine, has an article in St. Nicholas on "Pets In the Navy." Mrs. Sigsbee says:

You have heard of Peggie, the pug dog on the U. S. S. Maine when she was blown up. Peggie is now at Key West. She is a pretty little dog. She was a tiny puppy when first given to the captain of the Maine, a little more than a year ago, and was very full of fun and mischief. She always slept in the cabin and amused herself by "worrying" any shoes she found, and dragging about anything she could, as most puppies do. She always followed the captain everywhere, no matter how many steps and ladders were to be climbed. This caused her to break her leg one day. The leg was put in splints, but Peggie could not keep still enough to have it knit properly, so when she was well this leg was a little shorter than the others

Peggie was very fond of rushing at the waste paper basket and dragging out the contents. She would whine and cry in a very funny way when she could not get them out. She regarded with great suspicion any one in civilian dress coming on board the Maine and barked at all who were not in uniform. She could turn a somersault if you held her head down a second.

One day she came into the cabin with a chicken bone sticking out of one side of her mouth and a pretty nasturtium blossom in the other side. She looked so cute that I wish I had the picture to show you. One ear stuck up and the other lay down, giving her a very comical expression. She knew just what she wanted to do. Laying the flower carefully down in one corner, she took the bone into another and proceeded to eat it. After the bone had been disposed of she took the flower in her mouth again, and finally left it at the captain's feet.

Once she was taken driving at Key West, and while the carriage was in motion she jumped out of the vehicle on one side and into it at the other until the person she was with feared she would break all her legs Afterward she thought the horses' tails were meant especially for her to play with. So over the dashboard to bite the tails and down under the horses' feet she went. But she was not hurt and soon sprang into the carriage again.

Mark Twain and His Pyjamas.

Mark Twain has an intense dislike for clothes, and if it were possible would remain in his pyjamas day in and day out. And whenever he can do so he eats breakfast in them, receives his friends and works in them. His favorite mode of writing is to lie flat on the floor on his stomach in his pyjamas with a pipe in his mouth. When on lecture tours, he never gets out of his sleeping clothes until it is time to go to hall or opera house. When the fit strikes him, he likes to exercise, and then with his customary shamble will shuffle along for miles and exhaust his most athletic companion But he feels far more at home in his pyjamas than in a street suit or evening clothes, and in them he remains as great a part of the day as Mrs. Clemens will allow him.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Cyclists as Sportsmen.

The wheelman himself can hardly be held answerable for the death of a rabbit which bolted into his machine as it stood by the roadside and broke its neck, and there was contributory negligence, as the lawyers say, on the part of the cat which tried to go through the wheel of a passing bicycle and gave the rider a bad fall at the cost of its own life. Much more noteworthy than either of these was the achievement of a cyclist who while scorching along the road (he must have been scorching) ran into a covey of partridges and killed one, his heel passing over its neck. The only way in which this curious accident can be explained is to suppose that the birds were "dusting" at a bend in the road, and that the cyclist's approach, concealed by the hedges, remained undetected till the enemy was literally among them.—Chambers' Journal.

Cures Without Medicine.

A sweet faced woman who preaches the gospel of love and declares she has the power to cure bodily ailments in a manner akin to that employed by the Christian scientists has established a church for her creed here and offers to cure all who apply at her apartments up town. Creeds of this sort seem to be catching on here.

From Extreme Nervousness.

THAT no one remedy can contain the elements necessary to cure all diseases, is a fact well known to everyone. Dr. Miles' System of Restorative Remedies consists of seven distinctively different preparations, each for its own purpose.

Mrs. L. C. Bramley, 37 Henry St., St. Catherines, Ontario, writes: "For years I suffered from extreme nervousness and annoying constipation, developing into palpitation and weakness of the heart. I was unable to sleep, suffered much from headache, pain in my left side, palpitation and a constant feeling of weakness and prostration. I began using Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills and the Anti-Pain Pills to relieve sudden paroxysms of pain and headache. I soon felt much improved and the pains and aches and weariness left me. I then took Dr. Miles' Restorative Tonic and am now restored to my former good health."

The Alabama Fertilizer

Is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all around fertilizer for cotton and corn.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land, was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER. The only objection ever raised to the ALABAMA FERTILIZER was that it costs too much.

The present price is no more than that of standard fertilizers. When requested, the ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be put up, without extra cost, in bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIRRE PRESERVING PROCESS, thereby insuring the perfect preservation of the bags for an indefinite time, and saving the contents from loss by waste in transit and handling. These preserved bags when emptied and thoroughly washed will be found as good and strong as new, and equally useful for other purposes. Every person, farmer, merchant or dealer vitally interested in the economical production of good crops should advocate the use of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

The Defect in American Patriotism Is All in the So-Called Upper Story of Society—Robbing the Government and the Poor Soldiers.

Our Heritage.

Life seemeth to me like a beautiful poem,
Its sweetest line is the innermost soul,
And youth is the preface the heart-touching poem,
That like golden sunlight illumines the whole.

Some drift through the spring time ne'er heeding its beauty,
And crush the shy roses that lie at their feet,
They tread in the paths leading only to duty,
And miss all the glad that makes living so sweet.

Tho' thirsty, they hear not the low sobbing fountain
That scatters its spray on the grass at their side;
Tho' weary, they toil up the high sun-scorched mountain,
Nor rest in the vale where the cool shadows bide.

They let all the brightness shift ever before them,
Nor gather nor share ere it flutters away;
The clouds, filled with hope, that bend lovingly o'er them,
When touched by their glance, turn from rose tint to gray.

Oh! why should we walk all our days in the shadow,
And wound our tired feet with the brambles of care,
When life of itself is a green-daisied meadow,
When each may weave garlands of flowers to wear?

'Tis well we should cling to the standard of duty,
But not to walk blindly, unheeding the sun;
God gave us the world with its blossoming beauty,
And we may blend brightness and shadow in one!

—I. S. Taylor.

The Defect in American Patriotism.

Editors Union Signal: Past experience has prepared us to expect that war time will be utilized by unscrupulous men in making private fortunes out of government contracts. The shocking condition of the army camps, especially the state of the men at Santiago, has probably been largely caused by fraud on the part of such contractors added to still grosser fraud and mismanagement in the commissary department of the army itself. Early in the war the press reported the arrest of a commissary officer for selling to his private advantage the government supplies. The man admitted his guilt, but asserted in excuse that "they all do it." The published statement that unbroken packages of army goods are freely on sale in the vicinity of the camps would, if a fact, prove there was some truth in the man's charge. From such straws one may judge how the wind of public opinion blows. Plainly stated the common thought is: Patriotism only relates to fighting; it does not relate to manufacturing or buying and selling.

The most unscrupulous of these men would indignantly repel the accusation of being a traitor. The flag floats over his house, he wears it in his buttonhole and rejoices in every success of the American troops. Nevertheless, stripped of verbal disguises the fact remains, he who cheats the government gives aid and comfort to its enemies and is actually a traitor.

Our soldiers suffered more from the attacks of General Fever than from any Spanish general, and to contribute to the surrender of our men to this deadly foe differs, not in principle from being traitorously concerned in the capitulation of the troops to a human foe.

If an enriched army contractor received social ostracism instead of the court paid to wealth, his position as a traitor would be better marked. Money should no more be the object of the contractor or army officer who feeds and clothes the army than of the soldier who fights in it. Both have a right to a proper income, but our soldiers do not fight for their pay and would be justly despised if they did so. "Mercenaries" applied to troops is universally a term of contempt, but in the commissary department men are expected to be mercenary. The conception of patriotism is radically deficient which has such a different standard for soldier and merchant, for one for fighting and one for buying and selling.

Ruskin has very plainly and forcibly stated the fact that buying and selling is really a business in which loyalty to death is required. His words have a greater force with regard to the emergencies of war than in the peaceful days of which he wrote. He says in the chapter on "The Roots of Honor":

"Five great intellectual professions relating to daily necessities of life have hitherto existed—three exist necessarily in every civilized nation.

"The soldier's profession is to defend it.

"The pastor's, to teach it.

"The physician's, to keep it in health.

"The wage earner's, to enforce justice in it.

"The merchant's to provide for it.

"And the duty of all these men is, on due occasion, to die for it."

The American people, although indignant at the mismanagement of the commissary department have not formed as high an ideal of patriotism as this. When they do raise the standard of duty as high for their merchants as for their soldiers the country will be able to cleanse itself alike from the stains of municipal corruption and of scandals in war management. Toward the formation of this ideal, the Good Citizenship League is doing, perhaps, the most efficient work. The enthusiasm for the flag, and the military drill in school do not, in themselves, teach intelligent patriotism. But every year greater efforts are being put forth to train our youth into patriots to whom bosses, municipal spoils and fat contracts will alike be abhorrent, and under whose coming reign corruption will not exist either in peace or war. With the present generation the defect in American patriotism can scarcely be entirely remedied. As in all reforms our hope is in the children.

AMELIA H. BOTSFORD.

The Question of Life and Death to Nations.

By Wilbur F. Crafts.

Must every nation, must our own, grow old and die? Nay, for in the very nature of the case, a nation may be as immortal as our earth or like a river, its drops ever passing on to the sea, but ever renewed from its mountain springs. If we maintain the Christian morality and popular education, which Washington declared to be the high sources of national prosperity, and keep unbroken on either hand the banks of liberty and law, our nation's life may go on ceaselessly. But eternal life to a nation can come only through "eternal vigilance." Many who firmly believe nature goes by law act as if history went by luck. As surely as effect follows cause Babylonian vices will produce a Babylonian fall.

Babylon, Greece, Rome, the renaissance kingdoms of Italy and France and Spain form a national series, all showing that the highest art, if it be mental culture, without moral, if it be the art whose motto is "art for art's sake," the godless estheticism of nude art, that puts beauty in the supreme place instead of duty, not only can not take the place of religion in checking immorality, but ever increases it, dragging the nation down the three steps to national ruin; first, moral, second, physical, third, political decay. France is on the second step, the only civilized land in which the birth rate is falling below the death rate, a blazing warning on the walls of this modern Babylon of the retribution to men and nations that follows the violation of the fourth and seventh commandments.

Why should we cast aside our traditions to welcome the nude to our literature and homes, when every nation from which we have borrowed it is either dead or dying? Since France is dying of the worst of plagues, French pictures, French plays and French novels should be quarantined like ships from infected ports.

The problem of purity is the question of life or death to nations. As we look through history we see that nations have died chiefly of internal causes; not of American free silver or of British free trade, but free love. Therefore, moral questions should be the supreme question in politics, those that conform to Gladstone's definition of the purpose of law—"to make it as hard as possible to do wrong and as easy as possible to do right."

A Parable.

By Eltweed Pomeroy.

A certain very rich man said unto himself: "I have many interests and I will turn over the most important of them to a body of men whom I'll choose for a year or two years, and I'll call them a legislature." And he did it and went on his way. And the body of men met and they made money with the rich man's goods and sold some and mortgaged others and despoiled others. And the sutlers and lobbyists flocked around as vultures around a carrion, and the rich man remonstrated and held a mass-meeting and screamed himself hoarse. And the body of men looked at him derisively and said to itself: "Surely we have worked for these offices, and they are ours, and you can't put us out, nor reverse our acts, but are bound by them," and they laughed in their sleeves at the rich man.

Again an election came around and the rich man chose another set of men of the same sort, and having untrammeled power. They did likewise. And many moons waxed and waned and the rich man did not seem to learn by experience, but really he was growing very angry, and at last he rose up and said: "I will choose you as councilors, but you shall do naught that I do not wish, and you shall do the things I wish, and I'll veto any acts of yours that I do not like by the referendum, and if you will not pass the laws I wish, I myself will start them by the initiative." And the latter end of that man was better than the former.

Labor Notes.

The 1,200 pots controlled by the American Glass Company are now being operated. An agreement has been signed.

At Bevier, Ky., a settlement of negro miners have saved some money, bought 200 acres of coal land and are peacefully digging a living out of the earth.

Lac La Belle property, better known as the Delaware mine, in Keweenaw county, Mich., is to be bought by a new corporation having a nominal capitalization of $2,500,000 and an actual cash capital of $1,000,000. Local capital will furnish $750,000, and Boston and New York persons $250,000.

The differences between the Chicago-Virden Coal Company at Virden and Auburn, Ill., and the striking miners have been settled, and the shafts are to be operated again soon. The company agreed to pay the state scale of forty cents per ton, but did not want to tear down the stockade. Finally the company accepted the offer of the miners that they would take it down and charge the company nothing for the labor.

FUNCTIONS OF MONEY.

HENRY G. MILLER REMOVES SOME SUPERSTITIONS.

Money Is a Medium of Exchange and as Such It Has No Extrinsic Value—The Money That Seeks Trade Quickly Is the Real Honest Money.

What is money? In a gold-using country it is a gold coin, in a silver-using country it is a silver coin, and in a bimetallic country it is silver and gold coins. Money is a creature of law, and it is the settled law of this country that congress, under the power granted in the constitution, can provide for issues by the government of paper money, and endow these issues with all the functions of money, making this money a legal tender in payment of debts, and therefore money of ultimate payment. France has, reckoned in our currency, about $600,000,000 of irredeemable paper money circulating side by side with gold and silver and having the same relation to commodities that the coins struck from these metals have. Therefore, in giving a definition of money, we must turn our attention away from the material or substance of which money is made and confine it to the office it performs, and say with Senator Jones, "Money is a function, and that is money which performs the function of money," or, rather which is legally endowed with that function, without regard to the substance of which it is made or in which it may be embodied. In its last analysis money is an idea or mental conception, but, to be employed in the transactions of life, it must be represented by a sensible object. It was upon this theory that our monetary system was constructed. In one of the sections of the act of 1792, preserved in section 3563 of the revised statutes, it is provided, "The money of account of the United States shall be expressed in units or dollars, dimes or tenths, cents or hundredths, and mills or thousandths, and all accounts in the public offices and all proceedings in the courts shall be kept and had in conformity to this regulation." In another section it is provided, "There shall from time to time be struck or coined at the mint, units or dollars, each to be of the value of the Spanish milled dollar and to contain 371¼ grains of pure or 416 grains of standard silver." The dollar, then, is the unit of account embodied or represented in such substance and to be of such form as the law may designate. It is a denominator of value, as all values are expressed in this unit, its multiples and fractions. It does not in any sense derive its value from the material in which it is embodied. While it is a dollar endowed by law with that function it has precisely the same value; that is, it will exchange for the same quantity of commodities whether it resides in a given weight of gold, or in an equivalent weight of silver, or floats upon paper. Neither the silver piece nor the gold piece, or any other substance used in commerce, has any intrinsic value. Value in commerce is a relative term and implies the presence of two things and a comparison between them. The value of a thing is that which is given in exchange for it, and is therefore wholly extrinsic and is expressed in the terms of the thing for which it is exchanged. To state the value of money is to express the relation of a given sum of it to a definite quantity of commodities or other forms of property, and this relation changes as the quantity of money on the one side and other forms of property on the other side and the activities of trade and commerce change. The value of money, like that of every other subject of commerce, is determined by the demand for it as compared with its supply. In respect to the demand for it, it differs from commodities in this, that as it is only through the intervention of money that our wants can be supplied the demand for it is equivalent to the aggregate demand of a community for the necessaries of life and all the material things that contribute to our comfort and happiness, and which, unaided and alone, we cannot severally produce. This demand, therefore, is constant and incessant. It is not a demand for the material of which money is made, but for the function which money performs. It is for money—for gold and silver coins—and not for gold and silver ingots. The government stamp upon the coin does not impart to it any additional value; it is simply a certificate of its weight and fineness and that it is in a form to perform the function of money. Its value is determined by the market. The government stands behind its pecuniary obligations, but in no sense does it stand behind its money. The value of money is at all times subject to the vicissitudes of the market, which are entirely outside of government control. It is true the law cannot directly create value, either in silver bullion, or any other commodity, but it can greatly enlarge the use of silver bullion by making a money metal of it and thereby increase its value. With an accumulated stock of gold, sufficient to supply the arts for the next sixty years, how much would gold be worth if it were everywhere bereft of the money function? It would not be worth 20 cents an ounce.

HENRY G. MILLER.

In Mexico.

Why has not Mexico, with [illegible] open mints, "heaped" up money? Simply because the surplus floats away, just as Dr. Wayland said it would. Mexico now has but $7.70 per capita of silver, though it has the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and produces over $60,000,000 of it each year. The idea that any commodity can be "dumped" into any country under the influence of any economic law known to mankind, without there is a demand for it, is the height of absurdity, and has no supporters of standing among the writers upon the subject of political economy. That there is a tremendous demand for a more just standard of value there can be no doubt, but when sufficient silver standard money has been put into circulation to satisfy that demand all other silver will go to foreign countries or to the melting pot. If bimetallism were to be established in this country, and the parity of the two metals maintained, it is evident that there would be no dumping of the silver of the world here; but if the parity of the metals is not established at the ratio of 16 to 1, and gold goes to a premium, whoever exchanges his silver for gold will have to pay that premium. Gold will then pass by weight, and will be exchanged for silver at their commercial ratio. If gold goes to a premium and thus becomes more desirable for reserve purposes, where would the incentive lie for men to wholly part with it for silver, and thus cause other nations to "dump" their silver upon us? Is there a case to be found in all history where the favorite money, the money most desired and cherished by the people, was the money to entirely leave them? We ask the monometallists to point out such a case. If, as the monometallists assert, silver is not a sound money, is it at all likely that the banks will let all the sound money get away from them? As stated before, under a fiat money system, there was kept a large stock of gold, and it seems strange if it could not be kept under bimetallism, if there were any necessity for it whatever. Russia, though for years upon a silver basis, after the other European nations had abandoned it, maintained a large gold reserve, and Japan, even now, has nearly as large a per capita of gold as of silver. The great factors in keeping either gold or silver in a country are: (1) Is there a pressing demand for them? and (2) are the laws of the country such as to permit the people to satisfy that demand? Whenever these two elements are present in a country these metals will be found there also, though the drain on them may be so heavy as to make either of them, when taken alone, incapable of furnishing a perfectly sound money basis. We have experienced that trouble with gold. S. D. WILSON.

From Far Away New Zealand.

There are a people living thousands of miles from us who have for many years past been working out the most difficult, economic and political problems of the age. These people are the New Zealanders. As your memory is weak on geography, you ask: "Where is New Zealand?" New Zealand is a group of islands lying in the South Pacific ocean and forming a colony of Great Britain. Its area is 106,259 square miles, and population 450,000. This country has already made much history—not that history which consists in exterminating men, but those nobler chronicles which tell of bettering men and their conditions in life. The house of representatives in this land of radiant experiments has just passed a bill providing for a pension for every poor person in the colony whose age exceeds 65. The act defines a "poor person" as one who has less than 13 shillings ($3.12) a week. The pension prescribed is about $80 a year. The most remarkable development anent this emanation from the school of liberal and individualist political economy is that conservative and cautious British journals have extended their sympathy. New Zealand has been so wondrously (one might say gloriously) successful in her many progressions that London newspapers are very timid about attacking any innovation that hails from the South Pacific.

Money for 1900 Coming In.

The ways and means committee, of which W. H. Harvey, Unity building, Chicago, is general secretary, is making splendid progress in the work of raising funds for the presidential campaign of 1900. Hundreds of letters are being received daily from Democrats, Silver Republicans and Populists, enclosing their dollars and asking for particulars as to how they can be of further service. Secretary Harvey gives his personal attention to every case and no question is asked that is not promptly answered. The ways and means committee is non-partisan—the re-establishment of bimetallism being its single aim. It includes in its membership Senators Jones, Teller and Allen of the three allied bimetallic parties, and also ex-Governor Altgeld of Illinois and ex-Governor Stone of Missouri. Chairman Jones is greatly pleased at the prospects.

Senator Depew Not a Joke.

From the New York Journal: It is not to tell amusing stories that Mr. Depew will be sent to the senate by Mr. Vanderbilt. Shrewd, calculating and unscrupulous as Mr. Platt is, he would have to get up very early in the morning to catch Chauncey Depew napping. There will be two of a kind in Washington after the legislature has done as it is told—two clear-minded, cynical and efficient servants of the interests which rule this republic for their own profit and care nothing at all for the welfare of the people. Senator Depew will be no joke.

More Work for Wanamaker.

From the Columbus (O.) Press-Post: Now, if Mr. Wanamaker will hustle around and find out what became of the $400,000 curruption fund he raised for the "blocks-of-five" campaign in 1888, perhaps we shall have a few more refreshing indictments of prominent Republicans. Let the good work go on.

ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

Wednesday's Session.

In the senate this morning the bill to further regulate the sentencing and employment of convicts in this state, the special order after the call of the committees, was postponed until tomorrow on motion of Mr. Cunningham, the author of the bill.

The second special order, the bill to fix the fees for feeding prisoners where the same are paid by the state, provoked a great deal of discussion and the test vote shows the senate to be in favor of the bill. The bill fixes fees at 40, 30 and 25 cents and it is held is not uniform in different counties, but is a blow at sheriffs in the larger counties, as 25 cents is to be charged per day after a certain number is reached.

In the house Mr. Burkhalter's bill to allow county commissioners to levy 5 cents on the $100 for school purposes was discussed and earnestly contested. It is urged that the bill is a blow at agricultural counties and could not be stood by many of the counties.

The senate passed the resolution agreed upon by the conference committee, inviting the president to visit Montgomery. The language was changed a little, but it is about the same in substance as the original senate resolution.

The steering committee on the constitutional convention claim to have secured the pledge of seventeen senators to vote for the bill.

The house defeated the school tax bill.

Thursday's Session.

The democratic caucus of the legislature has declared in favor of the bill providing for a vote on the question of calling a constitutional convention, as reported by the joint caucus committee recently named, and supporters of the measure feel sure that it will pass both houses. The bill as amended provides for an election on the first Monday in July next to decide whether or not a convention is to be held. The proposed convention, if a majority vote is cast in favor of holding it, will convene in Montgomery on the first Monday in August and is not to sit longer than fifty days, the members to be paid $4 per day each. The representation will be the same in strength as that of the legislature, 133 members. One hundred will be elected from the counties, according to their strength in the house of representatives, and thirty-three from the state at large. The matter of raising the general tax levy and the removal of the capital are not to be touched, the convention being more especially for the purpose of changing the plan of suffrage so as to eliminate the ignorant negro vote. Soldiers of the Mexican and civil wars and their descendants will not be disfranchised. Local option to increase taxation will probably be granted to municipalities where it is for a special purpose, like schools. There are about what the convention movement contemplates.

The senate today tabled the bill to fix the fees of sheriffs, when paid by the state, after a heated discussion. This leaves the fees as at present.

The resolution to take a recess on December 15th and 16th was reconsidered, and the two houses will remain in session until the 17th. The president has accepted invitations to come here, and will be in this city from 3 to 5 p. m.

Friday's Session.

The house indefinitely postponed action on the bill creating a board of fish and game commissioners. The house passed a resolution that school appropriations should be increased to $500,000. The bill to amend the charter of Birmingham, relating to taxation, was passed by the house. The bill to repeal the law against book-making and pool selling was indefinitely postponed. A bill was passed protecting training stables for horses in the state.

The legislature has made it possible for Lovejoy, the democratic nominee for probate judge of Etowah county, to take his seat. Beeson, the populist candidate, contested the election on the ground that the election in the Gadsden beat was held in a building other than the court house, which the law prescribes for such purposes. The democratic majority was not denied, and on the grounds named above Judge Bilbro rendered a decision naming the populist as the qualified judge. It is claimed that the elections had been held outside of the court house for years, and in fact, this was admitted by a populist member on the floor, who opposed the bill, saying it was unconstitutional. The bill simply ratifies the election held in that precinct.

A bill which legalizes the whipping-post passed the lower house. The law, however, only applies to Mobile county and was fathered by Representative Delchamps.

Representative Smith's exemption bill received a black eye in the senate finance committee, it receiving an adverse report. The bill provides that all manufacturing industries located within the state during the next five years should be exempt from all state taxes for a period of ten years. Notwithstanding this, the general revenue bill of the house will contain a similar section.

Saturday's Session.

After a half day's debate and filibustering the senate voted at 5:45 o'clock on the constitutional convention bill, carrying it by a clear majority of five. If carried by the house, and there appears to be little doubt of it, the people will finally decide the question at the ballot box. As first announced, the vote stood 17 to 12. Senator Boykin, who had bitterly opposed the bill all day, asked that his vote be changed from the negative to the affirmative and gave notice that on Monday he would move to reconsider the vote by which the measure was passed. The vote was as follows:

Ayes — Cunningham, [illegible] Boykin, Brooks, Caffee, H[illegible] J[illegible] kins, Lee, Lyons, M[illegible] Moore, Nunnellee, [illegible] Sewell, Limestone, Thomas, [illegible] Wiley. Total, 18.

The bill creating the office of auditor for Jefferson reached its third reading and passed the house this afternoon. The bill is a substitute for the senate bill, differing from the original in that the salary is fixed at $1,800, instead of $2,000, and makes the office elective after the first term.

Mr. Smith, of Escambia, offered a resolution of thanks to Richmond Pearson Hobson for his bravery in blocking the channel of Santiago bay, which was very laudatory. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The assembly has again changed its vote, and decides to go to Atlanta on the 15th, to attend the peace jubilee. They will go from Atlanta to Tuskegee with the presidential party Friday and leave Tuskegee a few hours in advance of the president, in order to be in session when the president reaches the city at 3 o'clock.

The bill introduced by Mr. Wall[illegible] for the better protection of game mammals and song birds, was made special order for 12 o'clock, and after being amended so as to apply to but ten counties in the state, it was passed.

Senate bill 88, amending the charter of Birmingham, was called up by Mr. Burkhalter and passed.

Alabama will have a larger fund for the support of the common schools in future years. The house put itself on record in the matter this morning by unanimously passing the resolution offered by Mr. Seymour, that the school fund be increased from $350,000 to $500,000.

Monday.

In discussing his convict bill today Senator Cunningham declared that the competition of convicts with free labor was unfair and unjust to the coal miners of Alabama. It is expected that the bill will reach a vote in the senate tomorrow. It was on the calendar for this morning and proved a feature of discussion throughout the day. As amended by the committee the bill recommends that only 50 per cent of the state's convicts above felonies be employed in the mines. This will force the counties to dispose of a large number of their short-term prisoners in some other way. The bill also provides that 50 per cent of the gross proceeds from convict hire be turned into the educational fund and the other half into the state treasury.

The general appropriation bill is to be considered at this session of the house. In its stead the appropriation committee this afternoon submitted a substitute that the present appropriations be continued until the 15th February, 1899.

Mr. Boykin arose and moved to reconsider the action taken on senate bill 162, providing for a constitutional convention, which passed the senate on last Saturday. This motion brought forth all sorts of wrangling, which ended in its sudden death, caused by Mr. Wiley. Mr. Boykin then moved that the house be requested to return this bill to the senate, but Mr. Je[illegible] promptly moved to table, which was done.

There were three bills of general importance considered [illegible] the house, one of which was recommitted, [illegible] passed and the other defeated.

The routine calls were completed and the consideration of Mr. Arr[illegible]ton's bill providing that witnesses in defendant's courts should only draw pay for one case per day, when summoned in more than one case on the same day. The bill was passed [illegible] several counties eliminated.

Mr. Brown called the special order which was his bill providing for the examination of state banks by bankers. The measure was discussed at length, and was finally recommitted to a special committee to be named by the speaker.

Mr. Jones, of Bullock, finally called up his bill to make the legal rate of interest in Alabama 6 per cent. The measure caused a lively debate, and amendments were offered, but all were voted down.

The bill was passed without amendment by a vote of 64 to 20.

"Displacement" refers to the quantity of liquid displaced by the immersed hull of the ship, and "tonnage" to the freight carrying capacity of the ship determined by certain rules of measurement. The displacement of a vessel is the entire weight of the hull with all its contents, according to the well-known law of hydrostatics that a floating body displaces a weight of fluid just equal to its own weight. A ship sinks in the water to such a level that the pressure of the fluid displaced exactly counterbalances the weight of the ship.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. The Defect in American Patriotism Is All in the So-Called Upper Story of Society—Robbing the Government and the Poor Soldiers.

Our Heritage.

Life seemeth to me like a beautiful poem,
Its noblest line is the innermost soul,
And youth is the preface the heart-touching poem,
That like golden sunlight illumines the whole.

Some drift through the spring time ne'er heeding its beauty,
And crush the shy roses that lie at their feet,
They tread in the paths leading only to duty,
And miss all the glad that makes living so sweet.

Tho' thirsty, they hear not the low splashing of water
That scatters in spray on the grass at their side,
Tho' weary, they toil up the high sun-scorched mountain,
Nor rest in the vale where the cool shadows bide.

They let all the bright things drift over before them,
Nor suffer a share ere it flutters away;
The clouds filled with hope, that bend lovingly o'er them,
When touched by their glance, turn from rose tint to gray.

Oh! why should we walk all our days in the shadow,
And wound our tired feet with the brambles of care,
When life of itself is a green-dalsied meadow,
Where each may weave garlands of flowers to wear?

'Tis well we should cling to the standard of duty,
But not to walk blindly, unheeding the sun;
God gave us the world with its blossoming beauty,
And we may blend brightness and shadow in one!

—I. S. Taylor.

The Defect in American Patriotism.

Editors Union Signal: Past experience has prepared us to expect that war time will be utilized by unscrupulous men in making private fortunes out of government contracts. The shocking condition of the army camps, especially the state of the men at Santiago, has probably been largely caused by fraud on the part of such contractors added to still grosser fraud and mismanagement in the commissary department of the army itself. Early in the war the press reported the arrest of a commissary officer for selling to his private advantage the government supplies. The man admitted his guilt, but asserted in excuse that "they all do it." The published statement that unbroken packages of army goods are freely on sale in the vicinity of the camps would, if a fact, prove there was some truth in the man's charge. From such straws one may judge how the wind of public opinion blows. Plainly stated the common thought is: Patriotism only relates to fighting; it does not relate to manufacturing or buying and selling.

The most unscrupulous of these men would indignantly repel the accusation of being a traitor. The flag floats over his house, he wears it in his button-hole and rejoices in every success of the American troops. Nevertheless, stripped of verbal disguises the fact remains, he who cheats the government gives aid and comfort to its enemies and is actually a traitor.

Our soldiers suffered more from the attacks of General Fever than from any Spanish general, and to contribute to the surrender of our men to this deadly foe differs, not in principle from being traitorously concerned in the capitulation of the troops to a human foe.

If an enriched army contractor received social ostracism instead of the court paid to wealth, his position as a traitor would be better marked. Money should no more be the object of the contractor or army officer who feeds and clothes the army than of the soldier who fights in it. Both have a right to a proper income, but our soldiers do not fight for their pay and would be justly despised if they did so. "Mercenaries" applied to troops is universally a term of contempt, but in the commissary department men are expected to be mercenary. The conception of patriotism is radically deficient which has such a different standard for soldier and merchant, for one for fighting and one for buying and selling.

Ruskin has very plainly and forcibly stated the fact that buying and selling is really a business in which loyalty to death is required. His words have a greater force with regard to the emergencies of war than in the peaceful days of which he wrote. He says in the chapter on "The Roots of Honor":

"Five great intellectual professions relating to daily necessities of life have hitherto existed—three exist necessarily in every civilized nation.

"The soldier's profession is to defend it.

"The pastor's, to teach it.

"The physician's, to keep it in health.

"The judge's, to enforce justice in it.

"The merchant's, to provide for it.

"And the duty of all these men is, on occasion, to die for it."

The American people, although indignant at the mismanagement of the commissary department, have not formed as high an ideal of patriotism as this. When they do raise the standard of duty as high for their merchants as for their soldiers, the country will be able to cleanse itself alike from the stains of municipal corruption and of scandals in war management. Toward the formation of this ideal, the Good Citizenship League is doing, perhaps, the most efficient work. The enthusiasm for the flag, and the military drill in school do not, in themselves, teach intelligent patriotism. But every year greater efforts are being put forth to train our youth into patriots to whom bosses, municipal spoils and fat contracts will alike be abhorrent, and under whose coming reign corruption will not exist either in peace or war. With the present generation the defect in American patriotism can scarcely be entirely remedied. As in all reforms our hope is in the children.

AMELIA H. BOTSFORD.

The Question of Life and Death to Nations.

By Wilbur F. Crafts.

Must every nation, must our own, grow old and die? Nay, for in the very nature of the case, a nation may be as immortal as our earth or like a river, its drops ever passing on to the sea, but ever renewed from its mountain springs. If we maintain the Christian morality and popular education, which Washington declared to be the high sources of national prosperity, and keep unbroken on either hand the banks of liberty and law, our nation's life may go on ceaselessly. But eternal life to a nation can come only through "eternal vigilance." Many who firmly believe nature goes by law act as if history went by luck. As surely as effect follows cause Babylonian vices will produce a Babylonian fall.

Babylon, Greece, Rome, the renaissance kingdoms of Italy and France and Spain form a national series, all showing that the highest art, if it be mental culture, without moral, if it be the art whose motto is "art for art's sake," the godless estheticism of nude art, that puts beauty in the supreme place instead of duty, not only can not take the place of religion in checking immorality, but ever increases it, dragging the nation down the three steps to national ruin; first, moral, second, physical, third, political decay. France is on the second step, the only civilized land in which the birth rate is falling below the death rate, a blazing warning on the walls of this modern Babylon of the retribution to men and nations that follows the violation of the fourth and seventh commandments.

Why should we cast aside our traditions to welcome the nude to our literature and homes, when every nation from which we have borrowed it is either dead or dying? Since France is dying of the worst of plagues, French pictures, French plays and French novels should be quarantined like ships from infected ports.

The problem of parity is the question of life or death to nations. As we look through history we see that nations have died chiefly of internal causes, not of American free silver or of British free trade, but free love. Therefore, moral questions should be the supreme question in politics, those that conform to Gladstone's definition of the purpose of law—"to make it as hard as possible to do wrong and as easy as possible to do right."

A Parable.

By Elbwood Pomeroy.

A certain very rich man said unto himself: "I have many interests and I will turn over the most important of them to a body of men whom I'll choose for a year or two years, and I'll call them a legislature." And he did it and went on his way. And the body of men met and they made money with the rich man's goods and sold some and mortgaged others and despoiled others. And the sutlers and lobbyists flocked around as vultures around a carrion, and the rich man remonstrated and held a mass-meeting and screamed himself hoarse. And the body of men looked at him derisively and said to itself: "Surely we have worked for these offices, and they are ours, and you can't put us out, nor reverse our acts, but are bound by them," and they laughed in their sleeves at the rich man.

Again an election came around and the rich man chose another set of men of the same sort, and having untrammeled power. They did likewise. And many moons waxed and waned and the rich man did not seem to learn by experience, but really he was growing very angry, and at last he rose up and said: "I will choose you as councilors, but you shall do naught that I do not wish, and you shall do the things I wish, and I'll veto any acts of yours that I do not like by the referendum, and if you will not pass the laws I wish, I myself will start them by the initiative." And the latter end of that man was better than the former.

The 1,200 pots controlled by the American Glass Company are now being operated. An agreement has been signed.

At Bevier, Ky., a settlement of negro miners have saved some money, bought 200 acres of coal land and are peacefully digging a living out of the earth.

Lac La Belle property, better known as the Delaware mine, in Keeweenaw county, Mich., is to be bought by a new corporation having a nominal capitalization of $2,500,000 and an actual cash capital of $1,000,000. Local capital will furnish $750,000, and Boston and New York persons $250,000.

The differences between the Chicago-Virden Coal Company at Virden and Auburn, Ill., and the striking miners have been settled, and the shafts are to be operated again soon. The company agreed to pay the state scale of forty cents per ton, but did not want to tear down the stockade. Finally the company accepted the offer of the miners that they would take it down and charge the company nothing for the labor.

FUNCTIONS OF MONEY.

HENRY G. MILLER REMOVES SOME SUPERSTITIONS.

Money Is a Medium of Exchange and as Such It Has No Extrinsic Value—The Money That Seeks Trade Quickly Is the Real Honest Money.

What is money? In a gold-using country it is a gold coin, in a silver-using country it is a silver coin, and in a bimetallic country it is silver and gold coins. Money is a creature of law, and it is the settled law of this country that congress, under the power granted in the constitution, can provide for issues by the government of paper money, and endow these issues with all the functions of money, making this money a legal tender in payment of debts, and therefore money of ultimate payment. France has, reckoned in our currency, about $600,000,000 of irredeemable paper money circulating side by side with gold and silver and having the same relation to commodities that the coins struck from these metals have. Therefore, in giving a definition of money, we must turn our attention away from the material or substance of which money is made and confine it to the office it performs, and say with Senator Jones, "Money is a function, and that is money which performs the function of money," or, rather which is legally endowed with that function, without regard to the substance of which it is made or in which it may be embodied. In its last analysis money is an idea or mental conception, but, to be employed in the transactions of life, it must be represented by a sensible object. It was upon this theory that our monetary system was constructed. In one of the sections of the act of 1792, preserved in section 3563 of the revised statutes, it is provided, "The money of account of the United States shall be expressed in units or dollars, dimes or tenths, cents or hundredths, and mills or thousandths, and all accounts in the public offices and all proceedings in the courts shall be kept and had in conformity to this regulation." In another section it is provided, "There shall from time to time be struck or coined at the mint, units or dollars, each to be of the value of the Spanish milled dollar and to contain 371¼ grains of pure or 416 grains of standard silver." The dollar, then, is the unit of account embodied or represented in such substance and to be of such form as the law may designate. It is a denominator of value, as all values are expressed in this unit, its multiples and fractions. It does not in any sense derive its value from the material in which it is embodied. While it is a dollar endowed by law with that function it has precisely the same value; that is, it will exchange for the same quantity of commodities whether it resides in a given weight of gold, or in an equivalent weight of silver, or floats upon paper. Neither the silver piece nor the gold piece, or any other substance used in commerce, has any intrinsic value. Value in commerce is a relative term and implies the presence of two things and a comparison between them. The value of a thing is that which is given in exchange for it, and is therefore wholly extrinsic and is expressed in the terms of the thing for which it is exchanged. To state the value of money is to express the relation of a given sum of it to a definite quantity of commodities or other forms of property, and this relation changes as the quantity of money on the one side and other forms of property on the other side and the activities of trade and commerce change. The value of money, like that of every other subject of commerce, is determined by the demand for it as compared with its supply. In respect to the demand for it, it differs from commodities in this, that as it is only through the intervention of money that our wants can be supplied the demand for it is equivalent to the aggregate demand of a community for the necessaries of life and all the material things that contribute to our comfort and happiness, and which, unaided and alone, we cannot severally produce. This demand, therefore, is constant and incessant. It is not a demand for the material of which money is made, but for the function which money performs. It is for money—for gold and silver coins—and not for gold and silver ingots. The government stamp upon the coin does not impart to it any additional value; it is simply a certificate of its weight and fineness and that it is in a form to perform the function of money. Its value is determined by the market. The government stands behind its pecuniary obligations, but in no sense does it stand behind its money. The value of money is at all times subject to the vicissitudes of the market, which are entirely outside of government control. It is true the law cannot directly create value, either in silver bullion, or any other commodity, but it can greatly enlarge the use of silver bullion by making a money metal of it and thereby increase its value. With an accumulated stock of gold, sufficient to supply the arts for the next sixty years, how much would gold be worth if it were everywhere bereft of the money function? It would not be worth 20 cents an ounce.

HENRY G. MILLER.

In Mexico.

Why has not Mexico, with her open mints, "heaped" up money? Simply because the surplus floats away just as Dr. Wayland said it would. Mexico now has but $7.70 per capita of silver, though it has the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and produces over $60,000,000 of it each year. The idea that any commodity can be "dumped" into any country under the influence of any economic law known to mankind, without there is a demand for it, is the height of absurdity, and has no supporters of standing among the writers upon the subject of political economy. That there is a tremendous demand for a more just standard of value there can be no doubt, but when sufficient silver standard money has been put into circulation to satisfy that demand all other silver will go to foreign countries or to the melting pot. If bimetallism were to be established in this country, and the parity of the two metals maintained, it is evident that there would be no dumping of the silver of the world here; but if the parity of the metals is not established at the ratio of 16 to 1, and gold goes to a premium, whoever exchanges his silver for gold will have to pay that premium. Gold will then pass by weight, and will be exchanged for silver at their commercial ratio. If gold goes to a premium and thus becomes more desirable for reserve purposes, where would be incentive lie for men to wholly part with it for silver, and thus cause other nations to "dump" their silver upon us? Is there a case to be found in all history where the favorite money, the money most desired and cherished by the people, was the money to entirely leave them? We ask the monometallists to point out such a case. If, as the monometallists assert, silver is not a sound money, is it at all likely that the banks will let all the sound money get away from them? As stated before, under a fiat money system, there was kept a large stock of gold, and it seems strange if it could not be kept under bimetallism, if there were any necessity for it whatever. Russia, though for years upon a silver basis, after the other European nations had abandoned it, maintained a large gold reserve, and Japan, even now, has nearly as large a per capita of gold as of silver. The great factors in keeping either gold or silver in a country are: (1) Is there a pressing demand for them? and (2) are the laws of the country such as to permit the people to satisfy that demand? Whenever these two elements are present in a country these metals will be found there also, though the drain on them may be so heavy as to make either of them, when taken alone, incapable of furnishing a perfectly sound money basis. We have experienced that trouble with gold. S. D. WILSON.

From Far Away New Zealand.

There are a people living thousands of miles from us who have for many years past been working out the most difficult, economic and political problems of the age. These people are the New Zealanders. As your memory is weak on geography, you ask: "Where is New Zealand?" New Zealand is a group of islands lying in the South Pacific ocean and forming a colony of Great Britain. Its area is 106,259 square miles, and population 450,000. This country has already made much history—not that history which consists in exterminating men, but those nobler chronicles which tell of bettering men and their conditions in life. The house of representatives in this land of radiant experiments has just passed a bill providing for a pension for every poor person in the colony whose age exceeds 65. The act defines a "poor person" as one who has less than 13 shillings ($3.12) a week. The pension prescribed is about $80 a year. The most remarkable development atent this emanation from the school of liberal and individualist political economy is that conservative and cautious British journals have extended their sympathy. New Zealand has been so wondrously (one might say gloriously) successful in her many progressions that London newspapers are very timid about attacking any innovation that hails from the South Pacific.

Money for 1900 Coming In.

The ways and means committee, of which W. H. Harvey, Unity building, Chicago, is general secretary, is making splendid progress in the work of raising funds for the presidential campaign of 1900. Hundreds of letters are being received daily from Democrats, Silver Republicans and Populists, enclosing their dollars and asking for particulars as to how they can be of further service. Secretary Harvey gives his personal attention to every case and no question is asked that is not promptly answered. The ways and means committee is non-partisan—the re-establishment of bimetallism being its single aim. It includes in its membership Senators Jones, Teller and Allen of the three allied bimetallic parties, and also ex-Governor Altgold of Illinois and ex-Governor Stone of Missouri. Chairman Jones is greatly pleased at the prospects.

Senator Depew Not a Joke.

From the New York Journal: It is not to tell amusing stories that Mr. Depew will be sent to the senate by Mr. Vanderbilt. Shrewd, calculating and unscrupulous as Mr. Platt is, he would have to get up very early in the morning to catch Chauncey Depew napping. There will be two of a kind in Washington after the legislature has done as it is told—two clear-minded, cynical and efficient servants of the interests which rule this republic for their own profit and care nothing at all for the welfare of the people. Senator Depew will be no joke.

More Work for Wanamaker.

From the Columbus (O.) Press-Post: Now, if Mr. Wanamaker will hustle around and find out what became of the $400,000 curruption fund he raised for the "blocks-of-five" campaign in 1888, perhaps we shall have a few more refreshing indictments of prominent Republicans. Let the good work go on.

ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

Wednesday's Session.

In the senate this morning the bill to further regulate the sentencing and employment of convicts in this state, the special order after the call of the committees, was postponed until tomorrow on motion of Mr. Cunningham, the author of the bill.

The second special order, the bill to fix the fees for feeding prisoners where the same are paid by the state, provoked a great deal of discussion and the test vote shows the senate to be in favor of the bill. The bill fixes fees at 40, 30 and 25 cents and it is held is not uniform in different counties but is a blow at sheriffs in the larger counties, as 25 cents is to be charged per day after a certain number is reached.

In the house Mr. Burkhalter's bill to allow county commissioners to levy 5 cents on the $100 for school purposes was discussed and earnestly contested. It is urged that the bill is a blow at agricultural counties and could not be stood by many of the counties.

The senate passed the resolution agreed upon by the conference committee inviting the president to visit Montgomery. The language was changed a little, but it is about the same in substance as the original senate resolution.

The steering committee on the constitutional convention claim to have secured the pledge of seventeen senators to vote for the bill.

The house defeated the school tax bill.

Thursday's Session.

The democratic caucus of the legislature has declared in favor of the bill providing for a vote on the question of calling a constitutional convention, as reported by the joint caucus committee recently named, and supporters of the measure feel sure that it will pass both houses. The bill as amended provides for an election on the first Monday in July next to decide whether or not a convention is to be held. The proposed convention, if a majority vote is cast in favor of holding it, will convene in Montgomery on the first Monday in August and is not to sit longer than fifty days, the members to be paid $4 per day each. The representation will be the same in strength as that of the legislature, 133 members. One hundred will be elected from the counties, according to their strength in the house of representatives, and thirty-three from the state at large. The matter of raising the general tax levy and the removal of the capital are not to be touched, the convention being more especially for the purpose of changing the plan of suffrage so as to eliminate the ignorant negro vote. Soldiers of the Mexican and civil wars and their descendants will not be disfranchised. Local option to increase taxation will probably be granted to municipalities where it is for a special purpose, like schools. These are about what the convention movement contemplates.

The senate today tackled the bill to fix the fees of sheriffs, when paid by the state, after a heated discussion. This leaves the fees as at present.

The resolution to take a recess on December 15th and 16th was reconsidered, and the two houses will remain in session until the 17th. The president has accepted invitations to come here, and will be in this city from 3 to 5 p. m.

Friday's Session.

The house indefinitely postponed action on the bill creating a board of fish and game commissioners. The house passed a resolution that school appropriations should be increased to $500,000. The bill to amend the charter of Birmingham, relating to taxation, was passed by the house. The bill to repeal the law against book-making and pool selling was indefinitely postponed. A bill was passed protecting training stables for horses in the state.

The legislature has made it possible for Lovejoy, the democratic nominee for probate judge of Etowah county, to take his seat. Beeson, the populist candidate, contested the election on the ground that the election in the Gadsden beat was held in a building other than the court house, which the law prescribes for such purposes. The democratic majority was not denied, and on the grounds named above Judge Bibbro rendered a decision naming the populist as the qualified judge. It is claimed that the elections had been held outside of the court house for years, and in fact, this was admitted by a populist member on the floor, who opposed the bill, saying it was unconstitutional. The bill simply ratifies the election held in that precinct.

A bill which legalizes the whipping-post passed the lower house. The law, however, only applies to Mobile county and was fathered by Representative Delchamps.

Representative Smith's exemption bill received a black eye in the senate finance committee, it receiving an adverse report. The bill provides that all manufacturing industries located within the state during the next five years should be exempt from all state taxes for a period of ten years. Notwithstanding this, the general revenue bill of the house will contain a similar section.

Saturday's Session.

After a half day's debate and filibustering the senate voted at 5:45 o'clock on the constitutional convention bill, carrying it by a clear majority of five. If carried by the house, and there appears to be little doubt of it, the people will finally decide the question at the ballot box. At first announced, the vote stood 17 to 12. Senator Boykin, who had bitterly opposed the bill all day, asked that his vote be changed from the negative to the affimative and gave notice that on Monday he would move to reconsider the vote by which the measure was passed. The vote was as follows:

Ayes — Cunningham, Boykin, Brooks, Caffee, Horton, Jelks, Jenkins, Lee, Lyons, Matthews, Meadows, Moore, Nunnelley, Parnell, Sowell, Limestone, Thomas, Thompson, Wiley. Total, 18.

Nays—Brown, Case, Dowdell, Shell, Grant, Hall, McCain, Mayer, Rather, Sowell of Walker, Stevens, Windham. Total, 11.

Senator Buchanan would have voted for the bill, but was paired with Dowdell of Covington, who was absent.

The vote had hardly been announced when Senator Meadows arose and moved that the bill be taken from the house without reference and engrossed. The motion was carried and before the messenger could get to his way the senate had adjourned, a crowd of senators and others following him. When the messenger told his story to the house he was greeted by laughing. Speaker Wiley called for order and referred the matter to the judiciary committee, and then the house adjourned. By the bill being referred tonight, it will be given a favorable report Monday and will likely be placed on the calendar for Wednesday.

The bill creating the office of auditor for Jefferson reached its third reading and passed the house this afternoon. The bill is a substitute for the senate bill, differing from the original in that the salary is fixed at $1,800, instead of $2,000, and makes the office elective after the first term.

Mr. Smith, of Escambia, offered a resolution of thanks to Richmond Pearson Hobson for his bravery in blocking the channel of Santiago bay, which was very laudatory. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The assembly has again changed its vote, and decides to go to Atlanta on the 15th, to attend the peace jubilee. They will go from Atlanta to Tuskegee with the presidential party Friday and leave Tuskegee a few hours in advance of the president, in order to be in session when the president reaches the city at 3 o'clock.

The bill introduced by Mr. Walker for the better protection of game mammals and song birds, was made special order for 12 o'clock, and after being amended so as to apply to but ten counties in the state, it was passed.

Senate bill 88, amending the charter of Birmingham, was called up by Mr. Burkhalter and passed.

Alabama will have a larger fund for the support of the common schools in future years. The house put itself on record in the matter this morning by unanimously passing the resolution offered by Mr. Seymour, that the school fund be increased from $350,000 to $500,000.

Monday.

In discussing his convict bill today Senator Cunningham declared that the competition of convicts with free labor was unfair and unjust to the coal miners of Alabama. It is expected that the bill will reach a vote in the senate tomorrow. It was on the calendar for this morning and proved the feature of discussion throughout the day. As amended by the committee the bill recommends that only 50 per cent of the state's convicts above the age of 21 years be employed in the mines. This will force the counties to dispose of a large number of their short-term prisoners in some other way. The bill also provides that 50 per cent of the gross proceeds from convict hire be turned into the educational fund and the other half into the state treasury.

The general appropriation bill is to be considered at this session of the house. In its stead the appropriation committee this afternoon submitted a substitute that the present appropriations be continued until the 15th of February, 1899.

Mr. Boykin arose and moved to reconsider the action taken on senate bill 162, providing for a constitutional convention, which passed the senate on last Saturday. This motion brought forth all sorts of wrangling, which ended in its sudden death, caused by Mr. Wiley. Mr. Boykin then moved that the house be requested to return this bill to the senate, but Mr. Jelks in its promptly moved to table, which was done.

There were three bills of general importance considered by the house, one of which was recommitted, and passed and the other defeated.

The routine calls were completed and the consideration of Mr. Arrington's bill providing that witnesses in defendant's courts should only be paid for one case per day, when summoned in more than one case on the same day. The bill was passed with several counties eliminated.

Mr. Brown called the special order which was his bill providing for the examination of state banks by bankers. The measure was discussed at length, and was finally recommitted to a special committee to be named by the speaker.

Mr. Jones, of Bullock, finally called up his bill to make the legal rate of interest in Alabama 6 per cent. The measure caused a lively debate, many amendments were offered, but all were voted down.

The bill was passed without amendment by a vote of 64 to 20.

Tonnage and Displacement.

At the present time, when naval tters are a source of great interest the general public, one continually ars the terms "displacement" and nnage" improperly used, both in daily press and in common speech. confusion between the terms ld not occur if their meaning were derstood. "Displacement" refers the quantity of liquid displaced by immersed hull of the ship, and nnage" to the freight carrying ca ity of the ship determined by cer n rules of measurement. The dis cement of a vessel is the entire ght of the hull with all its con rs, according to the well-known law hydrostatics that a floating body places a weight of fluid just equal its own weight. A ship sinks in the er to such a level that the pressure the fluid displaced exactly counter ances the weight of the ship.

Mrs. Hoffman Describes How She Wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for Advice, and Is Now Well

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a great sufferer. I have been sick for months, was troubled with severe pain on both sides of abdomen, sore feeling in lower part of bowels, also suffered with dizziness, headache, and could not sleep. I wrote you a letter describing my case and asking your advice. You replied telling me just what to do. I followed your directions, and cannot praise your medicine enough for what it has done for me. I say thanks to you for your advice. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me, and I will recommend it to my friends. MRS. FLORENCE HOFFMAN, 512 Roland S.W., Canton, O.

The condition described by Mrs. Hoffman will appeal to many women, yet thousands of sick women struggle on with their daily tasks disregarding the urgent warnings until overtaken by final collapse.

The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled, for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometimes past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of this great business, treating by letter many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

The Potash Question.

A thorough study of the subject has proven that crop failures can be prevented by using fertilizers containing a large percentage of Potash; no plant can grow without Potash.

We have a little book on the subject of potash, written by authorities, that we would like to send to every farmer, free of charge, if he will only write and ask for it.

TOOK A WILDCAT'S PHOTOGRAPH.

Boy Photographer's Father Shot the Animal Directly Afterward.

To photograph a wildcat just before shooting the animal is a feat which few hunters have ever accomplished. It was done recently by William M. Shaw, of Greenville, Me., and the photograph has just been reproduced in the New York Sun. Mr. Shaw, who is a rich lumberman in the Moosehead region, owns most of Sugar Island, one of the most picturesque spots in Moosehead Lake. On this bit of land is situated the camps of the Nighthawk Club, whose membership is largely drawn from sportsmen from New York and Boston.

None of the campers is a more enthusiastic sportsman than Mr. Shaw, who combines with his tastes as a hunter those of the artist. He is a devoted amateur photographer and has taught the art to all the members of his family who are able to handle a camera. On his near-by hunting trips he is usually accompanied by his twelve-year-old son Hugh. It was on one of these trips that the photograph was taken. On this occasion the younger Shaw carried the camera. They had had a tiresome tramp through the woods when Mr. Shaw, looking up, saw a large wildcat ready to spring.

Raising his rifle and standing ready to fire should the beast attempt to spring, Mr. Shaw kept his eyes on the cat, while Master Hugh pressed the button. The result is the picture. Mr. Shaw, the next instant, fired, and the cat fell to the ground mortally wounded. Mr. Shaw has the wildcat mounted and he keeps it in his house.

The Snelp—in South Africa.

The snelpaardelooszonderspoorwegpetroolrijtuig is being introduced into progressive South Africa as into other parts of the world. The snelpaardeloozonderspoorwegpetroolrijtuig is, as the reader will doubtless have noted at a glance, the mellifluous Dutch name of the quick-horseless upon-ordinary-road-running-petroleum-carriage or motor car soon to be a familiar object in Johannesburg as already in Amsterdam.

A Child's Philosophy.

Lord Crewe, at an educational meeting at Liverpool, told an amusing story of the little son of a friend of his who refused to say his lesson to his governess. He admitted that he knew it well, but, said he, "If I say my lesson, what's the use? you will only make me learn something else." That child will probably be heard of again.—Westminster Gazette.

Stuffing Live Fowls by Machinery.

Poultry raising has become a science. No longer do the feathered beauties run free picking up the succulent caterpillar and scratching for grain. It's too expensive.

In the first place caterpillars aren't good food for chickens; in the second, grain thrown on the ground is wasted; in the third place, they run off their fat if obliged to trot around and pick up their food.

On the great poultry farms where fowls are fattened for the London market the birds are imprisoned in long rows of coops. At feeding time along comes a boy wheeling a queer barrow that looks something like a tool grinder's kit, except that it has a big hopper on top. In this is ground and mixed food.

Opening each cage door in succession, the boy takes out a fowl and holds it under his arm. Deftly he opens its bill with his fingers, inserts in its mouth a tube connected with the hopper, presses his foot upon a lever under the barrow, and pumps until the crop is full—like blowing up a bicycle tire with a foot-pump.

One charge of food is rammed down that fowl's receptive gullet; and back he goes to his cage to ruminate on a world of queer things.

Thus deprived of exercise, the birds grow fat very rapidly. With the machine one boy can feed 280 fowls in an hour.

American ladies in Paris have subscribed to present Paris with an equestrian statue of Washington by Mr. French. It will probably be erected in the Place d'Iena.

Dr. Calmette, director of the Pasteur Institute, at Lille, France, has endowed that body with $50,000, the profits of one of his inventions at the distilleries of Seclin.

Chinese Superstitions.

In a very fascinating article from the pen of Hon. Calvin S. Brice, in the December number of Ainslee's Magazine, appear many interesting peculiarities of this peculiar people. One instance among the many narrated by Senator Brice is the following:

"The feeling against the foreigner in China, which sometimes finds expression in outbreaks, is not natural. The Hon. Charles Denby, for thirteen years minister of the United States to China, has said recently that the natural feeling of the native of China for a foreigner is one of mere curiosity—that the attacks on foreigners are incited by those who are jealous of the strangers, or provoked by their supposed failure to conciliate local prejudice and superstition. For instance, a short railroad was built in China not many years ago which so excited the people to opposition that it was bought out by the Chinese authorities and thereupon torn up. This road, viz, the line of about twenty miles from Woosung and Shanghai, has been recently rebuilt and opened. When first constructed it encountered much native prejudice. Local superstition made the people believe that their ancestors, disturbed by the railway, were wandering about complaining. Where superstition is so general, local prejudices must be considered, and in the contract made with the Chinese government it is provided that graves are not to be disturbed; but the fact that a railway thus so rudely destroyed could, and indeed has had to be rebuilt in the same locality so soon again, is striking."

When Cook's Feelings Were Hurt.

A first-rate chef was in the employment of Lord Seaford, who, not being able to afford to keep the man, prevailed on the Duke of Wellington to engage him. Shortly after entering the Duke's service the chef returned to his former master and begged him, with tears in his eyes, to take him back at reduced wages or none at all. Lord Seaford asked: "Has the Duke been finding fault?" "Oh, no—he is the kindest and most liberal of masters; but I serve him a dinner that would have made Ude or Francatelli burst with envy and he says nothing! I go out and leave him to dine on a dinner badly dressed by my cook maid, and he say nothing. Dat hurt my feelings, my lord!"

OVER-WROUGHT NERVES OF WOMEN.

Extracts From Letters Received by Mrs. Pinkham.

"I am so nervous and wretched." "I feel as if I should fly." How familiar these expressions are. Little things annoy you and make you irritable. You can't sleep, you are unable to lift ordinary burdens, and are subject to dizziness.

That bearing-down sensation helps to make you feel miserable.

You have backache and pains low down in the side, pain in top of head, later on at base of the brain.

Such a condition points unerringly to serious uterine trouble.

If you had written to Mrs. Pinkham when you first experienced impaired vitality, you would have been spared these hours of awful suffering.

Happiness will be gone out of your life forever, my sister, unless you act promptly. Procure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and begin its use, then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., if there is anything about your case you do not understand.

You need not be afraid to tell her the things you could not explain to the doctor, your letter is seen only by women and is absolutely confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's vast experience with such troubles enables her to tell you just what is best for you, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

Mrs. JESSIE BIERLY, Youngdale, Pa., writes:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Will you kindly allow me the pleasure of expressing gratitude for the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking your Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite, a heavy bearing-down feeling, also burning pains in the groins. I could not sleep, was tired all the time, had no ambition. Life was a burden to me. The pains I suffered at times of menstruation were something dreadful. I thought there was no cure for it. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and my husband advised me to try your medicine. I took five bottles, and now I am well and happy. Your medicine saved my life."

A Million Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ELECTIONS IN THE FOURTH ALABAMA DISTRICT

From The N. Y. Tribune.

"Negro domination" is still the bugbear of the South, and it has been sadly overworked in the last campaign. While North Carolina was the storm centre, other States, including Alabama, have heard the deceitful howl of "white supremacy," which is employed solely for the purpose of preventing any Republican candidate from being returned to Congress from the Southern States.

W. F. Aldrich, Congressman from the Fourth District, is the only Republican elected in this state, and he will be obliged to prove his election in a contest, because his Democratic opponent, Gaston A. Robbins, has received a certificate of election on fraudulent returns from one county of the district. Mr. Aldrich was compelled to go through the same process in 1894, his first term, and again in 1896, his second term.

A curious fact about Mr. Aldrich's experience in Alabama is that he has always received his majorities in the white counties of his district, while a Democratic majority has been cooked up in one of the strong black counties, though it is a well-known fact that on a free expression of their will nine out of ten of the black men are ardent Republicans. The methods employed by the men who howl "white supremacy" are not without interest, especially in the light of the fact that the white vote of the district is absolutely nullified by them through the alleged use of black Democratic votes. As a matter of fact the black votes are not cast at all, but the "white supremacy" howlers of Dallas county, where the white vote does not number quite two thousand, have frequently returned a majority of five thousand or more in order to overcome Aldrich's real majority in the white counties.

The Fourth Congress District was gerrymandered, like several others in the State, for the express purpose of rendering easy such manipulations. These districts all have their southern extremities in the "black belt," the section in which the negroes are in a large majority, but are not allowed to exercise their political rights. The Fourth extends obliquely north and south over two hundred miles in length, while it is less than fifty miles in width.

There are six counties in the district, and all north of Dallas have clear majorities of white voters. Cleburne has 2,413 white voters and 157 colored; Calhoun 5,760 white and 2,445 colored; Talladega, 3,357 white and 2,504 colored; Shelby, 3,147 white and 1,739 colored; Chilton, 2,317 white and 633 colored, and Dallas, 2,000 white and 8,531 colored. Yet in 1894, when Aldrich had a majority of 1,454 in the white counties, this vote was nullified by fraudulent returns in Dallas, where the "cooked-up" majority for the Democratic candidate was nearly 5,000. Mr. Aldrich proved at Washington that a large majority of the vote in Dallas county were really not cast at all, but counted for his opponent.

As soon as the contest could be tried, Robbins was ousted, and Aldrich secured the white people of his district from disfranchisement through fraud. The Democratic members of the committee were forced to admit that 3,400 votes had been fraudulently counted for Robbins.

In 1896 the Democratic candidate against Aldrich in the Fourth District was Thomas S. Plowman. Again Aldrich had a good majority in the white counties, but Plowman got the certificate through the old game in the "black belt." The rule down there is to count every black Republican vote as a Democratic vote, and, if the black men stay away from the polls, to count enough of them anyhow to kill the majority of the Republican candidate in the white counties. This is one kind of "white supremacy," and the regulators of Dallas county do not seem to discern the irony of it. Even some of the Democrats are disgusted with the idea of knocking out the white vote of the counties by fraudulent black votes in the only county of this

ELECTIONS IN THE FOURTH ALABAMA DISTRICT.

From The N. Y. Tribune

"Negro domination" is still the bugbear of the South, and it has been sadly overworked in the last campaign. While North Carolina was the storm centre, other States, including Alabama, have heard the deceitful howl of "white supremacy," which is employed solely for the purpose of preventing any Republican candidate from being returned to Congress from the Southern States.

W. F. Mr. Aldrich was compelled to go through the same process in 1894, his first term, and again in 1896, his second term.

A curious fact about Mr. Aldrich's experience in Alabama is that he has always received his majorities in the white counties of his district, while a Democratic majority has been cooked up in one of the strong black counties, though it is a well-known fact that on a free expression of their will nine out of ten of the black men are ardent Republicans. The methods employed by the men who howl "white supremacy" are not without interest, especially in the light of the fact that the white vote of the district is absolutely nullified by them through the alleged use of black Democratic votes. As a matter of fact the black votes are not cast at all, but the "white supremacy" howlers of Dallas county, where the white vote does not number quite two thousand, have frequently returned a majority of five thousand or more in order to overcome Aldrich's real majority in the white counties.

The Fourth Congress District was gerrymandered, like several others in the State, for the express purpose of rendering easy such manipulations. These districts all have their southern extremities in the "black belt," the section in which the negroes are in a large majority, but are not allowed to exercise their political rights. The Fourth extends obliquely north and south over two hundred miles in length, while it is less than fifty miles in width.

There are six counties in the district, and all north of Dallas have decided majorities of white voters. Cleburne has 2,413 white voters and 157 colored; Calhoun 5,760 white and 2,445 colored; Talladega, 3,357 white and 2,804 colored; Shelby, 3,147 white and 1,739 colored; Clinton, 2,317 white and 635 colored, and Dallas, 2,000 white and 831 colored. Yet in 1894, when Aldrich had a majority of 1,-... in the white counties, this vote was nullified by fraudulent returns from Dallas, where the "cooked-up" majority for the Democratic candidate was nearly 5,000. Mr. Aldrich proved at Washington that a majority of the vote in Dallas county were really not cast at all, and was seated for his opponent.

As soon as the contest could be ... Robbins was ousted, and Aldrich gave the white people of ... district from disfranchisement ... fraud. The Democratic ... of the committee were ... to admit that 3,000 votes ... been fraudulently counted for ...

In 1896 the Democratic candidate against Aldrich in the Fourth district was Thomas S. Plowman. Aldrich had a good majority in the white counties, but Plowman got a certificate through the old trick in the "black belt." The ... down there [illegible] to count every ... This ... kind of "white supremacy," and the regulators of Dallas county do not seem to discern the irony of it. Even some of the Democrats are disgusted with the idea of ... counties by fraudulent black ... in the only county of this district where fraud rule holds good.

In 1894 the Aldrich managers instructed many of the colored Republicans of Dallas to stay away from the polls, in the hope that they would not be counted on either side if they were not cast at all. But the precaution proved useless. In the philosophy of the Dallas county gang, it is not necessary for the official returns to bear any striking relation to the actual vote cast.

The names of dead men and convicts were put on the poll lists in order to stuff the returns, and it was shown that many of the frauds were cooked up after the election was over. In one precinct, where only thirty-five persons, including the judges of election, entered the polling-place during the day, the returns gave a vote of 102, only two of whom were credited to Aldrich, in another precinct the vote was padded to 130, when it was proved on the testimony of credible witnesses that only fourteen persons entered the polling place. So it ran through all the precincts of Dallas county, in which the total white vote numbers about two thousand, and the colored vote eighty-five hundred. Nearly all the latter are Republicans, there being at least as many white Republican as there are colored Democratic votes in the county. Yet the official returns of 1894 gave Robbins (Dem.) 5,462 in Dallas, against 72 for Aldrich (Rep.). In the entire district Robbin's vote was given as 10,494, against Aldrich's 7,406. But the true figures, as shown by the contestant, were: Aldrich, 6,842; Robbins, 4,476; Aldrich's majority, 2,366. The Republican candidate was illegally deprived of any representation at the polls in Dallas county, so that all the clerks, markers and inspectors were Democrats at that election.

In the late election precisely the same tactics were resorted to. The Republican nominee came down to Dallas county with a majority of 816. But in Dallas county, where there are seven negroes to one white man, and the former are Republicans almost without exception, the Democratic candidate is credited with a vote of 2,436 and the Republican with only 302, a Democratic majority of 2,046!

The persistency with which these frauds have been practiced in order to defeat the election of a Republican from this State has brought the case to a position of National importance. Governor Johnston has again given the certificate to Robbins. Mr. Aldrich, who is one of the substantial citizens of Alabama, a man who has done much to build up the State, and to promote its welfare at home and abroad, is weary of the struggle to improve political conditions here. But he has decided to make a contest this time and has been in Dallas county to collect data.

We know it has done good. It has caused us to learn a great deal about God's Word and to learn to know and love each other better. We had 65 names enrolled, and about 45 regular attendances. One young lady, Miss Beckie Eilands, gave us her presence 33 Sabbaths in succession, with a good lession and a verse. Many others did not miss but twice during the whole school. THE COUNTY PAUPER FARM.

The County Commissioners met at Jemison on Tuesday to make arrangements for taking care of the county paupers for 1899. It was agreed the present location of the pauper farm was somewhat out of the way, and it was decided to sell the land, and secure another site nearer the center of the county and closer to the Court House. The land was sold to Mr. I. N. Langston for $800, and a contract entered into with him to take care of the paupers in 1899. Dr. Lane was appointed physician to attend the paupers, at a salary of $70 per year.

Two Pointed Questions Answered.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it?

Ans.—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best?

If both articles are brought prominently before the public both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and use only the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty put forth with exaggerated claims, but are certain to return to the one remedy that they know to be reliable, and for coughs colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many red and double-page illustrations in the colors. It is sold by subscription and will undoubtedly prove a money maker to every intelligent salesman.

CLANTON, ALABAMA

Spain has slowly but surely been forced to abandon its stand in consideration of "pride" and "glory."

The foreign demand for breadstuffs continues to be heavy, and the supply is still equal to the demand. A great country this, and the limit of its resources is not yet approached.

Apropos of England's warlike activity it is timely to recall Gladstone's famous reply in the House of Commons: "No, we are not at war; we are conducting military operations."

Coal mining is now one of Missouri's chief industries. The annual report of the United States geological survey credits her with producing in 1897 2,665,626 tons, the cash value of which is placed at $2,887,824.

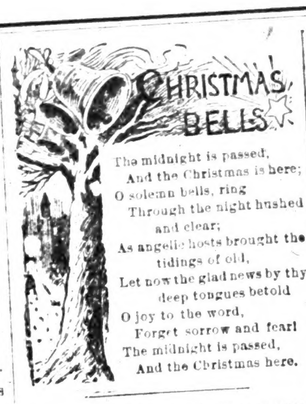
The scheme of American popular education will not reach its highest development until every boy and girl shall be fitted, before leaving school, to use every power to its highest capacity to rightly perform the duties of family and civic relations, and to "make a living" by some handicraft the elements of which have been learned.

The spread of Western ideas in Japan has not proved an unmixed blessing. Adulteration and fraudulent trading have followed in the wake. As the demand for European medicaments increased dishonest foreign merchants introduced a large quantity of inferior and adulterated drugs into Japan. Consequently a law had to be enacted to the effect that all drugs landed in Japan must be taken to the state laboratories before they could be sold to the public.

While Porto Rico is densely populated, yet, in view of the great wealth of the island, there is still room for thousands of immigrants of the right sort. Under the stimulating effect of American ideas Porto Rico will soon begin to astonish the world with her growth. So long as she was fettered by the tyranny of Spain she could not do this, but now that she is permitted to inhale the atmosphere of freedom, she will speedily make up for what she has lost. We will miss our guess if Porto Rico within the next few years does not become one of the most coveted gems on the breast of the ocean, observes the Atlanta Constitution.

After struggling for a long time with the problem of over production, the butter makers opened a central warehouse at Sydney, New South Wales, where they sent all their butter, and where it was sold at wholesale at certain fixed prices, varying according to the season of the year, but never falling below sixteen cents. What butter is not sold at that price is shipped in cold storage to London. In this way the price is kept up. Co-operation among farmers is admittedly one of the most difficult of social problems. Farming is generally carried on with insufficient capital, which makes the farmer a long-credit man, and places him largely in the hands of the middlemen. Farming really requires a liberal education and large executive ability. What the farmers of New South Wales have done, however, might be done by American farmers, especially since the London market is much nearer America than it is New South Wales. But it can't be done with cotton, for the obvious reason that the London market is glutted at the start.

The Abstract of Statistics of the Railways of the United States, for the year ending June 30, 1897, just issued by the interstate commerce commission, gives some interesting figures. There are 184,428 miles of railway in the country; of second, third and fourth tracks 12,705 miles, and of yard and track sidings 46,221 miles, making a grand total of 243,444 miles. One-third of the rails in yards and sidings are of iron, and 95 per cent. of all others are steel. There are 10,017 passenger locomotives, 20,398 freight and 5102 for switching; 33,626 passenger and 1,221,730 freight cars. There are 823,476 men employed by the railways; the amount paid them represents 61.87 per cent. of the total operating expenses. There were 489,445,198 passengers carried, and 43,168 casualities occurred, of which 6137 resulted in death; 1693 railway employes were killed and 27,667 injured. One out of every 2,204,708 passengers was killed, and one out of every 175,116 was injured; of employes one out of every 486 was killed, and one out of every 30 was injured.



The midnight is passed,
And the Christmas is here;
O solemn bells, ring
Through the night hushed and clear;
As angelic hosts brought the tidings of old,
Let now the glad news by thy deep tongues betold
O joy to the word,
Forget sorrow and fear!
The midnight is passed,
And the Christmas here.

JACK'S CHRISTMAS FAIRIES.

By Edith Sessions Tupper.

Up to his ears in mischief all the time was Jack, yet he was the dearest, roundest, rosiest little lad imaginable. He was a picture of happy boyhood that afternoon, three days before Christmas, when, in his smart coat, trimmed in the most delightful military fashion with bands of Persian lamb and black frogs, and his jaunty cap set on his fair hair, and his fat hands protected by fur-trimmed gloves, he went into the park with his sled for a romp. He ran and shouted and pranced until his eyes glowed like stars and his cheeks shone like apples, and everybody who saw him said: "What a handsome boy!"

Jack, of course, was looking forward to Christmas, just as every boy and girl who reads this is looking forward to that day of all days. He expected to have all sorts of fine things in his stocking, and with very good reason, for Santa Claus had never neglected him. Jack's father was rich. Grandmamma, who was richer, was coming to spend the holidays, and Santa Claus had been telephoned on the subject of skates, drums, games, swords, guns and sweetmeats, and there was every prospect that when he called at Jack's home his sleigh would be very full indeed.

Jack was like all boys who have no brothers or sisters, a trifle selfish. But he was a manly, kind-hearted little chap for all that, and so, when he was through with his play and was dragging his sled homeward and came upon a scene on a street-corner which roused his sympathy he paused to find out what it meant.

A crowd of rough boys were tormenting a poorly-clad little girl, whose wan, haggard face spoke too plainly of misery and poverty. She was frightened and almost crying as Jack came up.

"Here, now!" said Jack, with sturdy determination, "you stop that or I'll call a p'liceman."

Fortunately at that moment a blue-coated officer came in sight, and the hoodlums fled with one wild departing yell.

"Thank you," said the little girl, timidly, "those boys allus are pickin' on me."

"What is your name?" said Jack.

"Susie Greene."

"Well, Susie," said Jack, with an air of business, "you look cold and sick."

"I an't very strong"——

"And hungry," continued Jack.

Susie burst into tears.

That was enough for Jack.

"Get right on my sled," said he, determinedly, "and I'll take you down to my house and you'll have something to eat."

Susie obeyed, and the officer saw with grim pleasure the young heir to Mr. Newton's millions dragging off the little waif to his home, a block away.

"He do be a foine chap, he do be," remarked Policeman Mulvaney.

Jack took Susie into the kitchen and gave orders she should be fed forthwith. Then he hurried up to his mother's room. She was there with his grandmother, and in a few words he told them about the little girl he had rescued.

"She's poor and hungry, and she's got no decent clothes. Mamma, can't you fixed her up?"

SANTA CLAUS WAS TELEPHONED.

His mother looked at him a moment, then asked, quietly: "Jack, would you rather have this little girl made comfortable or have a big Christmas yourself?"

Jack hesitated. He thought of all those presents he was expecting; then he thought of Susie thin dress and bursting shoes.

"You can take the money you were going to spend on my Christmas and fix her up," he bravely said. Then his grandmamma, a stately old lady, in black satin and white lace cap, called him to her and kissed him, with tears in her eyes.

Jack sat bolt upright in bed and rubbed his eyes very hard. No, he was not asleep. There was the open fire, there his clothes on the chair, there the door into his mother's room.

It was Christmas Eve. Jack had not hung up his stocking, for he did not expect any presents. Susie had been warmly clothed and her wretched home had been brightened by the visit of Jack and his mother. The boy was satisfied. He had made his choice and expected to abide by it.

But, marvellous to relate, as he looked towards the fire, he saw a crowd of tiny people hurrying and fussing about on the fur rug before the fire. Three or four had a miniature ladder which they were putting up against the side of the fireplace. Several others had hold of one of Jack's long stockings. When the ladder was in place, a little man, with elfish eyes and spider-like legs, climbed the ladder, dragging Jack's stocking after him, and hung it on a hook and then, coming down, put his hands on his hips and surveyed his work with great satisfaction.

"That's what I call a good job," he said. "Now hurry up, you folk, and get your presents in there before St. Nicholas gets along."

Then fairy after fairy climbed the ladder and put in his presents. There was a fat brownie, who brought a basket of nuts from the woods.

"I have worked all day," he said, "looking under hedges and dead leaves to gather these nuts for the boy who was kind to Susie."

A quaint little fairy in a curious foreign gown and cap approached, "I have come clear from the borders of the Black Forest in Germany," she said, "to bring this music-box for the boy who was not ashamed to look after a poor little girl."

There was quite a stir as a remarkable fairy approached. He was copper-tinted and had a feather stuck in his black hair, and he bore on his shoulder a beautiful bow and arrow.

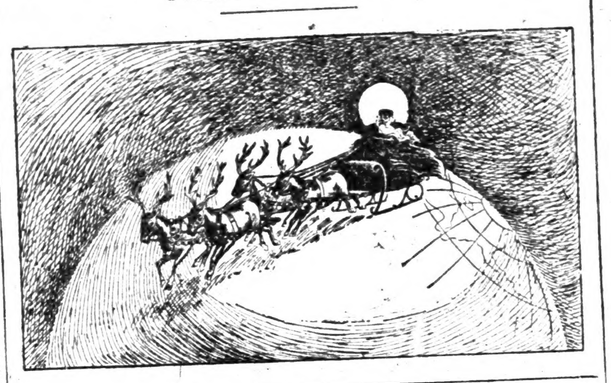
"From the lands of the setting sun I have come," said he. "I am a Puckwudje, an Indian fairy, but I wanted to bring an offering to the young pale-face who has a good heart."

A merry little man in green climbed the ladder, hauling up a beautiful toy sword which he had brought from England for Jack. Then there followed one of the "good people" of Ireland with a drum which he had brought from the Emerald Isle. "Shure, it's hurryin' I must be after doin'," he cried, "to be back before daybreak."

In the midst of all this excitement there came a pawing of tiny hoofs overhead and a jingling of bells, and a voice down the chimney cried, "Whoa!" very loudly.

At this every fairy vanished abruptly. But the stocking was left hanging there, and presently, with a scramble and rush, down the chimney came the good Saint himself. Jack knew him directly from his pictures. He examined the stocking attentively.

HOW SANTA CLAUS GOES AROUND THE WORLD IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS.



"So they've been here ahead of me!" he observed. "That's a great idea! I never was left before. Well, no matter! There are a few things they've forgotten. Here are the skates, the games, the box of caramels, the books," and as he talked he piled the packages up on a table near the fireplace.

Jack's eyes were so heavy he couldn't hold them open. He shut them for an instant, and when he opened them again it was Christmas morning.

He sprang from his bed and rushed to the fireplace. Yes, there hung his stocking full and running over, and the table near by was loaded with gifts.

And, if you were to argue forever, you could never make Jack believe that there is no Santa Claus or such things as fairies.

"I know better," he says, with a decided shake of his curly head. "I know better, for I've seen them."

Christmas Fun.

Those mothers who wish their children's Christmas fun to be fun pure and simple, eschewing fashionable dances and other unsuitable diversions, will find the following suggestions useful:

A tissue-paper candy bag, hung from the chandelier, to be struck with a light rod or switch by each child, blindfolded, in turn, till the lucky one breaks the bag and the candies may be scrambled for, is sure to cause jollity and laughter. This is an old game, but a never-failing one. Forty years ago it was described and pictured in juvenile books, yet, once good, always good, is a true proverb.

Another mirth-provoking device is a sawdust pie. Cover an ordinary washtub with bright paper, having a frill around the edge. Put in a layer of sawdust, then some trifling gifts, another layer of sawdust, and so on. Smooth the top into a shallow cone shape, to resemble a pie, lay over it a brown paper cover, with darker spots here and there, to imitate the scorching of the crust, and fasten some little ornament at the apex, which will lift the cover off as by a handle. Have a sheet spread underneath, provide the children with wooden spoons, and let them dig for "plums."

Of course the amusements indicated are for the youngest members of the flock. Older children may enjoy getting up a Brownie party, a Japanese party, etc., in appropriate costumes. Or they will greatly enter into the spirit of making a number of poorer children happy, by packing a large basket or hamper with attractive little parcels, which they have prepared themselves, then passing them to the shabby little guests. The finest spirits are those who do not lose sight of the fact that Christmas is a time for making others happy, not a season for getting all one can and keeping all one gets.

After Christmas.

Mrs. Buffer—"That's a nice shoe-bag of yours. I had a present of one like it——"

Mrs. Muffer—"Shoe-bag? That's a photograph case. Mrs. Greely, who gave it to me, told me so."

Mrs. Buffer—"Horrors! And I thanked Mrs. Greely for a shoe-bag! I've a mantel drapery like yours, too."

Mrs. Muffer—"Is that a mantel drapery?"

Mrs. Buffer—"Certainly; Mrs. Spriggs, who gave me mine, told me so."

Mrs. Muffer—"And I thanked Mrs. Spriggs for some petticoat trimming!"

Both (in tears)—"Well, home-made presents ought always to be labeled, anyhow!"

Below Zero (and the Belt).

Ten Broke (after the refusal)—"How cold it is to-night. My hands are chilled."

Gwendolen—"Well, I have made you a Christmas present of the mitten. That ought to keep them warm."—The Yellow Book.

If I Were Santa Claus.

If I were only Santa Claus,
And Santa Claus was me,
I'd show to him just what a good Old Santa Claus I'd be.
I'd always bring the kind of toys
And story books for him;
I'd find his stocking every year,
And fill it to the brim.
This year I'd bring a book or so
On how we conquered Spain,
Or how a boy pursued his foe
Across the Klondike plain.
And boxing gloves—and, say, I guess
A pistol would be great
To Klondike with. And then—oh, yes
A whee-l for ninety-eight.
I'd bring a leather suit and hat—
The kind that cowboys wear,
Of bowie knives and things like that
He'd have a lot to spare.
I'd fill his stocking then with all
The candy it would hold,
And where the packages were small
I'd fill in round with gold.
And when they saw how good I was,
How happy folks would be
If I were only Santa Claus
And Santa Claus was me.

Her Christmas Stockings.

"She was the prettiest and brightest girl we had at our house party that winter," related the smiling old lady who loves to dwell upon the holiday festivities when she was a girl. "She was a great favorite with the men because of her dashing ways and the air of good comradeship that she always carried about with her. Yet we could never see that any one of her suitors was favored above another, and often wondered if she would fill the appointed destiny of woman.

"In the party was Harper Allison. We always called him Harpy. He was big, athletic, good-natured and good to look at, but we never thought of him as a brilliant man. It was as plain as could be that he was in love with her, and men of his type are so persistent. They lay siege, and, no matter what may come, they continue the siege.

"I know that he proposed to her a score of times, but he was always put off with the laughing assurance that she was not to be won by any of the stereotyped methods, and that if he ever did find a lodging place in her heart he would see a sign.

"Christmas Eve we all hung up our stockings outside our doors, just as a lark, you know. In the morning we all had presents to show but Harpy. He pretended to be disconsolate beyond consolation. He had put out a great long pair of woolen stockings, knit in black yarn and tipped in red by a fussy old aunt in Maine, who always feared that Harpy never dressed warmly enough. He had not only been slighted by Santa Claus, but the stockings themselves were gone.

"After dinner there was a sleigh ride of the old-fashioned kind. As she raised her dress to clamber into the big sled, we all saw that over her dainty shoes she wore heavy woolen stockings, and the toes were red. 'Now I know what I got,' shouted Harpy, and before us all he tossed her into the air, caught her as she came down and kissed her indefinitely."

Yule-Log Sparks.

About $120,000,000 is spent on Christmas gifts yearly in this country.

The custom of making gifts is widest spread among the Germans.

Snapdragon, a one-time favorite game at Christmas, is again coming into favor.

Skating over the frozen marshes was a favorite holiday pastime among the Knickerbockers.

The custom of giving the turkey the first place on the bill of fare at Christmas is gradually giving way to the old English plan of providing a huge round of beef.

A pretty conceit for trimming Christmas trees is a paper star with a candle in the center. They are made after the manner of the "pin wheel" and commemorate the appearance of the Star of Bethlehem.

To feed Greater New York on Christmas Day it is estimated that it will take among other things, 1700 head of cattle, 7000 tons of poultry, 1700 barrels of cranberries and three carloads of celery.

The best bag to use for the Christmas pudding is made of thin unbleached muslin. Be sure that it is well scalded before the pudding goes in. Keep a supply of clean, strong, white tape for pudding strings.

When the Heart Grows Warm.

Santa Claus might reconnoiter in an air ship.

It is time now to begin to remember not to spell it "Xmas."

To get the right height and measure of Christmas in the stocking feet is by no means a bad plan.

The young people are not alarmed at that anti-Santa Claus movement. They are preparing to turn the hose on it.

If the weather clerk will send a little snow for Christmas he will not be required to put it in the hanging stockings. It will be appreciated if it is left outside.

SHOOTING KLONDIKE RAPIDS.

Many Dangers Presented Even to the Water Traveler.

There are dangers en route to the Klondike, even when the worst is followed. The river [illegible] shooting the dangerous White H[illegible] rapids and Miles Cany[illegible] from Lake Bennett to Dawson, over through many difficulties. On enter ing the canyon with its huge wall sides; there is an abrupt turn, and is most difficult to prevent the steamer dashing against the rocks as the turn is made. The illustration represents the steamer Goddard on her way to Dawson City. She just grazed her side against the sheer rugged cliff as she entered, but the captain brought her round in a straight line with the canyon, and no damage resulted. The engines were kept at full speed to give her steerage way, and as she tore down the river the excitement was intense. After fifteen minutes of suspense, during which five miles of swift water was traversed, the steamer took her last leap in the foaming White Horse, and entered the lower branches of the Sixty Mile. Then on she went through Lake Lebarge to the Pelly River. Though the waters were unknown, and the rocks and sandbars not shown an any chart, the captain, with an apparently instinctive knowledge and with consummate judgment, cleared every obstacle, noting each treacherous place for use on future trips.

An Offset.

"This is Mr. Pneer, is it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have rented a house fronting on Mulberry square, I believe?"

"I have."

"Well, my name is Ferguson. I have rented the house next to yours, and by a queer mistake the man I sent to clean it up so I could move into it went to the wrong place and cleaned up yours. His bill, which I settled, is quite moderate—only $1.50—and I thought that if the work proved satisfactory on inspection perhaps you would not object to assuming the payment of that amount."

"Not at all, sir, but I shall charge you $1.50 for one day's occupancy of my house. That, I think, makes us even, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

The Value of Exercise.

Any one who does not take time for exercise will probably have to make time to be ill.

Exercise gradually increases the physical powers and gives strength to resist sickness.

Exercise does for the body what intellectual training does for the mind—educates and strengthens it.

A sound and healthy body is the foundation of all that goes to make life a success. Exercise will enable you to obtain it.

Next to sleep, light, brisk and varied exercise will rest the tired brain more than anything else.

Metal rusts if not used, and the body becomes diseased if not exercised.

Wilhelmina is to Wed.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is to marry her cousin, Prince William of Wied. It is a love match, and, while it does not particularly please the courtiers and royal match-makers, who wanted the young Queen to wed some monarch or heir apparent, the gentle Wilhelmina is happy.

Prince William of Wied is the second son of Prince William Adolph Maximilian Charles, whose family domain is at Neuweid, Rhenish Prussia.

WILLIAM OF WIED.

He was born March 26, 1876, and therefore in his twenty-third year. Prince of Wied he would have attracted little attention in European court circles; as the consort of Queen Wilhelmina he will be the first gentleman in the kingdom of Holland. Only the Queen herself will take precedence of him, his place will be beside her at all state and other official ceremonies. He will share her income, and his children will inherit her throne. In a word, he will occupy in Holland the same position that Prince Albert occupied in England as consort to Queen Victoria.

THE NATION'S PRESIDENT IN

Mr. McKinley Given Enthusiastic Welcome at Montgomery.

HE ADDRESSES THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

References to Gen. Wheeler, His Daughter, and Lieut. Hobson Thrilled the Hearts of Alabamians With Pride—At Tuskegee.

The president and his party were given a magnificent welcome in Montgomery, confederacy's first capital, Friday.

The president's train was escorted from Atlanta to Tuskegee and thence to Montgomery by the state assembly. Governor Johnston, Chief Justice McClellan and a party of ladies. The assembly's train came in ahead of the president's. At the union station the president ial party was met by the governor, committees from the assembly, the mayor and city council and the Commercial and Industrial Association. Mayor Chisby received the president with a well worded speech at the station. The whole party was then taken in carriages through the leading business and residence streets to the old confederate capitol. The entire route was ablaze with the national colors, while tremendous crowds lined the streets as far as the eye could reach.

Capitol Hill was one mass of humanity when the lines of carriages, escorted by the local military companies, reached it at 3 o'clock. When Governor Johnston escorted President McKinley into the hall there was a tremendous demonstration. Governor Johnston made a brief speech, in which he took occasion to say that Alabama had nothing to take back for what she did in 1861, but that she was back in the union to stay and that she welcomed the president of the reunited country to the historic spot around the assemblage.

The President's Address.

Mr. McKinley replied as follows:

"To the General Assembly and Citizens: The warm hearted welcome which has been given me by the citizens of Alabama has deeply touched me, and in return for it I cannot find language to express my gratitude and appreciation. To be welcomed here in the city of Montgomery, the first capital of the Confederate States, warmly and enthusiastically welcomed as the president of a common country, has filled and thrilled me with emotion. Once the capital of the confederacy, now the capital of a great and glorious state, one of the indestructible states of an indestructible union.

"The governor says he has nothing to take back. We have nothing to take back for having kept you in the union. We are glad you did not go out and you are glad you stayed in. (Tremendous applause.)

"Alabama, like all the states of the union, north and south, has been loyal to the flag and steadfastly devoted to the American nation and to American honor. There never has been in the history of the United States such a demonstration of patriotism from one end of this country to the other as in the year just passing, and never has American valor been more brilliantly illustrated in the battle line, on shore and on the battleship at sea, than by the soldiers and sailors of the United States.

"Everybody is talking of Mother Hobson, and ju[illegible] thank Mother [illegible] ence.

THE NATION'S PRESIDENT IN ALABAMA

McKinley Given Enthusiastic Welcome at Montgomery.

ADDRESSES THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

References to Gen. Wheeler, His Daughter, and Lieut. Hobson Thrilled the Hearts of Alabamians With Pride—At Tuskegee.

The president and his party were given a magnificent welcome in Montgomery, confederacy's first capital, Friday.

The president's train was escorted from Atlanta to Tuskegee and thence to Montgomery by the state assembly, Governor Johnston, Chief Justice Clopton and a party of ladies. The president's train came in ahead of the others. At the union station the official party was met by the governor, committees from the assembly, the mayor and city council and the Commercial and Industrial Association. Mayor Chisby received the president with a well-worded speech at the station.

The whole party was then driven in carriages through the leading streets and residence streets to the old confederate capitol. The entire route was ablaze with the national colors, while tremendous crowds lined the streets as far as the eye could reach.

Capitol Hill was one mass of humanity when the lines of carriages, escorted by the local military companies, reached it at 3 o'clock. When Governor Johnston escorted President McKinley into the hall there was a tremendous demonstration. Governor Johnston made a brief speech, in which he took occasion to say that Alabama had nothing to take back for what she did in 1861, but that she was back in the union to stay and that she welcomed the president of the reunited country to the historic spot in the assemblage.

The President's Address.

Mr. McKinley replied as follows:

"To the General Assembly and the warm-hearted welcome which has been given me by the citizens of Alabama has deeply touched me, and in return for it I cannot find language to express my gratitude and appreciation. To be welcomed here in the city of Montgomery, the first capital of the Confederate States, by one and enthusiastically welcomed by the president of a common country, has filled and thrilled me with emotion. Once the capital of the confederacy, now the capital of a great and glorious state, one of the indestructible states of an indestructible union, the governor says he has nothing to take back. We have nothing to take back for having kept you in the union. We are glad you did not go out, and you are glad you stayed in. (Tremendous applause.)

"Alabama, like all the states of the south, north and south, has been loyal to the flag and steadfastly devoted to the American nation and to American institutions.

"There never has been in the history of the United States such a demonstration of patriotism from one section of this country to the other as in the year just passing, and never has American valor been more brilliantly displayed in the battle line, on shore and on the battleship at sea, than by the soldiers and sailors of the United States.

"Everybody is talking of Mother Hobson, and justly so, but I want to thank Mother Hobson in this presence.

"Everybody is talking about General Wheeler, one of the bravest of the brave, but speak, I want to, of that sweet little daughter that followed him to Santiago (great applause) and ministered to the sick at Montauk Point. (cheers.)

"I have spoken in many places and at many times of the heroism of the American army and the American navy, but in our recent conflict the whole people were patriots. Two hundred thousand people were called for and a million rushed to get a place in the ranks. (Great applause.) And millions more stood ready, if need be. (Prolonged applause.) I like the feeling of the American people that we ought not to have a large standing army, but it has been demonstrated in the last few months that we need a standing army large enough to do all the work required while we are in peace, and only rely on the great body of the people in an emergency to help us fight our battles. (Applause.)

"We love peace; we are not a military nation, but whenever the time of peril comes, the bulwark of this people rests in the patriotism of its citizens, and this nation will be safe for all time, because 75,000,000 of people love it and will give up their lives to sustain and uphold it. (Great applause.)

"I thank you, my fellow citizens, for this generous warmth and wealth of welcome which you have given me today, and I shall go back to my duties at our great capital feeling that we have a united country that acknowledges allegiance to but one authority, and will march forever unitedly under one flag, the glorious old stars and stripes." (Tremendous cheering and applause.)

The audience constantly punctured the president's remarks with the wildest demonstrations of approval, and especially his tributes to Lieut. Hobson's mother, and General Wheeler's daughter.

As soon as he had finished, the Governor started to escort the president away for a reception at his office, but the audience would not have it. They called for General Wheeler, General Shafter, General Lawton, Secretaries Alger and Long and Postmaster-General Smith, who responded with short speeches.

He next went to meet the colored people of the city at Old Ship church, where a great throng received him enthusiastically. He made a short, but forceful speech there.

This ended the ceremonies of the day.

The party was conveyed back to the train, and at 6:30 o'clock, amid the boom of cannon, the president left for Savannah.

At Tuskegee.

The special train bringing the Alabama legislature reached Tuskegee at 6:30 p. m. The procession formed at the Tuskegee depot and marched through the city on their way to the Normal school. The president's carriage was drawn by four beautiful boys. In the carriage with the president were Governor Johnston, of Alabama; Colonel Foster, of Tuskegee, and Booker T. Washington. In the other carriages were Mrs. McKinley and other ladies of the president's party, members of the cabinet and Gens. Wheeler, Shafter and Lawton.

The president and party first reviewed more than 600 boys and 300 girls of the Normal school and 200 children of the training school.

The president then made an address to the Colored Normal school.

IS GENERAL GOMEZ DEAD?

Conflicting Reports in Circulation Regarding the Cuban Leader.

The report that General Maximo Gomez is dead, which, according to a dispatch from Madrid, was received there from Havana, cannot be confirmed at Havana, though a rumor of his death has been in circulation for several days. In contradiction of the report is another to the effect that General Gomez left his camp at Yaguajay, province of Santa Clara, and with his main forces went into camp in the Sipuanoa mountains. This report has it that General Gomez is in good health.

CZAR'S DISARMAMENT PLAN

Success of the Movement Depends Upon Action of America.

PEOPLE CAN PREVENT FATAL CATASTROPHE

The Well Meant Ends Will Fail Unless the People Who Detest Militarism Act With Those Who Groan Under Its Burden.

William T. Stead, writing to the Associated Press, says:

"I have seen the czar. I have heard from his own lips the earnest desire of his heart that something practical should be done, and that quickly, to enlist in the services of humanity the millions now devoted to preparations for war. He has taken the initiative in summoning the conference. He is prepared to give earnest evidence of his sincerity by arresting the future increases of the Russian armaments. But, unless he is supported by the peoples who detest the militarism as well as by those who groan under its burdens, his well meant endeavor will fail.

"The people can, if they will, prevent so fatal a catastrophe. As the greatest and latest world's powers they can, if they choose, save this supreme opportunity of the century from being sacrificed by the skeptical apathy of the other governments. But to do this it will be necessary to act, and to act at once.

"What is hoped those friends of peace and enemies of militarism who turn their eager eyes to the great republic of the new world is that between now and the end of January the citizens of the United States will by public demonstrations, formal resolutions and by every other action whereby a democratic people gives expression to its convictions and its aspirations have manifested to the world their determination to help the czar to put this thing through."

THE PRESIDENT IN SAVANNAH.

Ten Thousand Troops Reviewed by President McKinley and His Cabinet.

The reception of President McKinley and the members of his cabinet by the people of Savannah Saturday more than equalled in hospitality and completeness of arrangement any previous experiences which have marked the presidential trip through the south. The party arrived from Montgomery at 11 a. m., reviewed 10,000 troops stationed around Savannah, went down the Savannah river and was entertained in the evening at a grand banquet given by the chamber of commerce and association of citizens. The enthusiasm of the Savannah people and of the 15,000 persons who it is estimated had come into the city from the surrounding country to greet the president was fully equal to the remarkable demonstrations which have distinguished the trip to other cities.

BRYAN REITERATES OPPOSITION

To Expansion and Says Silver Will Be the Main Issue in 1900.

The New York World says: William J. Bryan is in town. He was found last night (Saturday) at the Bartholdi hotel. Colonel Bryan declared himself an uncompromising opponent of the McKinley policy of expansion. He said: "It is too early at this time to discuss party policies for the presidential election of 1900, but I think the issues then will be free silver, anti-expansion, anti-imperialism and the rights of labor. I have already expressed myself against imperialism and territorial expansion. Do I think free silver will be an issue in 1900? Certainly it will be the main question. How about the labor problem? I am not prepared to answer that question."

Plethoric Prosperity.

The iron trade reached its apex of activity Friday in Birmingham when Alabama furnace masters refused to book orders for the export trade. Their refusal was due entirely to the fact that the furnace yards are entirely empty and the furnaces have orders for all they can possibly turn out. Two orders, aggregating 3,000 tons for export, were declined.

One Lesson of the War.

Gov. J. F. Johnston, in an interview Friday, said: "The recent war shows how necessary it is to have a well organized and disciplined body of state troops ready for instant service. The standing army should be supplemented by such a body. I trust all the states will respond to the call of Governor Bloxham, and that a large number of delegates will assemble at Tampa, Fla., on February 8 to consider the reorganization of state militia service."

EX-GOV. STONE'S OPINION.

Democratic Party Will Continue to Fight for Free Silver.

Ex-Governor Wm. J. Stone, of Missouri, was in Chicago the past week in consultation with democratic leaders. "It has been stated and persistently reiterated in the face of positive denial, that I had entered into some horrible scheme with Mr. Croker and others to have the next national convention repudiate the Chicago platform and do divers other dreadful things. All such talk is regarded as absurd, which it is. The democratic party of the United States is composed of those who supported Mr. Bryan and who will stand on the platform of the party. There are no other kind of democrats."

DEWEY STATES HIS VIEWS

Declares That He Can Hold His Position Against the Earth.

SPEAKS WELL OF THE FILIPINOS.

Admiral Dewey Thinks That With Few Exceptions the Filipinos are Friendly—He Has a High Opinion of the Monitors—Would be Advisable to Pay the Insurgent Troops Their Back Pay.

MANILA, Philippine Islands (By Cable).—Rear Admiral Dewey, questioned by a newspaper correspondent regarding the possibility of international complications, replied:

"Prior to the arrival of the monitors I felt uneasy. But now I am ready to hold this position against the whole earth."

He, however, absolutely declined to discuss the political situation in the Philippine Islands, on the ground that his sphere was purely naval.

The Admiral seldom goes ashore, and insisted that his interviewer was in a better position to acquire information than himself. He then proceeded to cross-examine the correspondent about everything ashore. He was glad to learn that the insurgents were releasing the sick Spanish soldiers they held prisoners, notwithstanding Aguinaldo's grandiloquent refusal to do so. This proves that the insurgents are very conciliatory, in spite of their defiant talk.

Admiral Dewey always believed that the insurgents were friendly, especially since the warships of our fleet have visited the different ports of these islands and since some of our officers have made tours inland, carefully investigating popular sentiment and judiciously preaching the gospel of peaceful settlement everywhere with highly satisfactory results.

A few influential Filipinos, in the ambitious attempt of self-advancement, are clamoring for independence, though unable to realize its true meaning. They are utterly ignorant of the difference between the name and the reality.

According to recent information received here, the Filipino insurgents are endeavoring to maintain a brave show for the purpose of securing the best terms possible from the Americans. It is the opinion of our Admiral that it would be advisable for the United States to pay the insurgent troops their arrears of wages. The whole amount would only be a comparatively trifling sum, and the payment of the troops would have a valuable effect, and may save incalculable trouble.

Finally, Admiral Dewey was strongly convinced that the Filipino insurgents deserve acknowledgment. He is a believer in the practicability of liberal measures in the direction of local autonomy.

PRESIDENT'S SOUTHERN TRIP.

He is Received Magnificently and Delivers Many Addresses.

ATLANTA, Ga. (Special).—The peace jubilee is over and the reception given to President McKinley was magnificent in every way. His speeches have won him a place in the hearts of the Southerners.

On the last day of the jubilee President McKinley reviewed the civic and military parade. There were 20,000 persons in the procession. When the parade had passed the reviewing stand the President and the other guests of the city were driven to the Piedmont Driving Club, where they enjoyed an elaborate luncheon. Afterward Mr. McKinley addressed the public in the Auditorium at Piedmont Park.

The peace jubilee exercises closed with a banquet in the dining room of the Kimball House. Covers were laid for 300. At the President's table sat Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage, Secretary of the Navy J. D. Long, Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith, Governor Allen D. Candler, Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, General W. R. Shafter, Secretary of War R. A. Alger and many other prominent men.

Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, was the toastmaster, and introduced President McKinley, who was the recipient of a hearty and spontaneous greeting. He said in the course of his remarks:

"Reunited! One country again and one country forever! Proclaim it from the press and pulpit, teach it in the schools, write it across the skies! The world sees and feels it; it cheers every heart, North and South, and brightens the life of every American home. Let nothing ever strain it again. At peace with all the world and with each other, what can stand in the pathway of our progress and prosperity."

From Atlanta the President and his party went to Montgomery, Ala., where he received a magnificent welcome. The party was welcomed by Governor Johnston, and was driven to the Capitol, where Mr. McKinley delivered an address, dwelling upon the undivided loyalty of the North and South and every section of the country to the American flag. From Montgomery the Presidential party went to Tuskegee, and Booker T. Washington's school was visited. The students paraded. In the procession were fifty floats representing all departments of school work. The President addressed the colored scholars, and praised the work of Booker T. Washington in his efforts for the improvement of his race. He also gave some good advice to the pupils which would be of service to them in the battle of life.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS KILLED.

A Train Runs Into a Carriage at a Crossing With Fatal Results.

MANASQUAN, N. J. (Special).—Four persons were instantly killed, two fatally injured and two others seriously hurt a few nights ago in an accident which occurred at the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing at Allenwood, a few miles from here.

The victims of the accident are: Killed—Mrs. Ellen Allen, Bessie Allen, her daughter, Mrs. Allie Alger, Jennie Crammer.

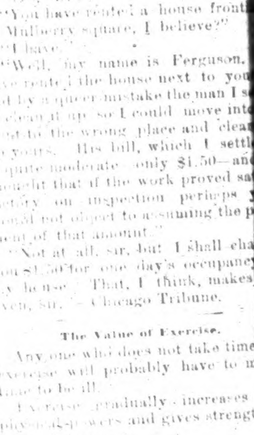
Fatally injured: David S. Allen, husband of Mrs. Allen; Katie Allen, their daughter. Seriously injured: Alger, infant child of Mr. Alger; Willis Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen.

Mr. Allen and his family, to whom Mrs. Alger was related, had been in Asbury Park Friday afternoon doing their Christmas shopping.

Mr. Allen was one of the most prominent men of Allenwood, the town having been named after him. He was prominent in local affairs, and was considered quite wealthy.

Calvin S. Brice Dead.

Calvin S. Brice, former United States Senator from Ohio, lawyer and financier, died at his home in New York a few days ago of pneumonia. He was in Newport at the time of the great storm, and in attempting to reach New York he caught a cold which led to his death. Calvin Stewart Brice was born in Denmark, Ohio, in 1845. He was the son of an Episcopal clergyman. He studied at Miami University and became a lawyer. He entered into railroad construction, and as a railroad organizer his most notable transaction was the building of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad. In 1890 Mr. Brice was elected to the United States Senate from Ohio.



WILLIAM OF WIED.

He was born March 26, 1876, and is therefore in his twenty-third year. Prince of Wied he would have attracted little attention in European countries; as the consort of Queen Wilhelmina he will be the first gentleman of the kingdom of Holland. Only the Queen herself will take precedence of him; his place will be beside her at all state and other official ceremonies. He will share her income, and his children will inherit her throne. In a word, he will occupy in Holland the same position that Prince Albert occupies in England as consort to Queen Victoria.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS to our readers, and may it be wise as well as merry.

HON W. F. ALDRICH has served notice of contest on Mr. Gaston A. Roobins. The charges are frauds committed in Dallas county, no other part of the district being mentioned. All but five beats in Dallas are contested.

THE State Democratic Executive committee will probably meet in Montgomery within the next few weeks to formulate their plan of campaign for the constitutional convention. It seems most probable that there will be a strict party fight, the Democratic party favoring holding the convention, and the Populists and Republicans opposing it.

THE Alabama Legislature adjourned last week to go to Atlanta to meet the President, and, incidentally, to have a good time. The good time did not materialize, on account of the Atlantians simply ignoring the wise men of Alabama, leaving them to entertain themselves the best way they could. The moral is, legislators should attend to legislation and leave junketing alone.

A PUBLIC meeting is called for the second Tuesday in January (Jan. 10) at the Court House at Clanton for the purpose of discussing the public road system. That there is lots of room for improvement in the condition of our roads no one will deny, and it is greatly to be hoped that this meeting will set on foot some scheme by which the necessary improvements will be made without extra cost to the taxpayers. A good deal of misplaced energy is often displayed in making new roads and in repairing old ones, and it should not be a very difficult matter to get better results for the same expenditure we are now put to.

ALTHOUGH the farmer who receives 4½ cents for his cotton may not be able to understand that prosperity has overtaken him, there is no doubt but that business generally has considerably improved. As an evidence of this, the L. & N. Railroad company, which about five years ago reduced the salaries of all its employes ten per cent, will on the first day of January make good their promises to restore the cut as soon as the earnings of the road justified it. Last July they advanced all their employes five per cent and now will advance the balance. This will be a most acceptable New Year's gift to its 18000 employes, and shows the honesty of the road to those who serve it, as well as the public generally.

SECRETARY OF STATE Robert P. McDavid, is in favor of all the laws of the State, as they are enacted by the Legislature, being published in a newspaper in each county. This is a democratic measure we highly approve of. The people are entitled to know the text of all bills passed by the Legislature and the best, simplest and cheapest plan is to have them published in the county newspapers. As it is now, the different acts are published in some daily newspaper which comparatively few of the people ever see. Let the people see for themselves what their representatives have done for them in the way of legislation. We hope to see Mr. McDavid's suggestion acted upon.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

THE bill providing for a constitutional convention has been duly signed by Governor Johnston, and there is no longer any shadow of a doubt but that the convention will be held.

There are twenty-one sections in the bill, and in the hope and belief that it will enable our readers to thoroughly understand the measure, we propose taking it up section by section.

Sections 1 and 2 provides for the holding of an election on the first Monday in July, 1899, "for the purpose of determining whether or not a convention shall be held to revise and amend the constitution of this State." And "if a majority of the voters voting at said election shall approve of the holding of a convention for the purpose stated, said convention shall be held."

Considering the importance of this measure there should not be one solitary voter in the State to refrain from casting his vote either for or against the convention. Whatever this convention may do will effect every man, woman and child in Alabama for many years to come, and every voter should fully determine for himself whether he thinks the time has come to change the organic law of the State. If he thinks the convention will advance the interests of the State, then he should vote for it, but if he feels that the convention is inimical to the best interests of the State and of himself then he should vote against the holding of the convention. The ballot upon which he will vote will read "For Convention" or "No Convention" and the voter will make a cross mark before one of the two lines. If he favors the convention he will mark his mark before "For Convention," and if he is against it he will make his mark before the words "No Convention."

Section 3 provides that each county shall elect the same number of delegates to the convention as it elects members to the House of Representatives. Thus Chilton county will elect one delegate to the convention, and will also vote for one delegate from each of the thirty-three senatorial districts. Every voter will have two different ballots to mark. One will have on it the words "For Convention" and "No Convention," and the other will contain the names of all the candidates for delegates. "The voter shall express his choice for such candidates from the State at large by making a cross mark before the names of the thirty-three delegates for whom he desires to vote, and shall express his choice for candidates from the county in which he lives by making a cross mark before the names of the number of delegates to which such county may be entitled in the lower house of the General Assembly."

It will be noticed that there will be two different ballots to be marked. The voter will take one and mark it either for or against the convention. Then he will take the other and vote for (so far as Chilcounty is concerned) thirty-four delegates, one from Chilton county and thirty-three from the senatorial districts. There is a difference in the way the names are arranged on the ballots to what we have become accustomed to under the Sayre Election Law. Instead of the names being arranged alphabetically, they are to be arranged according to parties. Thus, the names of all the Democratic candidates will be together, all the Populists will be together, Republicans together, and if there should be any independent candidates their names will be together. The names of the candidates from the State at large will be separate from the names of the candidates from the counties. This is an improvement upon the Sayre Election Law. It is easier for the voter.

TWO PRINCESSES.

About 26 years ago the convent of the Assumption in Autouil, near Paris, was prepared for a great event. The reception room had been put in perfect order; the long tables in the dining hall were laden with delicious dainties, little cakes, whipped cream, fruits, preserves and thin slices of buttered bread. Beautiful flowers and ferns were used as decorations, for the nuns' garden contained many choice flowerbeds. The pupils had donned their white alpaca gowns, some of tuem wearing a silver medal fastened by a colored ribbon. On the lawn stood the nuns with their purple dresses and white veils in picturesque and noisy groups chattering like magpies.

The June afternoon was to be one of the red letter afternoons of the convent. The Countess of Paris, just before returning to Stowe House, thinking that her little sister Mercedes looked pale, had decided to leave her for a few weeks with the ladies of the Assumption in Auteuil rather than to take her back to the chilly climate of England. Just as the clock struck 4 the countess drove into the interior court of the convent and stopped before the white silk curtained door. The countess, who was driving herself, threw the reins to the groom, jumped out, shook herself, and, although she absolutely lacked majesty in her plain gray gown and walking hat, she immediately proceeded to fulfill the duties imposed on her by her rank, graciously extending a rather massive hand to the 12 nuns, who kissed it respectfully, bowing very low. Behind the countess walked a bright faced, pretty little girl, with a plain dress and most unbecomingly combed hair.

"Does your highness wish to proceed to the garden?" asked the mother superior after the hand kissing ceremony. "Our pupils are waiting impatiently for the time when they can pay their respects to a daughter of France."

The little girl smiled, turned quickly on her heel and ran toward the garden without taking any notice of the mother in the large white cloak, who was following her with difficulty. She soon reached the lawn and then she stopped suddenly, feeling thoroughly embarrassed by the inquisitive and anything but kindly glances of 50 little duchesses, countesses and rich bourgeoises. The prospect of having in their midst one of royal birth flattered the little misses, for later it certainly would be pleasant to speak of Mercedes of Orleans as of a childhood friend, but for the present the nuns would devote themselves entirely to her, which would be very annoying. They knew something about this, for they already had a royal highness among them.

The nun, who had now caught up with the princess, took her hand and led her to a group of little girls in the midst of which stood a homely child whose face absolutely lacked grace and freshness. Then in an emphatic tone the nun introduced, "Her royal highness Mercedes of Orleans to her imperial highness Maria Christina of Austria."

The little girls looked at one another without smiling, almost defiantly. At last Maria Christina stiffly extended her hand, which was taken very coldly by Mercedes. The young archduchess contemptuously dropped the little French girl's plump hand, turned to one of the big girls near her and said in an undertone, while rubbing her endlessly long chin with her pretty white hand.

"What a hand, red and damp, horrible!"

Mercedes either heard or guessed what had been said, for she slipped her fat paws in her wide sleeves.

But the naughty, spoiled child of the convent, Jacqueline de G., who told me this story, was not in the least moved by an imperial highness, and said in an undertone, to the astonishment of the horrified nun:

"Red, damp, perhaps, but clean at least. Look at your nails, archduchess!"

It was fortunate indeed that the supper bell was then heard, for in an instant the pupils had divided in two factions, some surrounding Maria Christina, while others stood by Mercedes. The little girls thus divided, looked at each other angrily. A great many cakes and a great deal of cream were necessary to patch up matters. In the evening, as the little countess, rather overcome by her boldness, was standing by herself, Maria Christina, with eyes filled with tears, came up to her and said humbly: "You were right to make me ashamed of myself, Jacqueline. I cannot understand why I so suddenly took a violent dislike to the pretty French princess."

The ladies of the Assumption are always pleased to show the room in which the Archduchess Maria Christina spent two years of her life. The furniture is very plain, the bed narrow. On the wall hangs a small mirror, before which it is said that the archduchess spent more than a bitter moment, for she adored beauty, and suffered cruelly to see that she lacked much in this respect.

"My dear," said Jacqueline to her one day, "one cannot have everything. You ought to be very happy to be so great a lady."

"Ah!" answered the young Austrian, sighing, "I would rather be Jacqueline de G with her pretty face than Maria Christina with this hideous chin. I realize that I am ugly, you see."

We all know that Alfonso XII, king of Spain, before marrying Maria Christina married his pretty cousin Mercedes of Orleans in spite of the wishes of his parliament and of his mother, for both had done all in their power to bring about an Austrian alliance.—From the French For Short Stories.

Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

The Alabama Fertilizer

Is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all around fertilizer for cotton and corn.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 18 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land, was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER. The only objection ever raised to the ALABAMA FERTILIZER was that it costs too much.

The present price is no more than that of standard fertilizers. When requested, the ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be put up, without extra cost, in bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS, thereby insuring the perfect preservation of the bags for an indefinite time, and saving the contents from loss by waste in transit and handling. These preserved bags when emptied and thoroughly washed will be found as good and strong as new, and equally useful for other purposes. Every person, farmer, merchant or dealer vitally interested in the economical production of good crops should advocate the use of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

Missouri Knights of Pythias Demand That the Union Label Be Placed on All the Printing They Have Done—A Strike in Porto Rico

K. of P. Want the Label.

Recently the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias of Missouri held its annual convention at Kansas City, and adopted a resolution requesting the officers to demand that all grand lodge printing bear the label, says the Typographical Journal. St. Louis Typographical union took the initiative by adopting resolutions, which were approved by Kansas City Union No. 80, and presented to the grand lodge by printer Pythians. The preamble and resolutions are so apt and appropriate that they may serve as a model for others with a similar purpose in view, and we reproduce them:

"To the Officers and Members Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Missouri, in convention assembled at Kansas City, Mo., October 18, 1898 Greeting:

"Whereas, The noble order of which we are proud to be members owes a duty to the community as well as its members; and,

"Whereas, The order is largely composed of men who labor daily in the different vocations of the industrial field; and

"Whereas, Through the introduction of labor-saving machinery thousands of mechanics have been thrown out of employment, and this is especially true of the printers, many of whom are members of the order; and

"Whereas, We believe it our duty according to our knightly obligation to use every opportunate means to lessen human suffering and poverty; therefore, with that end in view, be it

"Resolved, That the grand keeper of records and seal be requested to in the future demand that all printing done through his office bear the label of the allied printing trades of North America, and that all local lodges be requested to use their moral influence to the same end; and be it further

"Resolved, That we pledge the moral support of the grand lodge of Missouri to every legitimate endeavor of the toilers of this commonwealth to better their condition in the industrial field.

A Fable with a Moral.

One of the toasters at the Michigan Federation of Labor convention told the following story:

A farmer leaning over his fence one day, wandering how he ever should harvest the great field of corn that lay back of him, when he saw a mule leisurely strolling up the highway and lazily cropping the grass that grew in abundance at the roadside.

"My friend," said the farmer, "get into the harness and help me get my crop into the barn, and I will give you all the corn that you can eat the days that you work."

"But how long shall I have to work each day?" quizzed the careful animal.

"Fourteen hours," said the farmer.

"Tut, tut," replied the mule. "But I can get all the grass I can eat in a day by working seven hours on this fertile roadside."

"Pshaw," retorted the farmer, beginning to get angry at being thwarted in his purpose, "your father was glad to work for me sixteen hours of the day, and here you are complaining against two hours less than that number."

"Too true," quoth the mule, "but you must remember my father was a jackass."

Work in the Navy Yards.

Secretary Long has recently issued an order amending the regulations relative to the employment of labor in all navy yards as follows:

Article 1574, paragraph 2, clause A, reads as follows:

"For work performed by reason of emergency between the hours of 6 a. m. and 8 p. m. in excess of eight hours, the same rate of pay shall be allowed as for eight hours' work."

Clause C provides that:

"Men who have rendered service during the day who, by reason of emergency, are required to work in excess of eight hours, shall be paid for all such extra work performed after 8 p. m. and before 6 a. m. at the same rate per hour as for day work, with 50 per cent additional."

I have issued the following regulation circular:

"Article 1574, paragraph 2, strike out clauses A and C, and for clause A substitute the following:

"(a) For work performed by reason of extraordinary emergency, in excess of eight hours per day, the ordinary rate of pay, with 50 per cent additional, shall be allowed.

Porto Rico Printers Strike.

San Juan, Cablegram.—Ten days ago the San Juan Typographical Union held a meeting and adopted a new scale of prices, which in effect was an advance of 50 per cent over the previous scale under which they were working. By the old scale they made only from $4 to $7 per week. The publishers were notified that the new scale would take effect on December 1. The publishers were apparently astounded by the demands of their men, and the printers employed by the Correspondencia and Boletin were instantly discharged, with the result that those papers have not been published since Wednesday last. The union held a meeting and while it was in progress, the police, who had been sent by Munoz Rivers, the president of the island, arrived and commanded Santiago Iglesias, secretary ond treasurer of the union and its leading spirit, to leave the island instantly in pain of arrest. Such a summary method of settling a labor dispute may be the proper thing from the Spanish viewpoint, but it is likely the Americans will look at the matter in a different light.

What Is Organization?

It is the act of forming organs or instruments of action. In entering the field of labor it matters not whether by brain or hand, it is absolutely necessary for all wage-workers to band themselves together for self protection, and by so doing they protect one another. All reforms that have been accomplished has been done through organizations and unity of action, consequently it behooves the mechanic and laborer of this country to wake up to the fact that he is losing sight of his own interests, by allowing himself to be hoodwinked by those who seek to deprive him of his inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The wage-workers of this or any other country can not accomplish anything individually, it must be by concerted action, therefore it is necessary for them to organize and educate, and not pass their lives in forging chains for themselves and then complain of wearing them. Signed, A Leather Worker.

Vessel Builders Hopeful.

From the Kennebec Journal. Not for very many years have Maine vessels managers in general felt so deep an interest in the prospects for business for a coming year. The close of the war has brought along, for Maine, at least, a new hope that her old-time sea prestige is coming back, in the new necessities set moving by our extensive foreign acquisitions and the general deep-water trade impetus which has been started. From all indications the biggest revival of commerce by sea that the United States ever saw is about to take place. The acquisition of oversea possessions—Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines and the new conditions of Cuba—will necessitate a great enlargement of the merchant fleet of the United States. Only ships having an American register can trade between two ports of the United States. Therefore, the commerce between this country and our new possessions will require American ships. This means work for the ship yards, for the present fleet is inadequate for the work, and it is seldom that a foreign-built ship can get an American register.

Simple Gymnastics.

To remain young a woman must keep her joints limber; if neglected they become painful and stiff. Women groan with rheumatic pains when, if they exercised properly, rheumatism would be unheard of. Women sit by a fire and shiver with a cold when, if they encouraged gymnastics, the blood would circulate vigorously through the body.

The following four simple exercises will greatly help to develop and preserve physical symmetry:

1. Stand erect, with hands outstretched, on a level with the shoulders, and slowly raise yourself on your toes as far as possible. Retain this position for an instant, and then sink back on to the entire foot. Do this twenty times a day at first, and increase each day fo a reasonable limit.

2. Place the hands on the hips, and, resting all the weight of the body on the right foot, slowly raise the left leg, and extend it in front of the body. Then bend at the knee, pointing the toe downward and bringing the foot up. Repeat this ten times at first. Then stand on the left foot and repeat the exercise in reverse.

3. Stand erect and lean over at the hips without bending the knees and try to touch the floor with the fingers. Day by day you will come nearer and nearer the floor. This exercise will make the body supple, and strengthen the back, and will encourage grace.

4. Extend the right arm, and placing the left on the hip, bend to right side as far as possible, and then reverse the exercise, which should be repeated ten times at first, and, like all the others, increased from day to day as much as circumstances will permit. This is an excellent general gymnastic. No woman should indulge any exercise to such an extent that even the slightest strain is possible. Fifteen minutes a day spent in exercise at home should result in muscular development, and greatly help to retain health.

Seeing Bullets as They Fly.

"As every sportsman knows," said an enthusiastic hunter, "it is easy to see a rifle bullet in the air, and those fired from the new high-power guns are very curious to look at. Stand a dozen yards away at any range with a small caliber weapon using smokeless powder, and you'll see a strange, blush-white streak the instant the bullet strikes home. The streak is apparently a couple of inches wide and several feet long, and is more like a flash of light than anything else I can think of. With the old-fashioned Remington or Springfield carbine the bullet has the appearance of a long black rod, and I don't know why there should be such a difference in the optical illusion produced by the smaller caliber. I have heard some people deny that the bullet can be seen, but they are very much in error. It all depends on getting the right viewpoint. A few feet either way will render the missile invisible, but the right spot is soon found by experiment, and after that the thing is as plain as day."

A Difficult Pass.

"Why is marriage such a serious step, I wonder?" "Because you then come to a pass where you can no longer go single file."

TO MR. McCLEARY.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY PUNCTURES SOME FALSITIES.

A Sample of the Kind of Speeches with Which Gold Standard Advocates Surprise the Unwary—An Echo of the Late Congressional Campaign.

The pedagogue has found it profitable to mislead the people. He is no longer teaching school in Mankato, but is making money and fame on a large scale. We quote:

"Special Telegram to Minneapolis Tribune.—McCleary addressed a large and enthusiastic Republican meeting here tonight, delivering what is generally acknowledged to be one of the strongest contributions to the campaign in this state. He said in part: 'A problem well stated is half solved. "What is the silver question?" Stated in its simplest terms it is this: Shall we or shall we not permit the men who own silver bullion to carry that bullion to the mint of the United States and have it converted into coin for them at the rate of 371.25 grains of pure silver (or 412.5 grains standard silver) to the dollar, and shall the government authorize them to carry forth the coins thus made and use them according to their pleasure in the payment of debt or the transaction of business? To this question a large number of good, honest, right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "Yes, emphatically, yes; yes, quickly—the sooner the better!" Another large number of good, honest, right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "No, utterly, absolutely, unequivocally, no!" What is the present situation? The man who owns gold may take it to the mint of the United States and have it converted for him into the form of coin, at the rate of 23.22 grains of pure gold (or 25.8 grains of standard gold) to the dollar. This service is rendered for him by the government without any charge, and the coins are handed back to him with full authority to use them according to his pleasure in the payment of debts, or the transaction of business. To the man who owns gold we say yes; to the man who owns silver, we say no. By this statement of the case it would appear that Uncle Sam does not treat these two classes of his citizens equally well, and the sense of fairness in the minds of each of us prompts us, at first glance, to condemn his course of action. But every good man and woman is slow to believe as true that which reflects upon the good name of any one whom he or she has learned to honor. Such a man or woman feels that his proper course is to reserve judgment until all the facts have been ascertained. We all respect Uncle Sam; we all believe that he would not intentionally do wrong to anyone. So we are prompted to believe that there must be something else in the matter that has not yet been stated. And there is. The man who owns the gold submits to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 258 grains of standard gold, worth $10 coined or uncoined. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify to this fact? The easiest way for you to certify to it is to put this gold up in the form of a coin and mark it $10." To this proposition Uncle Sam makes answer: "Why, certainly, my son; I am always glad to serve any one of my children when I can do so properly." The man who owns the silver desires permission to submit to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 412.5 grains of standard silver, worth, in the terms to which we are accustomed, 40 cents. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify for me that it is worth 100 cents?" To this proposition Uncle Sam promptly makes answer: "Not if the court knows itself!" We thus see, in part at least, why Uncle Sam says "Yes" to one, and "No" to the other.'"

McCleary in all this is very adroit, and very liable to deceive the unthinking. And yet McCleary knows very well that for 5,000 years gold and silver stood on an equality, as to right of coinage, all over the world, wherever there was civilization. And he knows that twenty-four years ago all this was changed. In this country the change was made without being demanded in the platform of any political party, or without any previous discussion before the people, who are supposed to constitute the government of this republic. And this piece of rascally knavery produced the fall of the price of silver, and McCleary, instead of demanding that that gigantic wrong shall be righted, plants himself on the accomplished results of the wrong and demands that it shall be perpetual. Imagine McCleary in very cold weather campaigning in Minnesota. He has a magnificent astrachan fur-lined overcoat, worth $100. A thief steals it and leaves a tattered, shoddy garment, worth $5, in its place. McCleary demands redress. He seeks out the nearest justice of the peace, clad in the ragged robe the thief has left him. McCleary states his case. The justice is "in cahoots" with the thief. "What!" he cries, "you want me to make your tattered $5 coat worth $100! That is not what I am here for. The robbery is accomplished, the villainy enacted; it is not for me to overturn existing conditions." "But I am robbed!" shrieks McCleary. "Put me back where I stood before I was robbed. Give me back my overcoat. Here is this wretched rag. Give me an order for the arrest of the thief and the return of my coat." "It can't be did," says the justice. "Your demand is equivalent to making your coat worth $100. It can't be done—not if the court knows itself." And thereupon the indignant professor sells into the justice of the peace, blacks his eyes, knocks out his front teeth and punches him in the belly with his umbrella. And thereupon he is arrested for assault and battery, with intent to kill, tried by a jury of thieves (the foreman wearing his overcoat), and sent to prison. There let us leave him, while he writes a political address to the voters of the Second district, showing that representative government is a failure, and threatening to go back to Canada.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Flood of Silver.

Regarding the flood of silver that would pour into this country should bimetallism be adopted, I think that entitled to less consideration than the proposition that "gold would instantly disappear." They belong to the same job lot of scarecrows. It will be remembered that Mr. Shurz said that there would be a tremendous contraction of the currency as a result of the adoption of bimetallism. Other equally sanguine monometallists predict, at the same time, the rest of the world would 'dump" its silver here almost immediately. Now silver could be "dumped" here only in exchange for something else. If for wheat, cotton, wool, or manufactured goods, I do not think it would be rejected, for our people desire to sell their commodities. If for gold, then it must take its place, dollar for dollar, and if it be a fifty-cent dollar, as Senator Thurston says it would be, then for every dollar of gold "driven out" two silver dollars would take its place. Surely little contraction of the currency would take place at the rate of substituting two dollars for one. The two notions that there would be a contraction of the currency and a flood of silver at the same time are hardly compatible. No nation can coin and retain more metallic money than it has profitable use for, because unless it is needed for business purposes and finds profitable employment, it will always float away to other places where there is a greater demand for it. Gold or silver money cannot be piled away above the money level of other countries and be made to stay there. It will seek its level just the same as anything else. Though the mints of the universe might be open to the coinage of silver for our use, but few million dollars more than could find profitable employment would stay here. Not a sound political economist from Adam Smith to the latest writer can be found to dispute that proposition. They are all of the same opinion as Dr. Wayland, who said of any country, "If its trade with other places is free, the superfluous money will float away, on the tide of commerce, to some point where it is needed, just as a surplus of wheat or cotton goods or any other commodity must do." If it cannot find profitable employment here as money it will go to the east, there to be used for money purposes, or to the melting pot, to be used in the industrial arts. You cannot "heap" up gold or silver in a free country and make it stay "heaped," any more than you can "heap" up water and make it stay "heaped."

When McKinley Was All Right.

On the 12th of February, 1891, only a little over seven years ago, Mr. McKinley said:

"During all of Grover Cleveland's years at the head of the government he was dishonoring one of our precious metals, one of our own great products, discrediting silver and enhancing the price of gold. He endeavored even before his inauguration to office to stop the coinage of silver dollars and afterward and to the end of his administration persistently used his power to that end. He was determined to contract the circulating medium, and to demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money, and diminished the value of everything else—money the master, everything else the servant. He was not thinking of "the poor" then. He had left "their side." He was not standing forth in their defense. Cheap coats, cheap labor and dear money. The sponsor and promoter of these professing to stand guard over the welfare of the poor and lowly! Was there ever more inconsistency or reckless assumption?"

All these things sound very strange when compared with Mr. McKinley's utterances since he accepted the nomination for president on a gold standard platform, and they seem to justify sincere people in having but little faith in the man.

True Democratic Doctrine.

President Van Buren said in his message to congress in extra session in 1837, called because of the then financial crisis:

"It is not designed by the constitution that the government should assume the management of domestic or foreign exchange. It is indeed authorized to regulate by law the commerce between the states, and to provide a general standard of value or medium of exchange in gold and silver, but it is not its province to aid individuals in the transfer of their funds. As justly might it be called upon for transportation of their merchandise. These are operations of trade; they ought to be conducted by those who are interested in them, in the same manner that the incidental difficulties are encountered by other classes of citizens."

This was the Democratic doctrine of that period. It was just after the Democratic party had won its great and crowning victory in obtaining mastery of the money power. But the scene has changed. Now "money is king," and controls not only the action of the government, but the destinies of the people. It is no longer our servant, but our relentless master.

McKINLEY IN ATLANTA.

His Visit Made Memorable by a Notable Utterance.

President McKinley made memorable the first day of the Atlanta peace jubilee by a notable utterance in his speech before the joint session of the Georgia legislature Wednesday afternoon. His reception by the general assembly was warm and hearty in the extreme, and his speech was punctured with frequent outbursts of cheering. It is admitted on all sides that the address marked an epoch in history. During the address President McKinley said:

"Every soldier's grave made during the unfortunate civil war is a tribute to the American valor. And while, when those graves were made, we differed widely about the future of the government, those differences were long ago settled by the arbitrament of arms—and the time has now come in the evolution of sentiment and feeling under the providence of God, when in the spirit of fraternity we should share with one in the care of the graves of the confederate soldiers."

A wild cheer went up from every throat in the typical southern audience, a cheer that echoed and re-echoed through the chamber until it was taken up by the crowds outside. Old men who fought for the south rose from their seats and waved their hats. Of all the many conciliatory speeches which have been made since Grant said "Let there be peace," nothing has more deeply stirred a southern audience than the simple words of President McKinley.

Star Hunting.

Recently I have devoted my time to star hunting and satisfying a yearning desire to become a discoverer. I felt that I must discover something, whether there was anything new to be discovered or not. In the pioneer school houses, some time during the days of Job, I was taught to admire the genius and freshly mown hay odor of the late (about 76 years late) lamented Mr. Wm. Herschel as an astronomer and finder of nests of newly laid stars. If you believe the last sentence you will believe anything I write, and I always make it a point to refrain from telling the truth as much as possible. Consequently I want you to believe me.

Anyway, it is quite an honor to possess sufficient ability and suavity to go out in the gloaming and call up new stars to you at so much per call. It is also laborious. When you have found a good, fragrant star, you will obtain more or less light on the subject, according to the size of the star.

The first difficulty with which I had to contend was having no telescope. So I got a water pipe and glued two magic-lantern lenses in it, and began looking about for an elevation upon which to sit. I did not dare to get on the housetop, because everybody would see me, and might go to discovering infant stars themselves. Then I would not get on the smoke house, because being a country editor we did not have one. I was in a dilemma, whatever that is.

Finally I decided that my seat of operations should be the barn. It was very tall, and had a mysterious air about it, somewhat like that about a fresh college graduate before he gets accustomed to wearing his diploma. The mysterious air around the barn was caused by decaying vegetation, while that about the graduate is caused from sheer ignorance.

But I mounted the rotten roof with my improvised telescope thrown over my left scapula and dangling in the vicinity of the lumber vertebræ.

Looking cautiously around to see if any one was near, but seeing no one, I began searching the star vaults with the water pipe. I gazed at Mercury and Venus. I was glad to see the former, as it is rather skittish, and Copernicus grieved because he was never able to meet the planet. I had seen Venus without any trouble, while Captain Cook, the navigator, gave up the ghost near Hawaii, trying to see the untamed Venus.

I scooted my star-finder all around the circle of perpetual apparition, and the circle of occultation. But I didn't find anything. I was getting discouraged. I decided the Lick discoverers had just about licked up all the important stars, and while I was thinking so, my hired boy jabbed a pitchfork up through the roof to scare me. My telescope fell, the roof broke through, and I fell to the earth, making no discovery worthy of note except that then my right ascension and declination were about as near zero as anything ever get to be in this vale of tears.

Any one wishing to buy a telescope cheap may write me. I am no longer an astronomer.

JOHN EARL GARRISON.

A Tragic Death.

At Athens, Ga., Wednesday, Lieut. James H. Hoskinson, adjutant of the First Battalion of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, met a tragic death on Clayton street in front of the postoffice. He was thrown violently from his horse, his head striking the ground with great force. A large artery in the brain was ruptured, compression followed by paralysis, and in two hours he was dead.

May Yet Rescue the Maine.

The navy department has not yet abandoned the hope of rescuing the Maine from Havana harbor, and bringing the wreck back to this country for rehabilitation, nor does it seem likely, from the interest taken by responsible wrecking experts, that the Cristobal Colon will permitted to pound to pieces on the shore west of Santiago. The board of construction has under consideration a formal proposition for the salvage of both vessels and their delivery at New York or such other ports in the United States as the government might select.

RELIEF FROM PAIN.

Women Everywhere Express their Gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. I would like to have you use my letter for the benefit of others."

Mrs. FLORENCE A. WOLFE, 515 Mulberry St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: For two years I was troubled with what the local physicians told me was inflammation of the womb. Every month I suffered terribly. I had taken enough medicine from the doctors to cure any one, but obtained relief for a short time only. At last I concluded to write to you in regard to my case, and can say that by following your advice I am now perfectly well."

Mrs. W. R. BATES, Mansfield, La., writes: "Before writing to you I suffered dreadfully from painful menstruation, leucorrhœa and sore feeling in the lower part of the bowels. Now my friends want to know what makes me look so well. I do not lose one minute in telling them what has brought about this great change. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is the greatest remedy of the age."

DYSPEPSIA

"For six years I was a victim of dyspepsia in its worst form. I could eat nothing but milk toast, and at times my stomach would not retain and digest even that. Last March I began taking CASCARETS and since then have steadily improved, until I am as well as ever was in my life."

The Lord shut him in, and there are many people now in the world who are as thoroughly shut in from [illegible] sickness, some by old age, some by special duties that will not allow them to get out, some surrounded by deluges of misfortune and trouble, and for them my sympathies are aroused, and from them I often receive messages, and this sermon, which I hope may do good to others, is more especially intended for them. To-day I address the shut in. "The Lord shut him in."

The world has no statistics as to the number of invalids. The physicians know something about it, and the angels of mercy, and the pastors, but who can tell us the number of blind eyes, and deaf ears, and diseased lungs, and congested livers, and jangled nerves, and neuralgic temples, and rheumatic feet, or how many took no food this morning because they had no appetite to eat, or digestive organs to assimilate, or every hour of the day you spend looking out of the window, or gazing at the particular figure on the wall, or listening to the clock's ticks men are being wrecked by the allurements and uncertainties of business life? How many forgeries are committed, how many trust funds are swamped, how many public moneys are being misappropriated, how many bankruptcies suffered! It may be, it is, very uncomfortable for Noah inside the ark, for the apartment is crowded and the air is vitiated with the breathing of so much human and [illegible]

No doubt, while on that voyage Noah and his three sons and all the four ladies of the antediluvian world often thought of the bright families and the green fields where they had walked and of the homes where they had lived. They had had many years of experiences. Noah was 600 years old at the time of this cabin [illegible] He had seen 600 springtimes, 600 summers, 600 autumns, 600 winters. We are not told how old his wife was at this [illegible] of earth and sky. The Bible tells the age of a great many men, but only once gives a woman's age. At one time it gives Abraham's age as 130 years and Jared's age as 962 years and Enoch's age as 365 years, and so up and down the Bible it gives the age of men, but does not give the age of women. Why? Because, I suppose, a woman's age is none of our business. But all the men and women that tossed in that oriental craft had lived long enough to remember a great many of the mercies and kindnesses of God, and they could not blot out, and I think they had no disposition to blot out the memory of those brightnesses, though now they were shut in. Neither should the shut in of our time forget the blessings of the past. Have you been blind for ten years? Thank God for the time when you saw as clearly as any of us can see and let the pageant of all the radiant landscapes and illumined skies which you ever looked upon kindle your rapturous gratitude. I do not see Raphael's "Madonna di San Sisto" in the picture gallery of Dresden, nor Rubens' "Descent From the Cross" at Antwerp, nor Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment" on the ceiling of the Vatican nor St. Sophia at Constantinople, nor the Parthenon on the Acropolis, nor the Taj Mahal of India, but shall I not thank God that I have seen them? Is it possible that such midnight darkness shall ever blast my vision that I cannot call them up again?

Again, notice that during that forty days of storm which rocked that ship on that universal ocean of Noah's time the door which shut the captain of the ship in, side the craft kept him from many outside perils. How those wrathful seas would like to have got their wet hands on Noah and pulled him out and sunk him! And do all of you of the great army of the shut in realize that, though you have special temptations where you are now, how much of the outside style of temptation you escape? Do you, the merchant incarcerated in the sick room, realize that every hour of the day you spend looking out of the window, or gazing at the particular figure on the wall, or listening to the clock's ticks men are being wrecked by the allurements and uncertainties of business life? How many forgeries are committed, how many trust funds are swamped, how many public moneys are being misappropriated, how many bankruptcies suffered! THE KHALIFA.

The Life and Characteristics of the Fugitive Dervish Chief.

Abdullah et Taishi Khalifa, whose power has been broken by the British forces under General Sir Herbert Kitchener, was the most powerful and successful of the three Khalifas of the three leading Arab tribes, that in 1882 helped the Mahdi to overthrow the government of Egypt in the eastern Soudan and establish the Mahdist despotism in its place. Each of these Khalifas commanded a distinct section of the Mahdi's army, and Abdullah's force had most to do with the annihilation of General Hicks and his army. Abdullah was the favorite of his master. The Mahdi believed that if he died Abdullah was the only man who could maintain the strange empire he had raised and keep the upper hand of the rapacious Soudanese tribes. Before his death the Mahdi nominated the Khalifa Abdullah as his successor, and thus the cruel and tyrannical Arab tribe of the Bagaras, whose leader was Abdullah, became the masters of the Egyptian Soudan and ruled it with a rod of iron. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, after three years of power, and Abdullah has since been known as "the Mahdi's successor." There was intense jealousy and disappointment on the part of the Danagla and Jaalin tribes, who had been the rulers, but now became the ruled. Civil war on account of Abdullah's accession was narrowly averted, but he was too strong for his enemies in the other tribes, and they finally chose the part of discretion just when all had been made ready for battle. The new ruler then made it his business to render the other tribes harmless. He reduced the power of the two other Khalifas, and they became men of little influence. He sent many of the Jaalin and Danagla Emirs in chains hundreds of miles up the Nile, and he permitted his Baggara to plunder the other tribes without mercy, under the pretext of levying taxes. There has been only one ruler of the Soudan for the past thirteen years, and he has been the Khalifa Abdullah. He maintained his policy of cruelly repressing all the people except his own tribe, until he was frightened very badly by the news that England and Egypt were getting ready to invade the country and overthrow his power. After that news reached Omdurman he made a great show of reversing his policy. He pardoned the imprisoned Emirs and tried in many ways to win back the disaffected people. The Khalifa's empire, within which not a particle of European influence has permeated since the Mahdi captured Khartoum, extends along the Nile from Dongola on the north to the neighborhood of Lado on the south, a distance of about thirteen hundred miles. Omdurman, the capital, just across the Nile from the ruins of Khartoum, is about midway between these points. The Khalifa lost Darfur, but still his empire extends from the western limits of Kordofan to Abyssinia on the east, and embraces about 700,000 square miles. During the thirteen years he has controlled the destinies of the Egyptian Soudan it is estimated that nearly three-fifths of its inhabitants have perished through war and famine. Constant warfare has greatly diminished the male population.

KEENE TURNED THE TABLES.

Several Wall street men, Mr. James R. Keene among them, combined some time ago to get control of the stock of the tobacco trust.

Their understanding was that none of them was to sell any of the stock until it had reached its highest possible figure, and then all were to sell at the same time.

Ten days ago Keene discovered that this agreement was not being lived up to by some of his colleagues. They were beginning to sell on the quiet, it is said, as soon as the stock reached

JAS. R. KEENE.

154¾. As soon as Mr. Keene discovered this he gave orders for the sale of his own holdings and before the other members of the clique were aware of what was happening Keene had made $1,500,000.

By that time the tobacco trust's stock was down to 115½, having declined 39¼ points.

Buy the Rat.

A friend of the late Secretary Bayard writes: I was much amused at Mr. Bayard's recital of an incident some years before in which he and William R. Travers were actors. He said the rats had become such a nuisance in his house at Wilmington and were so aggressive that he went to New York in search of a terrier, and applied to Travers for information as to where he could find an establishment provided with such animals. Travers took him to a rat pit, whose proprietor was a celebrated sporting character, and Bayard stated the purpose of his visit, and that he must see the dog tried before he would purchase him. The man brought out a beautiful little terrier, and after putting him in the pit, pitched a fierce, gray-whiskered rat into the arena also. The adversaries confronted each other for an instant like two gladiators in ancient Rome, when suddenly the dog took to flight, pursued by the rat. "Buy the rat, Tom," shouted Travers; "buy the rat!"

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

Missouri Knights of Pythias Demand That the Union Label Be Placed on All the Printing They Have Done—A Strike in Porto Rico

K. of P. Want the Label.

Recently the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias of Missouri held its annual convention at Kansas City, and adopted a resolution requesting the officers to demand that all grand lodge printing bear the label, says the Typographical Journal. St. Louis Typographical union took the initiative by adopting resolutions, which were approved by Kansas City Union No. 80 and presented to the grand lodge by printer Pythians. The preamble and resolution are so apt and appropriate that they may serve as a model for others with a similar purpose in view, and we reproduce them:

"To the Officers and Members Grand Lodge Knight of Pythias of Missouri, in convention assembled, at Kansas City, Mo., October 18, 1898—Greeting:

"Whereas, The noble order of which we are proud to be member, owes a duty to the community as well as its members; and,

"Whereas, The order is largely composed of men who labor daily in the different vocations of the industrial field; and

"Whereas, Through the introduction of labor-saving machinery thousands of mechanics have been thrown out of employment, and this is especially true of the printers, many of whom are members of the order; and

"Whereas, We believe it our duty according to our knightly obligation to use every opportunate means to lessen human suffering and poverty; therefore, with that end in view, be it

"Resolved, That the grand keeper of records and seal be requested to in the future demand that all printing done through his office bear the label of the allied printing trades of North America, and that all local lodges be requested to use their moral influence to the same end; and be it further

"Resolved, That we pledge the moral support of the grand lodge of Missouri to every legitimate endeavor of the toilers of this commonwealth to better their condition in the industrial field.

A Fable with a Moral.

One of the toasters at the Michigan Federation of Labor convention told the following story:

A farmer leaning over his fence one day, wondering how he ever should harvest the great field of corn that lay back of him, when he saw a mule leisurely strolling up the highway and lazily cropping the grass that grew in abundance at the roadside.

"My friend," said the farmer, "get into the harness and help me get my crop into the barn, and I will give you all the corn that you can eat the days that you work."

"But how long shall I have to work each day?" quizzed the careful animal.

"Fourteen hours," said the farmer.

"Tut, tut," replied the mule. "But I can get all the grass I can eat in a day by working seven hours on this fertile roadside."

"Pshaw," retorted the farmer, beginning to get angry at being thwarted in his purpose, "your father was glad to work for me sixteen hours of the day, and here you are complaining against two hours less than that number."

"Too true," quoth the mule, "but you must remember my father was a jackass."

Work in the Navy Yards.

Secretary Long has recently issued an order amending the regulations relative to the employment of labor in all navy yards as follows:

Article 1574, paragraph 2, clause A, reads as follows:

"For work performed by reason of emergency between the hours of 6 a. m. and 8 p. m. in excess of eight hours, the same rate of pay shall be allowed as for eight hours' work."

Clause C provides that:

"Men who have rendered service during the day, who, by reason of emergency, are required to work in excess of eight hours, shall be paid for all such extra work performed after 8 p. m. and before 6 a. m. at the same rate per hour as for day work, with 50 per cent additional."

I have issued the following regulation circular:

"Article 1574, paragraph 2, strike out clauses A and C, and for clause A substitute the following:

"(A) For work performed by reason of extraordinary emergency, in excess of eight hours per day, the ordinary rate of pay, with 50 per cent additional, shall be allowed.

Porto Rico Printers Strike.

San Juan, Cablegram.—Ten days ago the San Juan Typographical Union held a meeting and adopted a new scale of prices, which in effect was an advance of 50 per cent over the previous scale under which they were working. By the old scale they made only [illegible] to $7 per week. The publishers were notified that the new scale would take effect on December 1. The publishers were apparently astounded by the demands of their men and the printers employed by the Correspondencia and Boletin were instantly discharged, with the result that those papers have not been published since Wednesday last. The union held a meeting and while it was in progress, the police, who had been sent by Munoi Rivers, the president of the island, arrived and commanded Santiago Iglesias, secretary ond treasurer of the union and its leading spirit, to leave the island instantly in pain of arrest. Such a summary method of settling a labor dispute may be the proper thing from the Spanish viewpoint, but it is likely the Americans will look at the matter in a different light.

What Is Organization?

It is the act of forming organs or instruments of action. In entering the field of labor it matters not whether by brain or hand, it is absolutely necessary for all wage-workers to band themselves together for self protection, and by so doing they protect one another. All reforms that have been accomplished has been done through organizations and unity of action, consequently it behooves the mechanic and laborer of this country to wake up to the fact that he is losing sight of his own interests, by allowing himself to be hoodwinked by those who seek to deprive him of his inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The wage-workers of this or any other country can not accomplish anything individually, it must be by concerted action, therefore it is necessary for them to organize and educate, and not pass their lives in forging chains for themselves and then complain of weaving them. Signed, A Leather Worker.

Vessel Builders Hopeful.

From the Kennebec Journal: Not for very many years have Maine vessels managers in general felt so deep an interest in the prospects for business for a coming year. The close of the war has brought along, for Maine, at least, a new hope that her old-time sea prestige is coming back, in the new necessities set moving by our extensive foreign acquisitions and the general deep-water trade impetus which has been started. From all indications the biggest revival of commerce by sea that the United States ever saw is about to take place. The acquisition of oversea possessions—Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines and the new conditions of Cuba will necessitate a great enlargement of the merchant fleet of the United States. Only ships having an American register can trade between two ports of the United States. Therefore, the commerce between this country and our new possessions will require American ships. This means work for the ship yards, for the present fleet is inadequate for the work, and it is seldom that a foreign-built ship can get an American register.

Simple Gymnastics.

To remain young a woman must keep her joints limber; if neglected they become painful and stiff. Women groan with rheumatic pains when, if they exercised properly, rheumatism would be unheard of. Women sit by a fire and shiver with a cold when, if they encouraged gymnastics, the blood would circulate vigorously through the body. The following four simple exercises will greatly help to develop and preserve physical symmetry:

1. Stand erect, with hands outstretched, on a level with the shoulders, and slowly raise yourself on your toes as far as possible. Retain this position for an instant, and then sink back on to the entire foot. Do this twenty times a day at first, and increase each day to a reasonable limit.

2. Place the hands on the hips, and resting all the weight of the body on the right foot, slowly raise the left leg, and extend it in front of the body. Then bend at the knee, pointing the toe downward and bringing the foot up. Repeat this ten times at first. Then stand on the left foot and repeat the exercise in reverse.

3. Stand erect and lean over at the hips without bending the knees and try to touch the floor with the fingers. Day by day you will come nearer and nearer the floor. This exercise will make the body supple, and strengthen the back, and will encourage grace.

4. Extend the right arm, and placing the left on the hip, bend to right side as far as possible, and then reverse the exercise, which should be repeated ten times at first, and, like all the others, increased from day to day as much as circumstances will permit. This is an excellent general gymnastic. No woman should indulge any exercise to such an extent that even the slightest strain is possible. Fifteen minutes a day spent in exercise at home should result in muscular development, and greatly help to retain health.

Seeing Bullets as They Fly.

"As every sportsman knows," said an enthusiastic hunter, "it is easy to see a rifle bullet in the air, and those fired from the new high-power guns are very curious to look at. Stand a dozen yards away, at any range with a small caliber weapon using smokeless powder, and you'll see a strange, blush-white streak the instant the bullet strikes home. The streak is apparently a couple of inches wide and several feet long, and is more like a flash of light than anything else I can think of. With the old-fashioned Remington or Springfield carbine the bullet has the appearance of a long black rod and I don't know why there should be such a difference in the optical illusion produced by the smaller caliber. I have heard some people deny that the bullet can be seen, but they are very much in error. It all depends on getting the right viewpoint. A few feet either way will render the missile invisible, but the right spot is soon found by experiment, and after that the thing is as plain as day."

A Difficult Pass.

"Why is marriage such a serious step, I wonder?" "Because you then come to a pass where you can no longer go single file."

TO MR. M'CLEARY.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY PUNCTURES SOME FALSITIES.

A Sample of the Kind of Speeches with Which Gold Standard Advocates Surprise the Unwary—An Echo of the Late Congressional Campaign.

The pedagogue has found it profitable to mislead the people. He is no longer teaching school in Mankato, but is making money and fame on a large scale. We quote:

"Special Telegram to Minneapolis Tribune.—McCleary addressed a large and enthusiastic Republican meeting here tonight, dellvering what is generally acknowledged to be one of the strongest contributions to the campaign in this state. He said in part: 'A problem well stated is half solved. "What is the silver question?" Stated in its simplest terms it is this: Shall we or shall we not permit the men who own silver bullion to carry that bullion to the mint of the United States and have it converted into coin for them at the rate of 371.25 grains of pure silver for 412.5 grains standard silver) to the dollar, and shall the government authorize them to carry forth the coins thus made and use them according to their pleasure in the payment of debt or the transaction of business? To this question a large number of good, honest, right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "Yes, emphatically, yes; yes, quickly—the sooner the better!" Another large number of good, honest right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "No, utterly, absolutely, unequivocally, no!" What is the present situation? The man who owns gold may take it to the mint of the United States and have it converted for him into the form of coin, at the rate of 23.22 grains of pure gold (or 25.8 grains of standard gold) to the dollar. This service is rendered for him by the government without any charge, and the coins are handed back to him with full authority to use them according to his pleasure in the payment of debts, or the transaction of business. To the man who owns gold we say yes; to the man who owns silver, we say no. By this statement of the case it would appear that Uncle Sam does not treat these two classes of his citizens equally well, and the sense of fairness in the minds of each of us prompts us, at first glance, to condemn his course of action. But every good man and woman is slow to believe as true that which reflects upon the good name of any one whom he or she has learned to honor. Such a man or woman feels that his proper course is to reserve judgment until all the facts have been ascertained. We all respect Uncle Sam; we all believe that he would not intentionally do wrong to anyone. So we are prompted to believe that there must be something else in the matter that has not yet been stated. And there is. The man who owns the gold submits to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 258 grains of standard gold, worth $10 coined or uncoined. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify to this fact? The easiest way for you to certify to it is to put this gold up in the form of a coin and mark it $10." To this proposition Uncle Sam makes answer: "Why, certainly, my son; I am always glad to serve any one of my children when I can do so properly." The man who owns the silver desires permission to submit to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 412.5 grains of standard silver, worth, in the terms to which we are accustomed, 40 cents. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify for me that it is worth 100 cents?" To this proposition Uncle Sam promptly makes answer: "Not if the court knows itself!" We thus see, in part at least, why Uncle Sam says "Yes" to one, and "No" to the other."

McCleary in all this is very adroit, and very liable to deceive the unthinking. And yet McCleary knows very well that for 5,000 years gold and silver stood on an equality, as to right of coinage, all over the world, wherever there was civilization. And he knows that twenty-four years ago all this was changed. In this country the change was made without being demanded in the platform of any political party, or without any previous discussion before the people, who are supposed to constitute the government of this republic. And this piece of rascally knavery produced the fall of the price of silver, and McCleary, instead of demanding that that gigantic wrong shall be righted, plants himself on the accomplished results of the wrong and demands that it shall be perpetual. Imagine McCleary in very cold weather campaigning in Minnesota. He has a magnificent astrachan, fur-lined overcoat, worth $100. A thief steals it and leaves a tattered, shoddy garment, worth $5, in its place. McCleary demands redress. He seeks out the nearest justice of the peace, clad in the ragged robe the thief has left him. McCleary states his case. The justice is "in cahoots" with the thief. "What!" he cries, "you want me to make your tattered $5 coat worth $100! That is not what I am here for. The robbery is accomplished, the villainy enacted; it is not for me to overturn existing conditions." "But I am robbed!" shrieks McCleary. "Put me back where I stood before I was robbed. Give me back my overcoat. Here is this wretched rag. Give me an order for the arrest of the thief and the return of my coat." "I can't be did," says the justice, "your demand is equivalent to making my coat worth $100. It can't be done. Not if the court knows itself." And thereupon the indignant professor sells into the justice of the peace, bl[illegible]ks his eyes, knocks out his front teeth and punches him in the belly with his umbrella. And thereupon he is arrested for assault and battery, with intent to kill, tried by a jury of thieves (the foreman wearing his overcoat), and sent to prison. There let us leave him, while he writes a political address to the voters of the Second district, showing that representative government is a failure, and threatening to go back to Canada.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Flood of Silver.

Regarding the flood of silver that would pour into this country should bimetallism be adopted, I think that entitled to less consideration than the proposition that "gold would instantly disappear." They belong to the same job lot of scarecrows. It will be remembered that Mr. Shurz said that there would be a tremendous contraction of the currency as a result of the adoption of bimetallism. Other equally sanguine monometallists predict, at the same time, the rest of the world would "dump" its silver here almost immediately. Now, silver could be "dumped" here only in exchange for something else. If for wheat, cotton, wool, or manufactured goods, I do not think it would be rejected, for our people desire to sell their commodities. If for gold, then it must take its place, dollar for dollar, and if it be a fifty-cent dollar, as Senator Thurston says it would be, then for every dollar of gold "driven out" two silver dollars would take its place. Surely little contraction of the currency would take place at the rate of substituting two dollars for one. The two notions that there would be a contraction of the currency and a flood of silver at the same time are hardly compatible. No nation can coin and retain more metallic money than it has profitable use for, because unless it is needed for business purposes and finds profitable employment, it will always float away to other places where there is a greater demand for it. Gold or silver money cannot be piled away above the money level of other countries and be made to stay there. It will seek its level just the same as anything else. Though the mints of the universe might be open to the coinage of silver for our use, but few million dollars more than could find profitable employment would stay here. Not a sound political economist from Adam Smith to the latest writer can be found to dispute that proposition. They are all of the same opinion as Dr. Wayland, who said of any country, "If its trade with other places is free, the superfluous money will float away, on the tide of commerce, to some point where it is needed, just as a surplus of wheat or cotton goods or any other commodity must do." If it cannot find profitable employment here as money it will go to the east, there to be used for money purposes, or to the melting pot, to be used in the industrial arts. You cannot "heap" up gold or silver in a free country and make it stay "heaped," any more than you can "heap" up water and make it stay "heaped."

When McKinley Was All Right.

On the 12th of February, 1891, only a little over seven years ago, Mr. McKinley said:

"During all of Grover Cleveland's years at the head of the government he was dishonoring one of our precious metals, one of our own great products, discrediting silver and enhancing the price of gold. He endeavored even before his inauguration to office to stop the coinage of silver dollars and afterward and to the end of his administration persistently used his power to that end. He was determined to contract the circulating medium, and to demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money, and diminished the value of everything else—money the master, everything else the servant. He was not thinking of "the poor" then. He had left "their side." He was not standing forth in their defense. Cheap coats, cheap labor and dear money. The sponsor and promoter of these professing to stand guard over the welfare of the poor and lowly! Was there ever more inconsistency or reckless assumption?"

All these things sound very strange when compared with Mr. McKinley's utterances since he accepted the nomination for president on a gold standard platform, and they seem to justify sincere people in having but little faith in the man.

True Democratic Doctrine.

President Van Buren said in his message to congress in extra session in 1837, called because of the then financial crisis:

"It is not designed by the constitution that the government should assume the management of domestic or foreign exchange. It is indeed authorized to regulate by law the commerce between the states, and to provide a general standard of value or medium of exchange in gold and silver, but it is not its province to aid individuals in the transfer of their funds. As justly might it be called upon for transportation of their merchandise. These are operations of trade; they ought to be conducted by those who are interested in them, in the same manner that the incidental difficulties are encountered by other classes of citizens."

This was the Democratic doctrine of that period. It was just after the Democratic party had won its great and crowning victory in obtaining mastery of the money power. But the scene has changed. Now "money is king," and controls not only the action of the government, but the destinies of the people. It is no longer our servant, but our relentless master.

M'KINLEY IN ATLANTA.

His Visit Made Memorable by a Notable Utterance.

President McKinley made memorable the first day of the Atlanta peace jubilee by a notable utterance in his speech before the joint session of the Georgia legislature Wednesday afternoon. His reception by the general assembly was warm and hearty in the extreme, and his speech was punctured with frequent outbursts of cheering. It is admitted on all sides that the address marked an epoch in history. During the address President McKinley said:

"Every soldier's grave made during the unfortunate civil war is a tribute to the American valor. And while, when those graves were made, we differed widely about the future of the government, those differences were long ago settled by the arbitrament of arms—and the time has now come in the evolution of sentiment and feeling under the providence of God, when in the spirit of fraternity we should share with one in the care of the graves of the confederate soldiers."

A wild cheer went up from every throat in the typical southern audience, a cheer that echoed and re-echoed through the chamber until it was taken up by the crowds outside. Old men who fought for the south rose from their seats and waved their hats. Of all the many conciliatory speeches which have been made since Grant said "Let there be peace," nothing has more deeply stirred a southern audience than the simple words of President McKinley.

Star Hunting.

Recently I have devoted my time to star hunting and satisfying a yearning desire to become a discoverer. I felt that I must discover something, whether there was anything new to be discovered or not. In the pioneer school houses, some time during the days of Job, I was taught to admire the genius and freshly mown hay odor of the late (about 76 years late) lamented Mr. Wm. Herschel as an astronomer and finder of nests of newly laid stars. If you believe the last sentence you will believe anything I write, and I always make it a point to refrain from telling the truth as much as possible. Consequently I want you to believe me.

Anyway, it is quite an honor to possess sufficient ability and suavity to go out in the gloaming and call up new stars to you at so much per call. It is also laborious. When you have found a good, fragrant star, you will obtain more or less light on the subject; according to the size of the star.

The first difficulty with which I had to contend was having no telescope. So I got a water pipe and glued two magic-lantern lenses in it, and began looking about for an elevation upon which to sit. I did not dare to get on the housetop, because everybody would see me, and might go to discovering infant stars themselves. Then I would not get on the smoke house, because being a country editor we did not have one. I was in a dilemma, whatever that is.

Finally I decided that my seat of operations should be the barn. It was very tall, and had a mysterious air about it, somewhat like that about a fresh college graduate before he gets accustomed to wearing his diploma. The mysterious air around the barn was caused by decaying vegetation, while that about the graduate is caused from sheer ignorance.

But I mounted the rotten roof with my improvised telescope thrown over my left scapula and dangling in the vicinity of the lumber vertebrae.

Looking cautiously around to see if any one was near, but seeing no one, I began searching the star vaults with the water pipe. I gazed at Mercury and Venus. I was glad to see the former, as it is rather skittish, and Copernicus grieved because he was never able to meet the planet. I had seen Venus without any trouble, while Captain Cook, the navigator, gave up the ghost near Hawaii, trying to see the untamed Venus.

I scooted my star-finder all around the circle of perpetual apparition, and the circle of occultation. But I didn't find anything. I was getting discouraged. I decided the Lick discoverers had just about licked up all the important stars, and while I was thinking so, my hired boy jabbed a pitchfork up through the roof to scare me. My telescope fell, the roof broke through, and I fell to the earth, making no discovery worthy of note except that then my right ascension and declination were about as near zero as anything ever get to be in this vale of tears.

Any one wishing to buy a telescope cheap may write me. I am no longer an astronomer.

JOHN EARL GARRISON.

A Tragic Death.

At Athens, Ga., Wednesday, Lieut. James H. Hoskinson, adjutant of the First Battalion of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, met a tragic death on Clayton street in front of the postoffice. He was thrown violently from his horse, his head striking the ground with great force. A large artery in the brain was ruptured, compression followed by paralysis, and in two hours he was dead.

May Yet Rescue the Maine.

The navy department has not yet abandoned the hope of rescuing the Maine from Havana harbor, and bringing the wreck back to this country for rehabilitation, nor does it seem likely, from the interest taken by responsible wrecking experts, that the Cristobal Colon will permitted to pound to pieces on the shore west of Santiago. The board of construction has under consideration a formal proposition for the salvage of both vessels and their delivery at New York or such other ports in the United States as the government might select.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. ... that there was a limit to the ... of those ancient mariners ... the forty days of the deluge ... and the 150 ... before the passengers could go ... must have seemed to those eight ... in the big boat like a small eternity. Rain, rain, rain! said the wife of Noah. Will it never stop? For forty mornings they looked out and saw not one patch of blue sky. Floating around amid the peaks of mountains Shem and Ham and Japhet had to hush the fears of their wives lest they should dash against the projecting rocks. But after awhile it cleared off. Sunshine, glorious sunshine! The ascending mists were folded up into clouds, which instead of darkening the sky only ornamented it. As they looked out of the windows these worn passengers clapped their hands and rejoiced that the storm was over, and I think if God could stop such a storm as that He could stop any storm in your lifetime experience. If He can control a vulture in midsky, He can stop a summer bat that flies in at your window. At the right time He will put the rainbow on the cloud and the deluge of your misfortunes will ... I preach the doctrine of limitation, relief and disenthrallment. At just the right time the pain will cease, the bondage will drop, the imprisoned will be liberated, the fires will go out, the body and mind and soul will be free. Patience!

Notice also that on the cessation of the deluge the shut ins came out, and they built their houses and cultured their gardens and started a new world on the ruins of the old world that had been drowned out. Though Noah lived 350 years after that worldwide accident and no doubt his fellow passengers survived centuries I warrant they never got over talking about that voyage. Now I have seen Dore's pictures and many other pictures of the entrance into the ark, two and two, of the human family, and the animal creation into that ship which sailed between two worlds—antediluvian world and the postdiluvian world—but I never saw a picture of their coming out; yet their embarkation was not more important than their disembarkation. Many a crew has entered a ship that never landed. Witness the steamer Portland, a few days ago, with 100 souls on board, going down with all its crew and passengers. Witness the line of sunken ships, reaching like a submarine cable of anguish across the ocean depths from America to Europe. If any ship might expect complete wreckage, the one Noah commanded might have expected it. But not those who embarked disembarked. Over the plank reaching down the side of the ark to the Armenian cliffs on which they had been stranded the procession descended. No other wharf felt so solid or afforded such attractiveness as that height of Ararat when the eight passenger put their feet on it. And no sooner had the last one, the invalided wife of Japheth, been helped down the plank upon the rock than the other apartments of the ship were opened, and such a dash of bird music never filled the air as when the entire orchestra of robin redbreast, and morning-lark, and chaffinch, and mocking bird, and house swallow took wing into the bright sky, while the cattle began to low and the sheep to bleat and the horses to neigh for the pasture, which from the awful submergence had now begun to grow green and aromatic. I tell you plainly nothing interests me more in that tragedy from the first to the last act than the "exit" and the "exeunt," than the fact that the "shut-ins" became the "get outs." And I now close with this story all the inmates of the sick rooms and hospitals, and those prisons where men and women are unjustly endungeoned, and all the thousands who are bounded on the North and South and East and West by floods, by deluges of misfortune and disaster. The ark of your trouble, if it does not land on some earthly height of vindication and rescue, will land on the heights celestial.

By a strange providence, for which I shall be forever grateful, circumstances with which I think you are all familiar, I have admission through the newspaper press week by week to tens of thousands of God's dear children who cannot enter a church on the Sabbath and hear their excellent pastors because of the age of the sufferers or their illness, or the lameness of foot, or their incapacity to stay in one position an hour and a half, or their poverties, or their troubles of some sort will not let them go out of doors, and to them as much as to those who hear me I preach this sermon, as I preach many of my sermons, the invisible audience always vaster than the visible, some of them tossed on wilder seas than those that tossed the eight members of Noah's family, and instead of forty days of storm and five months of being shut in, as they were, it has been with these invalids five years of "shut in," or ten years of "shut in," or twenty years of "shut in." Oh, comforting God! Help me to comfort them! Give me two hands full of salve for their wounds. When we were 300 miles out at sea, a hurricane struck us, and the lifeboats were dashed from the davits and all the lights in the cabin were put out by the rolling of the ship and the water which through the broken skylights had poured in.

"And as I now find many in hurricanes of trouble, though I cannot quiet the storm, I can strike a match to light up the darkness, and I strike a match. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth." I strike another match. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." I strike another match. "We have a High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and He was in all points tempted like as we are." Are you old? One breath of heaven will make you everlastingly young again. Have you aches and pains? They insure Christ's presence and sympathy through the darkest December nights, which are the longest nights of the year. Are you bereft? Here is a resurrected Christ whose voice is full of resurrectionary power.

But do not think that heaven is made up of any indiscriminate population. Some of my friends are so generous in their theology that they would let everybody in without reference to condition or character. Do not think that libertines or blasphemers and rejecters of God and His gospel have "letters of credit" that will draw anything from the bank of heaven. Pirate crafts will not be permitted to go up that harbor. If there are those who as to heaven are to be "shut ins," there are those who will belong to the "shut outs." Heaven has twelve gates, and while those twelve gates imply wide open entrance for those who are properly prepared to enter them they imply that there are at least twelve possibilities that many will be shut out, because a gate is of no use unless it can sometimes be closed. Heaven is not an unwashed mob. Show your tickets or you will not get in—tickets that you may get without money and without price tickets with a cross and a crown upon them. Let the unrepentant and the vile and the offscourings of earth enter heaven as they now are, and they would depreciate and demoralize it so that no one of us would want to enter, and those who are there would want to move out. The Bible speaks of the "withouts" as well as the "withins." Revelation xxii., 15, "Without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Through the converting, pardoning, sanctifying grace of God may we at last be found among the shut ins and not among the shut outs!

THE KHALIFA.

The Life and Characteristics of the Fugitive Dervish Chief.

Abdullah et Taishi Khalifa, whose power has been broken by the British forces under General Sir Herbert Kitchener, was the most powerful and successful of the three Khalifas of the three leading Arab tribes, that in 1882 helped the Mahdi to overthrow the government of Egypt in the eastern Soudan and establish the Mahdist despotism in its place. Each of these Khalifas commanded a distinct section of the Mahdi's army, and Abdullah's force had most to do with the annihilation of General Hicks and his army. Abdullah was the favorite of his master. The Mahdi believed that if he died Abdullah was the only man who could maintain the strange empire he had raised and keep the upper hand of the rapacious Soudanese tribes. Before his death the Mahdi nominated the Khalifa Abdullah as his successor, and thus the cruel and tyrannical Arab tribe of the Bagaras, whose leader was Abdullah, became the masters of the Egyptian Soudan and ruled it with a rod of iron. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, after three years of power, and Abdullah has since been known as "the Mahdi's successor." There was intense jealousy and disappointment on the part of the Danagla and Jaalin tribes, who had been the rulers, but now became the ruled. Civil war on account of Abdullah's accession was narrowly averted, but he was too strong for his enemies in the other tribes, and they finally chose the part of discretion just when all had been made ready for battle. The new ruler then made it his business to render the other tribes harmless. He reduced the power of the two other Khalifas, and they became men of little influence. He sent many of the Jaalin and Danagla Emirs in chains hundreds of miles up the Nile, and he permitted his Baggara to plunder the other tribes without mercy, under the pretext of levying taxes. There has been only one ruler of the Soudan for the past thirteen years, and he has been the Khalifa Abdullah. He maintained his policy of cruelly repressing all the people except his own tribe, until he was frightened very badly by the news that England and Egypt were getting ready to invade the country and overthrow his power. After that news reached Omdurman he made a great show of reversing his policy. He pardoned the imprisoned Emirs and tried in many ways to win back the disaffected people. The Khalifa's empire, within which not a particle of European influence has permeated since the Mahdi captured Khartoum, extends along the Nile from Dongola on the north to the neighborhood of Lado on the south, a distance of about thirteen hundred miles. Omdurman, the capital, just across the Nile from the ruins of Khartoum, is about midway between these points. The Khalifa lost Darfur, but still his empire extends from the western limits of Kordofan to Abyssinia on the east, and embraces about 700,000 square miles. During the thirteen years he has controlled the destinies of the Egyptian Soudan it is estimated that nearly three-fifths of its inhabitants have perished through war and famine. Constant warfare has greatly diminished the male population.

KEENE TURNED THE TABLES.

Several Wall street men, Mr. James R. Keene among them, combined some time ago to get control of the stock of the tobacco trust.

Their understanding was that none of them was to sell any of the stock until it had reached its highest possible figure, and then all were to sell at the same time.

Ten days ago Keene discovered that this agreement was not being lived up to by some of his colleagues. They were beginning to sell on the quiet, it is said, as soon as the stock reached

JAS. R. KEENE.

154¾. As soon as Mr. Keene discovered this he gave orders for the sale of his own holdings and before the other members of the clique were aware of what was happening Keene had made $1,500,000.

By that time the tobacco trust's stock was down to 115½, having declined 39¼ points.

Buy the Rat.

A friend of the late Secretary Bayard writes: I was much amused at Mr. Bayard's recital of an incident some years before in which he and William R. Travers were actors. He said the rats had become such a nuisance in his house at Wilmington and were so aggressive that he went to New York in search of a terrier, and applied to Travers for information as to where he could find an establishment provided with such animals. Travers took him to a rat pit, whose proprietor was a celebrated sporting character, and Bayard stated the purpose of his visit, and that he must see the dog tried before he would purchase him. The man brought out a beautiful little terrier, and after putting him in the pit, pitched a fierce, gray-whiskered rat into the arena also. The adversaries confronted each other for an instant like two gladiators in ancient Rome, when suddenly the dog took to flight, pursued by the rat. "Buy the rat, Tom," shouted Travers; "buy the rat!"

Count Camillo Pecci, a grandnephew of Pope Leo XIII., and colonel of the Noble Guard, is about to visit this country and Cuba. The visit will be unofficial, and his stay in the country will only be incidental to his journey to Cuba. A few years ago Count Pecci was married to a Cuban woman who had inherited large plantations there.

A unique will, just published in Washington, Pa., is that of Jerome Blummer. His entire estate, valued at $75,000, after the death of his wife, is to be sold and the income used exclusively for the cause of temperance in Washington county.

Does Your Head Ache?

Are your nerves weak? Can't you sleep well? Pain in your back? Lack energy? Appetite poor? Digestion bad? Boils or pimples? These are sure signs of poisoning.

From what poisons?

From poisons that are always found in constipated bowels.

If the contents of the bowels are not removed from the body each day, as nature intended, these poisonous substances are sure to be absorbed into the blood, always causing suffering and frequently causing severe disease.

There is common sense cure.

AYER'S PILLS

They daily insure an easy and natural movement of the bowels.

You will find that the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

with the pills will hasten recovery. It cleanses the blood from all impurities and is a great tonic to the nerves.

My wife was taken sick and I at once called our family physician, and he thought best to call in another physician for consultation. ONE STEP AT A TIME.

In dealing with their own territorial problems the people of the United States will do well if they adopt the motto, "One step at a time." A part, at least, of the discussion that certain well-meaning gentlemen had endeavored to arouse while the treaty of peace was still under negotiation concerned problems that may arise for future generations of Americans to solve, but that have not yet made their appearance in the practical and concrete form. The ratification of the treaty must at least precede some other questions. That the treaty will be ratified, no person of safe judgement and good opportunities for observation has ever for a moment doubted. The argument that the United States is not empowered by virtue of its Constitution to exercise the powers of sovereignty outside of the United States is to be set down merely as an intellectual diversion. It lies essentially in the nature of the modern state to grow and expand as it has reasonable opportunity. To suppose for a moment that a great nation like ours, of more than seventy million people, is in some way estopped by certain forms of words—agreed upon more than a hundred years ago by a relatively small number of people who are all of them now dead—from obeying those same laws of growth and development that inhere in the very nature of our race and of our political organism, is to ascribe to the written Constitution a character that none of its framers ever thought of giving to it. Many of the mistakes that the French have made in trying to establish colonial possessions have grown out of their fondness for regularizing everything and their desire to make all their acquisitions fit into some logical scheme of colonial organization and administrarion. We shall be strongly tempted to fall into the same error. Already the floodgates have burst, and the country is being inundated with a perfect torrent of metaphysics touching the nature of political sovereignty and the transcendental significance of annexation.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January.

Mr. Johnson Vonderslice, of Perry county, spent Christmas holidays here.

The boys of this vicinity had a nice serenade Christmas eve night. Several nice dinners were given during Christmas, and all seemed to have a nice time and a merry Christmas.

We will have to be careful or we will soon be putting it 1898.

Wishing the Editor and all the readers of the BANNER a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Saturday night the court house was packed to its fullest capacity, the occasion being the Christmas Tree given by the united churches. The tree was gaily decorated, but unfortunately Santa Claus had been delayed somewhere, and no presents were visible. The non-arrival of Santa Claus was partialy compensated for by a visit from his "Better Half" (Miss Willie Robinson) and "Jack Frost" (Master Will Mullins) and a beautiful "Fairy" (Miss Emmett Matthews) added enjoyment to the proceedings. A very pleasant evening was passed.

Sour Stomach Cure.

A long time I was a great sufferer from Liver and Stomach troubles. I had a dull pain in my left side under my heart. At times my side became swollen and the pain acute. My stomach was always sour and I would vomit every time I eat. My bowels were very irregular, causing me pain and distress. I tried many things without any benefit. I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose. I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—J. D. The World's Improved Balance.

The swift success of our aggressive policy has left the whole world in a far more stable position than we found it at the opening of the year. The annexation of Hawaii has given that interesting group of islands a settled status, and our assumption of responsibility for the Phillipines will speedily bring about a vastly improved situation in that populous archipelago. We ought to have no serious difficulto in assisting the Cubans to restore order throughout the island and to maintain fairly efficient institutions under republican forms. The wisest men in Spain are venturing to express somewhat boldly the releif that they feel in the wholesome chastening that has come to them in the painful year 1898. This view has been taken by business men especially, and prevailed in the conference of Spanish chambers of commerce that has met at Saragossa. Some of the most intelligent Spanish writecs are taking the ground that under modern conditions the responsibility of sovereignty over distant colonies is far more costly than profitable, and that except for the point of pride involved Spain is greatly better off without Cuba and the Philippines than with them. Of course the two situations are totally different. Cuba was entitled to one sort of administration and the Philippines to another. The Spaniards should have learned long ago to give Cuba to the Cubans in as complete a sense as the English have given Canada to the Canadians, while they should also have learned long ago to administer the Philippines strictly for the benefit of the population, following to a considerable extent the model of England in India. The time had come when it was too late to reform the abuses of Spain's bad colonial government, and there was no remedy except to abandon the colonial business altogether. This heroic remedy is one that the nations which need it never have the grace to administer to themselves. It has to be forced upon them from without. None the less, they may in good time learn to appreciate the service that has been done to them and forget the first smart. Spain may quite possibly have a bad year or two at home, with which to end the nineteenth century; but it is reasonable to predict that the Spaniards will open the twentieth with very excellent prospects. For the first time in years they have an undisturbed opportunity to give attention to home affairs.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January.

'History of the Spanish-American War." by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription and will undoubtedly prove a money-maker to every intelligent salesman.

CLANTON, - ALABAMA

The government of the state of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, has directed that the pupils in all the official schools shall be taught to write and perform all manual tasks as well with one hand as with the other.

A Swiss anthropologist, on his return from Patagonia, brought home with him a complete collection of Patagonian skulls, and when the custom house proposed to tax them on the basis of animals' bones imported as manure, he protested that this was an insult to humanity. To his surprise his objection was listened to, and he received a receipt for the duty charged upon a higher scale, with the skulls entered as "returned emigrants' worn effects."

The young couple who have just finished a journey around the world on bicycles, found that nineteenth century instruments of civilization and sixteenth century adventures in barbarism may go together. It must have been exasperating to wheel at top speed over abominable roads to escape missile-throwing Chinese. It is easy to dart away from crowds who throw stones, but bad roads are trying to the temper. It is impressive that the best road they found in all the world was the 600-mile road to Calcutta, built in the forgotten ages by the Delhi mogul. This is a valuable contribution to knowledge. The mogul and his dusky Macadams little dreamed what strange vehicles would spin over the great road centuries after.

The act requiring the navy department to build four more monitors was passed before the lessons of the war had shown the defects of this class, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Since the craft must be built it is well that they be the best of their kind. Thus it is gratifying that the plans are to be changed, and the new monitors made much larger and better than the old. They are valuable only for harbor defense, but they can go to sea at a pinch, and can make a long voyage if they do not have to encounter rough weather ships on the way. However, the country is not likely to build any more, as we are not likely to have any more scares about attacks on the coast. The Spanish war has shown that the place to defend our coasts is out at sea, wherever an enemy's fleet can be found.

The development of mines of ore and sulphur in Sicily has always been the cause of many strikes, on account of the low prices paid to the laborers. The government of Rome obtained recently from the Chambers a law guaranteeing financial support to sick or wounded and lame miners. The proprietors of the mines announced that they would decrease the wages of the workmen in a sufficient proportion to meet the extra expenses imposed upon them by the operation of the new law taxing property for the support of invalid laborers. The miners in the Province of Girgenti to the number of about a thousand have struck work, and, at last reports, the strike was still in progress; fortunately this time it was not accompanied by the violence and bloodshed which too often marked the labor troubles of Sicily.

The history of the last few years shows a succession of hostilities against England from all sides and in all quarters, none the less aggressive, none the less dangerous, than if they had been conducted in actual warfare, says the Sydney (New South Wales) Bulletin. Look at the intrigues of France in Egypt, in Siam, in Niagara, in Madagascar, or the Nile; look at the encroachments of Russia in Persia Afghanistan, the Pamirs; look at the characteristically prudent and cautious, but none the less real hostility of Germany in the Transvaal, in Zanzibar, in Samoa; look today at the unanimous exultation of the continent at the blows which are being struck at the prestige and commercial interests of England in the East. Everything seems to show that England must either make ignoble submission to a European aggressiveness which seeks to bleed her by fair means or foul, or take the risk of financial ruin, of possible effacement as a first-class power, in a desperate contest with the monster armies of her neighbors, to whom she appears as the one great obstacle to their designs.

MISSIONARY CRUISE OF A DANISH COUNTESS.

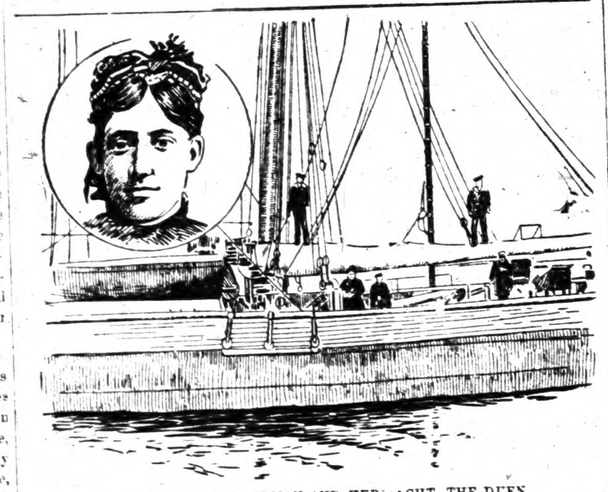
From Europe there have come to the United States at various times strange, weird persons, some bent on errands of philanthropy and others from motives of curiosity. Sailing around the Great Lakes in her own yacht is a woman who can take her place on the list. She is the Countess Schimmelman, from Denmark. She is not precisely a reformer, though she may see many things that she would like to have changed, but wherever she is she certainly does good. Over in Denmark, she says, she heard nothing but bad of America, but since arriving here she finds the truth of the American conviction that this is a pretty good country to live in after all.

At home she was the Queen's favorite, and she passed the first thirty years of her life exclusively at court. Then she got restless and wanted to see the wide, wide world, and try to alleviate some of the misery which she vaguely understood existed. She sold her property and bought a ship, and in this cruised about the Baltic in the summer and in Southern seas in the winter. She established coffee houses and did good in many little ways. Of recent years she stayed in the cities in the winter, and turned her ship for the time into a home for the poor boys who wanted to follow the sea.

Three years ago she bought the yacht Duen, or Dove, of Prince Waldemar, and by this time, her work becoming well known among the members of royalty, they contributed largely in aid of her enterprise. Her brothers, however, caused her arrest once and put her in an asylum. Upon her release she resumed her labors. Now she has come over to America in her yacht, and, having passed up the St. Lawrence, and through the Welland Canal, she is making a tour of the Upper Lakes with her three adopted sons, whom she brought over with her. She intends to visit her countrymen in the Northwest, so that when she returns home she will know whether to advise the thousands there who want to change their homes to come to to our promised land.

The Countess speaks English with ease. She is of medium height, has brown hair, blue eyes and a clear, clean-cut profile. She presents the appearance of a German matron who has several winters to see before she turns forty, writes a reporter who visited her on her queer craft at Chicago. A very slight cap did not hide the waves of soft brown hair that fell about her forehead. When she did not talk in her slight foreign accent she smiled as she listened to a guest who was more than likely trying to answer some question the Countess had asked about the suffering in Chicago among the poor.

"I like Americans," she said; "you have no caste and the poorest laboring man is a gentleman. I have great hopes for success in Chicago. The sailors I have spoken with and the men on the docks tell me the condition of the men in Chicago is not as bad as I have been led to believe." The Countess picked up Walter Wyckoff's book, "The Workers," from her table. "This is all the source of my information as to the poor of Chicago at present," she said, "but is it true you have 200,000 men unemployed here every winter?"



COUNTESS SCHIMMELMAN AND HER YACHT, THE DUEN.

The guest to whom the question was put doubted the statement and the Countess said she had been skeptical as to its truth from what she had seen during the few hours she had been in Chicago. "Workingmen in England and the United States are so much better provided for than those on the continent," said the Countess, as she shook her head.

Her work in evangelical and practical—teaching the precepts of religion and at the same time looking after temporal wants as best she can.

One of her objects in visiting the great lakes is to inspect lands in Canada on Lake Superior, where she is anxious to establish a colony for the poor.

The Countess Adeline Schimmelman is a member of a Danish noble family. Until taking up missionary work among sailors she was a favorite at the courts of Copenhagen and Berlin. When she decided to help the unfortunate many of the wealthy and titled families of Europe came to her assistance, for she is not wealthy. In her yacht she has visited nearly all of the large seaports of the world in the last three years. During the summer she secures chairs and holds services on the deck of her boat. In winter she is obliged to go to a hall.

SMALLEST CHURCH IN ENGLAND.

Where Is Its Counterpart in America?—Seats Only Thirty Persons.

Where is the smallest church in America? It would be interesting to know. The smallest church in England has been discovered at Lullington, in Sussex. The village itself is on so small a scale that the miniature church, some sixteen feet square, is quite large enough to supply its needs. Built in mediæval times upon a slight eminence within a short distance of Alfriston, famous for its sixteenth century hostelry, the church is reached by a path which passes through charming scenery. The present structure stands upon the site of the chancel of the building destroyed during the Cromwellian struggles, and at the same time the church records disappeared, so that even the name of the patron saint is not now known. Some idea of the diminutive appearance of the building, which accommodates only about thirty worshipers, can be gathered from a glance at our illustration. Inside the small sanctuary the large pulpit completely dwarfs the scanty sitting accommodation. The belfry is more for ornament than use, and the birds are allowed to retain undisputed possession.

Curious Transference of Heat.

A correspondent of Nature, who is associated with the observatory at Toulouse, calls attention to a very singular phenomenon, the scientific explanation of which he seeks. Take a bar of iron in the hand by one end and plunge the other end in the fire, heating it strongly, but not so much that the hand cannot retain its hold. Then plunge the heated end in a pail of cold water. Immediately the end held in the hand becomes so hot that it is impossible to retain it in the fingers. This phenomenon, said by the correspondent to be familiar to workmen in iron, is ascribed by them to some repellant action which they suppose the sudden cold to exert upon the heat contained in the iron, which is thus driven to the opposite extremity.

The novelist who occasionally lectures is in great danger of degenerating into a lecturer who occasionally writes novels.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Late Hints For the Wardrobes . Those Who Like to Be Correctly Gowned.

NEW YORK CITY (Special).—The cloth gowns show every week some new feature, so that it seems to be necessary to have three or four in one wardrobe in order to be correctly gowned, states Harper's Bazar. The skirts of all the gowns are made long, and as close-fitting as possible over the hips, and many of them have jackets or long cutaway coats. There is no doubt that the long coats and cloaks are much the fashion this year, and are being imported all the time. A smart walking gown is made with a velvet skirt, and over this is worn a long redingote of beige cloth that entirely covers the skirt. In front there is a flounce, of the same material as the redingote, that starts at the waist in a narrow width, and it gradually broadens out until it reaches part way up the coat. The upper part of the coat is finished with a deep collar that forms a wavy cape, and there is a high stock-collar and vest of velvet, and inside the stock-collar is a high flaring collar also of the velvet. On the front of this coat are large fancy buttons. The sleeves are small, but have a little fulness at the top. They are very long, and are finished around the wrist with a ruffled cuff. To wear with this coat is a hat of felt, something in a sailor shape, trimmed with rosettes of velvet and stiff wings. The same gown in two shades of green is effective also.

LADIES' CUTAWAY COAT.

A Popular Mode.

The model shown in the large engraving is desirable for either silk or woolen fabrics, charming combinations being effected by making flounce and broad collar of contrasting material. This is also a good design for remodelling, as the waist can be lengthened over a new lining, the collar of new material giving a stylish finish. A flounce to match collar will give added length as well as style to the skirt, and the decoration may be as simple or as elaborate as desired.

To make this waist for a miss of fourteen years will require two yards of material forty-four inches wide. To make the skirt will require three and one-half yards of material forty-four inches wide.

Muffs to Match the Hat.

Fancy muffs of velvet to match the hat are displayed very temptingly among the extravagant novelties. They are flat in effect and made with a double ruffle at each end, but large in size. A stylish sable muff in a similar style has a wide circular frill at each end, is lined with white satin and is finished on the edges with tiny short tails set on two or three inches apart all around.

The Boy's Fashions.

The small boy of fashion is arrayed in blouse and knickerbockers for ordinary wear. The trousers are slightly full and loose, depending a little from the band which is worn above the knee. Boys like this style much better than the fitted knee breeches heretofore worn.

Worn on the Hats.

One novel and beautiful fibre which is used extensively on hats shows a coarse, lace-like mesh of heavy silk thread, woven with chenille cord. A variation of this is of coarse-meshed lace, interwoven with double zephyr wool.

Ribbon Frills For the Gown.

The liking for narrow ribbon frills and ruches increases—if that is possible. Three, four and even five ribbons of assorted colors are frequently combined to complete the trimming of a gown.

The Fashionable Jewelry.

Neck chains, lockets and crosses are fashionable. The slender gold chains strung with jewels are of course preferred. The most ultra chain ties about the throat and pear shape pearls finish the ends.

Out-of-Door Toilet For a Tot.

A stylish out-of-door toilet for a tiny miss is here represented in rich red serge coating, trimmed with Persian lamb fur and tiny frills of black satin ribbon. Flare bonnet of red velvet, with red taffeta bows and tie strings, black soft quills and border of Persian lamb. The Empire style needs no introduction. It is graceful and becoming to little folks, the cape collar with its circular ripple ruffle being also a revival of a former style and at this time a very popular feature.

The deep box-pleated skirt portions of the coat are joined at the top to front and back short body portions, which meet in shoulder and underarm seams. The cape collar is included in the seam with the turn-over collar.

CHILD'S COAT.

The Cold-Weather Cape.

Capes for cold-weather wear are either in shawlpoint or seamless circular shape, and nearly every model is of three-quarter length.

THE CHICAGO RIVER

An Open Sewer Navigable for Vessels for Nine Sixteen Miles Length.

The smallest and busiest river in the world. Where do you think it is? Theodore Dreiser locates it in Chicago and has this to say about it: The very peculiarity of this little stream is that it is the smaller river doing the largest business in the world, or in other words, the busiest river in the world. In the next place, it has the greatest depth for the narrowest width of any known river. In the third place, it has the largest number of bridges spanning it of any river of equal length or greater length, barring the Mississippi—a total of fifty-two bridges. All these are draw or swinging bridges and carry a traffic of their own exceeding almost as important as that which passes below. Next, this river has little or no current to speak of, and flows upward instead of down. It is the only known river whose current has been turned round and made as it were to flow the other way. Lastly, it is a sort of an orphan river, for while most rivers and harbors are owned and cared for by the United States government, the Secretary of War whose province it is to care for these things will have nothing to do with it, and Chicago repairs it only sufficient for its now needs, but lays no claim to the right of way.

In this strange predicament this little stream flows wretchedly backward, loaded with the largest and most valuable collection of vessels that ever crowded an inland sea. It is one tumultuous highway, far more exciting than Broadway and somewhat less charming than the Hudson. The city uses it as an emptying place for its sewers and the Street Cleaning Department as a dumping ground for its waste, and yet it is the most valuable factor in the life of Chicago, and the one more than all else that has made the city what it is to-day. No other river in the wide world possesses or pretends to the appearance of this peculiar stream. In its busiest hours it is a sight for gods and men. A mere creek, it struggles with the burden of an ocean. The great deep-draught propellers tear the water into splittering fragments. Their huge stacks often hide the entire stream from view with great clouds of smoke. The ingoing and outgoing vessels quarrel for the right of way with all the vehemence inherent in gongs and whistles. Tug pilots handle their craft with a skill that would put to shame the manners of the heavy teamsters in a crowded New York lane.

The longest branch of the river today is more than ten miles in length, and the total length of all branches is sixteen. At its mouth it is no more than 200 feet wide, and the fact that it is the same width a mile or two upstream is due to the fact that it was made so by excavation and dredging. At one time (1869) it was 200 feet wide at Lake street, 175 feet wide at Randolph, a block further on, 165 feet at Washington, 175 feet at Madison, and these but single blocks apart, and so on until it became unnavigable by boats drawing ten feet of water. In that year, however, it was dredged and made a uniform width of 200 feet in the south branch, and it is kept that width by the walls of the immense buildings which have now encroached to the very water's edge, and which in most cases form the only banks visible.

It is interesting to note the peculiarities of this poor little stream. Nowhere along its shores within the great city limits is there a foot of unoccupied ground where a tree may find root. No branch or blade of green graces its shores. No bountiful springs rise from point to point and feed it. Its tributaries are dark, stone arched sewers which empty their subterranean blackness into it in continuous stream. Its banks are for the most part sheer walls of red brick. Where an open space occurs railroad tracks skirt the water's edge so closely as to stir a fear for the safety of the cars which line them. Lumber yards make up other portions, and groups of belching smokestacks, sooty black rise in forest-like numbers at regular intervals. No single space but has some wharf or freight shed, factory or warehouse, filling up the last available inch, stock yards, lumber yards, railroad yards, stone yards, coal yards—these interspersed with docks, elevators, manufactories and breweries make its banks interesting if not beautiful.

Night-Blooming Cactus.

The only true night-blooming cactus, especially so-called, is the cereus grandiflorus. This last long specific name implies its beauty and grandeur. It is one of the most delightfully scented of all the cactus family, blooming, as noted, at night. A large plant, covered with blossoms, is a sight once seen that is never to be forgotten. The round stems have numerous small angles on them and are covered with delicate spines. These stems are usually about as thick as one's finger. Of late years another member of the cactus family has usurped the name of night-blooming. This is phyllocactus latifrons. It is one of the broad, flat-leaved kinds, and is so readily propagated that it has now become common. It has a long tube to the flower, which curves downward like a siphon. It does bloom at night, and in one sense is night-blooming; but it bears no comparison in any respect with the original night-blooming cactus.—Meehan's Monthly.

PARADE THROUGH HAVANA

By the American Troops Will Take Place on January 1

IMPOSING DISPLAY WILL BE MADE

The City in a State of Unrest—A Spanish Guerilla Shot—Crisis in Spain Feared That Weyler Seeks the Premiership.

A parade of the United States troops through the city of Havana will take place on January 1, the date fixed for the turning over of the control of the island to the United States. The American evacuation commission will direct Major General Lee to make the disposition of the eight regiments there. Altogether it is expected that an imposing display will be made.

Military men are divided as to the propriety of the troops parading. Officials in favor of the project aver that a good moral effect will be produced upon the city.

HAVANA STIRRED UP.

The City in a State of Unrest—General Castellanos' Course.

HAVANA.—Francisco Quintero, a Spanish guerilla, while walking Genios street, was fired at from the roof of a house and seriously injured.

The city is in a state of unrest.

Three more wards of Havana were evacuated Monday.

La Lucha says it can see no disloyalty to Spain on the part of the Spanish residents in Cuba if they choose to hoist American and Cuban flags, because Spain renounced the island without consulting the Spaniards.

Captain-General Castellanos, after formally delivering over the island to the American authorities after January 1, will leave for Matanzas, where he will remain a fortnight, going thence to Cienfuegos.

THE CRISIS IN SPAIN.

Fears That Weyler Will Seek the Premiership.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Standard says:

"Senor Sagasta's illness has brought to a standstill the political crisis and the negotiations for the reorganization of the liberal party. Many liberals are opposed to Gen. Weyler's becoming minister of war, because they fear he will aspire to succeed Sagasta as leader of the party.

"El Liberal publishes an interview with Weyler, in the course of which he is represented as declining to give any information regarding the crisis, but as insisting upon the necessity for a strong government. Such a government could not, he said, be drawn from a party by Senor Silvella. Gen Weyler hinted that the country would run great risks unless power were placed in the hands of the Sagasta Weyler coalition government.

Night-Blooming Cactus.

The only true night blooming cactus, specially so-called, is the cereus grandiflorus. This last long specific name implies its beauty and grandeur. It is one of the most delightfully scented of all the cactus family, blooming as noted at night. A large plant covered with blossoms, is a sight never seen that is never to be forgotten. The round stems have numerous small angles on them and are covered with delicate spines. These stems are usually about as thick as one's finger. Of late years another number of the cactus family has usurped the name of night-blooming. This is phyllocactus latifrons. It is one of the broad, flat-leaved kinds, and is so readily propagated that it has now become common. It has a long tube to the flower, which curves downward like a siphon. It does bloom at night and in one sense is night-blooming, but it bears no comparison in any respect with the original night-blooming cactus.—Meehan's Monthly.

PARADE THROUGH HAVANA

By the American Troops Will Take Place on January 1.

IMPOSING DISPLAY WILL BE MADE.

The City in a State of Unrest—A Spanish Guerilla Shot—Crisis in Spain—Feared That Weyler Seeks the Premiership.

A parade of the United States troops through the city of Havana will take place on January 1, the date fixed for the turning over of the control of the island to the United States. The American evacuation commission will direct Major-General Lee to make disposition of the eight regiments there. Whether it is expected that an imposing display will be made.

Military men are divided as to the propriety of the troops parading. The majority are in favor of the project aver that a good moral effect will be produced upon the city.

HAVANA STIRRED UP.

The City in a State of Unrest—General Castellanos' Course.

HAVANA.—Francisco Quintero, a Spanish guerilla, while walking Genios street, was fired at from the roof of a house and seriously injured.

The city is in a state of unrest.

Three more wards of Havana were evacuated Monday.

La Lucha says it can see no disloyalty to Spain on the part of the Spanish residents in Cuba if they choose to adopt American and Cuban flags, because Spain renounced the island without consulting the Spaniards.

Captain-General Castellanos, after formally delivering over the island to the American authorities after January 1, will leave for Matanzas, where he will remain a fortnight, going thence to Cienfuegos.

THE CRISIS IN SPAIN.

Fear That Weyler Will Seek the Premiership.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Standard says:

"Senor Sagasta's illness has brought to a standstill the political crisis and the negotiations for the re-organization of the liberal party. Many liberals are opposed to Gen. Weyler's becoming minister of war, because they fear he will aspire to succeed Sagasta as leader of the party.

"El Liberal publishes an interview with Weyler in the course of which he is represented as declining to give any information regarding the crisis, but as insisting upon the necessity for a strong government. Such a government could not, he said, be drawn from a party by Senor Silvella. Gen Weyler hinted that the country would run great risks unless power were placed in the hands of the Sagasta-Weyler coalition government.

BUSINESS LARGEST EVER KNOWN.

Tremendous Increase in Exports, While Bank Clearings Were Larger Than 1892.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

It is a year beyond parallel, and goes to its close with the biggest volume of business ever seen. Enormous transactions at the stock exchange makes some difference, and heavy railroad earnings, but when all the transportation and speculative interests are eliminated there is still a much larger business than in any other month of any year.

Last year the exports were in volume greater than in any previous month in the history of the country, but this year the three weeks' report shows an increase of 25 per cent against nine per cent in imports, which would indicate much more than $70,000,000 excess of exports this month.

The payments through clearing clearing houses have been for the week 26.5 per cent greater than last year and 12.4 per cent greater than in 1892, and for the month 17.8 per cent greater than in 1892. Until now no greater volume of business has ever been done in the history of this country than in the closing month of this year.

CUBANS RETURN THANKS.

General Palma of the Junta Issues a Proclamation.

General T. Estrada Palma, of the Cuban junta, issued a proclamation on behalf of the Cuban revolutionary party, in which he says:

"Now that Cuba is redeemed from the yoke of Spain and the last vestige of the tyranical rule of that country has been wiped from this continent, I wish to extend to our compatriots, and, in fact, all who in the time of strife and need furthered the cause of Cuba libre, on behalf of the Cuban revolutionary party, my sincere thanks. Cuba is now assured of independence and prosperity, and the need for contributions to the party which were so generously made by our friends from the incipiency of the revolution, February 24, 1895, is ended, and the work removed to another field. The island needs vast improvement, and it is to this end that all patriotic Cubans should bend their efforts."

HOBSON CALLED DOWN.

That Kissing Mania Resulted in Being "Advised" As to His Conduct.

Bitter disappointment is felt in Washington over the action of Lieutenant Hobson. Naval circles are intensely wrought up over his action, and the deepest resentment is shown toward him for his conduct in the west.

It is stated among navy officials that Secretary Long telegraphed Lieutenant Hobson, urging him to desist from his mode of receiving his admirers at receptions tendered him. Secretary Long has been urged to recall the hero of the Merrimac and administer a rebuke, but he declined to do this. Instead, however, he is said to have adopted the milder form of advising him as to his mode of conduct, urging him to desist, as he was imperiling his reputation and cheapening his glorious act of courage.

PEACE TREATY DELIVERED

To President McKinley Late Saturday Afternoon.

TREATY WILL NOT BE MADE PUBLIC YET.

Interesting Ceremony Accompanied the Presentation of the Christmas Offering. The Document Will be Presented to Senate After Reassembling.

President McKinley received from the American peace commission late Saturday afternoon the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain. In presenting this momentous document, Judge Day, as chairman of the commission, said it represented the earnest efforts of the American representatives at Paris, and that it was submitted with the hope that it would redound to the credit glory of the American nation.

Accepting the treaty from the hands of Judge Day, the president responded with heartfelt thanks and congratulations to the commission as a body and to the members individually. He spoke of all that had been accomplished and of the happy method by which difficult questions had been adjusted.

The formal ceremony of delivering the treaty to the president occurred in the blue room, and lasted half an hour.

It was stated after the delivery of the treaty to the president that it would not be made public at present, the usual courtesy to the senate requiring that it should be submitted to that body before being made public. In the meantime, it will remain in the custody of the state department for safe-keeping, although copies of it will be in the hands of the president for such consideration as may be needed.

An immense crowd was at the dock to witness his departure. Cheers upon cheers were given for him as he passed along the streets, and he was compelled at several points to say a few words to the people.

The United States troops began Sunday evening a regular patrol of the city of Havana in order to guard against possible disorders. The Bando, issued on Friday by Capt.-Gen. Castellanos, prohibiting crowds from assembling in the streets, has been generally observed. Saturday night there was some disturbance, said to have been caused by liquor in Monserrat place. A shot was fired about midnight from a roof at a group of people below, and many shots were returned at figures vaguely seen on the roof. An unidentified man was killed and three were wounded in other affrays.

As a compromise measure the commission was appointed as stated.

WILL SEIZE WAKE ISLAND.

The Bennington Is Ordered to Take Possession at Once.

FINAL EXCHANGE OF FLAGS IN CUBA

Will Take Place in Havana January 1. Cubans Will Accept Any Policy McKinley Inaugurates—Asleep Five Months.

WASHINGTON.—The government has determined to hoist the flag over an island far out in the Pacific ocean, and orders were sent out late Friday afternoon to the commander of the Bennington, Captain Taussig, which is now at Honolulu, to proceed at once to take possession in the name of the United States government, of Wake Island, lying in latitude 19 north, 166 east. It is distant about 2,000 miles from the Hawaiian Islands and 1,300 from Guam. It is almost in a direct line between these possessions of the United States and is admirably adapted for use as a station for a Pacific cable to connect the Philippines with Hawaii and the United States. It is about three miles in length and encloses a lagoon of salt water. It is scarcely capable in itself of sustaining life, but it is expected that a cable station can be maintained by erecting a plant for the supply of water.

A cable station in this locality is deemed to be absolutely necessary to the maintenance of a cable, and for that reason the American Peace Commissioners at Paris endeavored to secure one of the Caroline Islands, but without success. Wake Island is said to be by rights already American territory, for in 1851 Admiral Wilkes surveyed the place and asserted title. It is not inhabited so far as known at the present time, though in the past some guano gatherers have temporarily lived on the island.

PROGRAMME AGREED UPON.

Final Exchange of Flags in Cuba Will Take Place January 1.

At the joint meeting of the United States and Spanish military commissioners in Havana Friday, the programme was finally agreed upon for the exchange of flags on January 1 at noon.

It was agreed at the meeting that the Spanish troops remaining in Cuba after January 1 should be considered in the light of foreign troops in a friendly country and to be accorded the privileges usually granted under international law.

The Spanish sick in the hospitals will remain under the safeguard of the American flag, the Spanish authorities providing medicines, attendance and food, repatriating them on recovery.

CUBAN GOVERNMENT.

Will Accept Unreservedly Any Policy McKinley Inaugurates.

The Havana correspondent of the London Times says: President McKinley will have an unfettered hand here. A majority of the Cubans are prepared to accept unreservedly any regime treating them justly and insuring the tranquility of the island. The Spanish residents are also contented to accept the inevitable, believing that their interests will be protected and themselves fairly treated. Therefore, the way is clear to establish any system of government the Washington authorities may see fit to impose.

ASLEEP FIVE MONTHS.

A Young Woman Who Had Been in a Trance Five Months Awakes.

Tony Broshiet, a young woman 22 years of age, who has been in a trance for the past five months, at her home in Milwaukee, Wis., was brought to her normal condition through the influence of hypnotism. Miss Brosheit retired, as usual, in her apartments on the 23d of July last. On the following morning when it was time to awaken, she kept on sleeping, and though at times she would open her eyes, she seemed unconscious of her surroundings. At last an application of "suggestive therapeutics," a form of hypnotism, was tried and the patient was successfully brought out of her trance. She had been kept alive with liquid food.

The regular work of the second term of the University of Alabama will begin January 3, next. That will be an advantageous time for new students to enter, as will February 15 (the middle of the session), or March 19 (the beginning of the third term). Students may, however, enter any day during the session.

HAWAII'S athletes.

Could Give Us Points in Running and Swimming.

The Hawaiian native is especially fond of athletics, and shows to advantage in a tug of war, foot racing and broad jumping. As a long distance runner his speed and endurance would excite the envy of more than one professional. In olden times, runners were the only means of sending important messages from one chief or tribe to another, and the Hawaiian forefathers seem to have handed down all the essentials which go to make up a good race.

If a Hawaiian does well as an athlete on terra firma, he certainly excels in the water. For diving and swimming he seems to have a natural aptitude. In the early days of the missionary the "men of the cloth" tell in their records how it was no uncommon thing for a native to swim from one island to another. Diving they also delight in. A native often throws himself head first from a cliff fifty or sixty feet high into a shallow pool scarcely ten or twelve feet deep. As his body strikes the water it arches like a bow, with his head almost to his heels, and the next instant shoots to the surface with a broad grin on his face. A Kanaka, in fact, is well night amphibious. In infancy he learns to swim almost unconsciously. There is probably not a native boy or girl ten years of age who could not give us "cards and spades" in the water and they beat us, without half trying. Ofttimes a Kanaka spends the entire day along the shore, now gliding through the water, suddenly disappearing and bobbing up thirty or forty yards from where you last saw him; next clambering over the coral reefs and ledges in search of opihis (Hawaiian oysters), and again stretched at full length on the warm sand, face upturned to the sky.

A New Gas Engine.

A new carbon dioxide engine, recently brought to notice by William F. Roberts, of Philadelphia, is based on the principle and its application of making the gas simply a vehicle for carrying heat energy to the engines, by means of which it is transformed into energy in such a form that it can readily be utilized as power. That is, the engine is actuated by the carbon dioxides used expansively upon the piston in a manner similar to that employed in steam engines, but with the piston area reduced proportionately to the amount of power as compared with steam.

For use in the engine the carbon dioxide gas is stored in a liquid form in a cylinder prepared for the purpose, it being led from this in small tubes through a heating apparatus, where it is brought to a temperature of about 150 to 200 degrees Fahrenheit, at which temperature it is introduced into the engine. By means of a specially adapted system of valves, the gas at this high temperature and pressure is passed into the cylinders of the engine and then withdrawn from the latter at a temperature below thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit.

The gas—a waste product in many lines of manufacturing—is relatively cheap in its liquid form, and for such an engine it is claimed that, being compact, powerful, and economical of operation, it can be adopted with success in many places where steam and electricity are now employed.

Oxford and the House of Commons

Of the 670 members of the House of Commons, 142, or just one over one-fifth, are described as having been educated at Oxford. An examination of the numbers which the different colleges contribute to this total reveals some interesting particulars. Christ Church easily heads the list with fifty. This number includes three members of the present cabinet—Sir M. Hicks-Beach, Mr. Chaplin, and Mr. Long—and also the two members for the university—Sir John Mowbray and Mr. T. E. Talbot. Balliol makes a good second, its share being twenty-eight, including such prominent politicians as Sir M. W. Ridley and Mr. Asquith. In proportion to the members, University shows up exceedingly well with fourteen, and this includes, curiously enough, Lord Cranborne and Lord Hugh Cecil, and also Mr. Herbert Gladstone. New College, with thirteen, Exeter with nine, and Corpus with six, stand next in order, several colleges number two or three each, while Lincoln and Trinity have only one representative apiece in the House, but in the cases of these colleges the lack of quantity is fully atoned for by the distinguished character of their alumni, for they are Mr. John Morley and Prof. Bryce.—Westminster Gazette.

Buttermilk as a Medicine.

Long experience has demonstrated buttermilk to be an agent of superior digestibility. It is indeed, a true milk peptone; that is, milk already partially digested, the coagulation of the coagulable portion being loose and flaky, and not of that firm, indigestible nature which is the result of the action of the gastric juice upon sweet cow's milk. It is a decided laxative, a fact which must be borne in mind in the treatment of typhoid fever, and which may be turned to advantage in the treatment of habitual constipation. It is a diuretic, and may be used to an advantage in some kidney troubles. It resembles koumiss in its nature, and, with the exception of that article, it is the most grateful, refreshing and digestible of the products of milk. It is invaluable in the treatment of diabetis, either exclusively or alternating with skim milk. In some cases of gastric ulcer and cancer of the stomach, it is the only food that can be retained.—Elgin

A HAPPY NEW YEAR to all is the hearty greeting of THE BANNER, and may 1899 prove to be the brightest and most prosperous year of the century.

WILL our correspondents kindly make it a rule to send in their communications not later than Tuesday of each week. We are obliged to hold over some received only this morning.

THE election of a Mayor and Councilmen for the town of Clanton does not appear to be causing much excitement. No matter who is elected we hope that every exertion will be made and every possible cent utilized this next year in the improvement of our streets. Other matters can wait.

THE Christmas holidays have been marred by an unusual number of accidents with pistols and fire-crackers. There may be some little excuse for accidents caused by fire-crackers, but those by guns should be thoroughly investigated, and if malice or undue carelessness is shown the perpetrators should be brought to justice.

THE eclipse of the moon on Tuesday night was a splendid natural spectacle with which to conclude the Christmas festivities. As the shades of night began to fall and the moon arose the spectators noticed that one edge of the orb of night was in shadow which gradually extended over the whole surface, completely obscuring it. It was a beautiful clear night, and the watchers everywhere had one of the best opportunities to witness a total eclipse.

IT will be remembered that about six weeks ago George R. Mason, a prominent Populist of Dallas county, during a political dispute with Percy Clark, editor of the Selma Telegram, was shot and wounded by the latter. Mason died on Monday morning, and Clark, who was spending Christmas in Montgomery, as soon as he heard the news, returned to Selma and surrendered to the authorities. He is to have a preliminary trial before the Mayor of Selma to-day. The whole occurrence is greatly deplored by the friends of both parties.

THE coming constitutional convention is already causing much speculation among the people as to its probable outcome. Discussions are going on as to what the convention will attempt to do, and who will be possible candidates. THE BANNER has at present no information regarding any candidates from Chilton or from this senatorial district, and begs the people to earnestly consider the best men to be found for this purpose.

THE cotton receipts at Clanton are already greater than any previous entire season. But Houston, Texas, has broken the record, having this season already received two million bales, and the secretary of the cotton exchange there estimates that six hundred thousand bales will yet be received during the remainder of the season. The two million bale mark has never been reached in an entire season before by an interior town. In 1894-95, the record crop year of the United States, Houston's receipts were the largest in the country, but were two hundred thousand short of two million. There is no doubt but that this year's crop is the largest ever made.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

THE fourth section of the Constitutional Convention bill, provides that the delegates shall be citizens of the State and qualified electors, and "that the delegates from the State at large shall be apportioned so that one of the same shall be a resident citizen of each the senatorial districts." This section also provides that any person holding an office of profit under the State or Federal governments can be elected a delegate to the convention.

Section 5 follows the present election law in making the Judge of Probate, the Clerk of the Circuit Caurt, and the Sheriff the returning board to canvass the returns, and they are to meet at the court house of each county on the Saturday following the election. The board will have first to find out how many votes were cast in favor of holding the convention, and how many against it. They will then ascertain how many votes were cast for each delegate, and immediately are to certify such votes to the Secretary of State.

Sections 6 and 7 provides that the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Attorney-General shall meet on the third Tuesday in July, 1899, and canvass the returns from the State. If it is found that a majority of votes have been cast for the convention they are then to ascertain what persons were elected from the State at large, and who were elected delegates from each county. The Secretary of State will issue certificates to the persons so elected, and the Governor is to give public notice in three daily papers in three different portions of the State that the convention is to be held, and call upon the delegates-elect to assemble in the House of Representatives in Montgomery on Tuesday after the first Monday in August, 1899, at meridian, and proceed to organize "by the election of a president from among themselves, and such other officers (who need not be delegates) as the convention may deem necessary for the proper performance of the duty assigned to the convention. Said convention shall continue in session until it shall by careful revision and amendment of the present constitution frame and adopt a revised constitution for this State."

The eighth section makes the convention "the exclusive judge of the election, qualification and returns of its own members." And "Any person desiring to contest the election of a person certified as being elected a delegate to said convention may do so in the same manner as an election of a member of the Lower House of the General Assembly is contested, and by giving the same bond, and testimony shall be taken in the same method."

Section 9 provides that the Convention shall be supplied with stationery, reports and documents, etc., the same as the General Assembly. The officers of the convention are to receive the same compensation as corresponding officers of the House of Representatives are by law allowed, and delegates will be allowed the same per diem and mileage as members of the General Assembly. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, or one of the Associate Justices, will call the convention to order and preside until temporary officers are elected. The most important clause in this section is that which provides that "per diem compensation shall not be allowed or paid to any member of the convention for a longer time than fifty days."

Section 10 provides for the convention filing with the Secretary of State, within one week of its adjournment, "a clean and correct copy of the constitution which said convention may adopt." The convention is to cause a correct journal of its proceedings to be kept.

Political Pointers.

Peoples Party Press Bureau
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 7, 1898

The eighteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in session recently at Kansas City, emphatically re-asserted its fidelity to Free Silver, declared in favor of the 8 hour work day, rejected socialism and re-elected President Gompers by an almost unanimous vote. Organizers will be at once put to work to strengthen the order in the south and west.

The work of combining the Pottery companies of the United States under the name of the American Pottery Company with a capitalization of $20,000,000, has been completed; and the Trusts are not all dead yet.

The Democratic leaders of Iowa recently held a conference in Des Moines for the purpose of discussing the issues of the next campaign They declared in favor of Bimetallism but the question of ratio was not given prominence. They announced oppositio to Trusts, Territorial expansion, increase in the army as contemplated by the Hull bill, retirement of the Greenbacks and fusion with any other political party.

Ex Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, announces that he will make the race for Mayor of Chicago in the spring against Carter Harrison, jr. on an Independent ticket, and the "Chicago and municipal ownership" platform. Notwithstanding the fact that he has strong supporters many of the ex governor's friends think he is making a mistake to antagonize Mayor Harrison after the great victory he has just won over street railway franchise thieves

Senator J. K. Jones, of Arkansas Chairman of the Democratic national committee, is quoted as saying that Wm. J. Bryan of Nebraska, would in all probability be the Democratic nominee for president in 1900 with Free Silver and opposition to Trusts as the dominant issues.

There has been much talk lately about the negotiation of a Russian loan in the United States and the bankers of the Windy City, on the lake, are of the opinion that this country has money to "burn" and that no trouble will be encountered by Russia in securing all the money desired here.

Tally one for the United States Senate. By a vote of 30 to 8, that body has refused to consider the Proctor Cuban-Porto Rican junketing resolution providing for a committee of five to go to Cuba and Porto Rico and investigate the social, political, military and financial conditions of the natives. Many Republicans, to their credit, be it said, joined with the Democrats in voting down the resolution.

The latest game of "freeze out" is an Ice Cream Trust recently formed at Chicago. What next!

Ex-comptroller of the currency, A. B. Hepburn of New York, vice-president of the City National Bank where the Standard Oil millions are deposited, "is shedding crocodile tears over the fate of the rich man whom he fears will soon have to go to work. This is what he says: "The return from wealth is growing gradually smaller, while the return from labor in this country is growing larger. The man of wealth must be prepared to adjust himself to rapidly changing conditions. Unless he will bring his own ability and energy to reinforce his money he must change his mode of living and adopt economies which have not been necessary in bygone years.

Senator Marion Butler, chairman o the Populist national committee has offered an amendment to the pension law, providing for the payment of pensions to all ex-confederate soldiers. Senator Butler's intentions may be the best, but his amendment is not meeting with general favor, even among the men whom it is intended to benefit.

Will wonders never cease? The National Board of Trade committee on postal affairs has reported a resolution favoring the establishment of Postal Savings Banks by the government. When such bodies favor a move of this kind it is clearly evident that the sentiment in behalf of such things must be growing.

Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky, the gallant Silver Democrat who was defeated two years ago for the U. S. Senate by a gold-bug will be a candidate again next year for the same position with better prospects of success. A. R.

Delicate Children

They do not complain of anything in particular. They eat enough, but keep thin and pale. They appear fairly well, but have no strength. You cannot say they are really sick, and so you call them delicate.

What can be done for them?

Our answer is the same that the best physicians have been giving for a quarter of a century. Give them of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It has most remarkable nourishing power. It gives color to the blood. It brings strength to the muscles. It adds power to the nerves. It means robust health and vigor. Even delicate infants rapidly gain in flesh if given a small amount three or four times each day.

Scott's Emulsion

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz' Thus writes W. G. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. Y. Trial bottles free at Clanton Drug co. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

It is becoming more evident each day that the Democratic program in 1900 will be anti monopoly, anti-expansion and Bimetallism. Col. Bryan has already sounded the keynote of the next campaign in the following recent statement: "The sentiment against the trusts is a growing sentiment, because more and more people are feeling the injustice done by these combinations of capital, and because the subject is becoming better understood among people generally. To believe that the trusts can permanently exist in the United States is to believe that wrong committed indirectly and upon a large scale is less objectionable than wrong committed directly.

Pains in the chest when a person has a cold indicate a tendency toward pneumonia. A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the chest over the seat of pain will promptly relieve the pain and prevent the threatened attack of pneumonia. This same treatment will cure a lame back in a few hours. Sold by J. S. Johnson jr.

EX Secretary of State, John Sherman, is doing considerable talking since being kicked out of McKinley's cabinet In a recent interview he says, "negotiations were in progress to purchase Cuba when the war spirit developed. Now what have we got for all our expense? Some islands in the Philippines for instance, which are worth about $200,000 per annum in commerce, increased indebtedness of $200,000,000 and a lot of islands inhabited mainly by man-eaters And the most distressing feature of the affair is that we are now about to be called upon to pay $20,000,000 for territory that we could have taken without spending a dollar." It must not be forgotten that John is a Republican.

The Alabama Fertilizer

Is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all around fertilizer for cotton and corn.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 18 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land, was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER. The only objection ever raised to the ALABAMA FERTILIZER was that it costs too much.

The present price is no more than that of standard fertilizers. When requested, the ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be put up, without extra cost, in bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS, thereby insuring the perfect preservation of the bags for an indefinite time, and saving the contents from loss by waste in transit and handling. These preserved bags when emptied and thoroughly washed will be found as good and strong as new, and equally useful for other purposes. Every person, farmer, merchant or dealer vitally interested in the economical production of good crops should advocate the use of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

The Rain Upon the Roof.

(An old favorite.)

Long ago a poet dreaming,
Weaving fancy's warp and woof,
Penned a tender, soothing poem
On the "Rain upon the Roof."

Once I read it, and its beauty
Filled my heart with memories sweet;
Days of childhood fluttered round me,
Violets sprang beneath my feet.

And my gentle, loving mother
Spoke again in accents mild,
Curbing every wayward passion
Of her happy, thoughtless child.

Then I heard the swallows twittering
Underneath the cabin eaves,
And the laughing shout of Willie
Up among the maple leaves.

Then I blessed the poet's dreaming,
Blessed his fancy's warp and woof,
And I wept o'er memories treasured,
As the rain fell on the roof.

Years ago I lost the poem,
But its sweetness lingered still,
As the freshness of the valley
Marks where flowed the springtime rill.

Lost to reach, but not to feeling;
For the rain-drop never fails
O'er my head with pattering music,
But it peoples memory's halls.

With the old familiar faces
Loved and treasured long ago,
Treasured now as in life's springtime—
For no change my heart can know.

And I live again my childhood
In the home far, far away;
Roam the woodland, orchard, wildwood,
With my playmates still at play;

Then my gray hairs press the pillow,
Holding all the world aloof,
Dreaming sweetly as I listen
To the rain upon the roof.

Every pattering drop that falleth
Seemeth like an angel's tread,
Bringing messages of mercy
To the weary heart and head.

Pleasant thoughts of years departed,
Pleasant soothings for to-day,
Earnest longings for to-morrow,
Hoping for the far away;

For I know each drop that falleth
Comes to bless the thirsty earth,
Making seed to bud and blossom,
Springing all things into birth.

As the radiant bow that scattereth
All our faithlessness with proof
Of a seedtime and a harvest,
So the rain upon the roof.

—Mrs. F. B. Gage.

Eight Hour Day.

Oct. 3 was celebrated as Eight-hour day in Sydney. The principal feature of the celebration was the procession of trade societies through the streets, headed by the eight-hour banner, and attended by their own banners and half a dozen bands. The following societies took part in the procession: Seamen, Progressive Carpenters, Coachmakers, Amalgamated Engineers, Typographical, Bookbinders, Lithographic, Letterpress Machinists, Coopers, Pressers, Glass Workers, Boilermakers, United Laborers, Butchers, Bricklayers, Tinsmiths, Amalgamated Carpenters, Gas Stokers, Australasian Engineers, Furniture Trades, Painters, Plasterers, Shipwrights, Bakers, Plumbers, Stonemasons, Ironmolders.

Punctually at 9 o'clock the head marshal, Mr. G. Moody, gave the order to march, and the cavalcade, headed by a detachment of mounted troopers, moved from the Trades Hall into George, Park, College, Oxford, and Bourke streets, and thence to the Agricultural Ground. All along the route crowds lined the roadway on both sides.

About 15,000 people attended the Agricultural Ground, Moore Park, to witness the sports and military tournament, which began at 10 o'clock, and concluded about 6. The military contests were the feature of the day, some excellent horsemanship being shown. Other sports were well contested, and the whole combined to make a capital day's outing for those who invested the "nimble bob."

The chairman, in proposing "The Day We Celebrate," referred to the progress of the eight-hour movement, and he expressed regret that restrictive legislation in regard to the hours of labor was not more advanced in this colony. Reference was made to the rejection of the bill to legalize the Art Union, which had hitherto been a prominent feature in connection with the demonstration. The bill could have been opposed only through ignorance, because the committee only desired to have the same privileges which were granted to artists in connection with the holding of art unions.—The Worker, Sidney, Australia.

Immigration for 1898.

The number of immigrants who have come to the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, was [illegible],299, while the number for the preceding year was 230,832; thus it is observed that notwithstanding the war immigration has not decreased to any appreciable extent.

Of this number 44,473 were illiterate, 23 per cent of those above the age of fifteen years not being able to read or write. More than half of these immigrants came from Austria-Hungary, Italy, Poland and Russia, while not quite a third came from Great Britain, France, Germany and Scandinavia.

It is evident from the immigration reports for the past few years that that class of immigration usually undesired is becoming few[illegible] number each year, while the [illegible] desirable immigration is increasing at an alarming rate. This is accounted for by the known fact that a desire to better one's condition is the sole cause of immigration. So long as industrial conditions [illegible] United States were far superior to [illegible] Great Britain, France and [illegible] ...king people o[illegible]se countries immigrated to the United States in large numbers, but when the wage reductions and lack of employment of the present decade became known in those countries it was a debatable question as to which of the countries afforded a native of Europe the most desirable home.

Japan's Watch Industry.

Notwithstanding the cheap labor in Japan and strenuous efforts made to manufacture watches by the Japanese, that country continues to import great numbers of watches and clocks from Switzerland and the United States. In 1897 $816,000 of Swiss watches and $109,610 of American watches were imported, while for the first six months of 1898 Switzerland supplied Japan with watches to the value of $564,065, and the United States sent watches amounting in value to $82,845.

It is stated that the American watches are held in high repute by the Japanese, but the Swiss watches being much the cheapest the latter are most popular with the masses. A showy case counts for more than an accurate timepiece with most people in that country. Concerning the conditions of the watch industry and the price of labor, a leading paper of Tokyo says: "A member of the Osaka Watch company says that the wages paid to the workers in that factory are certainly much lower than those paid in European or American factories; yet, despite this fact, the business of watchmaking is not a paying one in Japan. Lack of skill among the mechanics is one of the reasons given for this state of affairs."

Self-Lighting Gas Burners.

The Matchless Gas Lighting syndicate of London now have on exhibition a self-lighting gas burner, which is said to perform perfectly the duties expected of it. It is described as follows:

"As in previous devices of the same kind, the catalytic properties of spongy platinum are employed to effect the actual ignition, the novelty in the apparatus on view consisting in an automatic bye-pass valve. On turning on the tap to the burner, the gas, in the first instance, flows through this bye-pass to a small jet, through which it escapes and impinges on a particle of spongy platinum. The latter quickly ignites the escaping jet, and the flame thus produced heats a wire connected by suitable linkages with the bye-pass valve in such a way that as the wire expands the by-pass closes, opening at the same time a passage to the main jet. The lighting device is intended, in the main, for use with incandescent burners, but is also fitted to the ordinary."

The Municipal Problem.

While the citizens of American municipalities are crouching in fear, expecting momentarily to have their very homes given to corporations seeking franchises at the hands of aldermen, the people of European cities are discussing a very different problem. Instead of corporations ruling the municipalities of the monarchies and military power of the Old World as they do in the American republic the people are there taking things in their own hands.

Much has been said of the municipal gas and water plants and street railways of Great Britain, but now the news comes that the great strike of laborers in Paris (which was "lost," according to press reports), has resulted in the discontinuance of municipal "contracts" and the direct employment of laborers by the city in public works.

Labor Notes.

The cigarmakers spend $30,000 a year advertising their label.

The percentage of successful strikes of workingmen is greater this year than ever before.

A. L. Fife, a Chicago printer, was fined $100 for using the printer's label without authority.

The union scale is the living wage, the life line beyond which the workers will not allow themselves to be forced.

The strike of 600 shoe lasters at Brocton, Mass., has been settled by the committee. As a result 78 new members were initiated at one meeting.

The leather trust will shut down 100 tanneries to raise the price of leather. The man or concern that controls the means of production is the ruler, whatever you may think or say about it. The people, therefore should have control.

Thos. J. Kidd, Geo. Zentner, and Michael Troeber, accused of conspiracy to injure the business of the Paine Lumber Co., of Oshkosh, Wis., during the Woodworkers strike, were acquitted in the Municipal Court November 2d. The jury was out one hour.

Political Arithmetic.

In Australia, as in the United States, school-teachers need a large discretion. Here, for example, is a story from the Sydney Telegraph: A New South Wales country school-teacher set a boy a question in compound proportion for home work one evening. It happened to include the circumstance of "men working ten hours a day in order to complete a certain work." Next morning the unsuspecting teacher, in looking over the little pack of exercises, found "Jim's" sum unattempted, and the following letter attached to the page: "Sur—I refuse to let Jim do his sum you give him last nite has it looks to me to be a slur at 8-hour sistum enny sum not more than 8 hours he is welcum to do but not more. Yours truly, Abram Blank, senr."

An examination of the newspapers shows that they are able to prove any old thing of George Washington's farewell address.

COST OF IMPERIALISM.

ARMY BUDGET THE HIGHEST ON EARTH.

Shall This Unheard-of Burden of Taxation Be Borne by the People or Shall They Protest and Be Called Anarchists?

Secretary Alger, by asking for over $165,000,000 for the support of the regular army in time of peace, has raised two questions that touch the heart and the pocket of every American citizen who does not profit by legalized injustice and oppression. These questions are: "Shall the United States be more heavily taxed for military purposes than any other country on earth?" "Shall this unheard-of burden of taxation be carried almost exclusively by people of small means, while the wealth our armaments protect goes free?" If we spend $166,000,000 a year for the army, $150,000,000 for pensions and $50,000,000 for the navy, we shall be paying $366,000,000 for military purposes. That is nearly twice as much as any power in Europe pays for the same objects. It is more than we paid in taxes for the entire support of the government as lately as last year. The amount Secretary Alger asks for the army alone is more than Germany pays for her army and navy combined. We have been accustomed to commiserate the European peasant, crushed under the intolerable burden of standing armies, and now we are asked, with no necessity whatever, to subject ourselves to a burden twice as great. But the distribution of this burden of taxation is even worse than the load itself. Mr. Rockefeller, to take the most conspicuous specimen of a class, has a fortune of over $300,000,000. His power to accumulate, possess and increase this fortune depends upon the protection of the government. Mr. Rockefeller's income is over $20,000,000 a year. That is equal to the combined incomes of forty thousand families. Each living on annual earnings of $500. Under the Republican system of national taxation, which is based not on resources, but on personal consumption, Mr. Rockefeller's income, if divided among forty thousand families, would be taxed forty thousand times; concentrated in his hands, it need be taxed only once. In other words, with forty thousand times the means of a workingman, Mr. Rockefeller is not obliged to pay more than a workingman's taxes. In some respects he pays less. He uses no beer or tobacco, and so escapes the taxation levied on those humble luxuries. He does not play cards, and so does not pay for the revenue stamp on every pack. He does not live in rented rooms, and so is not taxed for his lease and his rent receipts. He does not borrow money on mortgage, subject to a mortgage stamp tax. He has his family physician, and so does not buy taxed proprietary medicines. He drinks no more tea than a sewing girl starving on four dollars a week, and if he used a quality as fine as that sipped by the emperor of China he would still pay only the sewing girl's tax of ten cents a pound. He uses no more taxed sugar than is consumed by a day laborer, and wears little more taxed clothing. Practically all of Mr. Rockefeller's gigantic income is absolutely exempt from national taxation, while every person of moderate means is taxed to the earth. Is that right? The Democracy does not think so. It believes that incomes and not family expenditures should be the measure of taxation. No extravagance in government. Necessary expenses to be met by fair methods of taxation. There is an issue ready made to the hand of the Democracy, and it is a winning one.

Free Silver Night Schools.

The organization of these schools is becoming widespread. The movement was started by Mr. George Burr Smith, attorney, of Chicago, Ill. A number of years ago, when a teacher in a country school, Mr. Smith observed, while explaining examples in exchange to a class in arithmetic, that an increasing rate of exchange with India, China, Japan, the South American states, and all countries using the silver standard, would cause untold depression in this country; for, prices being fixed in the countries using the cheaper money, would necessarily be reduced in this country, just in proportion as the rate of exchange increased. In 1895 the rate of exchange had doubled, so that our prices had decreased one-half. The effect was felt more in this country, as we were a debtor nation, so that no matter how much prices decreased, our debts must be paid with the dearer money.

The organization of these schools requires no elaborate speech making. Leaflets are furnished containing problems which show, first, the cause of the low price, next the effect upon the producing classes. A third list of problems show the foreclosure of mortgages which follows a rising money standard. Examples are also given which show the distribution of the wealth of the nation, the rise of powerful corporations, and the effect upon labor.

Leaflets for a school of twenty-five members may be obtained from the local Democratic or silver committees. Collections are taken at the close of the meetings to pay for the literature and the expenses of the county organization in furthering the movement.

Age of Combines.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel: The tin plate combine just formed is the most extensive affair of the kind ever formed in this country, as it includes all the plants in the country but four—two in Pennsylvania, one in West Virginia and one in Missouri. To avoid anti-trust laws the new concern is organized as a corporation under the New Jersey laws, with $20,000,000 preferred stock and $30,000,000 common stock. Of this sum the purchase of the plants represents $12,000,000 and the proposed working capital $6,000,000. The remainder is pure water. The preferred stock is to have 7 per cent cumulative dividends, all over this, if any, going to the common stock. To pay the dividends on preferred stock will therefore be required $1,260,000, and to pay only 6 per cent on the common stock will be required $1,080,000, or a total of $2,940,000. The promoters claim, however, that the common stock will earn more than the preferred, since the latter is limited to 7 per cent. Allowing, however, only 6 per cent for the common stock, it would require about 50 cents a box profit on 6,000,000 boxes a year to earn these dividends. This shows what tremendous earning capacity the promoters are basing estimates on, and the earning capacity is chiefly due to our tariff law, which taxes every home for the benefit of these infant promoters.

For Cheap Wheat and Dear Flour.

Every householder in this nation will have cause to regret the success of the Republican party every time he buys a pound of flour, for under the protection of that party the great milling trust has been found to control the price of bread. Thomas A. McIntyre, who went to England to obtain the consent of British stockholders in American flour mills to the formation of a combination of the principal mills in this country, so as to make a trust controlling the output, returned on the White Star steamship Majestic. He said when he landed that his mission had been successful. The object of Mr. McIntyre's trip to Europe was to obtain the consent of Richard Glyn, the president, and other stockholders of the Pillsbury-Washburn mills, to a plan to form all the great milling interests of America into a gigantic flour trust. Immediately Mr. McIntyre hurried to his office in the Produce Exchange building, where he remained closeted with his partners for several hours. To his friends, privately, Mr McIntyre is said to have strongly intimated that his mission abroad had been successful, and that the great combination, which will control about three-fourths of the world's breadstuffs, will surely be formed. It is said that the capital of the new trust will be $150,000,000 and the capacity 95,000 barrels of flour a day. There will, it is said, be included in the combination the following mills:

Mills—	Daily capacity, brls.
Hecker-Jones-Jewell, New York.	11,000
Pillsbury-Washburn, Minneapolis	25,000
Washburn-Crosby, Minneapolis..	17,000
Northwestern Consolidated Flour Milling Co., Minneapolis	15,000
Imperial Mill Company, Duluth.	8,000
Anchor Mills, Duluth	4,000
Daisy Mills, Duluth	6,000
William Lispman Mills, Superior	2,500
Freeman's Mills, Superior	2,500
Minkota Mills, Superior	1,000
Daisy Mills, Milwaukee	3,000
Total daily capacity	95,000
Total wheat consumed daily, bushels.	500,000
Total mill feed produced daily, tons.	10,000

Approving Trusts.

From the Chicago Chronicle: A new combination in restraint of trade has been organized in the state of New Jersey, where eight of the large rubber companies, manufacturing all kinds of rubber goods, excepting shoes and clothing, consolidated with a capital of $5,000,000. At its meeting in Washington the National Board of Trade had under consideration the question of trusts and combines. The resolution was offered requesting congress to use its power to prevent combinations restrictive of full and free competition. This resolution failed because it did not receive the necessary two-thirds vote. The resolution was irrelevant, because the fact is that congress did all that it could reasonably be expected to do when it passed the Sherman anti-trust bill, which is now upon the statute book as a law. If, in defeating the resolution inimical to combinations, the board had gone a step further and placed itself on record as commending the chief magistrate of the United States for failure to enforce the Sherman anti-trust law, notwithstanding repeated, manifest, notorious, current violations of the same, it would have proceeded quite in accordance with its failure to express itself as hostile to illicit combinations, out of which one of its members said "he himself was making something handsome." The national administration gives no efficacy to the voice of congress condemning combinations in restraint of trade and holds idle in this respect every one of the United States district attorneys the republic over.

"In Coin."

For the benefit of public creditors, congress, by the act of March 18, 1869, pledged the faith of the United States to the payment, in coin or its equivalent, of all its outstanding obligations. It is not pretended by any one that the government has ever assumed any severer or more onerous duty to its creditors than that declared by this act, or that it has at any time undertaken to pay any of its obligations otherwise than in coin? "Dollars" are the things to be paid—coin dollars, fabricated under and in pursuance of our coinage laws, each dollar to consist in or be represented by 412½ grains of standard silver or 25 8-10 grains of standard gold—that is, the weight of the silver in the silver dollar was to be sixteen times the weight of the gold in the gold dollar.

Three score and more of managers
Refused his play that day;
Then from a corner dark there sprang
A robber bold and masked,
And of the author, with a gun
His life or money asked.
"I've nothing but this play, I'll swear,"
Replied the trembling scribe;
"All say it is not worth the string
With which the cover's tied."
The robber snatched the manuscript
And fled without delay.
"Thank Heaven! At last!" the playwright cried,
"A man who'll take my play!"

DRY GOODS AND VERBS.

"How did you happen to lose your situation?"

"Too much accuracy. I was showing a piece of goods to a customer who asked me if it would wash. And I said no, it wouldn't, but if she'd get somebody to wash it I thought it would stand it."

AN INDICATION OF HIS POWERS.

"They say Triggsby is one of the smoothest talkers in the business."

"Well, they're right. If Triggsby wanted to, I'll bet he could go to the general office of the gas company and induce them to put in electric lights."

A TRIFLE THIN.

Barber (insinuatingly)—Your hair is a trifle thin, sir.

LITTLE GEORGIE'S RETURN.

"Ellen, has George come home from school yet?" called Mrs. Snaggs to her servant.

"Yes, ma'am," came back the answer.

"Where is he?"

"I haven't seen him."

"How do you know, then, that he's home?"

"Because the cat's a-hidin' under the dresser."

FAILED TO CONCILIATE.

As the conventional young man sat talking with the conventional young woman the conventional stern father came in.

The young man would fain be sociable and at ease.

"The open door"——began he.

"The front door is open at this minute," said the father.

CHALLENGED FOR CAUSE.

Attorney for the Defense—Now, then, will you please have the goodness to tell us whether you believe in punishing people for committing crimes?

Would-Be Juror—I do.

Attorney—I suppose you can read and write, too, and that you sometimes do those things?

Would-Be Juror—Yes, sir.

Attorney—Challenged for cause.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE.

Papa (severely).—Did you ask mamma if you could have that apple?

Three-year-old.—Yes, sir.

"Be careful now. I'll ask mamma."

"Truly, papa, I asked her, but she said I couldn't have it."

NO TIME TO LISTEN.

He—My dear, I have just written a little master-piece. I call it—ah—"How to be master of the household." Wouldn't you like to hear it?

"No, Samuel. I'm going off for a day's golf. You stay with the twins until I return."

RIGHT ON TIME, THEN.

He—By George, you never were on time in your life. You're always keeping me waiting. You nev—no, I'll take it back. I remember now that there was one exception.

She (sarcastically)—Oh, indeed! And when was that, pray?

He—When you met me at the altar. You bet you were right on the dot then.

READY FOR SETTLEMENT.

"That Harkins will case which has been in the courts for several years will soon be settled now," said Lawyer Habeas.

"Yes," assented Lawyer Corpus, "I understand the property is about all gone."

THE WAY IT WAS.

"This," said the school friend, who had not seen her for a year, "this is the girl who vowed to me that she never would belong to any man."

"I don't," said she, who had been married the matter of some months or so, "he belongs to me."

Rear Admiral Schley was the recipient of a handsome and costly sword, scabbard and belt, presented to him in behalf of the people of Philadelphia and other cities in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, who contributed to a fund established for the purpose. The sword, scabbard and belt represent a cost of $4,200. The blade is of fine Damascus steel, appropriately engraved, and the hilt is elaborately decorated with diamonds and other precious stones.

A Woman Superintendent.

In London there is a woman, Miss Penman, who has control over more than 500 conductors in the employ of the London Tramways company. Miss Penman is the only woman in England who occupies the very unique position of superintendent of street railway conductors. She engages all the conductors—500 all told—and the inspectors, receives their reports from day to day, and superintends the numerous details appertaining to the distribution of tickets, the checking of the men's daily returns and the dismissal of men when occasion arises.

A Tie in Births.

It is a curious fact that exactly as many boys as girls were born in London during the week before last—1,348 of each, making 2,696 births in all. Such a "tie" is of rare occurrence. There was, however, a similar equality in the second week of May, 1894, when 1,167 of each sex were born.

RELIEF FROM PAIN.

Women Everywhere Express their Gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes: "Dear Mrs. PINKHAM: Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At monthly period I suffered untold agony, and a great deal of the time was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Since taking the first bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, as directed, and have taken Pinkham's Pills, and have been greatly benefited. I would like to have you use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mrs. FLORENCE A. WOLFE, 515 Mulberry St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes: "DEAR Mrs. PINKHAM: For two years I was troubled with what the physicians told me was inflammation of the womb. Every month I suffered terribly. I had taken enough medicine from the doctors to cure any one, but obtained relief for a short time only. At last I concluded to write you, and to my case, and can say that by following your advice I am now perfectly well."

Mrs. W. R. BATES, Mansfield, La., writes: "Before writing to you I suffered terribly from painful menstruation, headache and sore feeling in the lower part of the bowels. Now my health is what makes me a perfect woman. I cannot hesitate one minute in telling what has brought me from a great change. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is the greatest medicine in the world for all the ills of the age."

worn passing through that awful storm, and I rejoiced that the storm was over, and I think if God could stop such a storm as that He could stop any storm in your lifetime experience. If He can control a vulture in mid-sky, He can stop a summer hail that flies in at your window. At the right time He will put the rainbow on the cloud and the deluge of your misfortunes will dry up. I preach the doctrine of limitation, relief and disenthrallment. At just the right time the pain will cease, the bondage will drop, the imprisoned will be liberated, the fires will go out, the body and mind and soul will be free. Patience!

Notice also that on the cessation of the deluge the shut ins came out, and they built their houses and cultivated their gardens and started a new world on the ruins of the old world that had been drowned out. Though Noah lived 350 years after this world-wide accident and no doubt his fellow passengers survived centuries, I warrant they never got over talking about that voyage. Now I have seen Dore's pictures and many other pictures of the entrance into the ark, two and two, of the human family, and the animal creation into that ship which sailed between two worlds—antidiluvian world and the postdiluvian world—but I never saw a picture of their coming out; yet their embarkation was not more important than their disembarkation. Many a crew has entered a ship that never landed. Witness the steamer Portland, a few days ago, with 100 souls on board, going down with all its crew and passengers. Witness the line of sunken ships, reaching like a submarine cable of anguish across the ocean depths from America to Europe. If any ship might expect complete wreckage, the one Noah commanded might have expected it. "But no; those who embarked disembarked. Under the plank reaching down the side of the ark to the Armenian hills on which they had been stranded the procession proceeded. No other wharf felt so solid or afforded such attractiveness as that height of Ararat when the eight passenger put their feet on it. And no sooner had the last one, the invalided wife of Japheth, been helped down the plank upon the rock than the other apartments of the ship were opened, and such a dash of bird and insect never filled the air as when the entire orchestra of robin redbreast and mourning-dove, and catbird, and mocking bird, and house swallow took wing into the bright sky, while the cattle began to low and the sheep to bleat and the horses to neigh for the pasture, which from the awful submergence of a year began to grow green and fragrance. I tell you plainly shutting interests me more in that tragedy from the first to the last not than the "exit" and the "exeunt," than the fact that the "shut-ins became the "shut outs." And I now cheer with them are all the inmates of the sick rooms and hospitals, and those prisons where men and women are unjustly entombed, and all the thousands who are stranded in the North and South and East and West by the ills by deluges of misfortune and disaster. The ark of your trouble, if it does not land on some earthly height of vindication and rescue, will land on the heights celestial.

By a strange providence, for which I shall be forever grateful, circumstances with which I think you are all familiar, I have admission through the newspaper press week by week to tens of thousands of God's dear children who cannot enter church on the Sabbath and hear their excellent pastors because of the age of the sufferers, or their illness, or the lameness of their feet, or their inability to stay in one position an hour and a half, or their worries, or their troubles of some sort will not let them go out of doors, and to them as much as to those who hear me I preach this sermon, as I preach many of my sermons, the invisible audience always vaster than the visible, some of them tossed on wilder seas than those that tossed the eight members of Noah's family, and instead of forty days of storm and five minutes of being shut in, as they were, it has been with these invalids five years of "shut in," or ten years of "shut in," or twenty years of "shut in." Oh, comforting God! Help me to comfort them! Give me two hands full of salve for their wounds. When we were 300 miles out at sea, if a hurricane struck us, and the lifeboats were dashed from the davits and all the lights in the cabin were put out by the rolling of the ship and the water which through the broken skylights had poured in.

And as I now find many in hurricanes of trouble, though I cannot quiet the storm, I can strike a match to light up the darkness, and I strike a match. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth." I strike another match. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." I strike another match. "We have a High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and He was in all points tempted like as we are. Are you old? One breath of heaven will make you everlastingly young again. Have you aches and pains? They insure Christ's presence and sympathy through the darkest December nights, which are the longest nights of the year. Are you bereft? Here is a disarrested Christ whose voice is full of resurrectionary power. But do not think that heaven is made up of any indiscriminate population. Some of our friends are so dangerous in their theology that they would let everybody in without reference to condition or character. Do not think that libertines or blasphemers and rejecters of God and His gospel have "letters of credit" that will draw anything from the bank of heaven. Pirate crafts will not be permitted to go up that harbor. If there are those who as to heaven are to be "shut ins," there are those who will belong to the "shut outs." Heaven has twelve gates, and while those twelve gates imply wide open entrance for those who are properly prepared to enter them they imply that there are at least twelve possibilities that many will be shut out, because a gate is of no use unless it can sometimes be closed. Heaven is not an unwashed mob. Show your tickets or you will not get in—tickets that you may get without money and without price tickets with a cross and a crown upon them. Let the unrepentant and the vile and the offscourings of earth enter heaven as they now are, and they would depreciate and demoralize it so that no one of us would want to enter, and those who are there would want to move out. The Bible speaks of the "withouts" as well as the "withins." Revelation xxii., 15, "Without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Through the converting, pardoning, sanctifying grace of God may we at last be found among the shut ins and not among the shut outs!

tribes. Before his death the Mahdi nominated the Khalifa Abdullah as his successor, and thus the cruel and tyrannical Arab tribe of the Bagaras, whose leader was Abdullah, became the masters of the Egyptian Soudan and ruled it with a rod of iron. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, after three years of power, and Abdullah has since been known as "the Mahdi's successor." There was intense jealousy and disappointment on the part of the Danagla and Jaalin tribes, who had been the rulers, but now became the ruled. Civil war on account of Abdullah's accession was narrowly averted, but he was too strong for his enemies in the other tribes, and they finally chose the part of discretion just when all had been made ready for battle. The new ruler then made it his business to render the other tribes harmless. He reduced the power of the two other Khalifas, and they became men of little influence. He sent many of the Jaalin and Danagla Emirs in chains hundreds of miles up the Nile, and he permitted his Baggara to plunder the other tribes without mercy, under the pretext of levying taxes. There has been only one ruler of the Soudan for the past thirteen years, and he has been the Khalifa Abdullah. He maintained his policy of cruelly repressing all the people except his own tribe, until he was frightened very badly by the news that England and Egypt were getting ready to invade the country and overthrow his power. After that news reached Omdurman he made a great show of reversing his policy. He pardoned the imprisoned Emirs and tried in many ways to win back the disaffected people. The Khalifa's empire, within which not a particle of European influence has permeated since the Mahdi captured Khartoum, extends along the Nile from Dongola on the north to the neighborhood of Lado on the south, a distance of about thirteen hundred miles. Omdurman, the capital, just across the Nile from the ruins of Khartoum, is about midway between these points. The Khalifa lost Darfur, but still his empire extends from the western limits of Kordofan to Abyssinia on the east, and embraces about 700,000 square miles. During the thirteen years he has controlled the destinies of the Egyptian Soudan it is estimated that nearly three-fifths of its inhabitants have perished through war and famine. Constant warfare has greatly diminished the male population.

KEENE TURNED THE TABLES.

Several Wall street men, Mr. James R. Keene among them, combined some time ago to get control of the stock of the tobacco trust.

Their understanding was that none of them was to sell any of the stock until it had reached its highest possible figure, and then all were to sell at the same time.

Ten days ago Keene discovered that this agreement was not being lived up to by some of his colleagues. They were beginning to sell on the quiet, it is said, as soon as the stock reached 154¾. As soon as Mr. Keene discovered this he gave orders for the sale of his own holdings and before the other members of the clique were aware of what was happening Keene had made $1,500,000.

By that time the tobacco trust's stock was down to 115¼, having declined 39¼ points.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST TO UNION WORKMEN.

Missouri Knights of Pythias Demand That the Union Label Be Placed on All the Printing They Have Done—A Strike in Porto Rico

K. of P. Want the Label.

Recently the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias of Missouri held its annual convention at Kansas City, and adopted a resolution requesting the officers to demand that all grand lodge printing bear the label, says the Typographical Journal. St. Louis Typographical union took the initiative by adopting resolutions, which were approved by Kansas City Union No. 80, and presented to the grand lodge by printer Pythians. The preamble and resolutions are so apt and appropriate that they may serve as a model for others with a similar purpose in view, and we reproduce them:

"To the Officers and Members Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of Missouri, in convention assembled at Kansas City, Mo., October 18, 1898—Greeting:

"Whereas, The noble order of which we are proud to be members owes a duty to the community as well as its members, and,

"Whereas, The order is largely composed of men who labor daily in the different vocations of the industrial field; and

"Whereas, Through the introduction of labor-saving machinery thousands of mechanics have been thrown out of employment, and this is especially true of the printers, many of whom are members of the order; and

"Whereas, We believe it our duty according to our knightly obligation to use every opportunate means to lessen human suffering and poverty; therefore, with that end in view, be it

"Resolved, That the grand keeper of records and seal be requested to in the future demand that all printing done through his office bear the label of the allied printing trades of North America, and that all local lodges be requested to use their moral influence to the same end; and be it further

"Resolved, That we pledge the moral support of the grand lodge of Missouri to every legitimate endeavor of the toilers of this commonwealth to better their condition in the industrial field.

A Fable with a Moral.

One of the toasters at the Michigan Federation of Labor convention told the following story:

A farmer leaning over his fence one day, wondering how he ever should harvest the great field of corn that lay back of him, when he saw a mule leisurely strolling up the highway and lazily cropping the grass that grew in abundance at the roadside.

"My friend," said the farmer, "get into the harness and help me get my crop into the barn, and I will give you all the corn that you can eat the days that you work."

"But how long shall I have to work each day?" quizzed the careful animal.

"Fourteen hours," said the farmer.

"Tut, tut," replied the mule. "But I can get all the grass I can eat in a day by working seven hours on this fertile roadside."

"Pshaw!" retorted the farmer, beginning to get angry at being thwarted in his purpose, "your father was glad to work for me sixteen hours of the day, and here you are complaining against two hours less than that number."

"Too true," quoth the mule, "but you must remember my father was a jackass."

Work in the Navy Yards.

Secretary Long has recently issued an order amending the regulations relative to the employment of labor in all navy yards as follows:

Article 1574, paragraph 2, clause A, reads as follows:

"For work performed by reason of emergency between the hours of 6 a. m. and 8 p. m. in excess of eight hours, the same rate of pay shall be allowed as for eight hours' work."

Clause C provides that:

"Men who have rendered service during the day, who, by reason of emergency, are required to work in excess of eight hours, shall be paid for all such extra work performed after 8 p. m. and before 6 a. m. at the same rate per hour as for day work, with 50 per cent additional."

I have issued the following regulation circular:

"Article 1574, paragraph 2, strike out clauses A and C, and for clause A substitute the following:

"(a) For work performed by reason of extraordinary emergency, in excess of eight hours per day, the ordinary rate of pay, with 50 per cent additional, shall be allowed.

Porto Rico Printers Strike.

San Juan, Cablegram.—Ten days ago the San Juan Typographical Union held a meeting and adopted a new scale of prices, which in effect was an advance of 50 per cent over the previous scale under which they were working. By the old scale they made only [illegible] to $7 per week. The publishers were notified that the new scale would take effect on December 1. The publishers were apparently astounded by the demands of their men and the printers employed by the Correspondencia and Boletin were instantly discharged, with the result that those papers have not been published since Wednesday last. The union held a meeting and while it was in progress, the police, who had been sent by Munoz Rivera, the president of the island, arrived and commanded Santiago Iglesias, secretary and treasurer of the union and its leading spirit, to leave the island instantly in pain of arrest. Such a summary method of settling a labor dispute may be the proper thing from the Spanish viewpoint, but it is likely the Americans will look at the matter in a different light.

What Is Organization?

It is the act of forming organs or instruments of action. In entering the field of labor it matters not whether by brain or hand, it is absolutely necessary for all wage-workers to band themselves together for self protection and by so doing they protect one another. All reforms that have been accomplished has been done through organizations and unity of action, consequently it behooves the mechanic and laborer of this country to wake up to the fact that he is losing sight of his own interests, by allowing himself to be hoodwinked by those who seek to deprive him of his inaliable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. The wage-workers of this or any other country can not accomplish anything individually, it must be by concerted action, therefore it is necessary for them to organize and educate, and not pass their lives in forging chains for themselves and then complain of weaving them. Signed, A Leather Worker.

Vessel Builders Hopeful.

From the Kennebec Journal. Not for very many years have Maine vessels managers in general felt so deep an interest in the prospects for business for a coming year. The close of the war has brought along, for Maine, at least, a new hope that her old-time sea prestige is coming back, in the new necessities set moving by our extensive foreign acquisitions and the general deep-water trade impetus which has been started. From all indications the biggest revival of commerce by sea that the United States ever saw is about to take place. The acquisition of oversea possessions—Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines and the new conditions of Cuba will necessitate a great enlargement of the merchant fleet of the United States. Only ships having an American register can trade between two ports of the United States. Therefore, the commerce between this country and our new possessions will require American ships. This means work for the ship yards, for the present fleet is inadequate for the work, and it is seldom that a foreign-built ship can get an American register.

Simple Gymnastics.

To remain young a woman must keep her joints limber; if neglected they become painful and stiff. Women groan with rheumatic pains when, if they exercised properly, rheumatism would be unheard of. Women sit by a fire and shiver with a cold when, if they encouraged gymnastics, the blood would circulate vigorously through the body.

The following four simple exercises will greatly help to develop and preserve physical symmetry:

1. Stand erect, with hands outstretched, on a level with the shoulders, and slowly raise yourself on your toes as far as possible. Retain this position for an instant, and then sink back on to the entire foot. Do this twenty times a day at first, and increase each day to a reasonable limit.

2. Place the hands on the hips, and, resting all the weight of the body on the right foot, slowly raise the left leg, and extend it in front of the body. Then bend at the knee, pointing the toe downward and bringing the foot up. Repeat this ten times at first. Then stand on the left foot and repeat the exercise in reverse.

3. Stand erect and lean over at the hips without bending the knees and try to touch the floor with the fingers. Day by day you will come nearer and nearer the floor. This exercise will make the body supple, and strengthen the back, and will encourage grace.

4. Extend the right arm, and placing the left on the hip, bend to right side as far as possible, and then reverse the exercise, which should be repeated ten times at first, and, like all the others, increased from day to day as much as circumstances will permit. This is an excellent general gymnastic. No woman should indulge any exercise to such an extent that even the slightest strain is possible. Fifteen minutes a day spent in exercise at home should result in muscular development, and greatly help to retain health.

Seeing Bullets as They Fly.

"As every sportsman knows," said an enthusiastic hunter, "it is easy to see a rifle bullet in the air, and those fired from the new high-power guns are very curious to look at. Stand a dozen yards away at any range with a small caliber weapon using smokeless powder, and you'll see a strange, blush-white streak the instant the bullet strikes home. The streak is apparently a couple of inches wide and several feet long, and is more like a flash of light than anything else I can think of. With the old-fashioned Remington or Springfield carbine the bullet has the appearance of a long black rod, and I don't know why there should be such a difference in the optical illusion produced by the smaller caliber. I have heard some people deny that the bullet can be seen, but they are very much in error. It all depends on getting the right viewpoint. A few feet either way will render the missile invisible, but the right spot is soon found by experiment, and after that the thing is as plain as day."

A Difficult Pass.

"Why is marriage such a serious step, I wonder?" "Because you then come to a pass where you can no longer go single file."

TO MR. M'CLEARY.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY PUNCTURES SOME FALSITIES.

A Sample of the Kind of Speeches with Which Gold Standard Advocates Surprise the Unwary—An Echo of the Late Congressional Campaign.

The pedagogue has found it profitable to mislead the people. He is no longer teaching school in Mankato, but is making money and fame on a large scale. We quote:

"Special Telegram to Minneapolis Tribune.—McCleary addressed a large and enthusiastic Republican meeting here tonight, delivering what is generally acknowledged to be one of the strongest contributions to the campaign in this state. He said in part: 'A problem well stated is half solved. "What is the silver question?" Stated in its simplest terms it is this: Shall we or shall we not permit the men who own silver bullion to carry that bullion to the mint of the United States and have it converted into coin for them at the rate of 371.25 grains of pure silver (or 412.5 grains standard silver) to the dollar, and shall the government authorize them to carry forth the coins thus made and use them according to their pleasure in the payment of debt or the transaction of business? To this question a large number of good, honest, right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "Yes, emphatically, yes, yes, quickly—the sooner the better!" Another large number of good, honest right-minded, patriotic American citizens answer, "No, utterly, absolutely, unequivocally, no!" What is the present situation? The man who owns gold may take it to the mint of the United States and have it converted for him into the form of coin, at the rate of 23.22 grains of pure gold (or 25.8 grains of standard gold) to the dollar. This service is rendered for him by the government without any charge, and the coins are handed back to him with full authority to use them according to his pleasure in the payment of debts, or the transaction of business. To the man who owns gold we say yes; to the man who owns silver, we say no. By this statement of the case it would appear that Uncle Sam does not treat these two classes of his citizens equally well, and the sense of fairness in the minds of each of us prompts us, at first glance, to condemn his course of action. But every good man and woman is slow to believe as true that which reflects upon the good name of any one whom he or she has learned to honor. Such a man or woman feels that his proper course is to reserve judgment until all the facts have been ascertained. We all respect Uncle Sam; we all believe that he would not intentionally do wrong to anyone. So we are prompted to believe that there must be something else in the matter that has not yet been stated. And there is. The man who owns the gold submits to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 258 grains of standard gold, worth $10 coined or uncoined. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify to this fact? The easiest way for you to certify to it is to put this gold up in the form of a coin and mark it $10." To this proposition Uncle Sam makes answer: "Why, certainly, my son; I am always glad to serve any one of my children when I can do so properly." The man who owns the silver desires permission to submit to Uncle Sam this proposition: "Uncle Sam, here are 412.5 grains of standard silver, worth, in the terms to which we are accustomed, 40 cents. Won't you be kind enough, Uncle Sam, to certify for me that it is worth 100 cents?" To this proposition Uncle Sam promptly makes answer: "Not if the court knows itself!" We thus see, in part at least, why Uncle Sam says "Yes" to one, and "No" to the other.'"

McCleary in all this is very adroit, and very liable to deceive the unthinking. And yet McCleary knows very well that for 5,000 years gold and silver stood on an equality, as to right of coinage, all over the world, wherever there was civilization. And he knows that twenty-four years ago all this was changed. In this country the change was made without being demanded in the platform of any political party, or without any previous discussion before the people, who are supposed to constitute the government of this republic. And this piece of rascally knavery produced the fall of the price of silver, and McCleary, instead of demanding that that gigantic wrong shall be righted, plants himself on the accomplished results of the wrong and demands that it shall be perpetual. Imagine McCleary in very cold weather campaigning in Minnesota. He has a magnificent astrachan fur-lined overcoat, worth $100. A thief steals it and leaves a tattered, shoddy garment, worth $5, in its place. McCleary demands redress. He seeks out the nearest justice of the peace, clad in the ragged robe the thief has left him. McCleary states his case. The justice is "in cahoots" with the thief. "What!" he cries, "you want me to make your tattered $5 coat worth $100! That is not what I am here for. The robbery is accomplished, the villainy enacted; it is not for me to overturn existing conditions." "But I am robbed!" shrieks McCleary. "Put me back where I stood before I was robbed. Give me back my own coat. Here is this wretched rag. Give me an order for the arrest of the thief and the return of my coat." "It can't be did," says the justice. "Your demand is equivalent to making a coat worth $100. It can't be done—not if the court knows itself." And thereupon the indignant professor sails into the justice of the peace, blacks his eyes, knocks out his front teeth and punches him in the belly with his umbrella. And thereupon he is arrested for assault and battery, with intent to kill, tried by a jury of thieves (the foreman wearing his overcoat), and sent to prison. There let us leave him, while he writes a political address to the voters of the Second district, showing that representative government is a failure, and threatening to go back to Canada.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Flood of Silver.

Regarding the flood of silver that would pour into this country should bimetallism be adopted, I think that entitled to less consideration than the proposition that "gold would instantly disappear." They belong to the same job lot of scarecrows. It will be remembered that Mr. Shurz said that there would be a tremendous contraction of the currency as a result of the adoption of bimetallism. Other equally sanguine monometallists predict, at the same time, the rest of the world would 'dump' its silver here almost immediately. Now, silver could be "dumped" here only in exchange for something else. If for wheat, cotton, wool, or manufactured goods, I do not think it would be rejected, for our people desire to sell their commodities. If for gold, then it must take its place, dollar for dollar, and if it be a fifty-cent dollar, as Senator Thurston says it would be, then for every dollar of gold "driven out" two silver dollars would take its place. Surely little contraction of the currency would take place at the rate of substituting two dollars for one. The two notions that there would be a contraction of the currency and a flood of silver at the same time are hardly compatible. No nation can coin and retain more metallic money than it has profitable use for, because unless it is needed for business purposes and finds profitable employment, it will always float away to other places where there is a greater demand for it. Gold or silver money cannot be piled away above the money level of other countries and be made to stay there. It will seek its level just the same as anything else. Though the mints of the universe might be open to the coinage of silver for our use, but few million dollars more than could find profitable employment would stay here. Not a sound political economist from Adam Smith to the latest writer can be found to dispute that proposition. They are all of the same opinion as Dr. Wayland, who said of any country, "If its trade with other places is free, the superfluous money will float away, on the tide of commerce, to some point where it is needed, just as a surplus of wheat or cotton goods or any other commodity must do." If it cannot find profitable employment here as money it will go to the east, there to be used for money purposes, or to the melting pot, to be used in the industrial arts. You cannot "heap" up gold or silver in a free country and make it stay "heaped," any more than you can "heap" up water and make it stay "heaped."

When McKinley Was All Right.

On the 12th of February, 1891, only a little over seven years ago, Mr. McKinley said:

"During all of Grover Cleveland's years at the head of the government he was dishonoring one of our precious metals, one of our own great products, discrediting silver and enhancing the price of gold. He endeavored even before his inauguration to office to stop the coinage of silver dollars and afterward and to the end of his administration persistently used his power to that end. He was determined to contract the circulating medium, and to demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and therefore dear. He would have increased the value of money, and diminished the value of everything else—money the master, everything else the servant. He was not thinking of 'the poor' then. He had left 'their side.' He was not standing forth in their defense. Cheap coats, cheap labor and dear money. The sponsor and promoter of these professing to stand guard over the welfare of the poor and lowly! Was there ever more inconsistency or reckless assumption?"

All these things sound very strange when compared with Mr. McKinley's utterances since he accepted the nomination for president on a gold standard platform, and they seem to justify sincere people in having but little faith in the man.

True Democratic Doctrine.

President Van Buren said in his message to congress in extra session in 1837, called because of the then financial crisis:

"It is not designed by the constitution that the government should assume the management of domestic or foreign exchange. It is indeed authorized to regulate by law the commerce between the states, and to provide a general standard of value or medium of exchange in gold and silver, but it is not its province to aid individuals in the transfer of their funds. As justly might it be called upon for transportation of their merchandise. These are operations of trade; they ought to be conducted by those who are interested in them, in the same manner that the incidental difficulties are encountered by other classes of citizens."

This was the Democratic doctrine of that period. It was just after the Democratic party had won its great and crowning victory in obtaining mastery of the money power. But the scene has changed. Now "money is king," and controls not only the action of the government, but the destinies of the people. It is no longer our servant, but our relentless master.

M'KINLEY IN ATLANTA.

His Visit Made Memorable by a Notable Utterance.

President McKinley made memorable the first day of the Atlanta peace jubilee by a notable utterance in his speech before the joint session of the Georgia legislature Wednesday afternoon. His reception by the general assembly was warm and hearty in the extreme, and his speech was punctured with frequent outbursts of cheering. It is admitted on all sides that the address marked an epoch in history. During the address President McKinley said:

"Every soldier's grave made during the unfortunate civil war is a tribute to the American valor. And while, when those graves were made, we differed widely about the future of the government, those differences were long ago settled by the arbitrament of arms—and the time has now come in the evolution of sentiment and feeling under the providence of God, when in the spirit of fraternity we should share with one in the care of the graves of the confederate soldiers."

A wild cheer went up from every throat in the typical southern audience, a cheer that echoed and re-echoed through the chamber until it was taken up by the crowds outside. Old men who fought for the south rose from their seats and waved their hats. Of all the many conciliatory speeches which have been made since Grant said "Let there be peace," nothing has more deeply stirred a southern audience than the simple words of President McKinley.

Star Hunting.

Recently I have devoted my time to star hunting and satisfying a yearning desire to become a discoverer. I felt that I must discover something, whether there was anything new to be discovered or not. In the pioneer school houses, some time during the days of Job, I was taught to admire the genius and freshly mown hay odor of the late (about 76 years late) lamented Mr. Wm. Herschel as an astronomer and finder of nests of newly laid stars. If you believe the last sentence you will believe anything; I write, and I always make it a point to refrain from telling the truth as much as possible. Consequently I want you to believe me.

Anyway, it is quite an honor to possess sufficient ability and suavity to go out in the gloaming and call up new stars to you at so much per call. It is also laborious. When you have found a good, fragrant star, you will obtain more or less light on the subject; according to the size of the star.

The first difficulty with which I had to contend was having no telescope. So I got a water pipe and glued two magic-lantern lenses in it, and began looking about for an elevation upon which to sit. I did not dare to get on the housetop, because everybody would see me, and might go to discovering infant stars themselves. Then I would not get on the smoke house, because being a country editor we did not have one. I was in a dilemma, whatever that is.

Finally I decided that my seat of operations should be the barn. It was very tall, and had a mysterious air about it, somewhat like that about a fresh college graduate before he gets accustomed to wearing his diploma. The mysterious air around the barn was caused by decaying vegetation, while that about the graduate is caused from sheer ignorance.

But I mounted the rotten roof with my improvised telescope thrown over my left scapula and dangling in the vicinity of the lumber vertebrae.

Looking cautiously around to see if any one was near, but seeing no one, I began searching the star vaults with the water pipe. I gazed at Mercury and Venus. I was glad to see the former, as it is rather skittish, and Copernicus grieved because he was never able to meet the planet. I had seen Venus without any trouble, while Captain Cook, the navigator, gave up the ghost near Hawaii, trying to see the untamed Venus.

I scooted my star-finder all around the circle of perpetual apparition, and the circle of occultation. But I didn't find anything. I was getting discouraged. I decided the Lick discoverers had just about licked up all the important stars, and while I was thinking so, my hired boy jabbed a pitchfork up through the roof to scare me. My telescope fell, the roof broke through, and I fell to the earth, making no discovery worthy of note except that then my right ascension and declination were about as near zero as anything ever get to be in this vale of tears.

Any one wishing to buy a telescope cheap may write me. I am no longer an astronomer.

JOHN EARL GARRISON.

A Tragic Death.

At Athens, Ga., Wednesday, Lieut. James H. Hoskinson, adjutant of the First Battalion of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, met a tragic death on Clayton street in front of the postoffice. He was thrown violently from his horse, his head striking the ground with great force. A large artery in the brain was ruptured, compression followed by paralysis, and in two hours he was dead.

May Yet Rescue the Maine.

The navy department has not yet abandoned the hope of rescuing the Maine from Havana harbor, and bringing the wreck back to this country for rehabilitation, nor does it seem likely, from the interest taken by responsible wrecking experts, that the Cristobal Colon will permitted to pound to pieces on the shore west of Santiago. The board of construction has under consideration a formal proposition for the salvage of both vessels and their delivery at New York or such other ports in the United States as the government might select.

Mrs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. Mrs. FLORENCE A. WOLFE, 518 Mulberry St., Lancaster, Ohio, writes:

[illegible] years of [illegible]. Noah was [illegible] old at the time of this [illegible] of the flood. He had seen 900 springtimes, 900 summers, 900 autumns, 900 winters. We are told how old his wife was at this time, of earth and sky. The Bible tells the age of a great many men, but only one age of a woman's age. At one time it gives Abraham's age as 130 years and Jacob's age as 130 years, and Enoch's age as 365 years, and so on up and down the Bible it gives the age of men, but does not give the age of women. Why? Because I suppose a woman's age is none of our business. But all the men and women that lived in that fearful craft had lived long enough to remember a great many of the mercies and kindnesses of God, and they could not blot out, and I think they had no disposition to blot out the memory of those brief nesses, though now they were [illegible]. Neither should I the shut in of [illegible] get the blessings of the [illegible] been blind for ten years. Thanks to [illegible] the time when you can see as clearly as any of us can see and behold the pageant of all the radiant landscapes, and in comparison which you ever looked upon kindle your rapturous gratitude. I do not see Raphael's "Madonna di san Sisto" in the picture gallery of Dresden, nor Rubens' "Descent From the Cross" at Antwerp, nor Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment" on the ceiling of the Vatican nor St. Sophia at Constantinople, nor the Parthenon on the Acropolis, nor the Taj Mahal of India, but shall I not thank God that I have seen them? Is it possible that such midnight darkness shall ever blast my vision that I cannot call them up again?

Again, notice that during that forty days of storm which rocked that ship on that universal ocean of Noah's time the door which shut the captain of the ship in side the craft kept him from many outside perils. How those wrathful seas would like to have got their wet hands on Noah and pulled him out and sunk him! And do all of you of the great army of the shut in realize that, though you have special temptations where you are now, how much of the outside style of temptation you escape? Do you, the merchant incarcerated in the sick room, realize that every hour of the day you spend looking out of the window, or gazing at the particular figure on the wall, or listening to the clock's ticks men are being wrecked by the allurements and uncertainties of business life? How many forgeries are committed, how many trust funds are swamped, how many public moneys are being misappropriated, how many bankruptcies suffered! ... there is a limit to the ... ancient marin... the forty days of the ... and 150 ... the passengers could go ... must have seemed to ... in the big boat like an eternity. "Rain, rain, rain!" said the wife of Noah. "Will it never stop?" For forty mornings they looked out and saw not one patch of blue sky. Floating around amid the peaks of mountains Shem and Ham and Japheth had to hush the fears of their wives lest they should dash against the projecting rocks. But after awhile it cleared off. Sunshine, glorious sunshine! The ascending mists were folded up into clouds, which instead of darkening the sky only ornamented it. As they looked out of the windows these worn passengers clasped their hands and rejoiced that the storm was over, and I think if God could stop such a storm as that He could stop any storm in your life-time experience. If He can control a vulture in the sky, He can stop a summer hat that flies out at your window. At the right time He will put the rainbow on the cloud and the leaves of your misfortunes will dry up. I preach the doctrine of limitation, relief and disenthrallment. At just the right time the pain will cease, the bondage will drop, the imprisoned will be liberated, the fires will go out, the body and mind and soul will be free. Patience!

Notice also that on the cessation of the deluge the shut ins came out, and they built their houses and cultured their gardens and started a new world on the ruins of the old world that had been drowned out. Though Noah lived 350 years after that worldwide accident and no doubt his fellow passengers survived centuries I warrant they never got over talking about that voyage. Now I have seen Dore's pictures and many other pictures of the entrance into the ark, two and two, of the human family, and the animal creation into that ship which sailed between two worlds—antediluvian world and the postdiluvian world—but I never saw a picture of their coming out, yet their embarkation was not more important than their disembarkation. Many a crew has entered a ship that never landed. Witness the steamer Portland, a few days ago, with 100 souls on board, going down with all its crew and passengers. Witness the line of sunken ships, reaching like a submarine cable of anguish across the ocean depths from America to Europe. If any ship might expect complete wreckage, the one Noah commanded might have expected it. But not those who embarked disembarked. Over the plank reaching down the side of the ark to the Armenian cliffs on which they had been stranded the procession descended. No other wharf felt so solid or afforded such attractiveness as that height of Ararat when the eight passenger put their feet on it. And no sooner had the last one, the invalided wife of Japheth, been helped down the plank upon the rock than the other apartments of the ship were opened, and such a dash of bird music never filled the air as when the entire orchestra of robin redbreast, and nightingales, and chaffinch, and mocking bird, and house swallow took wing into the bright sky, while the cattle began to low and the sheep to bleat and the horses to neigh for the pasture, which from the awful submergence and now began to grow green and aromatic. I tell you plainly nothing interests me more in that tragedy from the first to the last act than the "exit" and the "exeunt," than the fact that the "shut-ins" became the "get outs." And I now cheer with this story all the inmates of the sickrooms and hospitals, and those prisons where men and women are unjustly enduring, and all the thousands who are ... in the North and South and East and West by floods, by deluges of misfortune and disaster. The ark of your trouble, if it does not land on some earthly height of vindication and rescue, will land on the heights celestial.

"By a strange providence, for which I shall be forever grateful, circumstances with which I think you are all familiar, I have admission through the newspaper press week by week to tens of thousands of God's dear children who cannot enter a church on the Sabbath and hear their excellent pastors because of the age of the sufferers, or their illness, or the lameness of foot, or their incapacity to stay in one position an hour and a half, or their poverties, or their troubles of some sort will not let them go out of doors, and to them as much as to those who hear me I preach this sermon, as I preach many of my sermons, the invisible audience always vaster than the visible, some of them tossed on wilder seas than those that tossed the eight members of Noah's family, and instead of forty days of storm and five months of being shut in, as they were, it has been with those invalids five years of "shut in," or ten years of "shut in," or twenty years of "shut in." Oh, comforting God! Help me to comfort them! Give me two hands full of salve for their wounds. When we were 300 miles out at sea, a hurricane struck us, and the lifeboats were dashed from the davits and all the lights in the cabin were put out by the rolling of the ship and the water which through the broken skylights had poured in.

"And as I now find many in hurricanes of trouble, though I cannot quiet the storm, I can strike a match to light up the darkness, and I strike a match. 'Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth.' I strike another match. 'Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.' I strike another match. 'We have a High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and He was in all points tempted like as we are.' Are you old? One breath of heaven will make you everlastingly young again. Have you aches and pains? They insure Christ's presence and sympathy through the darkest December nights, which are the longest nights of the year. Are you bereft? Here is a resurrected Christ whose voice is full of resurrectionary power.

But do not think that heaven is made up of any indiscriminate population. Some of my friends are so generous in their theology that they would let everybody in without reference to condition or character. Do not think that libertines or blasphemers and rejecters of God and His gospel have "letters of credit" that will draw anything from the bank of heaven. Pirate crafts will not be permitted to go up that harbor. If there are those who as to heaven are to be "shut ins," there are those who will belong to the "shut outs." Heaven has twelve gates, and while those twelve gates imply wide open entrance for those who are properly prepared to enter them they imply that there are at least twelve possibilities that many will be shut out, because a gate is of no use unless it can sometimes be closed. Heaven is not an unwashed mob. Show your tickets or you will not get in—tickets that you may get without money and without price tickets with a cross and a crown upon them. Let the unrepentant and the vile and the offscourings of earth enter heaven as they now are, and they would depreciate and demoralize it so that no one of us would want to enter, and those who are there would want to move out. The Bible speaks of the "withouts" as well as the "withins." Revelation xxii., 15, "Without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Through the converting, pardoning, sanctifying grace of God may we at last be found among the shut ins and not among the shut outs!

Is it possible that such midnight darkness shall ever blast my vision that I cannot call them up again? Again, notice that during that forty days of storm which rocked that ship on that universal ocean of Noah's time the door which shut the captain of the ship in kept the craft kept him from many outside perils. How those wrathful seas would like to have got their wet hands on Noah and pulled him out and sunk him! And do all of you of the great army of the shut in realize that, though you have special temptations where you are now, how much of the outside style of temptation you escape? Do you, the merchant incarcerated in the sickroom, realize that every hour of the day you spend looking out of the window, or gazing at the particular figure on the wall, or listening to the clock's ticks men are being wrecked by the allurements and uncertainties of business life? THE KHALIFA.

The Life and Characteristics of the Fugitive Dervish Chief.

Abdullah et Taishi Khalifa, whose power has been broken by the British forces under General Sir Herbert Kitchener, was the most powerful and successful of the three Khalifas of the three leading Arab tribes, that in 1882 helped the Mahdi to overthrow the government of Egypt in the eastern Soudan and establish the Mahdist despotism in its place. Each of these Khalifas commanded a distinct section of the Mahdi's army, and Abdullah's force had most to do with the annihilation of General Hicks and his army. Abdullah was the favorite of his master. The Mahdi believed that if he died Abdullah was the only man who could maintain the strange empire he had raised and keep the upper hand of the rapacious Soudanese tribes. Before his death the Mahdi nominated the Khalifa Abdullah as his successor, and thus the cruel and tyrannical Arab tribe of the Bagaras, whose leader was Abdullah, became the masters of the Egyptian Soudan and ruled it with a rod of iron. The Mahdi died on June 22, 1885, after three years of power, and Abdullah has since been known as "the Mahdi's successor." There was intense jealousy and disappointment on the part of the Danagla and Jaalin tribes, who had been the rulers, but now became the ruled. Civil war on account of Abdullah's accession was narrowly averted, but he was too strong for his enemies in the other tribes, and they finally chose the part of discretion just when all had been made ready for battle. The new ruler then made it his business to render the other tribes harmless. He reduced the power of the two other Khalifas, and they became men of little influence. He sent many of the Jaalin and Danagla Emirs in chains hundreds of miles up the Nile, and he permitted his Baggara to plunder the other tribes without mercy, under the pretext of levying taxes. There has been only one ruler of the Soudan for the past thirteen years, and he has been the Khalifa Abdullah. He maintained his policy of cruelly repressing all the people except his own tribe, until he was frightened very badly by the news that England and Egypt were getting ready to invade the country and overthrow his power. After that news reached Omdurman he made a great show of reversing his policy. He pardoned the imprisoned Emirs and tried in many ways to win back the disaffected people. The Khalifa's empire, within which not a particle of European influence has permeated since the Mahdi captured Khartoum, extends along the Nile from Dongola on the north to the neighborhood of Lado on the south, a distance of about thirteen hundred miles. Omdurman, the capital, just across the Nile from the ruins of Khartoum, is about midway between these points. The Khalifa lost Darfur, but still his empire extends from the western limits of Kordofan to Abyssinia on the east, and embraces about 700,000 square miles. During the thirteen years he has controlled the destinies of the Egyptian Soudan it is estimated that nearly three-fifths of its inhabitants have perished through war and famine. Constant warfare has greatly diminished the male population.

KEENE TURNED THE TABLES.

Several Wall street men, Mr. James R. Keene among them, combined some time ago to get control of the stock of the tobacco trust.

Their understanding was that none of them was to sell any of the stock until it had reached its highest possible figure, and then all were to sell at the same time.

Ten days ago Keene discovered that this agreement was not being lived up to by some of his colleagues. They were beginning to sell on the quiet, it is said, as soon as the stock reached 154¾. As soon as Mr. Keene discovered this he gave orders for the sale of his own holdings and before the other members of the clique were aware of what was happening Keene had made $1,500,000.

By that time the tobacco trust's stock was down to 115½, having declined 39¼ points.

Buy the Rat.

A friend of the late Secretary Bayard writes: I was much amused at Mr. Bayard's recital of an incident some years before in which he and William R. Travers were actors. He said the rats had become such a nuisance in his house at Wilmington and were so aggressive that he went to New York in search of a terrier, and applied to Travers for information as to where he could find an establishment provided with such animals. Travers took him to a rat pit, whose proprietor was a celebrated sporting character, and Bayard stated the purpose of his visit, and that he must see the dog tried before he would purchase him. The man brought out a beautiful little terrier, and after putting him in the pit, pitched a fierce, gray-whiskered rat into the arena also. The adversaries confronted each other for an instant like two gladiators in ancient Rome, when suddenly the dog took to flight, pursued by the rat. "Buy the rat, Tom," shouted Travers; "buy the rat!"

NOT ALL HONEY BY FAR

Special to The Banner.

Santiago, Dec. 15, 1898.

Ed tor BANNER: Thinking you would like to hear from a soldier in Cuba, I will write a few words, thinking it will interest your readers.

We have been in Cuba now four months, during which time we have had our ups and downs. We have fought a greater fight than the boys fought at San Juan, not with the Spamards, but with malaria fever. When we first came here the rain and mud was so deep and bad that we could hardly make our way through it, but we went through without complaining. We had our mail if ever any regiment did. We had to carry water a mile.

At first where we camped the grass and underbrush was as high as a man's head, and only one shade tree in the camp, and it is at the guard house, so no one likes to stay under it.

We have had plenty of grub, but what we eat which consists of bread, bacon, beef, hard tack, tomatoes, beans, coffee, sugar, salmon, corned beef, potatoes, etc. This will keep a man alive if he eats enough of it.

We have been treated very nice by the Red Cross Society. They have sent a great deal of good things for our sick boys, and a great many things to the other boys, but they did not get them as they were looked by the officers and the boys never saw them. They sent us a great many things, such as mosquito bars, soft shoes, socks, underwear, champagne and the like, but they were gobbled up by the officers and we never saw them at all.

Some of the officers treat their men right, while some of them are brutal to the men. Most of them have better jobs than they ever had before, that is why they are so mean.

Some o the doctors we have had did not have any mercy on the men. I know men that stayed in the hospital for four or five days without seeing a doctor, and when he did come around he would not do anything for you. But of course it is different now; we have new doctors and some lady Red Cross nurses in the hospital.

Some of the worst officers have resigned, or gone home sick, so we are moving along alright again.

There has been a big change in everything since we landed here. The streets have been cleaned, a sanitary department established, a civil government has been started, a civil department again, business has revived, the printers have begun to prepare for ... everything has come to life around. The people seem satisfied with American rule. All ... have quieted down, and ... have less guard duty to do. I don't ... to come home.

Ed. BANNER: Thinking you would like to hear from a soldier boy, I will write a few words, as it will interest your readers.

We have been in Cuba now [illegible] months, during which time we have had our ups and downs. We have fought a greater fight than the one we fought at San Juan, not with Spaniards, but with malarial fever. When we first came here, the water and mud was so deep and bad we could hardly make your way through it, but we went through it without complaining. We had our share, as it ever any regiment did. We had to carry water a mile.

At first where we camped the grass and underbrush was as high as a man's head, and only one shade tree in the camp, and it is at the hospital house, so no one likes to stay under it.

We have had plenty of army grub to eat which consists of bread, baked hard tack, tomatoes, beans, coffee, sugar, salmon, corned beef, potatoes, etc. This will keep a man alive if he eats enough of it.

We have been treated very nicely by the Red Cross Society. They have sent a great deal of good things for our sick boys, and a great many things to the other boys, but they did not get them as they were looted by the officers and the boys never saw them at all. Some of the officers treat their men right, while some of them are down on the men. Most of them get better jobs than they ever had before, that is why they are so mean.

All the worst officers have been sent home sick, so we are getting along right again.

There has been a big change in everything since we landed here. Streets have been cleaned, a health department established, a good government is now in force, a department against prostitution is enforced, every thing is moving like clockwork. The printers have started to print a paper next week, and big days are coming around. The people seem pleased with American rule. All are settled down to the soil, and are busy planting every day to do away with the scarcity of food that we found when we first came here.

We can get the public to use our make is the best.

Other articles are brought prominently before the public both are to be tried and the public very quickly pass judgment on and use only the better one.

Take the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. They have been using it for years and have found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty just forth with extravagant claims, but are certain to return to the one remedy that they have found to be reliable, and for coughs, colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mr. J. C. Veazey, of Randolph county was in town Tuesday.

W. B. Dennis and wife returned to Plumersville.

ONE STEP AT A TIME.

In dealing with their own territorial problems the people of the United States will do well if they adopt the motto, "One step at a time." A part, at least, of the discussion that certain well-meaning gentlemen had endeavored to arouse while the treaty of peace was still under negotiation concerned problems that may arise for future generations of Americans to solve, but that have not yet made their appearance in the practical and concrete form. The ratification of the treaty must at least precede some other questions. That the treaty will be ratified, no person of safe judgement and good opportunities for observation has ever for a moment doubted. The argument that the United States is not empowered by virtue of its Constitution to exercise the powers of sovereignty outside of the United States is to be set down merely as an intellectual diversion. It lies essentially in the nature of the modern state to grow and expand as it has reasonable opportunity. To suppose for a moment that a great nation like ours, of more than seventy million people, is in some way estopped by certain forms of words—agreed upon more than a hundred years ago by a relatively small number of people who are all of them now dead—from obeying those same laws of growth and development that inhere in the very nature of our race and of our political organism, is to ascribe to the written Constitution a character that none of its framers ever thought of giving to it. Many of the mistakes that the French have made in trying to establish colonial possessions have grown out of their fondness for regularizing everything and their desire to make all their acquisitions fit into some logical scheme of colonial organization and administrarion. We shall be strongly tempted to fall into the same error. Already the floodgates have burst, and the country is being inundated with a perfect torrent of metaphysics touching the nature of political sovereignty and the transcendental significance of annexation.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January.

Saturday night the court house was packed to its fullest capacity, the occasion being the Christmas Tree given by the united churches. The tree was gaily decorated, but unfortunately Santa Claus had been delayed somewhere, and no presents were visible. The non-arrival of Santa Claus was partially compensated for by a visit from his "Better Half" (Miss Willie Robinson) and "Jack Frost" (Master Will Mullins) and a beautiful "Fairy" (Miss Emmett Matthews) added enjoyment to the proceedings. A very pleasant evening was passed.

I read of your medicine and concluded to try it, and am glad that I did. I felt better after the first dose. I continued to take Ramon's Liver Pills & Tonic Pellets until I was entirely cured.—D. W. The World's Improved Balance.

The swift success of our aggressive policy has left the whole world in a far more stable position than we found it at the opening of the year. The annexation of Hawaii has given that interesting group of islands a settled status, and our assumption of responsibility for the Phillipines will speedily bring about a vastly improved situation in that populous archipelago. We ought to have no serious difficulto in assisting the Cubans to restore order throughout the island and to maintain fairly efficient institutions under republican forms. The wisest men in Spain are venturing to express somewhat boldly the relief that they feel in the wholesome chastening that has come to them in the painful year 1898. This view has been taken by business men especially, and prevailed in the conference of Spanish chambers of commerce that has met at Saragossa. Some of the most intelligent Spanish writers are taking the ground that under modern conditions the responsibility of sovereignty over distant colonies is far more costly than profitable, and that except for the point of pride involved Spain is greatly better off without Cuba and the Philippines than with them. Of course the two situations are totally different. Cuba was entitled to one sort of administration and the Philippines to another. The Spaniards should have learned long ago to give Cuba to the Cubans in as complete a sense as the English have given Canada to the Canadians, while they should also have learned long ago to administer the Philippines strictly for the benefit of the population, following to a considerable extent the model of England in India. The time had come when it was too late to reform the abuses of Spain's bad colonial government, and there was no remedy except to abandon the colonial business altogether. This heroic remedy is one that the nations which need it never have the grace to administer to themselves. It has to be forced upon them from without. None the less, they may in good time learn to appreciate the service that has been done to them and forget the first smart. Spain may quite possibly have a bad year or two at home, with which to end the nineteenth century; but it is reasonable to predict that the Spaniards will open the twentieth with very excellent prospects. For the first time in years they have an undisturbed opportunity to give attention to home affairs.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January.

"History of the Spanish-American War," by Henry Watterson.

The above is the title of a superbly illustrated, richly bound volume issued by The Werner Company, Akron, Ohio. It is the only authenic history of the Spanish-American War that has so far come to our notice. All the others have, in the main, been merely revamped histories of the Cuban War, with some illustrations and a few chapters about the Spanish American War. Of course, anything written by Henry Watterson would be readable. He, above all other men in America, is fitted by training and experience to write a history of this war, which has brought world-wide renown and glory to our arms. Every line of the book breathes an enthusiastic spirit of patriotism that is exhilarating and inspiring.

The work contains over 650 pages, a large number of full page half-tones, together with many rich double-page illustrations in ten colors. It is sold by subscription and will undoubtedly prove a money-maker to every intelligent salesman.

The government of the state of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, has directed that the pupils in all the official schools shall be taught to write and perform all manual tasks as well with one hand as with the other.

A Swiss anthropologist, on his return from Patagonia, brought home with him a complete collection of Patagonian skulls, and when the custom house proposed to tax them on the basis of animals' bones imported as manure, he protested that this was an insult to humanity. To his surprise his objection was listened to, and he received a receipt for the duty charged upon a higher scale, with the skulls entered as "returned emigrants' worn effects."

The young couple who have just finished a journey around the world on bicycles, found that nineteenth century instruments of civilization and sixteenth century adventures in barbarism may go together. It must have been exasperating to wheel at top speed over abominable roads to escape missile-throwing Chinese. It is easy to dart away from crowds who throw stones, but bad roads are trying to the temper. It is impressive that the best road they found in all the world was the 600-mile road to Calcutta, built in the forgotten ages by the Delhi mogul. This is a valuable contribution to knowledge. The mogul and his dusky Macadams little dreamed what strange vehicles would spin over the great road centuries after.

The act requiring the navy department to build four more monitors was passed before the lessons of the war had shown the defects of this class, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Since the craft must be built it is well that they be the best of their kind. Thus it is gratifying that the plans are to be changed, and the new monitors made much larger and better than the old. They are valuable only for harbor defense, but they can go to sea at a pinch, and can make a long voyage if they do not have to encounter rough weather ships on the way. However, the country is not likely to build any more, as we are not likely to have any more scares about attacks on the coast. The Spanish war has shown that the place to defend our coasts is out at sea, wherever an enemy's fleet can be found.

The development of mines of ore and sulphur in Sicily has always been the cause of many strikes, on account of the low prices paid to the laborers. The government of Rome obtained recently from the Chambers a law guaranteeing financial support to sick or wounded and lame miners. The proprietors of the mines announced that they would decrease the wages of the workmen in a sufficient proportion to meet the extra expenses imposed upon them by the operation of the new law taxing property for the support of invalid laborers. The miners in the Province of Girgenti to the number of about a thousand have struck work, and, at last reports, the strike was still in progress; fortunately this time it was not accompanied by the violence and bloodshed which too often marked the labor troubles of Sicily.

The history of the last few years shows a succession of hostilities against England from all sides and in all quarters, none the less aggressive, none the less dangerous, than if they had been conducted in actual warfare, says the Sydney (New South Wales) Bulletin. Look at the intrigues of France in Egypt, in Siam, in Niagara, in Madagascar, or the Nile; look at the encroachments of Russia in Persia Afghanistan, the Pamirs; look at the characteristically prudent and cautious, but none the less real hostility of Germany in the Transvaal, in Zanzibar, in Samoa; look today at the unanimous exultation of the continent at the blows which are being struck at the prestige and commercial interests of England in the East. Everything seems to show that England must either make ignoble submission to a European aggressiveness which seeks to bleed her by fair means or foul, or take the risk of financial ruin, of possible effacement as a first-class power, in a desperate contest with the monster armies of her neighbors, to whom she appears as the one great obstacle to their designs.

MISSIONARY CRUISE OF A DANISH COUNTESS.

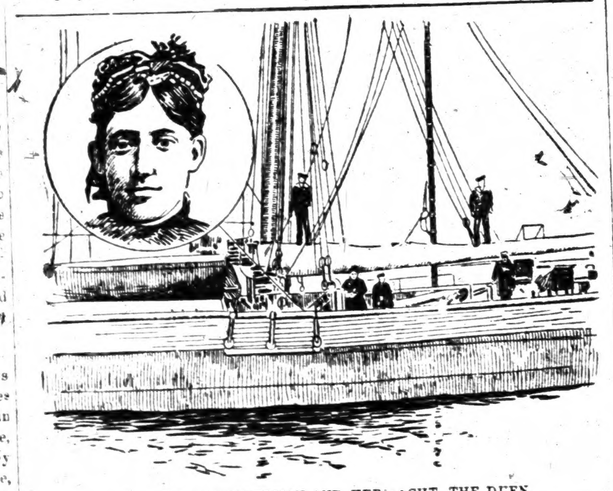
From Europe there have come to the United States at various times strange, weird persons, some bent on errands of philanthropy and others from motives of curiosity. Sailing around the Great Lakes in her own yacht is a woman who can take her place on the list. She is the Countess Schimmelman, from Denmark. She is not precisely a reformer, though she may see many things that she would like to have changed, but wherever she is she certainly does good. Over in Denmark, she says, she heard nothing but bad of America, but since arriving here she finds the truth of the American conviction that this is a pretty good country to live in after all.

At home she was the Queen's favorite, and she passed the first thirty years of her life exclusively at court. Then she got restless and wanted to see the wide, wide world, and try to alleviate some of the misery which she vaguely understood existed. She sold her property and bought a ship, and in this cruised about the Baltic in the summer and in Southern seas in the winter. She established coffee houses and did good in many little ways. Of recent years she stayed in the cities in the winter, and turned her ship for the time into a home for the poor boys who wanted to follow the sea.

Three years ago she bought the yacht Duen, or Dove, of Prince Waldemar, and by this time, her work becoming well known among the members of royalty, they contributed largely in aid of her enterprise. Her brothers, however, caused her arrest once and put her in an asylum. Upon her release she resumed her labors. Now she has come over to America in her yacht, and, having passed up the St. Lawrence, and through the Welland Canal, she is making a tour of the Upper Lakes with her three adopted sons, whom she brought over with her. She intends to visit her countrymen in the Northwest, so that when she returns home she will know whether to advise the thousands there who want to change their homes to come to our promised land.

The Countess speaks English with ease. She is of medium height, has brown hair, blue eyes and a clear, clean-cut profile. She presents the appearance of a German matron who has several winters to see before she turns forty, writes a reporter who visited her on her queer craft at Chicago. A very slight cap did not hide the waves of soft brown hair that fell about her forehead. When she did not talk in her slight foreign accent she smiled as she listened to a guest who was more than likely trying to answer some question the Countess had asked about the suffering in Chicago among the poor.

"I like Americans," she said; "you have no caste and the poorest laboring man is a gentleman. I have great hopes for success in Chicago. The sailors I have spoken with and the men on the docks tell me the condition of the men in Chicago is not as bad as I have been led to believe." The Countess picked up Walter Wyckoff's book, "The Workers," from her table. "This is all the source of my information as to the poor of Chicago at present," she said, "but is it true you have 200,000 men unemployed here every winter?"



COUNTESS SCHIMMELMAN AND HER YACHT, THE DUEN.

The guest to whom the question was put doubted the statement and the Countess said she had been skeptical as to its truth from what she had seen during the few hours she had been in Chicago. "Workingmen in England and the United States are so much better provided for than those on the continent," said the Countess, as she shook her head.

Her work in evangelical and practical—teaching the precepts of religion and at the same time looking after temporal wants as best she can.

One of her objects in visiting the great lakes is to inspect lands in Canada on Lake Superior, where she is anxious to establish a colony for the poor.

The Countess Adeline Schimmelman is a member of a Danish noble family. Until taking up missionary work among sailors she was a favorite at the courts of Copenhagen and Berlin. When she decided to help the unfortunate many of the wealthy and titled families of Europe came to her assistance, for she is not wealthy. In her yacht she has visited nearly all of the large seaports of the world in the last three years. During the summer she secures chairs and holds services on the deck of her boat. In winter she is obliged to go to a hall.

SMALLEST CHURCH IN ENGLAND.

Where is Its Counterpart in America?—Seats Only Thirty Persons.

Where is the smallest church in America? It would be interesting to know. The smallest church in England has been discovered at Lullington, in Sussex. The village itself is on so small a scale that the miniature church, some sixteen feet square, is quite large enough to supply its needs. Built in mediæval times upon a slight eminence within a short distance of Alfriston, famous for its sixteenth century hostelry, the church is reached by a path which passes through charming scenery. The present structure stands upon the site of the chancel of the building destroyed during the Cromwellian struggles, and at the same time the church records disappeared, so that even the name of the patron saint is not now known. Some idea of the diminutive appearance of the building, which accommodates only about thirty worshipers, can be gathered from a glance at our illustration. Inside the small sanctuary the large pulpit completely dwarfs the scanty sitting accommodation. The belfry is more for ornament than use, and the birds are allowed to retain undisputed possession.

ONE OF THE STRANGEST

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Late Hints For the Wardrobes . Those Who Like to Be Correctly Gowned.

NEW YORK CITY (Special).—The cloth gowns show every week some new feature, so that it seems to be necessary to have three or four in one wardrobe in order to be correctly gowned, states Harper's Bazar. The skirts of all the gowns are made long, and as close-fitting as possible over the hips, and many of them have jackets of long cutaway coats. There is no doubt that the long coats and cloaks are much the fashion this year, and are being imported all the time. A smart walking gown is made with a velvet skirt, and over this is worn a long redingote of beige cloth that entirely covers the skirt. In front there is a flounce, of the same material as the redingote, that starts at the waist in a narrow width, and it gradually broadens out until it reaches part way up the coat. The upper part of the coat is finished with a deep collar that forms a wavy cape, and there is a high stock-collar and vest of velvet, and inside the stock-collar is a high flaring collar also of the velvet. On the front of this coat are large fancy buttons. The sleeves are small, but have a little fulness at the top. They are very long, and are finished around the wrist with a ruffled cuff. To wear with this coat is a hat of felt, something in a sailor shape, trimmed with rosettes of velvet and stiff wings. The same gown in two shades of green is effective also.

LADIES' CUTAWAY COAT.

SKIRT AND WAIST FOR A YOUNG LADY.

A Popular Mode.

The model shown in the large engraving is desirable for either silk or woolen fabrics, charming combinations being effected by making flounce and broad collar of contrasting material. This is also a good design for remodelling, as the waist can be lengthened over a new lining, the collar of new material giving a stylish finish. A flounce to match collar will give added length as well as style to the skirt, and the decoration may be as simple or as elaborate as desired.

To make this waist for a miss of fourteen years will require two yards of material forty-four inches wide. To make the skirt will require three and one-half yards of material forty-four inches wide.

Muffs to Match the Hat.

Fancy muffs of velvet to match the hat are displayed very temptingly among the extravagant novelties. They are flat in effect and made with a double ruffle at each end, but large in size. A stylish sable muff in a similar style has a wide circular frill at each end, is lined with white satin and is finished on the edges with tiny short tails set on two or three inches apart all around.

The Boy's.

The small boy of fashion is arrayed in blouse and knickerbockers for ordinary wear. The trousers are slightly full and loose, depending a little from the band which is worn above the knee. Boys like this style much better than the fitted knee breeches heretofore worn.

Worn on the Hats.

One novel and beautiful fibre which is used extensively on hats shows a coarse, lace-like mesh of heavy silk thread, woven with chenille cord. A variation of this is of coarse-meshed lace, interwoven with double zephyr wool.

Ribbon Frills For the Gown.

The liking for narrow ribbon frills and ruches increases—if that is possible. Three, four and even five ribbons of assorted colors are frequently combined to complete the trimming of a gown.

The Fashionable Jewelry.

Neck chains, lockets and crosses are fashionable. The slender gold chains strung with jewels are of course preferred. The most ultra chain ties about the throat and pear shape pearls finish the ends.

Out-of-Door Toilet For a Tot.

A stylish out-of-door toilet for a tiny miss is here represented in rich red serge coating, trimmed with Persian lamb fur and tiny frills of black satin ribbon. Flare bonnet, of red velvet, with red taffeta bows and tie strings, black soft quills and border of Persian lamb. The Empire style needs no introduction. It is graceful and becoming to little folks, the cape collar with its circular ripple ruffle being also a revival of a former style and at this time a very popular feature.

The deep box-pleated skirt portions of the coat are joined at the top to front and back short body portions, which meet in shoulder and underarm seams. The cape collar is included in the seam with the turn-over collar.

CHILD'S COAT.

The Cold-Weather Cape.

Capes for cold-weather wear are either in shawlpoint or seamless circular shape, and nearly every model is of three-quarter length.

THE CHICAGO RIVER.

An Open Sewer Navigable for Vessels for Nine Sixteen Miles Lenght.

The smallest and busiest river in the world. Where do you think that is? Theodore Dreiser locates it in Chicago and has this to say about it: The peculiarity of this little stream is that it is the smaller river doing the largest business in the world, or in other words, the busiest river in the world. In the next place, it has the greatest depth for the narrowest width of any known river. In the third place, it has the largest number of bridges spanning it of any river of equal or greater length, barring the Missouri—a total of fifty two bridges. All these are draw or swinging bridges and carry a traffic of their own exceeding almost as important as that which passes below. Next, this river has little or no current to speak of, and flows upward instead of down. It is the only known river whose current has been turned round and made to flow the other way. Lastly, it is a sort of an orphan river, for while most rivers and harbors are owned and cared for by the United States government, the Secretary of War whose province it is to care for these things will have nothing to do with it, and Chicago repairs it only sufficient for its now needs, but lays no claim to the right of way.

In this strange predicament the little stream flows wretchedly backward, loaded with the largest and most valuable collection of vessels that ever crowded an inland sea. It is one tumultuous highway, far more exciting than Broadway and somewhat less charming than the Hudson. The city uses it as an emptying place for its sewers and the Street Cleaning Department as a dumping ground for its waste, and yet it is the most valuable factor in the life of Chicago and the one more than all else that has made the city what it is to-day. No other river in the wide world possesses or pretends to the appearance of this peculiar stream. In its busiest hours it is a sight for gods and men. A mere creek, it struggles with the burden of an ocean. The great deep-draught propellers tear the water into splattering fragments. Their huge stacks often hide the entire stream from view with great clouds of smoke. The ingoing and outgoing vessels quarrel for the right of way with all the vehemence inherent in gongs and whistles. Tug pilots handle their craft with a skill that would put to shame the manners of the heavy teamsters in a crowded New York lane.

The longest branch of the river today is more than ten miles in length, and the total length of all branches is sixteen. At its mouth it is no more than 200 feet wide, and the fact that it is the same width a mile or two upstream is due to the fact that it was made so by excavation and dredging. At one time (1850) it was 200 feet wide at Lake street, 175 feet wide at Randolph, a block further on, 165 feet at Washington, 175 feet at Madison and these but single blocks apart and so on until it became unnavigable by boats drawing ten feet of water. In that year, however, it was dredged and made a uniform width of 200 feet in the south branch, and it is kept that width by the walls of the immense buildings which have now encroached to the very water's edge, and which in most cases form the only banks visible.

It is interesting to note the peculiarities of this poor little stream. Nowhere about its shores within the great city limits is there a foot of unoccupied ground where a tree may find root. No branch or blade of green graces its shores. No bountiful springs rise from point to point and feed it. Its tributaries are dark, stone arched sewers which empty their subterranean blackness into it in continuous stream. Its banks are for the most part sheer walls of red brick. Where an open space occurs railroad tracks skirt the water's edge so closely as to stir a fear for the safety of the cars which line them. Lumber yards make up other portions, and groups of belching smokestacks, sooty black, rise in forest-like numbers at regular intervals. No single space but has some wharf or freight shed, factory or warehouse, filling up the last available inch, stock yards, lumber yards, railroad yards, stone yards, coal yards—these interspersed with docks, elevators, manufactories and breweries make its banks interesting if not beautiful.

Night-Blooming Cactus.

The only true night-blooming cactus, especially so-called, is the cereus grandiflorus. This last long specific name implies its beauty and grandeur. It is one of the most delightfully scented of all the cactus family, blooming, as noted, at night. A large plant, covered with blossoms is a sight once seen that is never to be forgotten. The round stems have numerous small angles on them and are covered with delicate spines. These stems are usually about as thick as one's finger. Of late years another member of the cactus family has usurped the name of night-blooming. This is phyllocactus latifrons. It is one of the broad, flat-leaved kinds, and is so readily propagated that it has now become common. It has a long tube to the flower, which curves downward like a siphon. It does bloom at night, and in one sense is night-blooming; but it bears no comparison in any respect with the original night-blooming cactus.—Meehan's Monthly.

A London medical paper has been solemnly warning its readers not to wear old boots. It declares that after a time the leather harbors microbes which prey on the feet of the wearer.

PARADE THROUGH HAVANA

By the American Troops Will Take Place on January 1

IMPOSING DISPLAY WILL BE MADE.

The City in a State of Unrest—A Spanish Guerilla Shot—Crisis in Spain Feared That Weyler Seeks the Premiership

A parade of the United States troops through the city of Havana will take place on January 1, the date fixed for the turning over of the control of the island to the United States. The American evacuation commission will direct Major General Lee to make disposition of the eight regiments there. Altogether it is expected that an imposing display will be made.

Military men are divided as to the propriety of the troops parading. Officials in favor of the project aver that a good moral effect will be produced upon the city.

HAVANA STIRRED UP.

The City in a State of Unrest—General Castellanos' Course.

HAVANA.—Francisco Quintoro, a Spanish guerilla, while walking Genios street, was fired at from the roof of a house and seriously injured.

The city is in a state of unrest.

Three more wards of Havana were evacuated Monday.

La Lucha says it can see no disloyalty to Spain on the part of the Spanish residents in Cuba if they choose to hoist American and Cuban flags, because Spain renounced the island without consulting the Spaniards.

Captain-General Castellanos, after formally delivering over the island to the American authorities after January 1, will leave for Matanzas, where he will remain a fortnight, going thence to Cienfuegos.

THE CRISIS IN SPAIN.

Fears That Weyler Will Seek the Premiership.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Standard says:

"Senor Sagasta's illness has brought to a standstill the political crisis and the negotiations for the reorganization of the liberal party. Many liberals are opposed to Gen. Weyler's becoming minister of war, because they fear he will aspire to succeed Sagasta as leader of the party.

"El Liberal publishes an interview with Weyler, in the course of which he is represented as declining to give any information regarding the crisis, but as insisting upon the necessity for a strong government. Such a government could not, he said, be drawn from a party by Senor Silvella. Gen Weyler hinted that the country would run great risks unless power were placed in the hands of the Sagasta Weyler coalition government.

Two Men Killed By a Youth.

Thomas and William Brantley, brothers, were shot and killed Saturday night at Enandale, Miss., by Eugene Dennis, an 18-year-old boy. The brothers, accompanied by their father, attempted to enter the store of Dennis, at is said, intending violence. Dennis' mother seized the gun of the elder Brantley, and young Dennis opened fire on the Brantleys, with the above result.

Race Riot in Texas.

A crowd of several thousand whites and blacks, gathered by the burning of a saloon building in Dallas, Tex., became involved in a race riot Sunday evening, and before the battle was ended two persons had been killed, five seriously wounded and a dozen others slightly injured. In addition a man fell dead on the sidewalk during the fire and a woman was fatally injured in jumping from a window of the burning building.

Nine Men Injured in a Wreck.

A wreck occurred at Lexington, Ky., Sunday. A Louisville & Nashville road engine and a Chesapeake engine, pulling an extra heavy freight train, collided, and as a result nine men were badly injured, two probably fatally, and both engines demolished.

Burned to Death.

A special from Hillsboro, Texas, says: Mrs. Isbell, her daughter, Mrs Isa Malone, and Mrs Malone's infant were burned to death in their home near here. The women could be seen in the house, but it was impossible to rescue them. The fire started by the use of kerosene to kindle a fire, it is believed. Only a few charred bones were left.

The board of revenue of Dallas county opened bids for the $65,000 bridge bonds. None of them were satisfactory and new offers were called for. It is understood that the board will not contract for more than 4 per cent interest.

Steamer Rodriquez Discharged.

In the United States district court at Charleston, S. C., Friday, Judge Crawley handed down a decision discharging the Olinde Rodriques, the French steamship made a prize of war by the cruiser New Orleans on July 7. The ship belonged to the Transatlantic line and is a most valuable boat.

At one time it seemed as though international complications might grow out of her retention, and the case in the United States courts over her has been long and bitter.

BUSINESS LARGEST EVER KNOWN.

Tremendous Increase in Exports, While Bank Clearings Were Larger Than 1892.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

It is a year beyond parallel, and goes to its close with the biggest volume of business ever seen. Enormous transactions at the stock exchange makes some difference, and heavy railroad earnings, but when all the transportation and speculative interests are eliminated there is still a much larger business than in any other month of any year.

Last year the exports were in volume greater than in any previous month in the history of the country, but this year the three weeks' report shows an increase of 25 per cent against nine per cent in imports, which would indicate much more than $70,000,000 excess of exports this month.

The payments through clearing clearing houses have been for the week 26.5 per cent greater than last year and 12.4 per cent greater than in 1892, and for the month 17.8 per cent greater than in 1892. Until now no greater volume of business has ever been done in the history of this country than in the closing month of this year.

CUBANS RETURN THANKS.

General Palma of the Junta Issues a Proclamation.

General T. Estrada Palma, of the Cuban junta, issued a proclamation on behalf of the Cuban revolutionary party, in which he says:

"Now that Cuba is redeemed from the yoke of Spain and the last vestige of the tyranical rule of that country has been wiped from this continent, I wish to extend to our compatriots, and, in fact, all who in the time of strife and need furthered the cause of Cuba libre, on behalf of the Cuban revolutionary party, my sincere thanks. Cuba is now assured of independence and prosperity, and the need for contributions to the party which were so generously made by our friends from the incipiency of the revolution, February 24, 1895, is ended, and the work removed to another field. The island needs vast improvement, and it is to this end that all patriotic Cubans should bend their efforts."

HOBSON CALLED DOWN.

That Kissing Mania Resulted in Being "Advised" As to His Conduct.

Bitter disappointment is felt in Washington over the action of Lieutenant Hobson. Naval circles are intensely wrought up over his action, and the deepest resentment is shown toward him for his conduct in the west.

It is stated among navy officials that Secretary Long telegraphed Lieutenant Hobson, urging him to desist from his mode of receiving his admirers at receptions tendered him. Secretary Long has been urged to recall the hero of the Merrimac and administer a rebuke, but he declined to do this. Instead, however, he is said to have adopted the milder form of advising him as to his mode of conduct, urging him to desist, as he was imperiling his reputation and cheapening his glorious act of courage.

Disorderly Soldiers.

J. P. Billups, traveling passenger agent of the Southern railway, who has been in Columbia, Tenn., attending the mustering out of the First and Second Mississippi Regiments, says the soldiers behaved outrageously after having been let out of the service. PEACE TREATY DELIVERED

To President McKinley Late Saturday Afternoon.

TREATY WILL NOT BE MADE PUBLIC YET.

Interesting Ceremony Accompanied the Presentation of the Christmas Offering. The Document Will be Presented to Senate After Reassembling.

President McKinley received from the American peace commission late Saturday afternoon the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain. In presenting this momentous document, Judge Day, as chairman of the commission, said it represented the earnest efforts of the American representatives at Paris, and that it was submitted with the hope that it would redound to the credit ...glory of the American nation.

Accepting the treaty from the hands of Judge Day, the president responded with heartfelt thanks and congratulations to the commission as a body and to the members individually. He spoke of all that had been accomplished and of the happy method by which difficult questions had been adjusted.

The formal ceremony of delivering the treaty to the president occurred in the blue room, and lasted half an hour.

It was stated after the delivery of the treaty to the president that it would not be made public at present, the usual courtesy to the senate requiring that it should be submitted to that body before being made public. In the meantime, it will remain in the custody of the state department for safe-keeping, although copies of it will be in the hands of the president for such consideration as may be needed.

HOBSON SAILS FOR MANILA.

Immense Crowds on the Streets Cheer the Young Alabamian.

Lieut. Richmond Pearson Hobson sailed from San Francisco for the Philippines on the steamer Gaelic Saturday. He will report to Admiral Dewey on his arrival and will undertake the work of raising and preparing for service, under the United States flag, the vessels of Admiral Montejo, which suffered so severely under the attack of Admiral Dewey's squadron. An immense crowd was at the dock to witness his departure. Cheers upon cheers were given for him as he passed along the streets, and he was compelled at several points to say a few words to the people.

TROOPS PATROLING HAVANA.

Rioting at Monserrat Results in One Killed and Several Wounded.

The United States troops began Sunday evening a regular patrol of the city of Havana in order to guard against possible disorders. The Bando, issued on Friday by Capt.-Gen. Castellanos, prohibiting crowds from assembling in the streets, has been generally observed. Saturday night there was some disturbance, said to have been caused by liquor in Montserrat place. A shot was fired about midnight from a roof at a group of people below, and many shots were returned at figures vaguely seen on the roof. An unidentified man was killed and three were wounded in other affrays.

BROKE THE RECORD.

Tremendous Receipts of Cotton at Houston, Tex.

The cotton receipts at Houston, Tex., for the first months of the present season have been 2,000,000 bales, a record never equaled by an interior town or port of the United States, and which will be celebrated with a banquet, to which all the prominent civic officials and cotton men will be invited. The 2,000,000-bale mark has never been reached in an entire season before by an interior town.

It was the result of whiskey and an old feud. The two Beenes not wounded have fled the country.

Gruesome Find.

News comes from Bibb county of the discovery of the dead body of an unknown man in Alligator creek, near the plantation of Nix Smith. The corpse was in such a state of decomposition that it was impossible to tell whether it was a white man or a negro. The clothing and suspenders were filled with small holes, evidently made by shot, which leads to the conclusion that the man was shot to death.

Assistant Postmaster at Decatur Murdered

Ed Sparkman, the assistant postmaster at Decatur, was stabbed late Monday afternoon by a tramp. He died from the effects of the wound s short time afterward. Decision Against the University.

The report of the commission to examine the merits of the university's claims against the state of more than $2,000,000 has decided against the university in every case. The commission consisted of Judge J. J. Mitchell, of Florence; Judge Lapsley, of Anniston, and Dr. E. A. Smith, of the university. Dr. Smith submits a minority report finding for the university in each of the three cases submitted. The matter caused a deal of discussion in the general assembly two years ago, when that body came near deciding to recognize the entire debt claimed. As a compromise measure the commission was appointed as stated.

WILL SEIZE WAKE ISLAND.

The Bennington Is Ordered to Take Possession at Once.

FINAL EXCHANGE OF FLAGS IN CUBA

Will Take Place in Havana January 1. Cubans Will Accept Any Policy McKinley Inaugurates—Asleep Five Months.

WASHINGTON.—The government has determined to hoist the flag over an island far out in the Pacific ocean, and orders were sent out late Friday afternoon to the commander of the Bennington, Captain Taussig, which is now at Honolulu, to proceed at once to take possession in the name of the United States government, of Wake Island, lying in latitude 19 north, 166 east. It is distant about 2,000 miles from the Hawaiian Islands and 1,300 from Guam. It is almost in a direct line between these possessions of the United States and is admirably adapted for use as a station for a Pacific cable to connect the Philippines with Hawaii and the United States. It is about three miles in length and encloses a lagoon of salt water. It is scarcely capable in itself of sustaining life, but it is expected that a cable station can be maintained by erecting a plant for the supply of water.

A cable station in this locality is deemed to be absolutely necessary to the maintenance of a cable, and for that reason the American Peace Commissioners at Paris endeavored to secure one of the Caroline Islands, but without success. Wake Island is said to be by rights already American territory, for in 1851 Admiral Wilkes surveyed the place and asserted title. It is not inhabited so far as known at the present time, though in the past some guano gatherers have temporarily lived on the island.

PROGRAMME AGREED UPON.

Final Exchange of Flags in Cuba Will Take Place January 1.

At the joint meeting of the United States and Spanish military commissioners in Havana Friday, the programme was finally agreed upon for the exchange of flags on January 1 at noon.

It was agreed at the meeting that the Spanish troops remaining in Cuba after January 1 should be considered in the light of foreign troops in a friendly country and to be accorded the privileges usually granted under international law.

The Spanish sick in the hospitals will remain under the safeguard of the American flag, the Spanish authorities providing medicines, attendance and food, repatriating them on recovery.

CUBAN GOVERNMENT.

Will Accept Unreservedly Any Policy McKinley Inaugurates.

The Havana correspondent of the London Times says: President McKinley will have an unfettered hand here. A majority of the Cubans are prepared to accept unreservedly any regime treating them justly and insuring the tranquility of the island. The Spanish residents are also contented to accept the inevitable, believing that their interests will be protected and themselves fairly treated. Therefore, the way is clear to establish any system of government the Washington authorities may see fit to impose.

ASLEEP FIVE MONTHS.

A Young Woman Who Had Been in a Trance Five Months Awakes.

Tony Broshiet, a young woman 22 years of age, who has been in a trance for the past five months, at her home in Milwaukee, Wis., was brought to her normal condition through the influence of hypnotism. Miss Brosheit retired, as usual, in her apartments on the 23d of July last. On the following morning when it was time to awaken, she kept on sleeping, and though at times she would open her eyes, she seemed unconscious of her surroundings. At last an application of "suggestive therapeutics," a form of hypnotism, was tried and the patient was successfully brought out of her trance. She had been kept alive with liquid food.

The regular work of the second term of the University of Alabama will begin January 3, next. Students may, however, enter any day during the session.

HAWAII'S ATHLETES.

Could Give Us Points in Running and Swimming.

The Hawaiian native is especially fond of athletics, and shows to advantage in a tug of war, foot racing and broad jumping. As a long distance runner his speed and endurance would excite the envy of more than one professional. "In olden times, runners were the only means of sending important messages from one chief or tribe to another, and the Hawaiian forefathers seem to have handed down all the essentials which go to make up a good race.

If a Hawaiian does well as an athlete on terra firma, he certainly excels in the water. For diving and swimming he seems to have a natural aptitude. In the early days of the missionary the "men of the cloth" tell in their records how it was no uncommon thing for a native to swim from one island to another. Diving they also delight in. A native often throws himself head first from a cliff fifty or sixty feet high into a shallow pool scarcely ten or twelve feet deep. As his body strikes the water it arches like a bow, with his head almost to his heels, and the next instant shoots to the surface with a broad grin on his face. A Kanaka, in fact, is well night amphibious. In infancy he learns to swim almost unconsciously. There is probably not a native boy or girl ten years of age who could not give us "cards and spades" in the water and they beat us, without half trying. Of times a Kanaka spends the entire day along the shore, now gliding through the water, suddenly disappearing and bobbing up thirty or forty yards from where you last saw him; next clambering over the coral reefs and ledges in search of opihis (Hawaiian oysters), and again stretched at full length on the warm sand, face upturned to the sky.

A New Gas Engine.

A new carbon dioxide engine, recently brought to notice by William F. Roberts, of Philadelphia, is based on the principle and its application of making the gas simply a vehicle for carrying heat energy to the engines, by means of which it is transformed into energy in such a form that it can readily be utilized as power. That is, the engine is actuated by the carbon dioxides used expansively upon the piston in a manner similar to that employed in steam engines, but with the piston area reduced proportionately to the amount of power as compared with steam.

For use in the engine the carbon dioxide gas is stored in a liquid form in a cylinder prepared for the purpose, it being led from this in small tubes through a heating apparatus, where it is brought to a temperature of about 150 to 200 degrees Fahrenheit, at which temperature it is introduced into the engine. By means of a specially adapted system of valves, the gas at this high temperature and pressure is passed into the cylinders of the engine and then withdrawn from the latter at a temperature below thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit.

The gas—a waste product in many lines of manufacturing—is relatively cheap in its liquid form, and for such an engine it is claimed that, being compact, powerful, and economical of operation, it can be adopted with success in many places where steam and electricity are now employed.

Oxford and the House of Commons

Of the 670 members of the House of Commons, 142, or just one over one-fifth, are described as having been educated at Oxford. An examination of the numbers which the different colleges contribute to this total reveals some interesting particulars. Christ Church easily heads the list with fifty. This number includes three members of the present cabinet—Sir M. Hicks-Beach, Mr. Chaplin, and Mr. Long—and also the two members for the university—Sir John Mowbray and Mr. T. E. Talbot. Balliol makes a good second, its share being twenty-eight, including such prominent politicians as Sir M. W. Ridley and Mr. Asquith. In proportion to the members, University shows up exceedingly well with fourteen, and this includes, curiously enough, Lord Cranborne and Lord Hugh Cecil, and also Mr. Herbert Gladstone. New College, with thirteen, Exeter with nine, and Corpus with six, stand next in order, several colleges number two or three each, while Lincoln and Trinity have only one representative apiece in the House, but in the cases of these colleges the lack of quantity is fully atoned for by the distinguished character of their alumni, for they are Mr. John Morley and Prof. Bryce.—Westminister Gazette.

Buttermilk as a Medicine.

Long experience has demonstrated buttermilk to be an agent of superior digestibility. It is indeed, a true milk peptone; that is, milk already partially digested, the coagulation of the coagulable portion being loose and flaky, and not of that firm, indigestible nature which is the result of the action of the gastric juice upon sweet cow's milk. It is a decided laxative, a fact which must be borne in mind in the treatment of typhoid fever, and which may be turned to advantage in the treatment of habitual constipation. It is a diuretic, and may be used to an advantage in some kidney troubles. It resembles koumiss in its nature, and, with the exception of that article, it is the most grateful, refreshing and digestible of the products of milk. It is invaluable in the treatment of diabetis, either exclusively or alternating with skim milk. In some cases of gastric ulcer and cancer of the stomach, it is the only food that can be retained.—Elgin.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR to all is the hearty greeting of THE BANNER, and may 1899 prove to be the brightest and most prosperous year of the century.

WILL our correspondents kindly make it a rule to send in their communications not later than Tuesday of each week. We are obliged to hold over some received only this morning.

THE election of a Mayor and Councilmen for the town of Clanton does not appear to be causing much excitement. No matter who is elected we hope that every exertion will be made and every possible cent utilized this next year in the improvement of our streets. Other matters can wait.

THE Christmas holidays have been marred by an unusual number of accidents with pistols and fire-crackers. There may be some little excuse for accidents caused by fire-crackers, but those by guns should be thoroughly investigated, and if malice or undue carelessness is shown the perpetrators should be brought to justice.

THE eclipse of the moon on Tuesday night was a splendid natural spectacle with which to conclude the Christmas festivities. As the shades of night began to fall and the moon arose the spectators noticed that one edge of the orb of night was in shadow which gradually extended over the whole surface, completely obscuring it. It was a beautiful clear night, and the watchers everywhere had one of the best opportunities to witness a total eclipse.

IT will be remembered that about six weeks ago George R. Mason, a prominent Populist of Dallas county, during a political dispute with Percy Clark, editor of the Selma Telegram, was shot and wounded by the latter. Mason died on Monday morning, and Clark, who was spending Christmas in Montgomery, as soon as he heard the news, returned to Selma and surrendered to the authorities. He is to have a preliminary trial before the Mayor of Selma to-day. The whole occurrence is greatly deplored by the friends of both parties.

THE coming constitutional convention is already causing much speculation among the people as to its probable outcome. Discussions are going on as to what the convention will attempt to do, and who will be possible candidates. THE BANNER has at present no information regarding any candidates from Chilton or from this senatorial district, and begs the people to earnestly consider the best men to be found for this purpose.

THE cotton receipts at Clanton are already greater than any previous entire season. But Houston, Texas, has broken the record, having this season already received two million bales, and the secretary of the cotton exchange there estimates that six hundred thousand bales will yet be received during the remainder of the season. The two million bale mark has never been reached in an entire season before by an interior town. In 1894-95, the record crop year of the United States, Houston's receipts were the largest in the country, but were two hundred thousand short of two million. There is no doubt but that this year's crop is the largest ever made.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

THE fourth section of the Constitutional Convention bill, provides that the delegates shall be citizens of the State and qualified electors, and "that the delegates from the State at large shall be apportioned so that one of the same shall be a resident citizen of each the senatorial districts." This section also provides that any person holding an office of profit under the State or Federal governments can be elected a delegate to the convention.

Section 5 follows the present election law in making the Judge of Probate, the Clerk of the Circuit Caurt, and the Sheriff the returning board to canvass the returns, and they are to meet at the court house of each county on the Saturday following the election. The board will have first to find out how many votes were cast in favor of holding the convention, and how many against it. They will then ascertain how many votes were cast for each delegate, and immediately are to certify such votes to the Secretary of State.

Sections 6 and 7 provides that the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Attorney-General shall meet on the third Tuesday in July, 1899, and canvass the returns from the State. If it is found that a majority of votes have been cast for the convention they are then to ascertain what persons were elected from the State at large, and who were elected delegates from each county. The Secretary of State will issue certificates to the persons so elected, and the Governor is to give public notice in three daily papers in three different portions of the State that the convention is to be held, and call upon the delegates-elect to assemble in the House of Representatives in Montgomery on Tuesday after the first Monday in August, 1899, at meridian, and proceed to organize "by the election of a president from among themselves, and such other officers (who need not be delegates) as the convention may deem necessary for the proper performance of the duty assigned to the convention. Said convention shall continue in session until it shall by careful revision and amendment of the present constitution frame and adopt a revised constitution for this State."

The eighth section makes the convention "the exclusive judge of the election, qualification and returns of its own members." And "Any person desiring to contest the election of a person certified as being elected a delegate to said convention may do so in the same manner as an election of a member of the Lower House of the General Assembly is contested, and by giving the same bond, and testimony shall be taken in the same method."

Section 9 provides that the Convention shall be supplied with stationery, reports and documents, etc., the same as the General Assembly. The officers of the convention are to receive the same compensation as corresponding officers of the House of Representatives are by law allowed, and delegates will be allowed the same per diem and mileage as members of the General Assembly. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, or one of the Associate Justices, will call the convention to order and preside until temporary officers are elected. The most important clause in this section is that which provides that "per diem compensation shall not be allowed or paid to any member of the convention for a longer time than fifty days."

Section 10 provides for the convention filing with the Secretary of State, within one week of its adjournment, "a clean and correct copy of the constitution which said convention may adopt." The convention is to cause a correct journal of its proceedings to be kept.

The eighteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in session recently at Kansas City, emphatically re-asserted its fidelity to Free Silver, declared in favor of the 8 hour work day, rejected socialism and re-elected President Gompers by an almost unanimous vote. Organizers will be at once put to work to strengthen the order in the south and west.

The work of combining the Pottery companies of the United States under the name of the American Pottery Company with a capitalization of $20,000,000, has been completed; and the Trusts are not all dead yet.

The Democratic leaders of Iowa recently held a conference in Des Moines for the purpose of discussing the issues of the next campaign. They declared in favor of Bimetallism but the question of ratio was not given prominence. They announced oppositio to Trusts, Territorial expansion, increase in the army as contemplated by the Hull bill, retirement of the Greenbacks and fusion with any other political party.

Ex Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, announces that he will make the race for Mayor of Chicago in the spring against Carter Harrison, jr. on an Independent ticket, and the "Chicago and municipal ownership" platform. Notwithstanding the fact that he has strong supporters many of the ex governor's friends think he is making a mistake to antagonize Mayor Harrison after the great victory he has just won over street railway franchise thieves

Senator J. K. Jones, of Arkansas Chairman of the Democratic national committee, is quoted as saying that Wm. J. Bryan of Nebraska, would in all probability be the Democratic nominee for president in 1900 with Free Silver and opposition to Trusts as the dominant issues.

There has been much talk lately about the negotiation of a Russian loan in the United States and the bankers of the Windy City, on the lake, are of the opinion that this country has money to "burn" and that no trouble will be encountered by Russia in securing all the money desired here.

Tally one for the United States Senate. By a vote of 30 to 8, that body has refused to consider the Proctor Cuban-Porto Rican junketing resolution providing for a committee of five to go to Cuba and Porto Rico and investigate the social, political, military and financial conditions of the natives. Many Republicans, to their credit, be it said, joined with the Democrats in voting down the resolution.

Ex-comptroller of the currency, A. B. Hepburn of New York, vice-president of the City National Bank where the Standard Oil millions are deposited, is shedding crocodile tears over the fate of the rich man whom he fears will soon have to go to work. This is what he says: "The return from wealth is growing gradually smaller, while the return from labor in this country is growing larger. The man of wealth must be prepared to adjust himself to rapidly changing conditions. Unless he will bring his own ability and energy to reinforce his money he must change his mode of living and adopt economies which have not been necessary in bygone years.

Senator Marion Butler, chairman o the Populist national committee has offered an amendment to the pension law, providing for the payment of pensions to all ex-confederate soldiers. Senator Butler's intentions may be the best, but his amendment is not meeting with general favor, even among the men whom it is intended to benefit.

Will wonders never cease? The National Board of Trade committee on postal affairs has reported a resolution favoring the establishment of Postal Savings Banks by the government. When such bodies favor a move of this kind it is clearly evident that the sentiment in behalf of such things must be growing.

Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky, the gallant Silver Democrat who was defeated two years ago for the U. S. Senate by a gold-bug will be a candidate again next year for the same position with better prospects of success. A. R.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. It is becoming more evident each day that the Democratic program in 1900 will be anti monopoly, anti-expansion and Bimetallism. Col. Bryan has already sounded the keynote of the next campaign in the following recent statement: "The sentiment against the trusts is a growing sentiment, because more and more people are feeling the injustice done by these combinations of capital, and because the subject is becoming better understood among people generally. To believe that the trusts can permanently exist in the United States is to believe that wrong committed indirectly and upon a large scale is less objectionable than wrong committed directly.

Ex Secretary of State, John Sherman, is doing considerable talking since being kicked out of McKinley's cabinet. In a recent interview he says, "negotiations were in progress to purchase Cuba when the war spirit developed. Now what have we got for all our expense? Some islands in the Philippines for instance, which are worth about $200,000 per annum in commerce, increased indebtedness of $200,000,000 and a lot of islands inhabited mainly by man-eaters. And the most distressing feature of the affair is that we are now about to be called upon to pay $20,000,000 for territory that we could have taken without spending a dollar." It must not be forgotten that John is a Republican.

The sooner a cough or cold is cured without harm to the sufferer the better. Lingering colds are dangerous, Hacking cough is distressing. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures it. Why suffer when such a cough cure is within reach? It is pleasant to the taste. J. M. Stanfield.

Delicate Children

They do not complain of anything in particular. They eat enough, but keep thin and pale. They appear fairly well, but have no strength. You cannot say they are really sick, and so you call them delicate.

What can be done for them? Our answer is the same that the best physicians have been giving for a quarter of a century. Give them of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It has most remarkable nourishing power. It gives color to the blood. It brings strength to the muscles. It adds power to the nerves. It means robust health and vigor. Even delicate infants rapidly gain in flesh if given a small amount three or four times each day.

Scott's Emulsion

La Grippe,

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

The Alabama Fertilizer

Is said, by over 12,000 farmers in this State, to be the best all around fertilizer for cotton and corn.

It is the oldest brand now sold in Alabama, and is just the same as it always has been. Every one of the 48 premiums given during a series of years through the COMMERCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION for the greatest yield of cotton and corn on a specified area of land, was awarded to farmers who used exclusively the ALABAMA FERTILIZER. The only objection ever raised to the ALABAMA FERTILIZER was that it costs too much.

The present price is no more than that of standard fertilizers. When requested, the ALABAMA FERTILIZER will be put up, without extra cost, in bags treated by the MUMMIA VEGETABLE FIBRE PRESERVING PROCESS, thereby insuring the perfect preservation of the bags for an indefinite time, and saving the contents from loss by waste in transit and handling. These preserved bags when emptied and thoroughly washed will be found as good and strong as new, and equally useful for other purposes. Every person, farmer, merchant or dealer vitally interested in the economical production of good crops should advocate the use of ALABAMA FERTILIZER.

The Rain Upon the Roof.

(An old favorite.)

Long ago a poet dreaming,
Weaving fancy's warp and woof,
Penned a tender, soothing poem
On the "Rain upon the Roof."

Once I read it, and its beauty
Filled my heart with memories sweet;
Days of childhood fluttered round me,
Violets sprang beneath my feet.

And my gentle, loving mother
Spoke again in accents mild,
Curbing every wayward passion
Of her happy, thoughtless child.

Then I heard the swallows twittering
Underneath the cabin eaves,
And the laughing shout of Willie
Up among the maple leaves.

Then I blessed the poet's dreaming,
Blessed his fancy's warp and woof,
And I wept o'er memories treasured,
As the rain fell on the roof.

Years ago I lost the poem,
But its sweetness lingered still,
As the freshness of the valley
Marks where flowed the springtime rill.

Lost to reach, but not to feeling;
For the raindrop never falls
O'er my head with pattering music,
But it peoples memory's halls.

With the old familiar faces
Loved and treasured long ago,
Treasured now as in life's springtime—
For no change my heart can know.

And I live again my childhood
In the home far, far away;
Roam the woodland, orchard, wildwood,
With my playmates still at play;

Then my gray hairs press the pillow,
Holding all the world aloof,
Dreaming sweetly as I listen
To the rain upon the roof.

Every pattering drop that falleth
Seemeth like an angel's tread,
Bringing messages of mercy
To the weary heart and head.

Pleasant thoughts of years departed,
Pleasant soothings for to-day,
Earnest longings for to-morrow,
Hoping for the far away;

For I know each drop that falleth
Comes to bless the thirsty earth,
Making seed to bud and blossom,
Springing all things into birth.

As the radiant bow that scattereth
All our faithlessness with proof
Of a seedtime and a harvest,
So the rain upon the roof.

—Mrs. F. B. Gage.

Oct. 3 was celebrated as Eight-hour day in Sydney. The principal feature of the celebration was the procession of trade societies through the streets, headed by the eight-hour banner, and attended by their own banners and half a dozen bands. The following societies took part in the procession:

Seamen, Progressive Carpenters, Coachmakers, Amalgamated Engineers, Typographical, Bookbinders, Lithographic, Letterpress Machinists, Coopers, Pressers, Glass Workers, Boilermakers, United Laborers, Butchers, Bricklayers, Tinsmiths, Amalgamated Carpenters, Gas Stokers, Australasian Engineers, Furniture Trades, Painters, Plasterers, Shipwrights, Bakers, Plumbers, Stonemasons, Ironmolders.

Punctually at 9 o'clock the head marshal, Mr. G. Moody, gave the order to march, and the cavalcade, headed by a detachment of mounted troopers, moved from the Trades Hall into George, Park, College, Oxford, and Bourke streets, and thence to the Agricultural Ground. All along the route crowds lined the roadway on both sides.

About 15,000 people attended the Agricultural Ground, Moore Park, to witness the sports and military tournament, which began at 10 o'clock, and concluded about 6. The military contests were the feature of the day, some excellent horsemanship being shown. Other sports were well contested, and the whole combined to make a capital day's outing for those who invested the "nimble bob."

The chairman, in proposing "The Day We Celebrate," referred to the progress of the eight-hour movement, and he expressed regret that restrictive legislation in regard to the hours of labor was not more advanced in this colony. Reference was made to the rejection of the bill to legalize the Art Union, which had hitherto been a prominent feature in connection with the demonstration. The bill could have been opposed only through ignorance, because the committee only desired to have the same privileges which were granted to artists in connection with the holding of art unions.—The Worker, Sidney, Australia.

Immigration for 1898.

The number of immigrants who have come to the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, was [illegible],299, while the number for the preceding year was 230,832; thus it is observed that notwithstanding the war immigration has not decreased to any appreciable extent.

Of this number 44,473 were illiterate, 23 per cent of those above the age of fifteen years not being able to read or write. More than half of these immigrants came from Austria-Hungary, Italy, Poland and Russia, while not quite a third came from Great Britain, France, Germany and Scandinavia.

It is evident from the immigration reports for the past few years that that class of immigration usually known as [illegible]ed desirable is becoming few[illegible]mber each year, while the [illegible] undesirable immigration is increasing at an alarming rate. This is accounted for by the known fact that a desire to better one's condition is the sole cause of immigration. So long as industrial conditions [illegible]nited States were far superior to [illegible]reat Britain, France and [illegible]ost every [illegible]king people of those countries immigrated to the United States in large numbers, but when the wage reductions and lack of employment of the present decade became known in those countries it was a debatable question as to which of the countries afforded a native of Europe the most desirable home.

Japan's Watch Industry.

Notwithstanding the cheap labor in Japan and strenuous efforts made to manufacture watches by the Japanese, that country continues to import great numbers of watches and clocks from Switzerland and the United States. In 1897 $816,000 of Swiss watches and $109,610 of American watches were imported, while for the first six months of 1898 Switzerland supplied Japan with watches to the value of $564,065, and the United States sent watches amounting in value to $82,845.

It is stated that the American watches are held in high repute by the Japanese, but the Swiss watches being much the cheapest the latter are most popular with the masses. A showy case counts for more than an accurate timepiece with most people in that country. Concerning the conditions of the watch industry and the price of labor, a leading paper of Tokyo says: "A member of the Osaka Watch company says that the wages paid to the workers in that factory are certainly much lower than those paid in European or American factories; yet, despite this fact, the business of watchmaking is not a paying one in Japan. Lack of skill among the mechanics is one of the reasons given for this state of affairs."

Self-Lighting Gas Burners.

The Matchless Gas Lighting syndicate of London now have on exhibition a self-lighting gas burner, which is said to perform perfectly the duties expected of it. It is described as follows:

"As in previous devices of the same kind, the catalytic properties of spongy platinum are employed to effect the actual ignition, the novelty in the apparatus on view consisting in an automatic bye-pass valve. On turning on the tap to the burner, the gas, in the first instance, flows through this bye-pass to a small jet, through which it escapes and impinges on a particle of spongy platinum. The latter quickly ignites the escaping jet, and the flame thus produced heats a wire connected by suitable linkages with the bye-pass valve in such a way that as the wire expands the by-pass closes, opening at the same time a passage to the main jet. The lighting device is intended, in the main, for use with incandescent burners, but is also fitted to the ordinary."

The Municipal Problem.

While the citizens of American municipalities are crouching in fear, expecting momentarily to have their very homes given to corporations seeking franchises at the hands of aldermen, the people of European cities are discussing a very different problem. Instead of corporations ruling the municipalities of the monarchies and military power of the Old World as they do in the American republic the people are there taking things in their own hands.

Much has been said of the municipal gas and water plants and street railways of Great Britain, but now the news comes that the great strike of laborers in Paris (which was "lost," according to press reports), has resulted in the discontinuance of municipal "contracts" and the direct employment of laborers by the city in public works.

Labor Notes.

The cigarmakers spend $30,000 a year advertising their label.

The percentage of successful strikes of workingmen is greater this year than ever before.

A. L. Fife, a Chicago printer, was fined $160 for using the printer's label without authority.

The union scale is the living wage, the life line beyond which the workers will not allow themselves to be forced.

The strike of 600 shoe lasters at Brocton, Mass., has been settled by the committee. As a result 78 new members were initiated at one meeting.

The leather trust will shut down 100 tanneries to raise the price of leather. The man or concern that controls the means of production is the ruler, whatever you may think or say about it. The people, therefore should have control.

Thos. J. Kidd, Geo. Zentner, and Michael Troeber, accused of conspiracy to injure the business of the Paine Lumber Co., of Oshkosh, Wis., during the Woodworkers strike, were acquitted in the Municipal Court November 2d. The jury was out one hour.

Political Arithmetic.

In Australia, as in the United States, school-teachers need a large discretion. Here, for example, is a story from the Sydney Telegraph: A New South Wales country school-teacher set a boy a question in compound proportion for home work one evening. It happened to include the circumstance of "men working ten hours a day in order to complete a certain work." Next morning the unsuspecting teacher, in looking over the little pack of exercises, found "Jim's" sum unattempted, and the following letter attached to the page: "Sur—I refuse to let Jim do his sum you give him last nite has it looks to me to be a slur at 8-hour sistum enny sum not more than 8 hours he is welcum to do but not more. Yours truly, Abram Blank, senr."

An examination of the newspapers shows that they are able to prove any old thing of George Washington's farewell address.

COST OF IMPERIALISM.

ARMY BUDGET THE HIGHEST ON EARTH.

Shall This Unheard-of Burden of Taxation Be Borne by the People or Shall They Protest and Be Called Anarchists?

Secretary Alger, by asking for over $165,000,000 for the support of the regular army in time of peace, has raised two questions that touch the heart and the pocket of every American citizen who does not profit by legalized injustice and oppression. These questions are: "Shall the United States be more heavily taxed for military purposes than any other country on earth?" "Shall this unheard-of burden of taxation be carried almost exclusively by people of small means, while the wealth our armaments protect goes free?" If we spend $166,000,000 a year for the army, $150,000,000 for pensions and $50,000,000 for the navy, we shall be paying $366,000,000 for military purposes. That is nearly twice as much as any power in Europe pays for the same objects. It is more than we paid in taxes for the entire support of the government as lately as last year. The amount Secretary Alger asks for the army alone is more than Germany pays for her army and navy combined. We have been accustomed to commiserate the European peasant, crushed under the intolerable burden of standing armies, and now we are asked, with no necessity whatever, to subject ourselves to a burden twice as great. But the distribution of this burden of taxation is even worse than the load itself. Mr. Rockefeller, to take the most conspicuous specimen of a class, has a fortune of over $300,000,000. His power to accumulate, possess and increase this fortune depends upon the protection of the government. Mr. Rockefeller's income is over $20,000,000 a year. That is equal to the combined incomes of forty thousand families, each living on annual earnings of $500. Under the Republican system of national taxation, which is based not on resources, but on personal consumption, Mr. Rockefeller's income, if divided among forty thousand families, would be taxed forty thousand times; concentrated in his hands, it need be taxed only once. In other words, with forty thousand times the means of a workingman, Mr. Rockefeller is not obliged to pay more than a workingman's taxes. In some respects he pays less. He uses no beer or tobacco, and so escapes the taxation levied on those humble luxuries. He does not play cards, and so does not pay for the revenue stamp on every pack. He does not live in rented rooms, and so is not taxed for his lease and his rent receipts. He does not borrow money on mortgage, subject to a mortgage stamp tax. He has his family physician, and so does not buy taxed proprietary medicines. He drinks no more tea than a sewing girl starving on four dollars a week, and if he used a quality as fine as that sipped by the emperor of China he would still pay only the sewing girl's tax of ten cents a pound. He uses no more taxed sugar than is consumed by a day laborer, and wears little more taxed clothing. Practically all of Mr. Rockefeller's gigantic income is absolutely exempt from national taxation, while every person of moderate means is taxed to the earth. Is that right? The Democracy does not think so. It believes that incomes and not family expenditures should be the measure of taxation. No extravagance in government. Necessary expenses to be met by fair methods of taxation. There is an issue ready made to the hand of the Democracy, and it is a winning one.

Free Silver Night Schools.

The organization of these schools is becoming widespread. The movement was started by Mr. George Burr Smith, attorney, of Chicago, Ill. A number of years ago, when a teacher in a country school, Mr. Smith observed, while explaining examples in exchange to a class in arithmetic, that an increasing rate of exchange with India, China, Japan, the South American states, and all countries using the silver standard, would cause untold depression in this country; for, prices being fixed in the countries using the cheaper money, would necessarily be reduced in this country, just in proportion as the rate of exchange increased. In 1895 the rate of exchange had doubled, so that our prices had decreased one-half. The effect was felt more in this country, as we were a debtor nation, so that no matter how much prices decreased, our debts must be paid with the dearer money.

The organization of these schools requires no elaborate speech making. Leaflets are furnished containing problems which show, first, the cause of the low price, next the effect upon the producing classes. A third list of problems show the foreclosure of mortgages which follows a rising money standard. Examples are also given which show the distribution of the wealth of the nation, the rise of powerful corporations, and the effect upon labor.

Leaflets for a school of twenty-five members may be obtained from the local Democratic or silver committees. Collections are taken at the close of the meetings to pay for the literature and the expenses of the county organization in furthering the movement.

Age of Combines.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel: The tin plate combine just formed is the most extensive affair of the kind ever formed in this country, as it includes all the plants in the country but four—two in Pennsylvania, one in West Virginia and one in Missouri. To avoid anti-trust laws the new concern is organized as a corporation under the New Jersey laws, with $20,000,000 preferred stock and $30,000,000 common stock. Of this sum the purchase of the plants represents $12,000,000 and the proposed working capital $6,000,000. The remainder is pure water. The preferred stock is to have 7 per cent cumulative dividends, all over this, if any, going to the common stock. To pay the dividends on preferred stock will therefore be required $1,260,000, and to pay only 6 per cent on the common stock will be required $1,080,000, or a total of $2,940,000. The promoters claim, however, that the common stock will earn more than the preferred, since the latter is limited to 7 per cent. Allowing, however, only 6 per cent for the common stock, it would require about 50 cents a box profit on 6,000,000 boxes a year to earn these dividends. This shows what tremendous earning capacity the promoters are basing estimates on, and the earning capacity is chiefly due to our tariff law, which taxes every home for the benefit of these infant promoters.

For Cheap Wheat and Dear Flour.

Every householder in this nation will have cause to regret the success of the Republican party every time he buys a pound of flour, for under the protection of that party the great milling trust has been found to control the price of bread. Thomas A. McIntyre, who went to England to obtain the consent of British stockholders in American flour mills to the formation of a combination of the principal mills in this country, so as to make a trust controlling the output, returned on the White Star steamship Majestic. He said when he landed that his mission had been successful. The object of Mr. McIntyre's trip to Europe was to obtain the consent of Richard Glyn, the president, and other stockholders of the Pillsbury-Washburn mills, to a plan to form all the great milling interests of America into a gigantic flour trust. Immediately Mr. McIntyre hurried to his office in the Produce Exchange building, where he remained closeted with his partners for several hours. To his friends, privately, Mr McIntyre is said to have strongly intimated that his mission abroad had been successful, and that the great combination, which will control about three-fourths of the world's breadstuffs, will surely be formed. It is said that the capital of the new trust will be $150,000,000 and the capacity 95,000 barrels of flour a day. There will, it is said, be included in the combination the following mills:

Mills—	Daily capacity, brls.
Hecker-Jones-Jewell, New York.	11,000
Pillsbury-Washburn, Minneapolis	25,000
Washburn-Crosby, Minneapolis..	17,000
Northwestern Consolidated Flour Milling Co., Minneapolis	15,000
Imperial Mill Company, Duluth.	8,000
Anchor Mills, Duluth	4,000
Daisy Mills, Duluth	6,000
William Lispman Mills, Superior	2,500
Freeman's Mills, Superior	2,500
Minkota Mills, Superior	1,000
Daisy Mills, Milwaukee	3,000
Total daily capacity	95,000

Total wheat consumed daily, 500,000 bushels.

Total mill feed produced daily, 10,000 tons.

Approving Trusts.

From the Chicago Chronicle: A new combination in restraint of trade has been organized in the state of New Jersey, where eight of the large rubber companies, manufacturing all kinds of rubber goods, excepting shoes and clothing, consolidated with a capital of $5,000,000. At its meeting in Washington the National Board of Trade had under consideration the question of trusts and combines. The resolution was offered requesting congress to use its power to prevent combinations restrictive of full and free competition. This resolution failed because it did not receive the necessary two-thirds vote. The resolution was irrelevant, because the fact is that congress did all that it could reasonably be expected to do when it passed the Sherman anti-trust bill, which is now upon the statute book as a law. If, in defeating the resolution inimical to combinations, the board had gone a step further and placed itself on record as commending the chief magistrate of the United States for failure to enforce the Sherman anti-trust law, notwithstanding repeated, manifest, notorious, current violations of the same, it would have proceeded quite in accordance with its failure to express itself as hostile to illicit combinations, out of which one of its members said "he himself was making something handsome." The national administration gives no efficacy to the voice of congress condemning combinations in restraint of trade and holds idle in this respect every one of the United States district attorneys the republic over.

"In Coin."

For the benefit of public creditors, congress, by the act of March 18, 1869, pledged the faith of the United States to the payment, in coin or its equivalent, of all its outstanding obligations. It is not pretended by any one that the government has ever assumed any severer or more onerous duty to its creditors than that declared by this act, or that it has at any time undertaken to pay any of its obligations otherwise than in coin? "Dollars" are the things to be paid—coin dollars, fabricated under and in pursuance of our coinage laws, each dollar to consist in or be represented by 412½ grains of standard silver or 25 8-10 grains of standard gold—that is, the weight of the silver in the silver dollar was to be sixteen times the weight of the gold in the gold dollar.

A TOUCHING TALE.

The playwright with his manuscript
Went sadly on his way,
Three score and more of managers
Refused his play that day;
Then from a corner dark there sprang
A robber bold and masked,
And of the author, with a gun
His life or money asked.
"I've nothing but this play, I'll swear,"
Replied the trembling scribe;
"All say it is not worth the string
With which the cover's tied."
The robber snatched the manuscript
And fled without delay.
"Thank Heaven! At last!" the playwright cried,
"A man who'll take my play!"

He—When you met me at the altar. You bet you were right on the dot then.
